The conference granted a license to preach to John Price Payne.

The whole program gave proof of the good planning, sound judgment and presiding ability of the presiding elder of the district, Rev. C. W. Crisler, D.D.

Could See Cardui Was Helping Her From the First

"I have found Cardui a great help to me," writes Mrs. G. W. Bennett, of Biloxi, Miss. "During change of life, I was weak, nervous and run-down. I knew I must do something or get down in bed, for I was just dragging about. When I first began to take Cardui, I could see it was helping me. By the time I had taken five bottles of Cardui, there was a great difference in my condition. I was so pleased with Cardui I wanted others to try it." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

In the historic old county seat town of Raleigh, Miss., the 1935 session of the Jackson District Conference met on May 6-8, and under the efficient leadership of the presiding elder, Dr. B. L. Sutherland, had an interesting and profitable session.

Reports from the various charges showed progress on all fronts. Financial conditions perhaps have improved some and helped in the reports, but the energy and activity of the pastors told in the total reports. Capitol Street church reported all benevolent claims paid in full by Easter; this church had accepted the full askings of the District Board of Stewards, several other churches had made great advances.

Revs. B. M. Hunt, M. L. McCormick and E. W. Ulmer were the conference preachers; Drs. D. M. Key and G. F. Winfield represented the colleges; Judge J. M. Forman and Dr. J. M. Sullivan addressed the conference on lay activities; Dr. J. L. Neill represented the Board of Missions; Rev. I. H. Sells led in the discussion of Christian education; and the other interests of the church were presented to the conference and properly discussed.

Joseph Candler Pickett and James Charlton Kelly were licensed to preach. The following is a complete list of the lay delegates of this district: Dr. D. M. Key, W. C. Davis, O. C. Hull, Joe Currie, E. M. Lane, R. L. Ezelle, J. A. Lindsey, H. O. Middleton, Mrs. B. F. Lewis, J. M. Sullivan, Mrs. W. H. Watkins, J. M. Forman, W. H. Bradley, Mrs. J. M. Morese, Knox Broom, A. P. Hamilton, W. D. Logan, R. J. Knoblock, M. M. Mapp, O. H. Wingfield, Ed. F. Lane and Mrs. A. F. Watkins. Alternate delegates are: W. S. Ridgway, Judge J. M. Stevens, C. C. Windham, Mrs. H. O. Middleton and Mrs. F. N. Taylor.

The date for the Jackson District-wide picnic was set for June 18 and Ainsworth Lake was named as the place.

Judge J. M. Forman was elected district lay leader, with L. E. Vest and J. A. Lindsey associate lay leaders.

By unanimous vote Mendenhall was selected as the place for holding the next session of the district conference.

The pastor, Rev. W. J. Walters, and his cordial church members made the conference a pleasant one by their many courtesies and hospitality. The conference had been well planned by the presiding elder and the program was carried through according to schedule with every interest of the church received its proper attention. Many of the members of the conference felt it was the best district conference, in spirit and work, held under the leadership of Dr. Sutherland. As an evidence of the work he has done in the district it was found that more than $7,000.00 had been raised for benevolences in the Jackson District during the first five months of the conference year.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Luke 24:46-17: Thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

Before His death, Jesus spoke of the significance of his sufferings: "For this cause came I unto this hour," he declared before Pilate. "And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto Me. And this He said, signifying what death He should die." After His death and resurrection He also spoke of the meaning of His sufferings. In this same chapter, Luke describes His interview with Cleopas and companion on the Emmaus road, "O slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory?" He also speaks of His sufferings to the disciples in the upper room that evening, "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day, and that REPENTANCE AND REMISSION OF SINS SHOULD BE PREACHED IN HIS NAME AMONG ALL NATIONS."

Christ began His ministry preaching repentance, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." And so we find after the resurrection He is still preaching repentance. He declares He has suffered that men might repent. During the interval Jesus had striven to show the danger of the Pharisaical attitude of those who were self-righteous and felt no need for repentance. He had commended the attitude of the publican, "God be merciful to me, a sinner." "He that is abased will be exalted."

"Remission of sins should be preached in His name." The sufferings of Christ for men would reveal the grace of God. Remission of sins would come to all who looked in penitence to Christ. Guilt would be effaced. There would be no other way to find deliverance from guilt.

To whom would this gospel be proclaimed? Jesus tells, "To all nations." These disciples were to be witnesses to these things. They were to begin at Jerusalem. But there are no limits to the redeeming love of God. The glad tidings would be proclaimed to earth's remote bounds.

It is significant that Jesus used the word showing the collective grouping of peoples. The gospel would be preached to nations as well as individuals. Love must be applied in social relationships. God builds the new man. "Put away the evil of your doings before mine eyes" means repentance from individual and social sins. Christ taught His disciples to pray "forgive us our sins;" "deliver us from evil;" and also, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, on earth as it is in heaven."

PRAYER

Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee that Christ has revealed the meaning of His sufferings. The disciples became witnesses to the gospel of repentance. They went preaching it in season and out of season. In true repentance we turn to Thee. No provocation can justify sin. "We are heartily sorry for our misdoings. The remembrance of them is greivous unto us." May we look to Thee henceforth, and find grace for every need. We offer our prayer in the name of our Savior.

SCARRITT COLLEGE PLACEMENT

Scarritt College undertakes to serve its graduates and the Church by maintaining a Placement Committee. The function of this committee is to serve as a clearing house for students and alumni who are seeking employment, and for those situations in the Church and with non-church agencies which need workers of the type that Scarritt seeks to train. Miss Mabel W. Howell is chairman of the Placement Committee.

It was possible to announce at commencement last year that all members of the graduating class had positions. It is the expectation that a similar announcement will be possible at the close of the present year.

The committee at the present time has several graduates of the college and several members of the present senior class who are available for positions in the field of religious education, for work as pastor's assistants, and for social work positions. Situations in need of such workers will communicate with Miss Howell, and recommendations of those available will be forwarded.

If friends of the college scattered throughout the Church will keep the Placement Committee informed about possible openings in their community, it will be a very great service, and the college requests this co-operation for its Placement Committee.

REVIVAL NEWS—HAYNESVILLE

It was said by some of our loyal churchmen of Haynesville, La., "That this is the first real revival that has come to our church and city in over twenty years."

Dr. John A. May, who is one of our recognized general evangelists of our church. I find him to be a real spiritual dynamo, a noted Bible scholar, a forceful speaker, a close observer of the entire church program, and one who will help any pastor build his church, spiritually, financially and numerically.

I heartily recommend Dr. May to any pastor who desires a real revival of religion in his church and community.

You may reach Dr. May at Montevallo, Ala., Box 185.

In Memoriam

MRS. CHARLES RICHARDSON

Miss Alice V. McKinney was born in St. Tammany Parish, near what is now the town of Pearl River, on September 9, 1855. Was married to Charles Richardson in New Orleans in 1890; of this union two children were born. Susan who died in early childhood, and Brady Richardson who is a prominent citizen of Ponchatoula.

From her early childhood Mrs. Richardson was reared in a Christian atmosphere, united early with the Methodist Church, and since 1911 she has been an active member of the Ponchatoula Methodist Church, until she became so feeble that regular attendance was impossible.

Mrs. Richardson is survived by her son, Brady Richardson of Ponchatoula, a brother, Mr. Abner McKinney, of Killian, and a sister, Mrs. Nellie Berthelot of Alexandria, La.

H. N. BROWN.

RESOLUTIONS

At the second quarterly conference of the New Iberia charge held on April 24, 1935, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

The quarterly conference of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of New Iberia, La., desiring to attest their loss sustained in the death of the late S. F. Hale, their appreciation of his character and their sympathy to the family, record the following minute:

Resolved, that the death of our beloved brother is a dispensation of affliction in-consolable except by humble faith in the Omniscent One, who is "too wise to err, too good to be unkind," and

Resolved, that our departed brother was endeared to his official associates by his unfailing generosity, kindness, and geniality, and to the whole church by his effective services and active benevolence; that his earnest Christian life is an assurance to us that our loss is his endless gain, and

Resolved, that we tender our sincerest sympathy to his family, praying that in this hour of sore loss they may find the Saviour near, and "that they may put their trust under the shadow of His wings," and be it further

Resolved, that the secretary be instructed to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the family and also a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

W. J. BERNARD, Chairman,
JOHN TROTTER, Sect'y.

HON. CHARLES D. ABELS

Charles D. Abels was born in that part of Livingstone Parish, Louisiana, which was afterwards incorporated in Tangipahoa Parish, five miles west of Ponchatoula on March 18, 1857. He, with his two brothers, was baptized at Wadesboro in his early childhood. He was an attendant at Sunday school and church in his childhood, and at men's Bible class in his riper years, but was not united with the church until August 3, 1933, under the ministry of Rev. B. H. Andrews. He was married on December 25, 1883, to Miss Sarah Sylvania Duffey. He is survived by his widow, two daughter, Mrs. Lilly Abels Kent, and Mrs. Helen Abels Hudson, one brother, Jacob R. Abels of Ponchatoula, and one sister, Mrs. J. E. Lavigne, three grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Brother Abels represented Tangipahoa Parish in the State Legislature for twelve years, and was always on the right side of every moral issue, and was known as a man who could not be bought.

He died on Tuesday, May 14, and was buried from the Methodist Church on Thursday, May 16.

H. N. BROWN.

MRS. CROWSON PASSED AWAY

On the morning of May 13 many hearts were saddened to hear of the death of Mrs. Margaret Crowson, the widow of B. B. Crowson who preceded her about ten years ago.

This good woman was a member of one of the pioneer families of Pontotoc County. She was widely known in Pontotoc County and in Lafayette County and was loved by all who knew her. Mrs. Crowson was 92 years of age and we can truthfully say that her life has been well spent in God's service. She has been a faithful member of the Methodist Church more than 70 years. During the last half century, her membership has been with the Lafayette Springs Methodist Church. The writer is glad to state that Mrs. Crowson was a pious woman, a good mother and companion, and was spiritually strong. From this home has come two of our most faithful ministers, Rev. D. H. Crowson and Rev. R. E. Crowson.

She is survived by five children: Rev. D. H. Crowson, Calhoun City, Miss.; Rev. B. E. Crowson, pastor at Randolph; Mrs. W. D. Gorton, Parks, Miss.; Mrs. C. J. Jernagan, Randall, Miss.; and Mrs. S. R. Yarbrough, Tupelo, Miss.

Many souls have had to weep as this good woman left for her reward, but we are glad that we do not have to weep as those who have no hope.

Her pastor,

B. D. BENSON.

MISSIONARY TO AFRICA

Melville B. Cox, the first foreign missionary to be sent out by the Methodist Church, was a native of Maine. He joined the Maine Conference at Bath in 1822; but he soon superannuated on account of his health. He then went to Baltimore, where he married, February 7, 1828. Within the space of two years he lost his wife and little daughter. He edited for a time The Itinerant, published in Baltimore. He then rejoined the Conference, his last pastorate being Raleigh, N. C. He was appointed to Africa, reached the field on March 8, 1833, and died on Sunday, July 21, 1833. His immortal plea for Africa was: "Though thousands fall, let not Africa be given up."

Wallet of the Week

HOLLYWOOD NOT SO BAD is the judgment of a ninety-three-year-old resident who has seen it grow from a township of 11,000 to an urban center of 1,350,000 population. "We have over four hundred churches," he says, "with thousands of worshipers, and in the community we have a very large number of serious minded people." He says also that they have magnificent schools and eloquent preachers. Still the indictment of the prophet is insited upon: My people perish for lack of knowledge.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA was visited by a destructive tornado and flood on June 1, according to press reports. Approximately one hundred were killed, and the property damage amounts to $12,000,000. The South Platte river is on a rampage, a torrent of water two miles wide has driven many people to trees and drift wood for refuge, and fears are felt that many have been lost in the floods. Rescue workers are putting forth every effort to alleviate the suffering and to care for those made homeless and penniless by the disaster.

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIAN, Pittsburgh, says that unless the religious educational forces of the country bestir themselves, America is headed straight toward an atheistic state like that of Russia, only by a different road. The decline of religion in that country, and the rise of atheistic Communism to the throne, came through the neglect of moral and religious training by the Greek Church. Ignorance and superstition inevitably lead to a godless state and godless society. In this country literary illiteracy is steadily decreasing, but moral illiteracy and religious ignorance are steadily increasing.

THE FINANCIAL INTEGRITY OF THE METHODISTS was demonstrated recently when the churches of that denomination in High Point, North Carolina, joined in a united campaign to raise $65,000—the total indebtedness of three of the churches. Wesley Memorial Church, of which Dr. W. A. Lambeth is pastor, led the movement to pay off its own indebtedness along with that of two smaller churches. According to the North Carolina Christian Advocate, ten families agreed to pay $35,000 on a three-year plan for the liquidation of the total indebtedness. At the hour announced for the close of the campaign, the chimes of Wesley Memorial Church proclaimed victory, through the notes of those great hymns: "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," and "I Love Thy Church, O God."

A MEMORIAL STATUE OF DAVID LIVINGSTONE has been erected at Victoria Falls in Southern Rhodesia. The ceremonies of unveiling were broadcast and it is said that the roar of the falling waters could be heard distinctly in England. It was nature's accompaniment to the service in honor of the great missionary hero who gave all for Africa.

THE CALIFORNIA INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION, which opened at San Diego, on May 29, promises to be a great affair. It will feature the industrial development of the country, as did the recent Chicago Exposition; but it will have distinct and interesting features of its own. Among them the Ford Music Bowl; depicting the life of Old Spain; the Gold Rush of the "Forty-niners;" and the Mayan temple and the temple of Sacrifice from ancient Yucatan.

THE RT. REVEREND WILLIAM TEMPLE, Archbishop of York, comes out in a statement to the effect that, if the unattached populations of the great cities are to be reached for the Church, the laymen must be released from the bondage of "inactive witness." He says that they must be enlisted in a campaign of open-air and other evangelistic enterprises. They may make mistakes, he thinks, but so do the clergy. Then he makes the rather surprising but gripping observation: "It does very little harm if an eager layman talks heresy, provided he shows and imparts a love for the Lord Jesus; it does great harm if a priest talks orthodoxy in a way to make men think the Gospel either irrelevant or dull."

HILDEBRAND, KNOWN AS GREGORY VII, was one of the greatest mediaeval Popes. He was a carpenter's son, of diminutive stature and unimpressive in appearance; but his firmness of will, power of intellect and limitless design made him the outstanding figure of the age. When Alexander II died the cardinals were seriously divided as to a successor; but the populace, by whom Hildebrand was revered as a man of piety and power, took up his name and carried him to the Church of St. Peter-in-chains, where he was made Pope by popular acclamation. At the end, his vision of a world ruled by the vicar of God shattered, and himself driven out to the castle of Salerno, where he died, he said: "I have loved justice and hated iniquity, therefore I die an exile."

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN

We are now in the home stretch of the Advocate campaign. The standing of every charge and of every district in the three Conferences is shown in the tabulation for each week. We realize that the volume of subscriptions will come in at the last moment, but we are anxious that every district shall come through in a great way. Please do not wait until the last minute and, above all, do not fail to do your full part in making the Campaign a one hundred per cent success. We are counting upon the loyalty and the help of every pastor and every Methodist in Mississippi and Louisiana. At the close of the campaign, we expect to publish a complete report charge by charge.

SPEED AND ACHIEVEMENT

One hundred and sixteen years ago last month, the Savannah, a queer looking little vessel of 380 tons, steamed out of a Georgia harbor, and in twenty-five days she landed in Liverpool, having traveled eighteen days under her own steam. A world record had been established as to time, and she was the first to cross the Atlantic under her own power. Ten days ago, the Normandie, newest and fleetest greyhound of the sea, rode triumphantly into New York harbor, having crossed the Atlantic in four days, eleven hours and forty-two minutes. She is one thousand and twenty-nine feet in length, weighs eighty thousand tons, and in her appointments she is a little world nestling upon the bosom of a great ocean. Her daily speed was something more than six hundred miles—six times that of the Savannah. Such a record thrills our speed-loving age. But speed is a great deceiver, and causes many a romantic story to end with a thud. The money cost of the Normandie's achievement is simply appalling. The fuel cost of a round trip is $100,000, and it is said that other necessary costs of operation bring the total up to a quarter of a million dollars. That does not allow a single penny for depreciation, and no one has been so optimistic as to claim that this fleet and gorgeous creation will ever pay even the smallest dividend on the more than fifty million dollars spent in her construction. After all, everything is a common denominator of all its factors. The Normandie may travel with marvelous swiftness; but treasure reserve, not speed, will determine the length of her course. And many a plodding liner may drop out of the race, but win in the net returns from the voyage. There is a point in life where bitter and sweet are neutralized, and toil and tragedy may be turned into glorious triumph. Life at its best is not a spectacular performance, not a thrill—it is a steady and a substantial climb toward God and the things that are eternal. The common denominator is different for every life; but the eternal harbor is at the end of the voyage.

CHANGING TIDES

We have carried recently the cut of the new John Brown statue, the editorial of Zion's Herald on General Lee, also a reference to the tributes paid to the United States Senators who voted against American entry into the World War. We do not forget that there is still a background of feeling and attitude not represented by the positions taken in every one of these instances. Our primary interest is in the fact that time and changed circumstances have so softened bitter judgments of men and measures regarding which the people were once so sharply divided. It is a matter of surprise that, within the very generation in which the World War was fought, its bitterest opponents should be given such wide recognition as they received recently in the peace celebrations of the country. From time immemorial, the judgments of men have reflected their antipathies no less than their deliberate appreciations. Israel hated the heathen races because of their merciless oppression of God's chosen people. They were unwilling to accord enemy nations a part in the love of God, and they even became jealous of Jehovah on that account. Later the bitter contest of the Eastern Church with the Moslems developed a similar attitude toward Moslem salvation. A devout layman of the Greek Church was asked his opinion as to why God made so many Mohammedans, and his immediate reply was, "To fill up Hell." Our sufferings and our contests are always factors in our moral and religious attitudes, and the broadening of our missionary horizon has greatly influenced our estimates of peoples and has done much to quicken our own sense of moral and spiritual responsibility. The facts abide, but the human approach is different.

MRS. W. L. DOSS, JR.

In the passing of Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., the Methodists and a wide circuit of friends throughout Louisiana feel a sense of personal bereavement. She was a woman of tender grace and consistent devotion. She sought no place of honor for herself and was content to do in a modest and unassuming way her daily task. No parsonage home in Louisiana ever had a more gracious hostess, and in the delicate and responsible role of a pastor's wife, she served in a beautiful and self-forgetful way. She was never physically strong and she bore the ravage of the disease under which her body crumpled in such a manner that few realized the distress which was unrevealed in her delightful hospitality. For more than a quarter of a century, she walked hand in hand with her devoted husband, and she shared his toils without counting the cost to herself. She had expected to share with him a life on the missionary frontiers of the Church; but when that expectation was not fulfilled she gave her best, her all, in Louisiana until she heard the whisper of the Angel of the Lord saying, "It is enough." In the early morning of June 10, her spirit winged its way through the gates eternal; and in that land where there are no haunting shadows of disease and the tortures of pain do not distress, she waits the day of glad reunion in the Father's house. Her body was tenderly laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery at Homer, La., where she spent some of the happiest years of her life. The Advocate extends sympathy to Dr. Doss, to his son, and all the bereaved loved ones whose sorrow only heaven can heal.

THE PROPHET

Nearly forty years ago, Sir Robertson Nicoll, then editor of the British Weekly, heard a young man preach. His comment upon that preacher was: "I do not know anything of his history, but his is a figure which arrests at once hopeful attention." Later that same young man became the successor of one of the greatest preachers of that day, and he has long been a man of international influence, both because of his evangelical loyalties and his able and courageous preaching. Such, we are persuaded, are ever the marks of the true prophet. The foretokens of great power arouse in the hungry and waiting hearts of men a measure of expectancy a "hopeful attention." A man whose abilities are co-ordinated with a profound consecration to his spiritual task, will always behold the mists disappearing from the summits of fame. And one whose thinking is suffused with the passion of the Son of God will have a forum as wide as the world.

NOT AN END BUT A BEGINNING

(Editorial from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate)

The results of the referendum on prohibition will be known before this issue of The Wesleyan reaches the public. Whatever the results may be, the fight is not finished. If we defeat repeal, we must never again rest on our oars as we did in the past. If our prohibition laws are repealed, we must not relent for one moment in the effort to restore adequate prohibition laws to the statute books of Georgia. Neither eventuality will relieve the friends of temperance from service on the field of action.

In event there should be a wet majority in Georgia, we confidently believe that the conditions which will follow will set going a reaction which will ultimately re-write prohibition laws for Georgia. If the contention of the wet press that no more liquor will be consumed then than under prohibition is correct, then advertising has no sale power. If goods that are publicly displayed and nationally advertised do not sell faster than the same goods when kept out of sight and unadvertised, then the whole advertising business is a fraud. But no one believes that. Certainly we shall see a large increase in the consumption of liquor and the multiplication of its evils in event the prohibition laws are repealed.

But even if prohibition wins by an overwhelming majority, we must not in the future depend upon political action alone for results. There must be the steady stroke of education rather than the spasmodic effort of a campaign. There must be imparted to men those permanent attitudes that are formed on the basis of information. Ours is an educational task. We have the truth on our side and if, with that advantage, we do not create in the rising generation a full appreciation of the evils of alcohol, we are indeed poor protagonists for the truth. But information cannot be imparted emotionally under the heat of a political campaign. Through the day school and the church school, through the pulpit and the press we must keep before the rising generation the truth about alcohol.

For the friends of temperance May 15 can be no more than an important date. It marks the end of nothing. If we win, that victory must mark the beginning of a new and intelligently planned campaign of education; if we lose, then May 15 can only mark the beginning of a new fight for righteousness.

ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

A series of great rallies has been planned in the interest of Christian education and our colleges. These meetings will not be for the purpose of raising money, but will be for the purpose of stimulating a greater interest in Christian education and a better appreciation of the aims and ideals of our colleges. Bishop Dobbs will be the principal speaker at these meetings and the public generally and Methodists in particular are invited to attend. The schedule of these meetings is as follows:

Columbia, 10 a.m., June 25; Gulfport, 8 p.m., June 25; Hattiesburg, Main St., 10 a.m., June 26; Laurel, First Church, 8 p.m., June 26; Philadelphia, 10 a.m., June 27; Meridian, 8 p.m., June 27; Vicksburg, 8 p.m., June 28.

The following program will be carried out at all these meetings with the necessary change of hour for the evening meetings: 10 a.m., Devotional, Presiding Elder; 10:05 a.m., Statement of Purpose, Dr. J. L. Decell; 10:10 a.m., The Church School and our Colleges, Rev. I. H. Sells; 10:15 a.m., The Aim and Ideals of Millsaps College, Dr. D. M. Key, President; 10:25 a.m., The Aims and Ideals of Whitworth College, Dr. G. F. Winfield, President; 10:35, Address, Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, D.D.

All pastors and alumni and alumnae of our colleges are requested to aid in promoting attendance at these meetings.

VICTOR G. CLIFFORD, Secretary.

AN EMERGENCY IN MISSIONS

We who are charged with the supervision of our work in foreign lands are convinced that something must be done at once to meet the exacting demand for additional missionaries. The widening of our opportunities, coupled with the growing complexity of the task, demand that we strengthen our forces. Unless we can launch an offensive movement and thus take advantage of the unprecedented opportunity before us, the Christian movement will lose ground. Our work has already suffered because we have not been able to reinforce our missionaries on the field.

There is something startling in the figures released by our Board of Missions. In 1925 the General Section of the Board had 206 missionaries on the field. In 1930 the number had dropped to 148. Today it has reached the low level of 100. Here is revealed a more than 50 per cent reduction in our missionary force in a period of ten years. We are fully convinced that any further yielding to the difficulties in the economic situation will prove harmful to the Church in America and well-nigh disastrous to the promising young churches we have helped to create around the world.

We cannot afford to be satisfied by merely maintaining the status quo. Our missionary force must be strengthened. Some of our most faithful missionaries must hand over the trust to younger workers. On virtually every field new recruits are needed to relieve those doing double duty. This is unmistakably the time for a fresh advance. We are alarmed at what will happen to the work so sacrificially built up if we fail to send forth new recruits.

A Plan

The funds received from the regular sources of the Church by the General Section of the Board of Missions will be required to maintain our present work, and will not permit the employment of a single new missionary this year. Convinced that there are churches and individuals that will be glad to help meet the emergency, the Board decided to recruit and send out ten new missionaries, provided that funds for their travel and maintenance on the field are given by such churches and individuals, and that these funds are given over and above the customary and expected offerings to other enterprises of the Church.

The cost of sending out a married missionary next September and supporting him until the end of the year will be approximately $1,600. The total cost of his support next year (including salary, rent, and all other allowances), will be about $1,800. It should be borne in mind that provision must be made for each new missionary for a reasonable length of time, until the regular income of the Board of Missions is sufficient to carry this additional load. All who are interested should correspond with the Board of Missions and the details will be adjusted.

An Appeal

It is a nerveless Christianity that knows no desperate ventures. It is a poor faith which has no debt to pay in sympathy and good will to others, no glowing passion to share Christ with those who know Him not. The passion to make Christ known everywhere is the authentic and inevitable outcome of Christian experience. Let us join Christ out on the highways of progress. No cause is forlorn with Him at its head. It is our business to evade no sacrifice and to seek no discharge from the task, but gladly take our appointed way with Him who said, "Go and preach the gospel to every creature."

We appeal to you to help inaugurate a new advance. We must make some adequate answer to this challenge from fields white unto the harvest. It may be that the renewal of our spiritual life, and the strengthening of our hold upon God, will only come to us when we obey the summons of this hour. This appeal is sent forth with an earnest prayer that it will reach those "who dare great things because they cherish the hope that maketh not ashamed."

(Signed) BISHOPS J. M. MOORE, PAUL B. KERN, ARTHUR J. MOORE, W. N. AINSWORTH, SAM R. HAY.

You will be pleased to note that $4,858.96 has been paid in during the past month and that a second charge, Millsaps Memorial, Jackson, has paid the benevolences in full for the year.

Pastors, lay leaders, or others who have given careful attention to the pamphlet that presents suggested material for the Laymen's Day program for this year, will be impressed with the timeliness of the topic and the value of the material presented. Those who could not conveniently arrange to present the program on June 9 will please see that the plan of the General Board of Lay Activities, and the purpose of our Annual Conferences, is carried out to the extent of observing Laymen's Day in every charge.

and take my soul to himself." His tenderness and fervor come out in the beautiful words of a last letter to his mother, written exactly one week before he was stricken unto death:

"I can scarcely realize, my dear mother, that I am five or six thousand miles from you. But we shall meet by and by. Neither of us can be here for a long while. God grant that we may meet in heaven. I have a most pleasant assurance that I am on my way there. Indeed, I have never in my life felt such divine support from grace as since I left home. My cup has been full, never empty. Give yourself no care for me, except to pray for my success in my mission, and the perfection of my nature in the spirit and practice of the gospel."

When Rufus Spaulding and Samuel O. Wright, with their wives and Miss Sophronia Farrington, reached Liberia on January 1, 1834, they found the Liberian Mission established, but Melville Cox had answered the summons from the skies. Within two months, Mrs. Wright died of the fever and a little later her husband followed. Spaulding and his wife were so reduced by the plague that they were compelled to return to the United States. This left only Miss Farrington who chose to remain alone rather than give Africa up, for she said that she had "offered her soul upon the altar of her God, for the salvation of that long benighted continent." Many have been the casualties on that desperate field, but the light abides even until now.

Following the recommendation of the General Conference Bishop Andrew, on behalf of the College of Bishops, appointed Fountain E. Pitts of the Tennessee Conference to make a tour of inspection preparatory to opening work in South America. Pitts left in July, 1835, and visited Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Montevideo and other places, and upon the invitation of the General Conference of 1836 he made a personal report of his tour. On March 22, 1836, Justin Spaulding of the Maine Conference sailed for Rio de Janeiro to begin work there; and on November 12, 1837, Daniel P. Kidder of the Genesee Conference and Rev. R. McMurdy and wife were sent to re-enforce Spaulding. On October 14, 1836, John Dempster sailed for Buenos Aires, having been appointed to open work in that city. He made an auspicious beginning and large plans were laid by the Missionary Society to take care of the work. He visited Montevideo in 1838 and recommended that a minister-teacher be sent to occupy that point. Accordingly Rev. William H. Norris was appointed. The unsettled state of the country, the blockade by the French and the intolerance of the Roman Church made this an extremely difficult field, and the progress of the work was much hindered. The appropriation for the church building in Buenos Aires was recalled, and Dempster pursued the slower policy of creating an educational background for the work. But in 1841 the response had been so small and the difficulties of the field so great that the missionaries were withdrawn. The withdrawal of the missionaries brought an appeal for the restoration of the work in Buenos Aires, and in response to the petition, Rev. William H. Norris, formerly of Montevideo, was appointed to reopen the work.

Another phase of mission work relates to the German people who came to America among the early settlers. By a strange coincidence, the Methodists seem to have been slow to appreciate the need for work on their behalf. Bishop Asbury was often among them, particularly in the "beautiful Wyoming" country of Pennsylvania; but he seems to have made no move for their evangelization as a people. It is true that some of the Methodist preachers could speak German, and there was an occasional sermon in that language; but no planned and continuous ministry to them. So the people who were entitled to credit for the intellectual renaissance which saved the world from a despotism of dogma and superstition were seemingly overlooked in the early missionary and evangelistic plans for the Methodists. This neglect lost to the Church the chance for religious leadership among the Germans, as they turned to the United Brethren of Christ Church and to the Evangelical Alliance with whose founders they had a racial tie.

No systematic effort in behalf of the Germans was undertaken until 1836, when William Nast was admitted on trial into the Ohio Conference and was appointed to German missions in Cincinnati. The next year he was sent to German Missions within the bounds of the Columbus District, a missionary circuit three hundred miles long with twenty-two appointments. In 1839 Dr. Nast was made editor of the German Apologist published in Cincinnati, and he was succeeded in the mission by Peter Schmucker. A mission to the Germans of Pennsylvania was begun in 1841, and another in New York the same year. A school was established for the Germans also. In 1843 nineteen missions were reported, reaching from Pittsburg to New Orleans; and in 1864 the Methodist Episcopal Church, finding the plan of conducting the German work as a fractional part of various Annual Conferences unsatisfactory and in response to the petitions of the German Methodists, set up three German Conferences. For many years the proceedings of those Conferences were conducted and recorded in German, that being the language best understood by the people. The Germans have made valuable contribution to American Methodist history, and they have loyally supported the Church and its polity.

Still another phase of missionary expansion is presented in the beginnings of Texas Methodism. Under Mexican rule, all forms of Protestant worship were forbidden, and the Methodists found access through the "neutral ground" which was established pending the settlement of the boundary dispute between France and Spain, to which the United States became a party by the Louisiana Purchase. The story of early Methodist preaching in Texas is rather legendary in character and is that of irregular and disconnected effort. It seems to be fairly well established that William Stevenson preached in northwest Texas as early as 1817 and that a class was formed at Jonesboro, Texas, the same year. Soon after other preachers including Washington Orr and his brother Green, a local preacher, held services in the same locality. In 1834 Henry Stephenson crossed from Sabine circuit in Louisiana into the "Red lands" of east Texas and preached, and in November of that year his name appears as a missionary to Texas. In 1835 John H. Carr served Sulphur Fork and he was returned for a second year.

The way was not open for the Protestant invasion of Texas until after General Sam Houston had won the independence of that vast territory by the decisive battle of San Jacinto, April 21, 1836. This event which resulted in the establishment of the Republic of Texas, was not more epochal in its change of political relations, than in the changed ecclesiastical history which followed. In 1837 John B. Denton and E. B. Duncan succeeded John H. Carr on the Sulphur Fork circuit, and the work established by Henry Stephenson in the "Red lands" was still in existence. The opening of Texas for settlement was the occasion for a forward move upon the part of the Missionary Society. At its spring meeting in 1837, steps were taken to launch an aggressive campaign in the new Republic. Martin Ruter was appointed superintendent of the Texas mission, with Littleton Fowler and Robert Alexander as his assistants. The first of these to arrive on the field was Robert Alexander. Littleton Fowler, who was joined on the way by John B. Denton, reached Nacodoches, October 16, 1837. Martin Ruter, after arranging to leave his family in Indiana, reached San Augustine, November 22, 1837. He visited Houston where he preached before the Congress of the Republic and made a profound impression. Dr. Ruter did effective work in gathering a list of those who had been Methodists before going to Texas; but his monumental service was in the vision of his planning for the future. He planned to use twelve new missionaries, and he started to the meeting of the Missionary Society to make his appeal for recruits. After he had gone about forty miles he was taken seriously ill and returned to Washington, Texas, where he died on May 16, 1838—less than six months after his arrival on the field. At the succeeding Conference, Littleton Fowler was appointed presiding elder and superintendent of the mission; and associated with him were six preachers, among whom was Abel Stevens who later became a distinguished historian of the Church. The early developments of Texas Methodism were largely the result of the vision of Martin Ruter and of the wise, tactful and capable leadership of his successor. Fowler and John Clark represented Texas in the General Conference of 1844, but Clark, having taken sides against the South, did not return to Texas. In 1845 Fowler and Robert Alexander were the representatives at the Convention which organized the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. At the time of the division of the Church, there were two Conferences in Texas, with 51 itinerant preachers, 64 local preachers, 5077 white and 1005 colored members—no mean achievement for less than eight years of organized work in a land that from time immemorial had been ruled by Romanism.

One other distinct phase of missionary work belonging to this period of Methodist history was that undertaken on behalf of the slaves of the Southern plantations. For many reasons a mission to the slaves of the South, as a church-wide interest, was not possible; but such work was carried on by the Conferences in the slaveholding territory. The missions to the slaves originated in South Carolina. Not long after the return of William Capers from England, where he had gone as the delegate to the British Conference, Hon. Charles C. Pinckney of South Carolina sought his assistance in securing the services of a Methodist exhorter as an overseer on his plantations. The purpose of Mr. Pinckney was to secure religious instruction for his slaves. Other planters joined in the movement. Dr. Capers was not able to effect such an arrangement for them, but the incident led to the establishment of missions among the slaves in the lowlands of South Carolina. John Honour was sent to a mission among the slaves on the Ashley river; and J. H. Massey was sent to another on the Santee river. On September 19, following the appointment, John Honour died at his post among the Negroes of the plantations, a victim of "bilious fever." The number of missions to the slaves grew from year to year, and they were served by some of the best ministers of the South. Ten years after the opening of the first mission, there were twenty-seven missions served by thirty preachers. When the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was formed there was no change in the interest or policy touching the slaves; and at the death of Bishop Capers in 1855, there were twenty-six of these missions in South Carolina.

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. James L. Sells, of Mount Olive, Miss., has sent in 17 subscriptions on a quota of 12. That is fine work, and we make our sincere acknowledgments.

Rev. V. G. Clifford, presiding elder of Hattiesburg District, is exhibiting great leadership in his new field. We confidently expect him to close out the year with a great report in all respects.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Meadville, Miss., says that his committee for the Advocate did not function, but he did; and we have the evidence that he functioned. Rev. R. H. Clegg is with him in a meeting at Bude, Miss.

Our friend, Rev. W. W. Bruner, of Carrollton, Miss., sends us an encouraging word with reference to his charge. He is pressing the fight for a complete success of the Advocate campaign. Thank you, Brother Bruner.

Rev. A. J. Leggett, pastor at Collins, Miss., is doing a splendid work in the Advocate campaign on his charge. We feel sure that he is also doing a good work otherwise, although we have not the details of his work at hand.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. C. C. Clark, wife of our esteemed friend, the pastor at Waynesboro, is recovering nicely following a serious operation. She is now at home and is making good progress toward regaining her health.

Laymen's Day was observed in Crowley Methodist Church on Sunday, June 10, at the eleven o'clock service. A layman presided at the organ; the choir was composed of fifteen laymen, one of whom sang a solo. Three laymen gave talks from the rostrum.

Rev. J. P. Bonnacarrere made a splendid report for the Denham Springs charge, at the recent session of the Baton Rouge District Conference. A little more than half the benevolent collections in cash, and other phases of the work going well is no mean report.

Rev. T. C. Cooper reports a great meeting at Collins, Miss., in which Rev. B. M. Hunt of Jackson, Miss., did the preaching. Other meetings are now in progress and he expects to have a great report on the spiritual condition of his charge. We pray that he may have a great victory in all his work.

Our good friend, Rev. J. W. Faulk, of Leesville, La., sends report on his Advocate Campaign and also that he is looking forward with confidence to his revival campaign, in which his son Rev. Rowland Faulk, of New Orleans, will do the preaching, and Rev. Carl Lueg, of Slidell, will lead the singing.

New Orleans Methodism is well represented in Shreveport, La., this week. Dr. W. W. Holmes, of Rayne Memorial Church; Dr. W. H. Wallace, Jr., of First Church; Rev. R. R. Branton, of St. Mark's, and the Presiding Elder of the District are on the faculty of the Young People's Assembly at Centenary College.

Rev. E. J. Coker, of Lorman, Miss., sends notice of a home-coming at Cane Ridge church on his charge. The occasion will be the celebration of the 117th anniversary of the church, and the date will be June 30, and an all-day service. All former pastors are invited. Rev. B. F. Jones and Hon. W. H. Watkins will be the speakers.

Layman's Day for the Shreveport District was observed on June 8. We learn that 53 laymen took part in the program; and a service was planned for the churches not represented. In this way, there will be a one hundred per cent observance of Layman's Day. Dr. George S. Sexton is the presiding elder and Mr. R. H. Nelson is district lay leader.

We regret to learn of the serious illness of Dr. A. W. Turner, of Shreveport, following a stroke which occurred about ten days ago. At last reports, he was said to be critically ill. He has not been in robust health for some time; but we hope that his valuable life may be spared for a service to the cause of Temperance and Prohibition, now so much needed.

Dr. E. Nash Broyles, the popular pastor of First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., had part on the programs of dedication of the D. A. R. marker placed on the campus of Mississippi State College for Women, and the Kiwanis Memorial Day program. The dedication of the Boulder was on the campus of the College, the Kiwanis program at the Glimer Hotel.

Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Serex with their two children, Henri Muir and Mary Bays, sailed Saturday on the S. S. Western Queen, of the Lykes Bros. line, for a visit of three months to the family of Dr. Serex in Belgium. Dr. Serex's address will be 119 Avenue Coghien, Uccle-Bruxelles, Belgium. The Advocate joins their many friends in wishing them a happy voyage and safe return.

Rev. R. A. Allums, pastor at Ellisville, Miss., says that early in the year the Ellisville charge set its goal for the year, including the Advocate; and that they mean to attain their goal. They are holding Cokesbury Schools and Vacation Bible Schools and carrying out every other organizational feature of the church on a five point circuit. We shall be very much surprised if the charge fails to make a great report.

Miss Cavell, daughter of Dr. D. B. Raulins, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, and former editor of the Advocate, is one of the representatives of Whitworth College at the Y. W. C. A. Student Conference, Blue Ridge, N. C. Sharing the honor with her, are Misses Mildred Waldrop, Extension, La.; Dorris Chipley, Carthage, Miss.; Mildred Clegg, Hazlehurst, Miss.; Edythe Castles, Magee, Miss.; and Edna Earle Wilson, Lake Providence, La.

Mississippi Conference Officers Tour Districts

The officers of the Mississippi Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have recently completed a most strenuous but gratifyingly successful tour of all six of its districts.

The party was composed of Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, of Quitman, president; Mrs. Homer Frizell, of Vaughan, superintendent of young women's circles; Mrs. Paul Arrington, of Magee, superintendent of children's work; Mrs. Urie M. Weston, of Jackson, superintendent of Christian Social Relations; Mrs. W. H. Bradley, of Canton, substituting for Mrs. Gordon Patton, who is superintendent of Spiritual Life Groups; and last, but by no means least, Mrs. Alma Riley, for so many years connected with the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, and now employed in an advisory capacity by a group of philanthropically minded business concerns, to assist eleemosynary institutions to avail themselves of the remarkable gratuities offered. The Conference is truly grateful to Mrs. Riley for the use of her car, in which she transported the party over the entire trip.

The tour began on May 28 at the Canton Methodist Church, with Mrs. F. Norman Taylor, of Jackson, secretary of the Jackson District, presiding. The 29th was spent in the M. E. Church of Yazoo City, with Mrs. T. H. Fore, of Natchez, presiding. Mrs. Fore is the new secretary of the Vicksburg District, succeeding Mrs. J. W. Griffis, resigned. A second session for the Vicksburg District was necessitated because of its extended area. This session was held on the following day in the Jefferson Street Methodist Church at Natchez, with Mrs. Fore again presiding. On May 31, the weather being perfect, the conference held at Wesson, for the Brookhaven District, proved to be the greatest, in point of numbers, of the entire tour. Mrs. A. S. Oliver, of Meadville, secretary of this district, presided. Saturday, Sunday and Monday were spent by the conference officers in Long Beach, Gulfport and Biloxi. They visited the Wesley House and were tremendously impressed with the marvelous manner in which Miss Katharine S. Arnold, assisted by Miss Martha Robinson, has brought order out of chaos and has won the love, respect and confidence of an entire community heretofore noted for distrust and suspicion of all welfare workers.

The conference officers visited the Moore Community House where Miss Sadie Ellis has for fourteen years made a garden out of a desert. Miss Sophie Kuntz is her very able co-worker. They attended services at First Church of Gulfport, and at the little church at the Wesley House, and on Monday spoke at missionary sessions both at First Church, Gulfport, and at "The Little Church In the Wildwood" at Long Beach.

The Lumberton church in the Seashore District was visited on June 4, and here Mrs. L. J. Power, of Long Beach, the new secretary, succeeding Mrs. R. E. Johnson, of Gulfport, presided.

On June 5 the conference was held in Montrose, with Mrs. D. O. Segrest, of Hattiesburg, secretary of the Hattiesburg District, occupying the chair. It was with deep regret that the resignation of this most capable leader was later in the day acted upon. Mrs. E. A. Loftin, of Magee, was elected to fill the vacancy. The last session of the tour was held on June 6 in Electric Mills, with Mrs. D. L. St. John, of Meridian, secretary of the Meridian District, in charge.

At each and every day's session the ladies of the community provided a bountiful repast to which those in attendance did ample justice while renewing old acquaintances and making new ones. Thanks are due Dr. and Mrs. Homer Frizell, of Vaughan; Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Sullivan, of Natchez; Rev. and Mrs. L. J. Power, of Gulfport and others, who so kindly opened their homes to these ladies en route.

Each district secretary had planned for local additions to the program of conference addresses, noteworthy among these being the presentation of four life memberships, three at Wesson and one at Natchez. At one place there was a most beautiful devotional by Mrs. R. E. Rutledge and at another the marvelous expounding of the scriptural lesson by Mrs. Hunt, mother of Rev. Bruner Hunt, of Jackson's Capitol Street Methodist Church, while still at another there was a flaming message of reconsecration delivered by Rev. T. O. Prewitt, pastor of the Broad Street Methodist Church, of Hattiesburg.

On every program each conference officer presented the work of her department in a stirring manner and a broadening and deepening of the spiritual values in every phase of life was emphasized in each address made. Serious enthusiasm and very great earnestness was manifested throughout.

In giving you this letter from Mrs. G. A. Brown, Conference Spiritual Life Committee Chairman, I am looking far ahead but I am sure you are eager for the changed date and will wish to be making plans for the unusual opportunity that is to be given the women of this Conference, many of whom could not attend if the Retreat were being held in another state. The letter reads as follows:

"Our Conference is fortunate in having Council hold a Retreat for Spiritual Life Group leaders at Grenada College, Sept. 10-13. Plan to send the chairman of your auxiliary group. If you do not have a Spiritual Life Group, organize one and send the leader. The cost is $1.25 a day for board and registration fee $1.00. Order from Literature Headquarters the books to be used—'The Ministry of Silence and Meditation' (25c), and 'The Power of Life' (20c). Study these texts and urge your Spiritual Life Group chairman to attend the Retreat."

Heard A Lot About Cardui and Used It With Good Results

For over fifty years thousands of women have taken Cardui for pain, cramps and nervousness at monthly periods. A great many learned from their mothers to take Cardui, or heard of it from reports of its good use by others. . . . "I take Cardui for pains in my side and headache," writes Mrs. H. R. Hartson, of Nevada, Mo. "At times I felt like something was pressing on the top of my head. This made me very nervous. I had heard a lot about Cardui and decided to use it. I did, with good results. It certainly helped me in every way." . . . Try Cardui in your case. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

in Charleston, Friday afternoon, May 17, with Mrs. McMahon of Holcomb, chairman, presiding.

The program for the quarter as outlined by the Council was splendidly carried out and the time well spent in able discussion of each phase of work with emphasis placed on children's work, young women's circles, Christian social relations, efficiency aim, rural obligations, literature and publicity, and co-operation with the Board of Christian Education in holding daily vacation Bible schools.

Responsibility of stewardship was made very impressive in the devotional by Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor.

Miss Rogers, district secretary, called attention to the needs of the Wesley House at Biloxi, naming articles wanted at this time.

There was a fine attendance with representatives from Oak Grove, Crevi, Oakland and Holcomb.

DOES YOUR HUSBAND CALL YOU GROUCHY?

He's truthful if not tactful. Man-like, he is bewildered by your offishness and irritability. He can't understand what you have to be blue about. He wishes that you'd snap out of it. He'd do anything he could to help you. If he knew how good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was, he'd go straight to the nearest drug store and buy you a bottle.

Mrs. Barbara Spears says I am my old self again," says Mrs. Barbara Spears, 799 Elma Street, Akron, Ohio. "I was tired and all in with no appetite. Had no pep and was in poor spirits. Your Vegetable Compound eliminated that awful tired feeling."

Don't try your husband's patience too far. Get a bottle from your druggist NOW. It probably will help you, because nearly a million American women know from personal experience that it helps them.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 23

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

LIBERTY UNDER LAW

Christianity is ever in contrast with selfishness. Sin is generous with self; critical of others. It says: "This does not hurt me; if it does it is nobody's business." Christian duty is negative—it places no stumbling blocks; it is positive—it removes those placed by the greedy, the vicious, the selfish. It knows that "no man drinks to himself." Rejoicing in its own liberty, it seeks that social freedom which holds no snare of custom nor pitfall of usage that might endanger the young or the meek. It sets personality above pleasure and character above custom. It cheerfully practices self-denial in non-essentials that good may come to others. Partaking of the choice meats that had been slain in honor of idols seemed horrible to the tender conscience of the weak Christian and destroyed his confidence in the sincerity of his stronger brother; while it led the less conscientious brother not only to partake of the "consecrated" meat, but to participate in pagan worship. "The Kingdom of God is not meat and drink," but right and wrong use of meat and drink have much to do with the character and usefulness of the citizens of the Kingdom. The chief business of the Christian is not eating but edification. He acknowledges responsibility not only for his conduct but for his influence. It is better to restrain one's appetite than to offend the conscience of another.

Liberty, law, love, but the greatest of these is love. Man is a social product and a social unit. In solitude, he cannot have liberty. A great teacher was wont to say that "liberty is such perfect conformity to law that the law is not felt."

Law is the track for the locomotive, the highway for the auto, a path beaten and cleared by hands that have been torn and feet that have been pierced by ages of struggle through the jungles of ignorance and vice. Law expresses the crystallized experience and wisdom of the race. It is God's tribute to man's intelligence and trustworthiness. Every civil statute should point toward a larger personal life and greater social harmony and peace. Lawlessness spells anarchy and chaos.

Alcohol is so lawless that not even its makers and vendors dare suggest its unlimited sale or use. Knowing its damnable history, they decried the return of the "saloon," and plead for "strict regulation." However, its nature and effects are not changed by its legal status, except as they are made more deadly and universal by the cloak of respectability. The liquor traffic has never kept any law of God or man. The traffic corrupts dealer and drinker. It evades taxes, derides regulation, sells to minors and drunkards, corrupts elections, bribes officers, breaks homes and destroys souls. The only excuse offered for its existence is profit, and depraved citizens and bankrupt states are now greedily grasping for the profits of the bootleggers. But liquor is not profitable. It curses and destroys buyer and seller, and costs the state more for control of its sale and for increased crime and poverty than the highest system of license can ever yield. Most subtle and treacherous of all the king's fools, it begins at his feet with mock humility and hilarious jest and ends in despotic tyranny, throned, crowned, and sceptered, its feet on his neck. Its use may be legal; it can never be safe for the drinker nor expedient for his influence over others. While the world standeth, I will not drink it.

RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Ruston District Conference was held in the Methodist church at Ringgold, La., May 29 and 30, 1935. Rev. Louis Hoffpauir had a well planned program and presided like a veteran elder. All the connectional interests of the church were represented and carefully considered by the conference. We had several out-of-the-District visitors, some of them bringing messages to the conference. Rev. Sidney A. Seegers brought a message to the conference on the work of the Golden Cross. Rev. W. H. Giles represented the Board of Christian Education. Rev. R. W. Vaughan and Rev. J. G. Snelling spoke concerning the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage and the Memorial Mercy Home respectively. Rev. A. M. Serex brought a message in the interest of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and was himself elected Captain of the Ruston District Advocate Subscription Campaign.

The Ruston District has shown progress under the dynamic leadership of our presiding elder, Rev. Louis Hoffpauir. The reports to the conference showed that one hundred and ninety-two people had united with the church on profession of faith and one hundred and fifty-seven by certificate. $1576 had been raised on the benevolent claims and $3940 for the Orphanage. The salary of most of the pastors was just about in full.

T. L. James, E. L. Walker, T. W. Camp, Roy Akin, Tom Connell, A. T. Roby, F. A. Hinton, G. C. Taylor, Mrs. G. W. Dawson, and Miss Grace Jones were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

The people of Ringgold were very nice to the delegates. Splendid entertainment was furnished. An old-fashioned dinner on the ground for the last day was a real treat, for it carried us back across the years to our childhood experiences at old Bethel church.

REPORT, JACKSON DISTRICT LAY ACTIVITIES

We, your committee on lay activities, desire to restate our firm belief in the program and progress of our great Church, and hereby pledge ourselves unreservedly to co-operate in every way with our pastors, presiding elders, and our beloved bishop in carrying forward the greatest program the Church has ever launched.

New Financial Plan

As we understand the new financial plan, it is a direct challenge to the laymen of our Church to meet promptly and fully the financial responsibility of our great Church in the carrying on of its work, and we urge that every local church institute a sound financial plan for the support of the ministry and the full payment of all the benevolences of the church. We believe as practical men that no business can succeed unless it is founded upon a sound financial basis and operated in a systematic and business-like way, and we believe that the greatest business in the world is the business of the Church in its effort to promote and carry on the Kingdom of God in the world. We, therefore, pledge ourselves unreservedly to the new financial plan.

Church Property

We urge that the entire lay membership of our local churches take a personal pride in the beautifying and improving of all church property, so that it may be made attractive as well as useful, and to that end that they co-operate with the trustees of the local church, with the pastor, and with the trustees of the district and the presiding elder, for the preservation, upkeep and beautification of the property of our Church.

Temperance and Social Service

We accept the challenge and the responsibility placed upon us as laymen in the promotion of temperance and social service, and pledge ourselves that as Methodists and Christians we stand squarely behind the creed of our Church in condemning immoral and degrading motion pictures, and promoting a better, more elevating and cleaner picture that will help to build up rather than destroy the morals of the youth of our land, as well as all others.

We deplore the prevalence of divorce and the trend toward a loose sexual relationship between the married and the unmarried. We believe profoundly in the single standard of living, which is the standard that our Lord set up on earth, and declare that we do not believe that Christian civilization can exist unless the fundamental adjustment and individual chastity demanded among our entire membership be observed.

We believe that the time will soon come when war will be outlawed among civilized nations, and we express our opposition to any aggressive wars for conquests or additional territory, and urge our people to condemn the appeal to false and cheap patriotism, and the exposure of munition manufacturers propaganda, and stand for peace and against any wars except in defense of our own country.

We deplore the fact that there are many forms of gambling in our country, and still more deplore the fact that some form of gambling is carried on even among our own church members. We see so often Methodist laymen playing slot machines for gain, and putting up wagers on chance, and are advised that even our good Methodist women are indulging in a game commonly called bridge, for gain and profit. We believe this is nothing short of gambling, and that it is condemned by the Holy Scriptures and by the tenets of our great Methodist faith, and is detrimental to true manhood and womanhood, and especially harmful to the youths of our land. We take our stand against all forms of gambling.

We believe that mankind is our brother, regardless of his race, color or previous condition of servitude, and that we owe to our less fortunate brothers in our midst the duty of setting an example of a high standard of Christian living before them to be better and nobler people. We believe that our Lord died for all mankind, and that a friendly relation and an effort to spread the gospel of the Kingdom to all peoples should permeate our lives.

We condemn intemperance in all forms, and pledge ourselves to do everything in our power as laymen and as citizens of our communities to stamp out the traffic in and consumption of alcoholic liquors of all kinds, and to teach and propagate a high standard of temperance in our communities, both by precept and example.

We most heartily endorse and commend to our Church membership our Church periodicals, including the Nashville Advocate and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and urge that our membership secure and read as well as circulate in their homes and communities good literature of every kind and description that will be elevating and helpful in creating a sentiment of righteous and religious living. Many splendid periodicals are published by our Church press, and should be obtained and read by our membership.

With faith in our Lord and a prayer in our hearts for the guidance of the Holy Spirit in our lives, we join with the ministry of our great Church, and with all other good people everywhere in the onward march of Christianity in the land.

Respectfully submitted,
J. M. FORMAN, Chairman;
R. L. EZELLE, Secretary.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Psalm 145:18—The Lord is nigh unto all that call upon Him, to all that call upon Him in truth.

It is vitally important that we think of God properly. Our conduct and our character is determined by our conception of God. "This is life eternal, that they should know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou has sent."

God is Infinite Spirit, Wisdom, Light, Power, Goodness, Love. He is too wonderful to comprehend. But we can apprehend Him.

What is the distance between God and man? God is omnipresent. David asked, "Whither shall I go from Thy spirit? Or whither shall I flee from Thy presence?" The answer teaches us that God is everywhere. "If I ascend up into heaven thou art there. If I make my bed in hell, behold thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from Thee; but the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the light are both alike unto Thee." Jeremiah asked, "Am I a God at hand, saith the Lord, and not afar off? Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the Lord. Do not I fill heaven and earth?" Paul at Athens declared, "God is not far from every one of us; for in Him we live and move, and have our being."

These passages are full of comfort and strength. There is no physical distance between us and God.

But often there is a MORAL distance between God and man. It is the distance between sin and holiness. "Behold the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save; neither is His ear heavy that it cannot hear; but your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid His face from you that He will not hear." Isaiah 59:1-2. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." Psalm 66:18. Jesus said, "This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil." John 3:19.

This moral distance can be removed. "Thus saith the high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble and to revive the heart of the contrite ones." Repentance has removed the barrier.

Jesus came to bridge the distance between man and God. He came to save us from our sins.

In the light of the Christian revelation, how clear becomes the nearness of God. In Carlyle's words, "God is no absentee God." The whole spiritual discipline of life consists in the application of that great thought of God to all human affairs, personal and collective.

PRAYER

O God, we thank Thee that Thou hast revealed Thyself as our Father. Thy presence is a beneficent presence.

Help us to constantly remember Thou are our Heavenly Father. May Thy name be hallowed. We would be humble and reverent.

May we avail ourselves of Thy presence. We would call upon Thee in truth. We thank Thee that Thou art near. Speak Thou to our hearts. Reveal Thy holy will to us. We offer our prayer in our Savior's name.

NEW MISSIONARY LESSONS

By Dr. W. G. Cram

In the April, May, and June numbers of the Adult Student there appeared some special missionary lessons prepared primarily for use in the Church School. These were edited by Dr. C. A. Bowen and are indicative of the deep interest of our Christian Education leaders in the cause of missions.

I read these lessons with a great deal of interest and enthusiasm. They are complete and certainly give a wide and careful survey of the missionary work of our Church, both in America and in our foreign fields.

I understand these lessons are available in pamphlet form at fifteen cents per copy, the pamphlet containing all the lessons. I hope they will have a wide circulation. They should be extremely valuable to pastors, missionary society leaders, stewards, chairmen of missionary committees, and other leaders. They may be secured from our Publishing House.

In Memoriam

W. D. HOOD, JR.

In the early morning of May 14 the spirit of W. D. Wood, Jr., took its flight for its home above. During the silent night watches God called him home.

As he retired at night he asked to be called in the early morning, but when his father went to call him, he found that his son had already answered the call of his Heavenly Father.

He was born in Allentown, La., in 1906. His parents moved to Forest, Miss., in 1916. He was a graduate of Millsaps College and afterward attended Vanderbilt University. After finishing his work at Vanderbilt he was employed as chemist by the Highway Department of Mississippi.

He united with the Methodist Church in early life. His quiet, gentle disposition drew to him many friends.

Only a few months ago he was married to Miss Ruby Spencer, who, with his parents and sister await the reunion in the Father's House.

After services at the home conducted by the writer, Dr. J. L. Decell, Rev. J. L. Sutton and the pastor of the First Baptist Church, he was buried in Jackson, Miss.

JAS. G. GALLOWAY.

MRS. OLLIE GOODE NORWOOD

On the afternoon of April 24, 1935, at 5:30, the sweet spirit of our friend and neighbor Mrs. Ollie Goode Norwood, wife of B. H. Norwood took its flight into the land of the blessed. She was a native of the community of Cold Springs, East of Sardis, Miss. She joined the Methodist Church at the age of twelve. She leaves behind a kind and devoted husband, two children, Bennie Leigh and Frances Marie, ages 14 and 12, a mother,

Purely Vegetable

Laxative Medicine

It is just as natural for the digestive system to respond to the laxative action of Thedford's Black-Draught as it is for the body to pick up energy from foods from the garden. Both are vegetable products of Nature. Black-Draught is composed of laxative herbs, selected in the course of long medical experience. And in Black-Draught they are prepared by simply drying and finely grinding them so that the human digestive system can most easily absorb the medicine needed to relieve constipation. When you need a laxative, get acquainted with Thedford's Black-Draught.

During these long months of illness, she was patient, a woman who loved her church and family, and her faith in God never wavered.

All was done for her that human hands could do, by the doctor, her husband, a precious mother, a dear sister, other relatives and friends who watched by her bed-side as she suffered in agony. Calling her family and relatives about her, she would plead with them to so live in this world, that they may see her again in that Eternal Home where there is no disappointment, suffering, heartache or broken ties.

This vacancy came in the home when these dear children most needed a mother's love and advice. She bravely fought, that she might live until her children were grown, but indicated that she was prepared, and near the end she expressed her willingness to go. The morning of her death she prayed for God to take her Home and as she left, a sweet smile played over her face.

She was laid away to rest in the Cold Springs cemetery. May God bless, be with, and comfort the bereaved ones left behind, is our prayer.

A NEIGHBOR AND FRIEND.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to give us some dark threads to weave into our pattern in the calling away of our dear sister, Mrs. A. M. Mayo, wife of our beloved superintendent, A. M. Mayo.

Resolved, that we, the members of the Women's Wesley Bible Class shall endeavor to emulate her example of faithfulness and sincere devotion to our Church and all of its varied activities, and

Resolved furthermore, that we, members of this class, extend to the husband and family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour and commend to them the One who says: "My grace is sufficient for thee."

A BIG DAY AT GLENDORA, MISS., TUESDAY, JUNE 4

Hear me, Mr. Editor, a little piece about the Preachers' Meeting. That man, Beasley is a wonderful entertainer. He can think of more nice things to do and say than there are articles in Sears & Roebuck's catalogue. His courtesy is exceeded only by that of his fine people. Mr. Editor, I wish you could have seen that delicious lunch spread out in the Forest of Arden hard by the church. Paper shell pecan trees are growing there now since Shakespeare died.

We had the best program we have had in years. We talked about "Qualities and Qualification of a Good Minister"—his place in social and political affairs. It seemed to be the opinion of the majority that a preacher should attend to his own business, keep his mouth out of politics and that he should go ahead and make full proof of his ministry. Every preacher present had the privilege of talking a little and it seemed plain that everyone enjoyed his own speech. And the majority of the preachers stayed awake even after dinner.

W. M. Campbell thanked the ladies for the delicious luncheon but he did not talk long for he said that he was too full for utterance. Everybody believed it, too, for someone said that his wife had to make him stop eating.

Now, Mr. Editor, in all seriousness, the occasion was a great spiritual feast as well as a material and social one.

You about as well get that bonus ready, for our elder, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, says our district is going over the top in Advocate subscriptions. We hear many fine comments on the paper and the Editor. I tell you, Mr. Editor, it's a lot of fun to live and do the work of the ministry.

REPORT ON ADVOCATE CIRCULATION CAMPAIGN

As we enter into the home stretch of the Advocate campaign we are unable to report any district having reached its quota. However, the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, Rev. Victor G. Clifford, Presiding Elder, has passed the half-way mark and should cash in on the $100 prize before our next issue. In a recent communication Brother Clifford writes in part: "I am pushing the campaign as hard as I can and am expecting this district to be the first over the top. . . . We are going to use the district prize money to defray the expenses of a number of our pastors who will attend the Pastors' School at the Seashore Methodist Assembly, July 1-6." We realize from past experience that the volume of subscriptions will come in at the last moment and are preparing to be swamped during the closing days of the campaign, after which we will publish a complete report of subscriptions received, charge by charge, together with quotas. The following report covers subscriptions received during the week, June 12 through June 18, 1935:

CAMPAIGN NOTES

"Dear Advocate: Tidings from the East. Quota for Webb and Sumner Charge, Greenwood District as requested by our good P. E., Dr. A. T. McIlwain, is 18. Enclosed find 21 renewals and new subscriptions. It was a great work to sell the paper. My people, burdened with church debt and the building of another church, played the game fair. I rolled up my sleeves, drove 90 miles in one day, and came home happy, because we secured more than our quota. If it can be done here, with church building and church debt upon us, it should go over big throughout the Conference. I will send other subscriptions soon. We sent several just after Conference."—W. T. Phillips, P. C.

"Enclosed herewith find check to cover following subscriptions. . . . Quota for the Sunflower Charge is 12. This list gives us two over the quota. There will be more to follow."—A. J. Henry, P. C.

"The team of our District, Monroe, La., composed of Jack Midyette, D. W. Poole, H. E. Pfost, Martin Hebert and the writer, hereby issue a challenge to every District in the Seventh Episcopal District to beat us to the finish line."—V. D. Morris, Columbia, La.

"Enclosed is a check to cover the following subscriptions. This makes thirty-four subscriptions I have sent in during the past month."—B. M. Hunt, Capitol St. Church, Jackson, Miss.

THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE NORMANDIE, thirteen hundred in number, were presented with an attractively bound copy of the Gospel of St. John, by the New York Bible Society. This souvenir gift, at the completion of the maiden voyage of the great liner, was printed in English and French in parallel columns, and across the front of the tricolor, blue, white and red of the French flag, were the words: "Welcome, S. S. Normandie. June 3, 1935. New York Bible Society."

THE EARTHQUAKE IN INDIA, on Friday, May 31, was the worst that has occurred in that section since 1897. Quetta, the capital city of Baluchistan, British India, was almost completely destroyed. Fire and flood added to the terrors of the earthquake, and the loss of life is placed at from thirty to forty thousand. It is said that twenty thousand dead are still buried in the ruins of the stricken city. Martial law has been proclaimed and food supplies are being rushed by relief agencies; but grave fears are felt that an epidemic may complete the destruction in the stricken area.

RIGHT REVEREND was recently decreed to be the title by which the Moderator of the Presbyterian assembly of England should be addressed. The title will be official, of course; but there will come times, we imagine, when its official implications will be overshadowed by its personal association. Dignity by decree can not conceal an empty head any more than shining harness can hide the telltale ears of the donkey. If a man has something to say and the ability to say it, his honor does not have to be promoted by an official order. But if his head and heart are empty, ecclesiastical trappings will only give him the rank of a clown.

THE AMERICAN-ORIENTAL BANKING CORPORATION, and the Raven Trust Company, both of Shanghai, China, are closed for liquidation, according to a dispatch to the New York Times. These concerns, incorporated in America and commanded by an American, are said to have carried the accounts of many American missions, educational institutions and business concerns, and to have had depositors of forty nationalities. To the interests directly affected, there will be little comfort in the explanation that the closing was due to "the general acute financial situation." It is simply another tragic chapter in the history of American Banking, and it will be another blow to confidence in such institutions.

THE DAVID DUNLAP OBSERVATORY, recently erected on Richmond Hill near Toronto, is said to have a seventy-four inch telescope, the second largest in the world. It is expected that this new observatory, with its splendid equipment, will prove to be a very valuable asset in the promotion of the science of Astronomy. Certainly it must bring the stars nearer to us, it will push back our horizon, and it will tremendously increase our knowledge of the work and way of God in this great universe which he projected and maintains.

THE INTERFERIORITY COMPLEX seems to be the newest contribution of the psychologists to our already scrambled state of mind. The many complexes which point accusing fingers at us keep us dodging lest some dire calamity befall us. No one need be alarmed, however, by this latest psychic discovery, for it is really just an aristocratic name for a very plebeian fault. In our common American slang, the victim of this unhappy malady is known by the picturesque name of Butt-in-ski. If the psychologists can find a remedy for the trouble, they may do the world a real service.

THE FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY of the Statue of Liberty will be celebrated on October 28 of this year. On that date fifty years ago the four hundred and fifty thousand-pound creation of Frederic Auguste Bartholdi was unveiled at ceremonies in which representatives of the French and American nations participated. The statue, which stands on Bedloe's Island in New York harbor, is a bronze figure which cost $700,000, which was raised by the French people. The foundation and pedestal was erected at a cost of $300,000 which was borne by the American people.

THE PROPONENTS OF THE REPEAL of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution are faced with some stubborn arguments in the statistics and attitudes of great insurance companies. The increased number of applicants who admit the use of liquors, particularly among the younger people; and the 149 per cent increase of rejections among drinkers under 30 years, can hardly be traced to "clerical" influence. That is the deliberate judgment of business men who neither know nor care anything for romance, or the virtues of abstemious temperance advocates, beyond the question of financial returns. It is a case where "money talks," and a situation where silence is not "golden."

ANOTHER LYNCHING

The good name of the State of Mississippi has been dishonored by another of those unfortunate tragedies which have been all too frequent in Southern history. According to press reports of last Saturday, a Negro man twenty-five years of age, accused of an attack upon a young white woman, was lynched. We are not in sympathy with any man, white or black, who assaults a woman; neither are we in sympathy with murder whether it be committed by one person, or by an infuriated group who have so far forgotten themselves as to seize with violent hands a most sacred and responsible function of social organization. To us, lynching is one of the most barbarous forms of murder known, an affront to Christianity and the Church, and an attack upon civilization. We had hoped that the South might be spared a repetition of the humiliation which she has suffered for such deeds in the past. We have pride in the good name of the Southland, and we covet for our people a standard of righteousness not to be evil spoken of. But we feel a deep concern at the present moment, because, apart from the horror of such deeds, we believe that the continuation of such acts of violence is certain to result in the passage of a Federal statute for the punishment of the crime of lynching. We are for the sovereignty of the state in the administration of criminal law; but the Federal government cannot permit its subjects to be deprived of life or liberty without due process of law. It will ultimately be driven to the necessity of enacting measures for securing to its citizens the guarantees of the Constitution. When that step is taken the time-honored doctrines of State Sovereignty will pass to the limbo of ideals that the American people have not been enough socially minded to accept, nor sufficiently Christian to maintain. We stand for Democracy; we are against the invasion of the rights of the States by Federal authority, and we are for a just and equitable treatment of all men before the law, no matter what their crimes may be.

ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN EXTENDED

Many requests have been made for the extension of the Advocate Campaign. The expirations which occur a little later in the summer, the distractions due to school commencements and other things have made it a little difficult to complete the campaign within the time originally fixed. At the request of the Bishop and many presiding elders and pastors, the Campaign is being extended to July 15—a two weeks' extension. We urge every presiding elder and pastor to make full and effective use of these two weeks to bring the campaign to a successful conclusion. Let us know how we may help you.

SOCIETY AND RELIGION

A degree of self-respect is an instinct of civilized life, and for our own sake we observe the ordinary decencies of life. The point at which devotion breaks down is in carrying forward the ideal for the benefit of others. There are none today so retarded in their spiritual development as to deny the unity of mankind in the redemptive purpose and word of Jesus. Israel's prophets brought indictment against the chosen people, because they were so completely occupied with their own affairs as to permit the gross misuse of their fellow countrymen, the rankest injustices in their social relations, and the fostering of bitter hatred toward their foes. All the while they were maintaining the forms of their religion in the minutest detail; but Jehovah refused to accept the form for the substance. He declared his abhorrence of sacrifices not accompanied with justice and mercy—the very essence of religion. Those messages are just as vital today as they were twenty-five hundred years ago; and the withering words which Jesus directed against the self-centered and hypocritical Pharisees should be as thunderbolts hurled against unworthy living today—as red semaphores divinely placed on the highway of our twentieth century social relations. God has not changed and the faults of Israel's life have not become less hateful because of their modern dress.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY

The Young People's Assembly of Louisiana, held at Centenary College, Shreveport, last week, was in every way a remarkable gathering. Two hundred and twenty-five young people representing every section of Louisiana, were in attendance. They devoted the entire week to the study of the Bible and to the consideration of various factors and responsibilities of Christian life. Every care was taken to safeguard the interests of every person and of every home represented and no unseemly incident occurred. It was indeed a great inspiration to be a part of such a splendid group, and we came away with a renewed confidence in the church of tomorrow. We confidently expect these young people to meet the exacting demands of their day with credit to themselves and with honor to the church. Personally, we enjoyed every moment of the time. We slept on a doubledecker dormitory bed, with a damask table cloth for a sheet, and we were never certain as to whether we would have a pillow or not, but everything worked out all right. It's a great life, if you don't weaken!

METHODISM LEADS

According to the Christian Herald Annual Report of Church Statistics, quoted in the current issue of Zion's Herald, the total increase for 1934 was one of the largest ever recorded. In that year, the churches showed a total gain of 1,222,064, of which number 910,651 were over thirteen years of age. Less than 15 thousand of this gain was in bodies having fifty thousand or more members. The Methodists, whose rate of increase for several previous years had not been so large, have gained the head of the list of Protestant denominations, with a net gain of 210,475; and the Baptists, leaders for several years past, come next with 101,118. The Disciples of Christ are third, and the Protestant Episcopalians and Presbyterians fourth and fifth respectively. More important however, than the great figures indicating results for the year's work, is the evidence that Christianity is not a spent force. Verily the Kingdom of God is on the march, and Methodism leads the van of the Protestant forces. It is easy enough to become discouraged when one sees only a local situation, but the figures covering the entire field are too positive for even a timid soul to doubt. Those who would discredit the Church must know that the religion which has shaped our country's history is still a potent factor in its thinking.

CHRISTIAN SOCIAL RELATIONS

By Mrs. R. P. Neblett

Man's obligation to his fellow man is the basis of organized society. The varying degree of a sense of responsibility to each other has determined the development of our society. This varying degree of this sense of responsibility has been the determining factor in the strength or weakness of the family, the importance or unimportance of a tribe, the power of impotence of a nation, and therefore the progress or retrogression of civilization.

In the simplest and most direct way the Bible teaches that all nations are bound together by common blood and are the creation of a common God. Each is an integral part of the great human family which is the all embracing social unit. Thus the history in Genesis begins with the origin of the individual family and ends with a broad sketch of the entire family. Underlying all these stories is the fundamental social doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Jesus declared that all men are equal in the sight of God. He taught that the lowliest slave in Rome was as important a part of the social unit as the richest courtier. He caught the spirit of God and declared that all men were free. Not only did Jesus realize the implications of the tenth chapter of Genesis and apply it to the relations of the individuals of His day, but He added the corollary which answered the question of Cain for the first time.

He answered for all men the question: "Am I my brother's keeper?" The greatest teachings of Jesus are about the brotherhood of man. And, unlike the Greeks, who look back into history for the Golden Age when man was supposed to have reached perfection, He looked into the future when peace and good will will reign supreme in the life of every man. Every thing that He said centered about the teaching of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. These were the guiding principles of His plan for the organization and regulation of society.

The question of responsibility is the basis of morality. He placed the relations of men for the first time on a moral basis by defining man's responsibility to God and man's responsibility to man. From His teachings men have set up moral codes and these are all centered in the idea of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. To be Christian one must realize his responsibility both to God and to man.

THE TEACHINGS OF CHRIST

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D.

Plutarch mentions it as a memorable proof of the extra-ordinary eloquence of Mark Antony that, when soldiers were sent to kill him, he pleaded for his life in such affecting language that he totally disarmed them of their resolutions and melted them into tears. It was said of Christ by officers sent to arrest him, when they heard one of his ordinary discourses: "Never man spake like this man."

All the great masterpieces were the offspring of great occasions—the orations of Demosthenes when Greece was battling for her liberty; of Cicero, when the free institutions of Rome were threatened; of Chatham, at the time of the American Revolution. When Christ appeared in human form, the world had reached its lowest ebb—politically, intellectually, socially, morally. So Jesus had a great occasion because there was a great need and a lingering hope. The greatest orators, with the greatest opportunity before them, have broken down because they have ranged themselves on the wrong side and failed to rise to the occasion with a great message. The Great Teacher, on the other hand, proclaimed a message of hope, and one which called men with a trumpet call to battle.

The first distinguishing feature in the teachings of Jesus is their simplicity. If we examine the Talmud, or the discourses of the ancient orators, or the religious literature of the antique world, or the muddy phraseology of "Science and Health," by Mrs. Eddy, and then turn to the Sermon on the Mount or the high-priestly prayer recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John, we shall find that there is no greater contrast in all the literature of the world. The simplicity of Christ's words is what constitutes their perfection. His figures and illustrations were drawn from the book of nature which the unlettered could read and the simple could understand. Speaking just after the visit of John's messengers, he exclaimed: "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou didst hide these things from the wise and understanding, and didst reveal them unto babes." As a further proof of this fact, we are told that the common people heard him gladly.

Another feature of Christ's teaching is its profound revelation. He opened vast continents of truth which had been hid from the foundation of the world, and astonished the wise with the originality and the superiority of his doctrines. The reality of the unseen world, the awards of the general judgment, the eternity of the future state of the saved and the lost were but dimly and indistinctly set forth in the Old Testament; Christ brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. He presents to our wondering gaze the splendid panorama of human destiny, teaching that "Not in entire forgetfulness,

And not in utter nakedness,
But trailing clouds of glory do we come
From God who is our home."

And looking across the reach of the revolving years, he wings our imagination with celestial pinions till we soar beyond the dark and troubled tragedy of the apocalypse and outstripping the highest of unfallen creatures, make our final abode with Christ upon the throne of universal dominion. Such knowledge is too wonderful for us; it is so high that we cannot attain unto it in our present limitations.

So Christ gave to the world new and original ideas of life—its scope and meaning, its opportunities, its responsibilities, its far-reaching significance. The greatest of all poets tells us beautifully but not truly:

"We are such stuff as dreams are made of,
And our little life is rounded by a sleep."

The Son of God said: "In my Father's house are many mansions: If it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you . . . that where I am, there ye may be also.

The teachings of Christ set forth in grandest outlines and fullest significance the great scheme of recovering mercy, and present to us the mysteries of wisdom and benevolence which the angels desire to look into. The plan of salvation has the divine approbation, and appeals to the universal conscience of mankind, flinging the inspiration of hope to every member of Adam's apostate race. Modern missionaries, in all their wanderings among the lost and sinful tribes of men, have never found a people who did not approve and respond to the gospel message.

Finally, this teaching is the language of authority. The weight and impressiveness of a man's words largely depend upon his air, his atmosphere, the mysterious efflux and exhalation of his personality, the moral aroma of his character. Enter the assembly of the saints when a Whitefield or a Wesley is speaking, and there is upon you a power which it is the highest luxury and the greatest blessing to feel. There is incense here, and the smell of sacrifice. And what shall we imagine concerning the atmosphere of that wonderful Being who spoke as never man spoke? The sacred exhalation of his quality, the aroma, the auroral glory of his person, invested him with an unimpeachable authority, lent to his words spirit and life, and gave to his doctrine its astonishing power. He assumed human nature to exhale an atmosphere of God that should fill and finally renew the creation, bathing all the climes and times and ages with its dateless, ineradicable power.

The authority of Jesus Christ has been gaining power and momentum for two thousand years. The calendars of all civilized nations converge upon the manger at Bethlehem. Two and a half centuries pass, and a Roman emperor has torn the eagle from his standard to set there the cross, and the mistress of the world is at the feet of him she crucified. A thousand years have passed, and the power of this Name has subdued the wildness of German forests, leaped the English Channel, and raised the hewn timber of the tree of Calvary against the wild Druid's oak. And today, when all civilization is at its height and the world is quivering with fresh powers and measureless hopes, there is no other teaching which rivals for a moment the teachings of our risen Lord.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. W. L. DOSS

"The portals opened; the angels sang; and our sad loss was heaven's gain."

A life of service, of love and sacrifice, your suffering you bore in silence; forgetting the many physical pains; administering to those around you.

Your place will be vacant in our church and community; although your influence will live on and shall always cheer us on to higher planes and, too, giving our lives for service to the Christ you always held before us.

"A breath of sadness, a cloud of gray seems hovering around our hearts today. The angels came and claimed our friend, a faithful servant to the end."

MRS. JOE LAY.

NAMES OF MRS. J. W. LAMBUTH AND BISHOP WALTER LAMBUTH ADDED TO MONUMENT

The Lambuth Monument in front of Pearl River Church, in Madison County, about six miles east of Madison, Miss., was recently dismounted from its pedestal and carried to Jackson, Miss., where additions were made to the inscription. The monument was erected in 1900, as a memorial to Rev. James W. Lambuth, who had died in 1892, and whose grave is at Kobe, Japan. Inasmuch as Mrs. James W. Lambuth, and the son, Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, have both died since, their graves in Shanghai, China, it has for some years been deemed appropriate that their names should be added on the vacant face of the memorial, with dates and births and deaths of each, and brief characterization. Under the auspices of the Mississippi Conference Historical Society this has now been done, and the monument is back in its original sitting, with these additions. Some of the neighbors, not being aware of what was going on, and finding the shaft gone, were at first alarmed, fearing that the monument had been stolen. The weight of the monument is about a ton; and the full expense of transportation, re-inscribing, re-erecting, was a gift to the Society by the A. J. Martin Marble Works of Vicksburg and Jackson. Dr. and Mrs. James W. Lambuth went to the Orient from the Pearl River community.

UNDERSTANDING EACH OTHER

By Rev. W. R. Lott

The human heart craves to be understood. The men who crucified the Master did not understand him. He knew they did not know what they were doing. If we understood each other more fully we might be of more help. A weeping mother said of her fallen girl: "I am the only one who knows how much she has suffered." So many people are beating with bleeding hands against walls which hold them prisoners. Every person desires to tell his own story and make you see how it was. Here is one with a long fight with social maladjustments; another has battled with the darkest sin embodied in a loved one. Here is another who has had to bury ideals, lose health and still carry a heavy load. Only Jesus understood the Syrophenician woman. The question is asked how can people understand each other more? The easiest way to answer is that every person has the right to be seen in his best and highest moments. We do not picture Paul as an officer grasping people by the throat, but as a man wholly given to spreading the Gospel; yet both pictures existed. Simon Peter with livid face striking with his sword the servant of the high priest is overshadowed by the masterful sermon he delivered at Pentecost. If every life could be written there would be more heroism known than the world dreams exists. Too often the torch is outstretched by a falling man or woman and it is not taken. The man could not fix the adding machine because he did not understand it. The little woman who spoke so sharply had been awake for three nights with a sick baby. The man who failed to speak to you had a difficult problem on his mind. The preacher who did not preach so well was discouraged by the indifference of his people. We should be willing to learn to see the other side.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

BY W. L. DUREN

alone, and others were maintained in practically every Conference of the South.

When the suggestion was made which led to the founding of missions to the slaves, Dr. Capers was a presiding elder, and he had long been interested in the plantation Negroes. He prepared two catechisms specially for their use; and his interest in their welfare continued to the end of his life. On one face of the modest shaft which marks his resting place, is the well deserved tribute: "Founder of missions to the slaves of South Carolina." The art of Charles Dickens gave fame and a literary immortality to "Little Dorrit," "Little Nell," and others of God's neglected children. The soul and consecration of William Capers brought fame and a higher order of immortality to "Henry Evans," "Father Castile Selby," "John Bouquet," "Will Campbell," "Harry Myrick," "York Cohen," "Maum Rachael Wells," and a host of black children whose names, though not recorded here, are written in the Lamb's Book of Life.

The next important factor in the history of Methodist progress was education. The oft repeated saying: "Methodism was born in a university," ministers to church vanity and conceit more than to educational information. To be sure, Mr. Wesley was a university man, and the Oxford Holy Club is a legitimate part of Methodist history; but Mr. Wesley had no theory of education, and such did not greatly concern him—an attitude common to his time. He was an exponent of the methods of the Epworth rectory, and the schools which he established scarcely varied from the daily regimen of his parental home. And after all, school to him was just another evangelistic agency. In America the evangelism of the Wesleyan Revival dominated the movement for almost half a century. At the close of the Revolution the Methodist societies numbered approximately fifteen thousand members, but the ministry had not a single college graduate in the list, nor was there a Methodist college in America. There was not a college graduate in the Methodist ministry until 1818 when Wilbur Fisk, a graduate of the University of Vermont, was admitted into the New England Conference. This statement must not be taken as an indictment of the Methodists alone; it is equally a commentary upon the economic, the social and the cultural condition of the time.

Doctor Thomas Coke wrote an educational commitment into the very charter of American Methodism by the projection of Cokesbury College, at the moment when the church was in process of organization. The problem of the early educational efforts was well stated by Devereaux Jarratt in his rather blunt comment upon the failure of Cokesbury. He said: "I see not how any considerate man could expect any great things from a seminary of learning, while under the supreme direction and control of tinkers and taylorers, weavers, shoemakers, and country mechanics of all kinds—or, in other words, of men illiterate and wholly unacquainted with colleges and their contents." But the very effort to establish an institution of learning and a network of district academies is proof of Methodist interest in education; and it will be to the eternal credit of the pioneer preachers that an educational devotion was echoed upon the furthest frontier of the church. The cultural progress of the American people is well indicated by a pronouncement in the Texas Declaration of Independence, dated March 2, 1836. It says of the Mexican government: "It has failed to establish any public system of education, although possessed of almost boundless resources, and although it is an axiom of political science that, unless a people are educated and enlightened, it is idle to expect the continuance of civil liberty, or the capacity for self-government." At an early day, the sentiment of this historic political document found hospitality among the Methodists.

The failure of Cokesbury College and the system of district schools enterprised by Asbury terminated the first phase of the effort for the promotion of education in the new Church. The real beginning of the second phase of effort was preceded by the founding of a few widely scattered institutions. Probably the most important of these were Wesleyan Academy, New Market, New Hampshire, and Elizabeth Female Academy, Washington, Mississippi, both established in 1818; and Wesleyan Seminary, New York City, founded in 1819. The founding of these schools has been mentioned already, but we give a more extended account of Elizabeth Female Academy. The Academy, the gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Roach to the Mississippi Conference in 1818, was chartered February 17, 1819. Its doors were opened for students on November 12, 1818, with Chilion F. Stiles, a layman, as president. The clergymen who served as presidents of the Institution were John C. Burruss, B. M. Drake, J. P. Thomas, Bradford Frazee and R. D. Smith. The Academy had a career of varying fortune covering a period of twenty-seven years. The late Judge Edward Mayes of Mississippi, prepared for Bishop Galloway a comparative study of various institutions as to the time of their organization and the type of work done. Among other things, he listed in parallel columns the courses of study for Elizabeth Female Academy in 1827, and Georgia Female College in 1839. At the conclusion of the comparison, he says: "So you will see that the curriculum of the Elizabeth Academy in 1827 at the latest, embraced everything taught at the Georgia Female College twelve years later, and Latin, Belles Letters, Political Science and Mathematics, besides—also Map Drawing, Study of Bible, Mineralogy and probably a deeper study of Chemistry." These facts were taken from the catalogues of the colleges, which were then in the library of Judge Mayes. The opponents of Elizabeth Academy's claim to priority in the field of female education have said that the school was not called a college, and that the charter did not specifically give the right to confer degrees. Judge Mayes answers that, "academy," "college," and "university" were used interchangeably in that day; and that the power to confer degrees was presumed in the charters of educational institutions in Mississippi, even the State institutions of a much later date. The papers of Mississippi carried an account of the commencement of the Academy which began August 21, 1829, in which the names of six graduates and almost a score of honor students are given. The Mississippi Christian Herald for January 28, 1837, contains a notice which indicates that the vigor of Dr. Bradford Frazee's administration gave promise of extended and larger usefulness for the Institution; but the removal of the State capital from Washington to Jackson, the recurrence of yellow fever epidemics, and the shifting of the center of population made inevitable and inescapable the suspension of the Academy. But probably no school of that day deserves greater credit for its contribution to the life and character of the people than does Elizabeth Female Academy.

As we enter upon the study of the second phase of the cultural development of the church, we digress for a moment to disclaim any partisan interest in controversies which have arisen over questions of priority in the establishment of either schools or periodicals. To be sure, the historian is expected to locate events with some degree of accuracy; but such obligation does not necessarily include the adjudication of priority claims. The designation of schools as seminaries, colleges and universities; mergers, temporary lapses, and charter changes in both schools and periodicals, all have tended to introduce confusion and to become the occasion for contests which can not be adequately treated in a general history of the church. And, after all, mere priority probably bulks larger in the thinking of local communities and constituencies than in Methodist history as a whole. The chief interest of the historian is the movement, not a mere incident or fraction of it. We shall endeavor to present the facts regarding educational and publishing enterprises in such a manner as to reveal the cultural march of the church, rather than to gratify the ambition of any who would exalt a location or a particular enterprise. We will then try to indicate the social, civic and religious contributions made by the various institutions, and that will be the scope of our study. The first college to be organized under the impulse of the legislation of 1820 was Augusta College, Kentucky, in 1822. It did a great service for almost a quarter of a century; it was suspended when Transylvania University was organized; was later reopened; and the border troubles following the division of the church in 1844 caused it to be finally abandoned. Madiscn College, Uniontown, Pennsylvania, opened in 1826 and was incorporated in 1827; but its existence was of short duration and it was absorbed into an institution more advantageously located. Cazenovia Seminary, Cazenovia, New York, was opened December 11, 1824, and was incorporated as the Seminary of the Genesee Conference, April 6, 1825. Its name has been changed by charter amendment four times; but the Institution has rendered a continuous and praiseworthy service to the church and to the nation for 110 years. It numbers among its alumni six bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church; one territorial and three state governors; and many others including Charles Dudley Warner, Philo and Eliphalet Remington, and Philip Armour. One of the oldest Methodist schools is McKendree College located at Lebanon, Illinois. The school was first called Lebanon Seminary; was organized February 20, 1828; and was opened for students on November 24, of the same year. Bishop McKendree donated 480 acres of land to the school, the name was changed to McKendree College and a charter was secured in 1835. It has had a continuous history on the same campus since 1828, and it has been co-educational since 1869.

Probably the most outstanding Methodist institution of this period is Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut. In 1824, Captain Alden Patridge, a West Point graduate, decided to move his American Literary, Scientific and Military Academy from Norwich, Vermont, to Middletown. Three trustees, John Hinsdale, Elijah Hubbard, and John Alsop purchased an eligible site on High Street, and a charter was secured in May, 1825. Some brown-stone buildings were erected and the Academy opened August 22, 1825, with a faculty of 19 and a corps of 200 cadets. Two years later Captain Partridge petitioned the General Assembly of Connecticut for the right to confer degrees, and the privilege of raising the sum of $40,000.00 by lottery; but after two years of waiting the petition was withdrawn, and the Academy was moved back to Norwich in 1829. Two of the faculty continued a small school at Middletown, but the trustees and people were much disappointed in the defeat of their hopes for building a great institution. At the opportune moment, Dr. Laban Clark, presiding elder of the New

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. R. V. Fulton, who begins his revival at Choudrant on June 30, requests prayer for the success of the meeting. He will be assisted by Rev. W. H. Royal.

We appreciate the faithful work being done for the Advocate by Rev. Jeff Cunningham of Schlater, Miss.; and we value his thoughtful and brotherly personal word.

It will be of interest to Louisiana Methodists to learn that the first floor of the Advocate building, which has been vacant for a number of years, has been leased.

We received the notices regarding the series of educational rallies, to be held for the Mississippi Conference, from four people. We published the one first received.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, according to the Gainesville, Ga., Eagle, has just closed a tent revival at Chicopee in which seventy members were added to the church.

We regret to learn of the illness of Mrs. Donoldson, wife of Rev. Ivan O. Donoldson of Montrose, La. We hope that she may soon be on the way to complete recovery.

Last week we carried the set-up of the Seashore Pastors' School. At no time has a more inviting program been presented. We call especial attention to Dr. Lewis of Drew University.

A much appreciated letter from Rev. J. C. Wasson indicates a continuance of his splendid work at Oakland, Miss. The Advocate is indebted to him for his loyalty and cordial support.

We regret our absence from the city which caused us to miss the visit of Rev. H. W. Rickey, of Gilbert, last week. We trust that he will call again with the grandson who accompanied him.

Rev. Otto Porter writes that his church will be creditably represented in the Advocate campaign. Thank you, Brother Porter. We have not forgotten your leadership in the district last year.

We regret the bad news concerning the condition of Dr. A. W. Turner. He is still seriously ill at a hospital in Shreveport and no improvement in his condition has been reported from the first.

Rev. A. S. Oliver of Meadville charge is in a meeting at Bude. He is being assisted by Rev. R. H. Clegg. He reports a good prospect and spirit on account of the thorough cultivation which has been done.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, Corinth First Church, says: "Recently I received James H. Felts into the church (Jr., of course), and performed a marriage for Sam Jones. How's that?" Sounds rather belated.

Rev. Tinsley B. Thrower is in the midst of his revival services at Central Church, Columbus, Miss. He is doing his own preaching, the people are helping him, and he is expecting a great blessing upon his work.

Friends of Mrs. D. E. Kelly will be interested to know she has changed her address to 519 Rutherford, Shreveport, La. She says that the Advocate has been a welcome visitor to her home for nearly forty years.

Forty children from the Mississippi Orphans' Home gave an interesting program at the Methodist Church in Winona, June 18. During their stay they were entertained in the homes of the Methodist people.

Rev. Jerome Cain and his people of Claiborne Ave. charge, Shreveport, are happy in the prospect of an early completion of their beautiful new church. It is a stucco building and the work is going forward nicely.

Dr. H. T. Carley spent a short time at the young peoples assembly at Centenary College, Tuesday. He and his family were in Shreveport for the day, and he gave his friends the pleasure of an hour in his genial company.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, has given his Advocate campaign an apostolic turn by grouping his pastors in pairs for an every member canvass. That unique arrangement should get results.

Rev. Victor Clifford, the capable and energetic presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, writes that it is still his purpose and expectation to secure his full quota in the Advocate campaign. We believe that he will do so.

Elsewhere will be found the report of a good meeting which the pastor Rev. L. M. Sharp, held at Monticello, Miss. He was assisted by Rev. H. M. Johnson of Bogalusa, with Frank E. Dement, Jr., of Meridian, leading the service of song.

The Advocate acknowledges the receipt of a good note from Rev. D. B. Boddie of Lake Providence, La. We met one of his staunch members recently, from whom we learned that he is doing a splendid work and is greatly beloved by his people.

Rev. Sherral Coleman of Fayette, Miss., has for some time been attending the John Brown School at Siloam Springs, Ark., and will graduate there this summer. He has been preaching regularly and with fruits of his work, near Siloam Springs, and would like to find a field of labor in Mississippi.

Miss Adelle Mounger, who recently received her honor degree in the Library science at Carnegie School of Technology at Pittsburgh, Pa., arrived Wednesday for the summer vacation with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Mounger. Miss Mounger will be assistant librarian at Millsaps College next session.

The choir of the Methodist Church at Winona, Miss., gave a broadcast program over the Kosciusko station, on June 6, with Mrs. N. V. Hutchinson as accompanist and announcer. The contributors to this beautiful program were Mrs. Jack Minga, Mrs. Bettie Ingram, Mrs. T. W. Holmes, Mrs. F. L. Harris, and Mrs. C. K. Anderson.

The parsonage at Roxie, Miss., occupied by Rev. and Mrs. Frank M. Casey, has recently received a much needed new roof. Brother Casey is serving his second year in the Mississippi Conference, and finds a plenty to require his attention on this circuit, with Roxie at the head and five other preaching points. The people are responding well to the efforts of the pastor,

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

The New Orleans District meeting was held in First Church, New Orleans, on Thursday, May 23. Mrs. J. W. Warren, the new secretary for the district, presided.

The address of welcome was given by Mrs. D. M. Campbell, and Mrs. G. F. Poole of Bogalusa responded.

Rev. D. B. Raulins led the morning devotions and Dr. W. L. Duren led in prayer.

The speakers for the morning were Mrs. J. W. Shepherd, returned missionary from Brazil and Mrs. J. B. Pollard.

At the Monday luncheon which was served by the women of First Church a number of introductions were made and Mrs. D. B. Carré spoke on "The Community Chest Drive."

The afternoon session opened with Mrs. John Pharr of Berwick leading the spiritual meditations. Mrs. W. L. Duren spoke on "The Spiritual Life Retreat." Deaconess Verna Webster presented the work of St. Mark's and Deaconess Hendrix the work of McDonnell School.

Mrs. J. W. Malone concluded the afternoon's program using for her subject: "Parent Education and Home Co-operation in Christian Work."

The district was well represented and the attendance was large.

Mrs. Geo. Sexton, Jr., Conference president, is now having a few weeks' visit with "homefolks" in Virginia and will return the latter part of the month by way of Nashville to attend the meeting of the candidate committee of the Woman's Missionary Council.

The following are members of this committee: Mrs. J. W. Downes, chairman; Miss Mabel K. Howell, Miss Sallie Lou McKinnon, Mrs. Helen B. Bourne, Miss Louise Young, Mrs. George S. Sexton, Jr., Mrs. I. Morris, and Mrs. C. T. Shadel.

Mrs. Shadel, a former missionary to Africa, lived in Monroe for a number of years and is now Conference secretary to the Texas Conference, living in Bay City, Texas.

Entertaining at the Methodist parsonage with Mesdames E. D. Simpson and D. L. McWilliams as hostesses, members of the Woman's Missionary Society of Daleville Methodist Church, Meridian District tendered Miss Betty Hughes, pioneer missionary to China, a party on her seventy-second birthday. "Miss Betty" as she is known by those who love her, displayed some of her curios and souvenirs gathered in China during her long years of service there. She told of being present at the organization of the first woman's society among the Chinese women, 45 years ago. When asked if at times she did not feel lonely in that foreign city with a population of 300,000 her answer was that "We were always so conscious of the presence of the Divine Master and the interest of His work was so uppermost in our hearts that we had little time to be lonely." The program was opened with "Jesus Loves Me," a favorite hymn among the Chinese and which was the first one Miss Hughes sang in China. Miss Hughes is a life member of the Mississippi Conference. On behalf of the society, Mrs. D. E. Harbour presented the honoree a box of linen handkerchiefs and a beautiful birthday cake surmounted with 72 candles. A salad course with an iced drink was served.

Brooksville, Miss., June 14. Notice has just been received here of the awarding of a full scholarship to Mrs. R. P. Neblett, Conference secretary for North Mississippi of the Woman's Missionary Society, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to attend an institute on Race Relations to be held at Swarthmore College, Philadelphia, Pa., for the month of July.

Mrs. Neblett, who has been active in the work of the Woman's Missionary Society for a number of years, has accepted the appointment which comes through Miss Ethel K. Miller, of the faculty of Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., and Dr. Charles W. Pipkin, dean of the Graduate School of Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La., and carries with it provision for all expenses.

She plans to leave for Washington and Philadelphia the latter part of June to be present for the opening of the institute Monday, July 1. She will also do research work in Philadelphia and the east as a member of the Christian Social Relations Commission of the Woman's Council of the Southern Methodist Church, of which she is a member.

PASTOR RELEASED

Several weeks ago, Rev. Floyd O'Dom having asked to be released from the Nebo charge of the Mississippi Conference, on account of the health of his family, Rev. Julius McRaney was appointed to the charge, and has been serving it with great acceptability. Both these young brethren and their wives have taken much interest in improving the parsonage. To make sure, however, that inner improvements are not to be spoiled by leaking roof, the churches of the circuit will join on July 19, in a rally and picnic, to be held for the purpose of raising the money necessary for a new roof. Rev. W. M. Sullivan of Natchez, Miss., has accepted an invitation to be master of ceremonies at this rally.

REVIVAL SERVICES AT MON-TICELLO, MISS.

Marked by splendid interest and fine attendance the eleven-day series of community revival services held at Methodist Church closed on Sunday night with the largest attendance of the meeting present for the closing service. The pastor of the Methodist Church, the Rev. L. M. Sharp, states that this was the most successful meeting held during his four years' ministry here.

The preaching for the services was done by the pastor and by the Rev. H. M. Johnson of Bogalusa with Mr. Frank E. Dement, Jr., of Meridian, director of the young people's work and song leader. Visible results of the meeting were six accessions to the Methodist Church, five on profession of faith and one by letter. The Sunday morning service was featured by a reconsecration service participated in by scores of members of the three churches of the town.

Miss Christine McGuffee was the efficient pianist with Mrs. J. W. Wilson playing for two services and Miss Minnie Belle Fairman and Miss Irene Garrett assisting for the Sunday morning and night services.

Mr. Dement, who also preached most acceptably for two services, sang special solos for the services and directed the junior and senior choirs, in addition to leading in an able way the work for the young people. He is much in demand as a gospel singer.

The visiting preacher, Mr. Johnson, a former member of the Mississippi Conference has for the past several years been in Louisiana and for the past four years pastor of the Bogalusa Methodist Church. He is a preacher of eloquence and power.—Lawrence County Press.

Ivey Hospital, Songdo, Korea, does not claim to be a large hospital, but it has won a number of men and women who have been influential in helping to establish the Church in Korea. The capable, wide-awake young chaplain is ever busy among the patients, trying to win souls for Christ, and several churches have been established or much strengthened through this hospital evangelistic work. During 1934 Ivey Hospital received 400 in-patients and gave approximately 6,000 treatments in the out-patient department. The Koreans call this the Mam Sung (or South Star) Hospital.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 30.

By Dr. J. R. Conntiss

THE MISSIONARY PURPOSE OF THE CHURCH

It is difficult for religious people to get away from a mechanical set-up, an arbitrary arrangement whereby favorites are placed on the right hand or the left of their king who bestows scepters and crowns. They prefer gift to growth, decree to development. Where the Master felt the shadow of the cross the disciples saw the sparkle of a crown. They desired imperial dominion. He gave the power of sanctified personality. They were concerned with the external, he with the internal; they with times and seasons, he with character and conduct—with their endowment for witnessing and for service. Nothing is more futile and foolish than to apply arithmetic to the Bible and forecast the end of the world. Somehow this mathematical exegesis and mechanical "spirituality" always manages to get its authors throned and crowned while empires crash and their fellowmen writhe in agony. They see God restoring the kingdom to Israel,

...to themselves. A strangely selfish and materialistic cult!

Christianity is a missionary—a sent—religion, and a sending religion. Abraham was sent. Jonah was sent. Isaiah was sent. the apostles were sent. Jesus was sent. the Holy Spirit was sent. The Holy Spirit sent Paul and Barnabas. Witnessing measures the power of the church and sending its vitality. Those who know testify and those who have impart. In spiritual matters only the ignorant remain silent and only the bankrupt refuse to share. It is not poverty of purse but leanness of soul that hinders an aggressive advance of the church at home and abroad. Witnessing merely with words soon degenerates into egotistical boasting. Service must corroborate speech; lip and life must agree.

The early church was not content to be a self-contained unit. It was a body to be both enjoyed and enlarged. Recruits were to be persuaded not drafted. Naturally and properly. Paul and Barnabas went first to the synagogues, to their Jewish brethren. Belief of the prophets would have prepared the Jews for faith in the Messiah. The Law should have led them to the Christ. Use of the light they had would have kindled a longing for more. As always, some minds were open to the truth and some were closed. Sergius Paulus "desired to hear the word of God." The word of God which these missionaries carried was the "Word made flesh," a living gospel, not the written word, old or new. Elymas, the sorcerer, withstood the messengers. Wise in his own conceits, crafty, greedy, his mind was closed to truth but keen for tricks. The physical blindness which was visited upon him was but an acted parable of his spiritual condition. No doubt he discovered new values what time he meditated in darkness. The deputy heard and saw with astonishment and "believed." It is still not ours to know times and seasons. That is God's business, and we may well trust him to attend to it. We do know seed-time and the laws of cultivation. That is our business. Let it not be neglected.

REVIVAL AT MAYERSVILLE

Dear Dr. Duren: We have just closed a great revival at Grace, Miss., with Rev. Frank E. Dement, of Meridian, Miss., doing the preaching. We opened the revival Sunday, June 9, with the regular service. Then Brother Dement came to us on Monday and we held services every night through Friday night. As this is a very busy time of the year with the planters of this section of the Delta we did not try to have but one service a day.

Brother Dement is a fine spiritual young preacher, and we feel that much good was done in the community. Our membership was tripled during the week. We had four members to start with and we now have twelve. Seven came by letter and one by baptism. There are others who should put their letter there and we believe that they will before the year is out.

The people were very nice to us and raised a good offering for Brother Dement.

Brother Dement will be with us at Valley Park the week after the third Sunday in July. Pray that this will be a great meeting.

FLOYD O. LEWIS, P. C.

FROM LUMBERTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Duren: From June 2-12 the Methodist church in Lumberton held a successful revival meeting. The pastor was assisted by Rev. R. L. Lane, our pastor at Carriere, who rendered the church a fine service. He grew from infancy to manhood in Lumberton, and was heard with pleasure and profit by the associates of his youth. Eight persons made a public confession of faith in Christ, six have been received into the Methodist church, and two applied for membership in the Baptist church. On the Sunday following the close of the meeting, on Wednesday night, there was an increase in attendance at the Sunday school and the morning and night services—a fine test for the results of a meeting.

MY OLD TEACHER

By D. B. Raulins, D.D.

It was about 9:30 of the night of September, 1907. The old "hack," bearing students, "old" and "new," drawn by mustang ponies, came to a grating stop in the gravel in front of the main entrance to the main building of Ruskin Cave College, Ruskin, Tenn.

The old students leaped from the hack to greet with gladness and be received with joy by their comrades, other old students. A few faculty members present gave welcome to both old and new students.

I found myself among the "new" students, and at that particular juncture in my life's experience I found little inspiration or comfort in the term. For, for the first time in my life, I was more than four hundred miles from home, "sweet home." All the thrill of my second ride on "the train" now departed from me. A severe attack of nostalgia had already gripped me. All my magnificent dreams of college days which had been so royally entertained became nightmares to "hant" me.

I crawled, not gingerly, down from the hack. The cheery greetings of the old students but augmented my isolation and added to my loneliness.

I advanced a step. There stood in my way a man, not with a drawn sword, but with a lamp in his hand. (And this is a parable. From that moment he has been holding a light for me, and will hold it till tomorrow). A hand slipped toward me in the night, and a voice said, "This is Raulins, is it?"

The holder of the lamp was Dean R. E. Smith, and the voice that spoke was that of the greatest teacher I have ever had. He was then president of Ruskin Cave College.

If absence ever made a heart grow fonder, it was my heart. If distance ever did make a loan of enchantment, it extended its biggest credit to this country boy's soul that night.

After a night that aggravated rather than salved my homesickness I got up and went out of the old Upper Dormitory and stood alone between it and the college building. Then the second meeting with the holder of the light. This time the cordial greeting was followed by this: "Raulins, are you going to get homesick and wish to go right back home?"

Who had told him? Right then I felt willing to forfeit college and mortgage the future for the privilege of walking through the old home gate. Why should he push me beyond extremity?

From resources I never dreamed that I possessed, and at which I still marvel,

I issued this bold reply: "Professor Smith, I am here for nine months' work, regardless of the homesickness. He pressed my hand firmly and said, "All right, Raulins. You will do." He turned and left me. Startled both at my own reply and his rejoinder, I took this pledge, "If it takes a life time I shall spend it in convincing him that what he says of me is true." I felt obligated for his integrity.

For five years I was associated with Dean Smith as a student. During those days he made serious attempts, with doubtful success, to teach me something of Latin, Greek, Sociology, Browning, Homiletics, Theology, and the Bible. So much for formal courses. Beyond these and college walls he taught me many things not listed in college catalogs. And they were worth most to me.

For ten years I was associated with him as a teacher on the same faculty. During the twenty-eight years, for twenty of which I might have seen him within a few minutes, I have known him, I believe I have learned something of him.

In Dean Smith as my teacher during the critical days of my youth I found two things that I have wished a million times every boy and girl might find in his teacher. His scholarship was thorough and dependable. His consecration and devotion to God were above question. And these were held in such even balance as to make of him a personality of rare dimensions.

Dean Smith is supremely a teacher. Under the magic of his spirit and method a course of study comes alive and books break into rhythm. Under his touch the Bible becomes current literature sparkling with the dews of morning. The prophets and other Biblical worthies become citizens of our day. With his guidance Jesus of Nazareth leaves the niche of his own primitive place and time and walks our own city streets and the lanes of our countryside.

Dr. Glenn Frank, president of a great university, and one of the foremost citizens of our day, says in a recent article, "Some Marks of Great Teacher," "The most profoundly inspirational teaching arises from reality presented with artistry."

This describes the teachings of R. E. Smith.

HOME COMING AT PHOENIX, MISS.

A most pleasant time was spent at Wesley Chapel Methodist Church at Phoenix, Miss., Yazoo County, Sunday, June 16, in observance of the annual Home Coming Day.

one time a thickly populated community of families for the past generations that had worshipped and still do gathered from far and near 'til the old church was overflowing. With the local pastor, Rev. Jones, and Mr. Robert Selby as master of ceremonies, a most interesting program was given by the laymen at the morning hour, interspersed with old familiar songs. At the noon hour a most bounteous dinner was served under the spreading oaks, prepared by the ladies of the community. The afternoon program was given entirely to short talks by representatives of families that have in the generations past as well as now who worship there. Many letters were read from distant states bearing regrets and good wishes from many prevented from attending. Singing of "God Be With You" brought to a close a most enjoyable as well as sacred service, the annual Home Coming Day looked forward to and planned by the Wesley Chapel Church at Phoenix.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Obadiah 1:3. —The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, whose habitation is high; that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground? Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, and though thou set thy nest among the stars, thence will I bring thee down, saith the Lord.

There is a great lesson in this shortest book of the Old Testament.

The Edomites were descendants of Esau. They were traditional foes of the Israelites. The Edomites assisted the Babylonians in destroying Jerusalem. "As thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee" (verse 15). They were dispossessed by Nabatean Arabs, their former confederates. They received the measure they meted out. They lived by the sword and perished by the sword.

FEEL WONDERFUL EVERY DAY

PERHAPS you could if you did not have to suffer from periodic pains and discomforts. Have you tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets?

Sally Mariel works in a mill in Putnam, Connecticut. She had dizzy spells every month. "One of my friends told me about your Tablets," she says, "They are wonderful." Chocolate coated. Small size 25 cents.

Lydia E. Pinkham's
TABLETS

The Edomites occupied the mountainous district south of the Dead Sea on both sides of Arabah, ranges of Mt. Seir. Edom had been confident in the inaccessibility of the mountainous caves. Obadiah assures them that their position will be no protection against the divine judgment that will overtake them. "How are the things of Esau searched out? How are his hidden things sought up?" (verse 6). The prophet intimates, nothing shall be left. "If thieves came to thee, if robbers by night (how are they cut off!) would they not have stolen till they had enough? if the grapegatherers came to thee, would they not leave some grapes?" (verse 5). "All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border; the men that were at peace with thee, have deceived thee; and prevailed against thee; they that eat thy bread have laid a wound against thee: there is none understanding in him. Shall I not in that day, saith the Lord, even destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau? And thy mighty men, O Teman, shall be dismayed, to the end that every one of the mount of Esau may be cut off by slaughter." (verse 7-9).

The consequences of sin are absolutely sure. "For never, never wicked man was wise." Pope.

"He who runs may read" the folly of sin wherever he turns.

God brings men down when they think of themselves more highly than they ought to think. Nicodemus made his nest among the political stars of his day—how Jesus dragged him down. Simon the Pharisee nested among the social stars of the aristocratic circle—Jesus searched out his soul. Pilate tried to nestle close to Caesar's star—how Jesus agitated him. The scribes and Pharisees made their nest among the literary stars of heartless legalism—how Jesus impaled them.

God's love pursues us as well as His law. It is when doing wrong, that conscience condemns. "We are not afraid of a pursuing God when we are obedient to His will."

No one escapes from God by nesting among the stars. God finds us. There is only one kingdom; but it is the kingdom of both law and love; of wisdom and blessing. As Obadiah says, "The kingdom is the Lord's." (verse 21).

The bonds that bind us to God are the chains of love. Mind is the maker of the universe; purpose at the heart of it; love underneath it; Providences in control of it; victory ahead of it.

PRAYER

O Father, we are grateful that Thou hast not left us in a world of chance or caprice. As long as we live in right relations with Thee, we need fear no evil. We thank Thee also for the amazing love of God that hath found us out. We would live in the light of Thy presence. We would listen to the voice of the Good Shepherd who sought us out. We offer our prayer in Christ's name.

Tells How CARDUI

Relieved Pains and Renewed Strength

"Before the birth of my children, I suffered so much from weakness in my back and pains in my side," writes Mrs. Joe Brown, of Greer, S. C. "I felt so worn-out. I was so nervous I could not rest at night. I read of Cardui and decided to take it. It strengthened me and stopped the pain. I do not know what I would have done without Cardui." ... Cardui has been used by women for over 50 years. It is purely vegetable, harmless. Get a bottle, today, and try it! Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

In Memoriam

MARTIN LUTHER BURTON

DECEMBER 24, 1863—JANUARY 17, 1935

By Rev. Geo. H. Jones

Martin Luther Burton was born December 24, 1863, near Montrose in Jasper County, Miss. His birthplace is now incorporated in the town of Louin. He was the son of Rev. Reuben Burton and Mrs. Thompson Burton. His father was a local preacher, a medical doctor and a colporteur of our Church. At the close of the Civil War his father bought the home and place in Montrose where Burwell B. Whittington had lived during the Civil War while serving the Paulding District as presiding elder. Thus from earliest recollection Martin Luther Burton lived in Montrose, that early center of culture and influence which had so much to do with the shaping of his life, from which community he went out to join the Mississippi Conference, which he always took delight in calling his home.

His boyhood was spent on the farm at Montrose and in attending the common schools of the community. He was converted and joined the Church in early adolescence at Price's Chapel at Montrose, under the ministry and preaching of R. A. Sibley, Sr., and J. H. Evans, pastors of the old Raleigh Circuit, about 1876 or 1877. Price's Chapel has also given J. T. Abney, W. L. Blackwell, and J. L. Neill to the Mississippi Conference, and the name of C. C. Evans might also be added to this list.

When he was from sixteen to nineteen years old, Martin Luther Burton attended A. & M. College at Starkville, but did not graduate on account of ill health. He was said to be the second student to arrive on the campus at Starkville when the college was first opened. After attending A. & M. College, he taught school for several years at Garlandsville, Double Springs and Baxter in Jasper County, and at Beezer in Smith County. In the old Garlandsville Academy he was student-assistant to Dr. A. B. Coit, a Presbyterian minister, and he studied theology under Dr. Coit. Being convinced that he was called to God to preach the gospel, after much struggle, he gave up the school room for the Church.

He was licensed to preach on September 20, 1884, by the quarterly conference of the Raleigh Circuit held at Trinity Church, with R. S. Gale, supply, preacher in charge, and F. M. Williams (father of our own W. M. Williams), the presiding elder. He preached his first sermon at Garlandsville.

He was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Annual Conference at Meridian, on December 13, 1885, in a class of fourteen, one of the largest classes ever to be received into the Conference. Included in this class was R. S. Gale, his own supply pastor, and several who later became recognized as leaders of the Church, such as Geo. D. Anders, Joshua M. Morse, Wm. Webb Morse, Robert Selby, and Nolan B. Harmon, the sole surviving member of the class.

His first appointment was Bayou Pierre Circuit which he served in 1886, on which charge he reported all collections practically in full, baptized twenty-eight adults and forty-six infants, and reported a net gain in membership of seventy-four, according to the Conference Journal. During this his first year, only one charge in his district and nine in the Conference exceeded his in gain in membership.

During the years 1887 and 1888 he served the Adams Circuit, being overpaid each year in Conference collections and baptizing during the two years fifty-two adults and sixty-three infants, and receiving a net gain of one hundred and sixty-eight members. In 1887 he reported a net gain of one hundred and eighteen members, being third in the Conference in this respect.

At the session of the Conference held in Jackson in December, 1887, he was ordained a deacon by Bishop Keener and was admitted into full connection; and at the session of the Conference held in Canton in December, 1890, he was ordained an elder by Bishop Galloway.

On December 28, 1887, he was married to Miss Lela Jim Elizabeth Redus of Hazlehurst, the officiating ministers being W. B. Bingham of the Presbyterian Church and A. F. Watkins of the Mississippi Conference. To this happy union there were born three sons, Martin Luther, Jr., Reuben Chaffin, and John William, but only the second-born lived to survive infancy.

Brother Burton served the Gailman Circuit in 1889 and Wesley Chapel, Natchez, in 1890 and 1891, and continued to report splendid collections and net gain of membership. His success in the pastorate was recognized early, for he was appointed to serve McComb City Station in 1892, 1893, and 1894, Crystal Springs in 1895 and 1896, and Wesson in 1897, bringing in full collections, baptizing many, and bringing many into the Church. Indeed, this was his habit throughout his pastoral ministry.

When the matter of the Conference establishing a home for orphan children was brought up in 1892, he was made treasurer of the Orphanage Committee. When the Orphans Home became nearer a reality, R. J. Jones, A. F. Watkins, and M. L. Burton were made clerical directors, and M. L. Burton was made treasurer of the directors of the Mississippi Conference to serve with J. A. Bowen, the treasurer for the North Mississippi Conference. So well did Brother Burton succeed in this task that at the Conference session held in 1897, he was appointed the first manager of the Orphans Home which was being built at Water Valley. He succeeded in opening the Home in 1898, receiving thirty-nine children, and, at the Conference session held in December, 1898, his administration was reported as being "eminently successful and entirely satisfactory," and the board of directors reelected him as manager for a period of four years. But feeling his inability for constant travel on behalf of the Orphanage, on account of poor health, he resigned after serving as manager for two years. He continued, however, to serve on the board of directors through 1929; and he always manifested a keen interest in the welfare of the Home. It is said that, more than any other one man, he was responsible for its being moved to Jackson after the building at Water Valley burned in July, 1904.

Before a single year's pastorate at Enterprise and Stonewall, in 1900, was concluded, Brother Burton's business ability again was recognized, and he was made vice-president and business manager of Whitworth College, under the administration of A. F. Watkins. While serving in this position for two years, he taught some classes in Bible in the college.

Going back into the pastorate, his appointments were Summit, June, 1902 through 1903, and Magnolia, 1904 and 1905, after which he was made presiding elder of the Seashore District for the years 1906, 1907, and 1908. At that time the Seashore District contained twenty-nine appointments, including Hattiesburg, and was said to be one of the largest in Southern Methodism. During his first two years on the district all Conference claims were paid in full, and they were paid almost in full the third year, despite his sickness during the year. More than thirty churches were built in the district during these years.

Because of failing health, Brother Burton took the supernumerary relationship for the year 1909, served Seminary from his home in Purvis in 1910, and took the superannuate relationship for 1911.

When First Church, Gulfport, became without a pastor during the year 1911, because of the transfer of Felix R. Hill to the Louisiana Conference, W. B. Jones, the presiding elder, immediately arranged for Brother Burton to serve that church. Thus in mid-year, 1911, he began one of his happiest pastorates which continued through 1914. He erected the present building in 1912 and 1913 and received one hundred fifty-five into the church on profession of faith in 1913 and 1914. The writer and his sister were among the first received by him during this pastorate. (In 1928 when Brother Burton lived at Gulfport, he was perhaps the chief personality in the erection of Second Church, Gulfport, the writer being its pastor.)

During 1915 Brother Burton again held the supernumerary relationship, living at Crystal Springs. In 1916 his appointment was Richton, but in 1917 he was a superannuate again. Since then his appointments have been: Laurel, Kingston, 1918; Port Gibson, 1919, 1920; presiding elder, Jackson District, 1921 through 1924; and presiding elder, Meridian District, 1925, 1926.

During the last six years of his itinerant ministry he served the Jackson and Meridian Districts, traveling by automobile with a faithful Negro chauffeur, almost invariably sitting down to preach but preaching some of the strongest sermons the writer has ever heard, managing wisely and judiciously the affairs of the churches and the districts, and being inspired and helped by his faithful and devoted wife who handled nearly all matters of correspondence at his dictation. The great accomplishments of these years, despite his physical infirmity, served as a noble capstone to crown his remarkable ministry. A committee on Millsaps College professors write that the development of young ministers under his supervision as presiding elder would alone render him remarkable.

Perhaps his physical infirmity prevented his frequent election to the General Conference, but three times he was elected an alternate delegate, and, once, in 1922, he led the Mississippi Conference delegation to the General Conference, having been elected by his brethren on the first ballot. This made him also the leader of the delegation at the special unification session of the General Conference held in Chattanooga in July, 1924. Personally he was an ardent unificationist and stood for unifying of all the forces of Methodism in the work of the Kingdom of God upon earth.

To mention all the Conference committees and boards on which Brother Burton served during his long ministry would be almost equivalent to the naming of them all. However, he has done outstanding service on the board of education. Several times he was on visiting committees to inspect the Conference institutions of learning; at one time he was a trustee of Whitworth College; since 1913 he has served as a trustee of Millsaps College; and he was the sole representative of the Conference in the disposing of the property of the Mississippi Conference Training School at Montrose (his boyhood home), in 1928.

Beginning in 1902 he was railroad secretary of the Conference for a number of years; at the Conference of 1904 he instituted the present system of auditing the pastors' reports, seeing that the benevolent contributions agree with the amounts reported, he himself being the first auditor; he was the treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Washington City Representative Church Fund; and the chairman of the Quadrennial Conference Commission on Finance (1919-22), the forerunner of the present Commission on Budget.

Because of his crippled physical condition, Brother Burton had opportunity to read much. His knowledge covered a wide range of subjects. Sometimes he was spoken of as an "encyclopedia of information" and as one who could converse interestingly on almost any subject that was brought up. He was sound in his judgments, strong in his convictions, wise in his counsel, diligent in his work, determined in his life-long conquest with disease, great in his will power, faithful to his trust, and consecrated to his Master's cause.

He was a strong preacher. Because of the affliction of his hands, his sermons in later years were not written out and rarely were fully outlined on paper. But they were thought through beforehand and were delivered with a strong voice, out of a richness of experience, a clarity of mind, and a warmth of heart that made many of them truly great. The writer has heard several people testify, both in Brother Burton's presence and in his absence, that sermons which Brother Burton had preached many years before had been of great help to them and that they could never forget either the sermon or him. The writer has seen a letter to him from a young lady, saying that she went to a certain commencement service only because she was a graduate of that particular high school, and that, although she hadn't been to church in years, she was impressed with the message and wanted to inquire of him the way of real life, because he "really preached" on that commencement occasion.

The Conference in session in 1926 superannuated Brother Burton, and such was his relationship until death. He himself said, and many have agreed, that the Conference could superannuate his hands and his feet, but it could not superannuate his head and his heart. He liked to preach, and after superannuation he often visited his brethren that he might have the privilege of their pulpits. He never enjoyed a day more than the Sunday he spent at Trinity Church in Smith County, on September 16, 1934, preaching both in the morning and the afternoon to the people at the church where he had been licensed to preach fifty years before. The Annual Conference at its last session requested him to preach his semi-centennial sermon of membership in the Conference at the next Conference session (1935), and he was looking forward to the occasion, stating that he thought he could relate much history and experience that would be worth while. His last sermon was delivered at Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, on December 30, 1934, from the very significant text, "Number Thy Days."

After his final superannuation he lived in his own home in Gulfport, but he continued to serve the Church as a trustee of Millsaps College. After the death of A. F. Watkins in 1929, he was elected president of the board of trustees, and he gave the remaining thought and strength of his life to this important task, and to the serving of Millsaps, Whitworth, and Grenada Colleges as business supervisor. The board of trustees of Millsaps College declare the following by resolution: "It fell to his lot to preside over the deliberations of this board and help to guide the affairs of Millsaps College and the other institutions affiliated with it during the dark days of the depression—in perhaps the most critical and trying period of their history, and well did he perform the task. . . . Self-sacrificing in spirit, and courageous in the performance of duty, he kept his face to the future and rendered heroic service in spite of long and serious bodily affliction."

In 1929 the Conference requested that he and J. B. Cain collaborate in the writing of the Conference history and in the bringing of it up to date. He had thought much in preparation for this task, but had done little actual writing, devoting his waning strength to Millsaps College. Our Conference history has suffered a great loss in his passing.

A deep sorrow came into his life in June, 1929,

MARTIN LUTHER BURTON

In the translation of his wife who had meant so much to him and had done so much for him.
On January 18, 1935, he was married to Mrs. Anne Longmiller, of Gulfport, by A. M. Broadfoot in Meridian. During the two years of their companionship, his second wife traveled with him, corresponded for him, and affectionately helped him in many ways.

Brother Burton's death was rather sudden and unexpected. After a few days' illness he went to his heavenly home from the Gulfport Hospital at 12:30 p. m. on Thursday, January 17, 1935, leaving his sister, Mrs. C. F. Neill, of Montrose, his son, R. C. Burton, of Gulfport, and his wife to mourn his going. T. H. Burton of the Central Texas Conference and J. L. Neill of the Mississippi Conference are his nephews, and Geo. H. Thompson of the Mississippi Conference is his cousin.

Services were held in the First Church, Gulfport, on Friday afternoon, January 18, with P. M. Caraway, pastor, in charge, assisted by Geo. H. Thompson, W. J. Ferguson, L. J. Power, J. M. Lewis, and J. L. Decell. His tired body was placed beside that of his first wife and his two infant sons at Hazlehurst, on Saturday morning, January 19, the rites being conducted by the Masonic Lodge.

Farewell, our brother! We shall meet again. Until then we find comfort and inspiration in the hymn-poem you loved so well:

"Christ's life our code, his cross our creed.
Our common, glad confession be;
Our deepest wants, our highest aims,
Find their fulfillment, Lord, in Thee."

REPORT ON ADVOCATE CIRCULATION CAMPAIGN

At the request of Bishop Dobbs and a number of presiding elders and pastors throughout the territory, we are extending the Advocate Circulation Campaign two weeks, through July 15. Editorial notice to this effect will be found on page three of this issue of the Advocate. All subscriptions received through July 15 will be credited against quotas and all districts securing quotas in full will receive the $100.00 prize offer.

The Hattiesburg District, Rev. V. G. Clifford, P. E., continues to lead all others with more than two-thirds of its quota secured. The Greenwood District, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, P. E., is in second place with 184.

Pastors who for one reason or another have not as yet presented the claims of the Campaign origin are urged to take advantage of this two weeks' extension and secure their quotas in full before July 15.

The following report includes subscriptions received during the week, June 15 through June 21, 1935:

TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE in twenty-four rural Communes of the Jura Mountains, according to the New Outlook, received checks during June, instead of bills for taxes. Eight thousand others were exempted from all taxes. When a person wishes to build a house he is given a free site, free stone and sand, and his home is provided with fire-wood. If such conditions were to come about in our country, we would not just say "The depression is over"—we would know that the millennium had come.

THE HEBREW UNIVERSITY, located on the top of Mount Scopus, overlooking the plains of the Jordan valley, began ten years ago with only three courses and 141 students. Today it has an enrollment of 400 students from twenty-one countries. Seventeen distinguished German professors and scientists are among the members of the faculty; and the institution is helping to solve the industrial, agricultural and health problems of Palestine and the whole Near East.

THE CAREFUL SPENDING OF THE SCOTCH has been made the butt of many a joke, most of them having been told by others. But here is one which, according to The Christian World, found expression upon the lips of the Scotchman himself. William Sprunt, when he was dying in Edinburgh and was afraid that he might not be buried in Chapel-hall, said: "I'm far through this time, sir, and I am feared I'm not to get ower't; but I wud like to get better enough to get back to Logiealmond afore I dee; for ye see, sir, it's a lot cheaper traivellin' leevin' than deed!"

SAINT SOPHIA, the most famous Mohammedan mosque in the world, is located in the city of Constantinople. In the days of the apostles, it is said that a Christian church was established on the site of a heathen temple. The church was twice destroyed and rebuilt; Justinian decorated it with columns brought from the Temple of Diana, Baalbek and elsewhere; and Chrysostom, the "golden-mouthed" orator, was once its preacher. When the city was conquered by Mohammed II, in 1453, the magnificent Christian structure was turned into a Mohammedan mosque. Since the overthrow of the Turk in the World War and the breaking of Moslem influence, the historic shrine has been turned into a museum. But, throughout the long period of pagan degradation, a figure of Christ with hands uplifted in blessing has remained.

THE FIRST INDIAN ALPHABET, according to The Religious Telescope, was prepared by Sequoia, a crippled Cherokee Indian, who worked over it long and faithfully that his people might have the stories of the Bible in a language they would fully understand. The first complete Bible to be printed in America, the so-called Indian Bible, was published for the use of Rev. John Eliot in his work among the Indians of New England, and it bears the date of 1663. Only fifty of the one thousand copies printed are now in existence.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES, according to an exchange, has discovered that out of twenty thousand applications for license to marry, in Los Angeles County, California, twelve hundred applicants withdrew the applications before the expiration of the three-day period which the law requires between the application and the solemnizing of the marriage. No reason is given for the recanting of those twelve hundred wooers; but certainly something is to be said in favor of those who break off relations before rather than after.

COLLEGE GRADUATES of recent years are said to have had more difficulty in securing positions than was true of any time before the beginning of the depression. According to the reports of employment offices which are maintained by certain American universities, prospects are better now than at any time for many years. Corporations which use university trained men have resumed their scouting of the colleges, and there is every indication of the dawning of a better day for the trained men and women sent out by our schools.

GENERAL LUDENDORFF, of Germany, is quoted as saying on his seventieth birthday: "I am not merely an opponent of Christianity, but literally am heathen and anti-Christian, and I am proud of it. I have long since said good-bye to Christianity." This man who at the present moment is being feted as the national hero of Germany is the same Ludendorff who, two decades ago, helped to make millions of graves in Flanders Field. He is now joined with the politicians of the nation in an effort to dig the moral and spiritual graves of those who survived the disasters of his earlier leadership. We can imagine that the world will not be much inclined to accept the spiritual teaching of a man with such a bloody hand.

INDEPENDENCE DAY

Once again we have come to the birthday of the American nation, the day when the stars and stripes will be flung to every breeze—north, south, east and west. Unfortunately it has come to be too much a day of bunk and bunting, and our flag has come to be as much the sword and shield of unscrupulous demagogues as the symbol of patriotic devotion. It is far less a day when we appraise our national inheritance and the sturdy virtues of those Revolutionary patriots, than it is a mere recreational opportunity when the multitudes turn their faces to the open spaces of the country-side or for an outing beside the sea. But, whatever the easy complaisance of the people, it is a time when we need to think through again the backgrounds of our national life. We need a new consciousness of the elements of initiative, courage and faith exhibited by our forefathers, that such may become the realities of our own hearts. Those patriots, who flung out the flag with its starry folds, did not count the cost to themselves and they were not moved by the ease of a selfish way. They understood that they were challenging the mightiest nation of that time, but they deliberately chose the way that led to Morristown and Valley Forge and a thousand personal and public privations. They did not take counsel of their lack of a political tie or of national credit; neither were they moved by the ragged and unequipped colonial soldiery at their command. They had a common grievance and a common cause, and they reckoned rather upon the courage of hero-hearts, and they took counsel of their faith in God. By these invincible elements, they were sustained through seven years of conflict and they brought American liberty to the pedestal which it has occupied for more than one hundred and fifty years. On this one hundred and fifty-ninth anniversary of our Republic, we will do well to relate ourselves anew to the cause of national freedom and to seek to re-enthroned the virtues of the noble heroes whose valor gave birth to the great Democracy of the West.

DR. A. W. TURNER DEAD

In the death of Dr. A. W. Turner, at Shreveport, La., last Saturday morning the Louisiana Conference loses one of its real heroes and the cause of Temperance a knightly leader. He was received on trial into the Louisiana Conference approximately thirty-nine years ago, and throughout a generation he had been an upstanding and a courageous fighter for truth and righteousness. His life was distinguished for his Temperance leadership. No harder field could have been found than that of a Temperance leader in Louisiana and, yet, he held to the last day of his life the respect and confidence of even the enemies of his cause. In his leadership, whether in the legislative halls of the state or before the people, in public assembly, he faced every issue with absolute frankness and candor and he fought for his cause with the determination of a gladiator. In the years to come his very absence from the Temperance fray will be our constant reminder that he is gone. Only a few weeks ago his companion preceded him to the better land. Shortly after her going, Dr. Turner became seriously ill, but made a surprising recovery. About three weeks ago he suffered a paralytic stroke from which no relief was had. He went down into the shadows of death fighting the battles to which his life had been given. We say Peace to the fallen warrior, and pray for victory to his cause.

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHANAGE

The Executive Committee of the Methodist Orphans Home at Jackson, Miss., is launching a campaign to provide food for the Institution out of the surplus of fruits and vegetables that would otherwise go to waste. The campaign slogan is: "When you CAN, CAN all you CAN for the ORPHANAGE." It is an appeal to the Methodists of Mississippi to remember the orphans in the canning season. We think the appeal represents good charity and good common sense; it should help to make easy the support of the children, and it will give a much needed training in the economy and conservation which too many of us have failed to master. It is the plan of the Orphanage management to gather this food supply on the Orphanage trains to be run during Thanksgiving week in November. Every Church School and other organization of Mississippi Methodism should find in this appeal a chance to give substantial help to this worthy cause. DO NOT LET THE SEASON, THE CROP AND THE OPPORTUNITY GO TO WASTE!

REV. E. L. CARGILL DIES

As we go to press, a notice of the death of Rev. E. L. Cargill comes to our desk. He died on June 24, and was buried at the family burying ground about ten miles north of Campti, La. Drs. Briscoe Carter and N. E. Joyner conducted the funeral. A good man and a faithful servant of the church has gone.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT WINS

It gives us great pleasure to announce that Rev. Victor G. Clifford and the Hattiesburg District are the first to score in the Advocate Campaign. They have turned in 387 subscriptions. They did great work throughout the Campaign, and we are happy to send them a check for $100 with a blue ribbon attached, with our congratulations and a sincere thank you.

MORE ORNAMENTAL THAN USEFUL

We read recently in an exchange a statement to the effect that Sir Christopher Wren, the famous architect of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, was once criticized for designing a building whose roof was not properly supported. He replied to his critics, not with argument, but by placing four extra columns, apparently to correct the fault complained of. The change reassured even his critics who were hushed. Years afterward, when Wren was dead and the building was being redecorated, it was discovered that the four columns were short and had never borne an ounce of the weight of the roof. Structurally, the building was exactly as it had been originally designed by the great master, and the carping critics had been awed into silence by sham supports. What a commentary upon the superficiality of human opinion! What a philosophy concerning the importance of human relations! The famous architect designed a building according to the science of which he was a consummate master; and he was willing to stake his fame upon the correctness of his calculations; but he was unwilling to enter into an argument with critics whose thought did not belong to his sphere of understanding. He simply replied by the erection of four detached columns—memorials to the superficiality of their judgment. If the surplusage might be removed from our ecclesiastical structure, it might help some of us to understand how little God and the Church are dependent upon ornamental columns which to some may seem to be necessary to the stability of Zion. Those four decorative columns of Sir Christopher Wren form a silent but practical commentary upon the words of St. Paul: "If a man think himself to be something, when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself." And the message of the sturdy building, a preachment to the effect that many a candlestick might be removed from the temple without extinguishing the Light of the World.

DOLLAR-MARK EDUCATION

By Dr. Jas. H. Felts

Yes, we have come to such a day. Regardless of how well one has been trained unless his diploma is dollar-marked it represents another poor fish in the educational pool. AND THE CHURCH IS FALLING FOR IT. Endowment must reach certain figures before recognition is granted. It is not a matter of brain-culture, mental equipment, or fitness for life's tasks, but a kind of hip-pocket flask affair.

Just why one is even supposed to be better trained by such a process does not appear. Perhaps the observation of a Georgia newspaper is appropriate: "The degree of D.D. is like the curl of a pig's tail, very pretty, but makes no sausage." This dollar mark may be ornamental, may even bring a sense of exclusiveness, but one's education is not improved thereby.

I have known graduates of an unendowed institution to take the honors at an endowed college, yet the institution so signally honored remained unrecognized. I am reminded of the Pharisee's prayer and that of the Publican. The cock-sureness of the one did not cheapen the sincerity of the other.

Education is cheapened by the dollar mark. Just as the fundamental thing in salvation is Jesus Christ, so in education it is work done, work that cannot even be represented in dollars and cents. "By their fruits shall they be known." Beyond question our schools and colleges should require the highest standards of work. Graduates should stand for the best in morals and character. The dollar mark is seldom symbolical of moral or mental equipment or fitness.

Is it not about time for a protest to come from those in a position to be effective? Is it wise to wait until there is a general reaction that might prove hurtful? Can we hope for reformation so long as a few men dictate the standing of our colleges on a money basis?

There is no better fertilizer than brains.

INHERENT IMMORTALITY

By Rev. J. D. Fomby

"He that sows to his flesh, reaps corruption. He that sows to the Spirit—and only he—'shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting.' The tares of the field, the chaff of the wheat, the unfruitful branches of the vine (symbols of unworthy lives) are all burned up, and that is the last of them. If language means anything, surely it does not mean the everlasting continuance of those unworthy lives in pain, nor does it mean the final recovery of all those unworthy lives to righteousness and happiness. It means extinction. Sin's wage is death, final and complete it may be."

It is almost unbelievable that these words came from the pen of Dean Charles Reynolds Brown, dean-emeritus of the Yale Divinity School. One does not expect sheer dogmatism from him about anything, and least of all about a matter pertaining to the destiny of the human soul. It is unthinkable that stark rationalism could enter vitally into a life that has given so many fruitful years to the things of the spirit. Even the Dean's own words indicate that he isn't quite willing to be submerged in the conviction that the death (extinction) of the sinner is final and complete. He says it may be.

It is impossible to trace all of the paths by which man arrives at his conclusions about the paramount issues of life, and every attempt to impale his highest thoughts about those issues within the limits of a logical system of reasoning has been futile, sometimes disastrous. Perhaps no problem of the human mind and spirit has been subjected to a sort of irrational rationalism more than the problem of the final destiny of the wicked. It seems to be taken for granted, by religious people at any rate, that any certainty concerning the destiny of the righteous is spiritually discerned and that the highest reasons for faith in immortality cannot be expressed by a syllogism. If the fate of the righteous is thus spiritually approached and understood, the purposes of God being thought out and wrought out in an intellectual-spiritual communion with God, it is difficult to see how any other method could be employed to determine the fate of the unrighteous. It is a purely personal matter in either case. Unless one is obsessed with the idea (as doubtless Dean Brown is) that immortality is an evolutionary achievement and that morality is an art for art's sake without any concern for the character of the artist, inherent immortality is the foundation of all religious faith and conduct. Any other conception of the nature of eternal life is too impersonal and too unconvincing to produce anything but shallow philosophical and arid ethical notions about the meaning of life, temporal or eternal. The belief (if it is possible to hold such a belief) that life on any level isn't fraught with eternal consequences has never had much weight with sincere and thoughtful men.

To follow the implications of the three poser solutions, extinction, eternal punishment and universal salvation, rationalistically, one is led inevitably into agnosticism. He is confronted with unsolvable riddles. He posits extinction, but can't quite think of himself as non-existent. Others maybe, but not himself. He posits eternal punishment. It is either unjust or inane to keep rebellious and wicked people alive permanently. The idea of eternal damnation is incompatible with a benevolent Deity. He fares no better with universal salvation. In the last analysis, that destroys personal responsibility and the moral structure is left to the devices of the Divine Carpenter solely, which is little more than a defense mechanism against the other two ideas. It goes without saying that weary or indolent minds can accept either of the three thoughtlessly, even after more vigorous days of rejection.

Now let us examine the whole situation realistically. One simply cannot think of himself as dead. (Dean Brown believes in his own immortality). There is no valid proof of personal extinction. To postulate extinction as a belief is a perversity of mind and spirit. There is no external authority in support of individual permanence that may be deemed to have the finality of factual proof. It is absurd to try to prove universal salvation by prior methods. To believe in universal salvation one has to accept the necessary conditions of the universality of individual faith, humanly exercised. Rightly understood, this is a sublime conception. God willeth not the death of any. But fatalistic salvation is as absurd as fatalistic damnation. Cluttered with the lurid descriptions of mediaeval imagination, the dogmas of eternal punishment have been made abhorrent to the modern mind, and many have tried to prove that the whole matter is an illusion. But reverting to the necessity of a personal solution, one doesn't feel easy so long as he feels himself at odds with God and he isn't quite satisfied to think that his misery will ever cease so long as he lives in rebellion against God.

As we stand before the great mysteries of life and death, punishment and reward, sin and salvation, there are most certainly many questions for which we have found no answers, and none are to be found in the ashes of rationalism. Even Alfred Loisy, the arch-rationalist, in a letter to Baron von Hugel writes this profound conviction, "Theological rationalism has cured me of all taste for rationalism in things of the interior life. Absolute confidence in any theoretical system whatsoever seems to me to imply something of illusion and fanaticism." But as far as we have capacity to receive the answers, we have only to bare our whole personality to the impact of the Spirit of God and we will believe that for us immortality is inherent in the very nature of our being. And not only inherent in our make-up, but dynamic in our Christian experience.

FROM GREENWOOD DISTRICT

Dear Dr. Duren: I note in the Advocate that the time for securing the quotas of subscriptions has been extended to July 15. May I express the hope that the pastors of North Mississippi, and especially the Greenwood District, will do their very best AT ONCE.

I am happy to state that the zone composed of Webb and Sumner, Tutwiler, Drew, Ruleville and Doddsville and Sunflower has secured seven more than its quota. This has been done notwithstanding church debts are being paid, one new church is being built and most of these charges had already placed an amount in their budgets for subscriptions to be sent to families unable to pay for them.

I see from the report Greenwood district is leading in the number sent in from North Mississippi Conference. I am not content that we should lead, but I am very anxious that our district secure the entire number. I feel sure we are able to do it and I believe we will.

It may be possible that there are enough stewards not taking the Advocate who might be prevailed upon to subscribe for it. Possibly a poll of the stewards might be a revelation. May we all back up our profession of district pride and hurry in the subscriptions. Brethren, don't hold out subscriptions you may have; rush them; it may help some others today.

S. A. BROWN.

USING CHILDREN TO ADVERTISE BEER

By Rev. M. H. McCormack, Jr.

There has just come under my observation one of the latest of the subtle, serpentine tricks of the beer barons to enter the sacred confines of the Christian homes to exploit them in furthering their nefarious traffic.

CAMPAIGN ECHOES

"I have had reports this week from all my pastors and the check up shows that we will be "over the top" as soon as they can collect for subscriptions pledged. We ought to reach our quota before the next Advocate is off the press."—V. G. Clifford, P. E., Hattiesburg District.

* * *

"We have over 300 subscriptions reported to date in the Meridian District and expect to secure our quota in full before the close of the Campaign, July 15."—Jos. A. Smith, P. E.

* * *

Dear Dr. Duren: Enclosed you will find check for following renewals. . . . This makes my quota for the Eucutta Charge, Hattiesburg District. I say Hurrah! for the Hattiesburg District and our beloved presiding elder, who does things in a big way and on time. I notice his district has secured more than all seven districts in Louisiana; also more than all the districts in North Mississippi. We have a real live, wide awake Elder. Dr. Duren, my experience is that where the pastors go after these subscriptions they get them."—M. W. Porter, P. C., Eucutta Charge.

"Dear Advocate: Herein I am inclosing a list of sixty subscribers to the Advocate with a check for $90.00 to cover same. There will follow another list tomorrow afternoon which I hope will get in in time to be counted. As you know, our quota was fifty-seven. We have gone over the mark and will go over more. Brownlee got behind this and put it over because "old man" is the editor and as you know I love him. Here's hoping that the campaign will go over in a big way, then I am sure we will have a great paper as we already have a good editor."—T. M. Brownlee, Central Church, Meridian, Miss.

"Dear Advocate: I am sending you a list of 29 subscribers and money order for $43.50 to cover same. I was asked to meet with the Board of Stewards one night . . . and I took advantage of the opportunity and asked that all twenty-eight of the members subscribe for our Church paper. All did but two, and I am in hopes all of them will be readers of your good paper soon. I enjoy your paper very much. I visit the hospitals and other places and read a lot from your good paper to sick people."—Mrs. (Rev.) C. M. Martin, East End Church, Meridian, Miss.

have been distributed in large quantities among our small children. These caps are, of course, given free, and carry such slogans as "Drink Blank Beer—The Best Beer in Town!" Naturally, the children delight in wearing these caps because they are new and pretty. Thus they become innocent, unsuspecting instruments in the hands of these purveyors of poison and misery to increase the sales of their infamous wares.

This is proof positive that there is no trick so vile or no chicanery so low that these worshipers of greed would not stoop (or rather reach up) to it, if it would aid them in forcing their rotten stuff into the Christian homes of our country. It is also striking evidence of needed vigilance on the part of Christian parents and pastors to thwart any such attempts to inveigle our children into helping this crowd to fasten the tentacles of John Barleycorn onto America.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

Haven District, came to Middletown on his official rounds; and a proposition was made to transfer the plant to the New York, the New England, and the New Hampshire and Vermont Conferences. The details of the transfer were finally agreed upon, and a preparatory school was opened October 6, 1830. A charter was secured May 21, 1831, and Wesleyan University opened on September 21, following. Among the four thousand graduates of the university have been men distinguished in all walks of life. Eleven bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church and John C. Keener and Eugene R. Hendrix, bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are among the number. Dr. Wilbur Fisk, the first president of Wesleyan University, sent a last message to the New York Conference: "I give it as my dying request that they nurse Wesleyan University, they must exert themselves to sustain it and carry it forward." In 1832 the New York Conference petitioned the General Conference to take over the University, subject to the approval of the other patronizing Conferences, but it was not done.

Two important ventures in early Methodist educational history were Dickinson College and Allegheny College. Dickinson College, located at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, was founded in 1783, and was opened for students the following year. It appears to have been intended for an undenominational college; but at an early stage in its history, the Presbyterian Church acquired control of it and retained the management for nearly fifty years. But internal difficulties and dissensions in its management led to its transfer to the Methodists. Negotiations for the transfer of the College are recorded in the minutes of the Baltimore Conference for the years 1825 and 1826; and it was transferred in 1833 and came under the auspices of the Baltimore and Philadelphia Conferences. Among the alumni of the College were President Buchanan, Chief Justice Taney of the United States Supreme Court, Justices Gibson and Grier, and six bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Allegheny College, Meadville, Pennsylvania, was founded in 1815 as Allegheny Seminary; was opened July 4, 1816; and was chartered March 24, 1817. Like Dickinson College, it was originally under Presbyterian management; but it came under the patronage of the Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Church in 1833, when the name was changed to Allegheny College. The Institution has a great library of old and rare books, and through its alumni it is known around the world. Numbered among its graduates are President McKinley; six bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, including J. M. Thoburn and William F. Oldham; more than a score of distinguished missionaries; and many others—writers, college presidents, and business executives. Indiana Asbury University, now DePauw, began as a preparatory school in 1836; it was raised to collegiate rank in 1838; and the name was changed to DePauw University in 1884, in honor of Washington C. DePauw who was its greatest benefactor. Among its distinguished alumni, was Major Reuben Webster Millsaps, the founder of Millsaps College, Jackson, Mississippi. These are the older and more important schools of the North.

One of the earliest colleges in the South, established under the legislation of 1820, was LaGrange College in Alabama. At its session in 1826, the Tennessee Conference appointed a commission to select a site for a school. The next year the Conference met at Tusculum, Alabama, and the commission recommended LaGrange, a town about fifteen miles distant from the seat of the Conference. The school opened in 1830 with Dr. Robert Paine as president. The Institution was to be literary and scientific, nonsectarian and, by an act of the Legislature of Alabama, no spirituous liquors could be sold within three miles of the campus. After a quarter of a century of splendid service, the school was moved to Florence, Alabama, and the name was changed to Florence Wesleyan University. The plant was finally turned over to the state and it is now the State Teachers' College. The imposing buildings at LaGrange were burned by Federal troops during the War Between the States.

By date of incorporation, the oldest existing school founded by the Methodists in the South is Randolph-Macon College. The school was located at Boydton, Virginia, and the charter bears date of February 3, 1830. It was the parent of the system of colleges bearing the same name. The College was opened in January, 1832, and notwithstanding the desperate struggle occasioned by war and financial embarrassments, it has rendered a great service to the people of Virginia and the surrounding states. Randolph-Macon Academy at Bedford, Virginia, was established in 1890, and that at Front Royal in 1892. Randolph-Macon Woman's College, at Lynchburg, was founded in 1893, and a school for girls, established at Danville in 1897, was continued until 1930.

Two Georgia institutions belong to this period. In 1836 the Georgia Conference resolved to organize Emory College, and it took over the Manual Labor School which had been incorporated December 18, 1834.

Emory College, Oxford, Georgia, was chartered February 6, 1837; but class work did not begin until September, 1838. The College was transferred to Atlanta, and became a part of Emory University, under the charter of January 25, 1915; and the old plant at Oxford is maintained as a Junior College of the University. The other Georgia school belonging to this period is now known as Wesleyan College and is located near Macon, Georgia. The Georgia Female Collège, an independent enterprise, was incorporated December 23, 1836, but was not opened until January 7, 1839. Under an act of the Legislature approved December 19, 1843, the property was accepted by the Georgia Conference and the name changed to Wesleyan Female College. This College claims the distinction of having conferred the first degree ever conferred upon a woman by a chartered institution. The degree was conferred upon Miss Cathrine E. Brewer, July 16, 1840. In this school, the Soong sisters were educated: Mrs. Sun Yat Sen, wife of the first president of the Chinese Republic; Mrs. Chang Kai Chek, wife of the president and famous General of China; and Mrs. H. H. Kung, wife of the Finance Minister of China. Wesleyan College has, therefore, a large place in the history of the new China as well as in the educational history of the Southland.

Another prominent Virginia school was located at Emory and was incorporated as Emory and Henry College, March 25, 1839. The cornerstone was laid on September 30, 1836, and the school opened for work, April 2, 1838. As respects endowment and material equipment, it has not become as great as some others; but it has had a continuous history and, according to its roster of graduates, it has done a splendid service in a wide field for both religion and education. The next Methodist College, by date of incorporation, was in Texas. In his last letter to the Missionary Society, Dr. Ruter said: "We have taken steps to found a college." On December 29, 1840, at the organization session of the Texas Conference, an address was sent to the President and Congress of the Texas Republic which said: "The objects of this organization are religion, morality and literature. Believing that the peace, prosperity and perpetuity of this infant republic will be secured in proportion to the prevalence of sound learning, sound morality and sound religion, it will be the aim of the Conference to promote these with energy and perseverance." Accordingly, Rutgersville Co-educational College, located at Rutgersville, was opened February 1, 1840. In 1850 Rutgersville College was beginning to decline and by action of the Texas Legislature in 1856, its control by the Texas Conference was dissolved. The College was then consolidated with a military academy at Galveston, and the property passed from the church.

Duke University, Durham, North Carolina, is the successor of educational enterprises which reach back to 1835, when some citizens of Randolph County met and organized Union Institute. The school was incorporated as Union Institute Academy, January 12, 1841, and under a new charter secured ten years later the name was changed to Normal College. In 1856 a proposition was made to the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to transfer the control of the college to it. The offer was accepted and the name was changed to Trinity College in 1859. The location was changed to Durham, North Carolina, January 21, 1891, and in September, 1892, the session opened in the new location. In the latter part of 1924, Mr. James Duke executed the indenture which created the Duke endowment. The provisions of the indenture were accepted, December 30, 1924, and by charter amendment the name was changed to Duke University. As a college, it was for many years one of the best institutions of the Southern Church; and with its recently acquired endowment, the University will doubtless hold a first place among the educational centers of the nation.

Another college with a rather varied history is Centenary College of Louisiana, located at Shreveport. It represents the amalgamation of the College of Louisiana, located at Jackson, with Centenary College, a Methodist institution founded by the Mississippi Conference, and located at Brandon Springs, sixteen miles east of Jackson, Mississippi. The College of Louisiana, a state institution, was founded in 1825, and Centenary College in 1841. The latter school was badly located and poorly supported; and in 1845 the two schools were combined and became a Methodist College at Jackson, Louisiana, in 1846. The Institution was moved to Shreveport in 1908.

Many other schools and colleges were established, but these are sufficient to show the enterprise of the Methodist Church in the second phase of its educational history. Many unwise moves were made and many institutions failed. Their failure was probably attributable in some measure to the legislative urge of the church and the haste in providing remedy for a situation which had become serious and embarrassing. As one meditates upon the educational wreckage of Methodism, there comes to mind that magnificent but melancholy show-place of Europe, the Campo Santo in the city of Genoa. That renowned city of the dead is imposing for the gorgeous display of marble tombs and carved statues, and also for the great number of those reminders of human mortality. Such is true of the "educational mausoleum" of American Methodism. Beginning with Cokesbury College, moss-grown ruins mark the sites which tell the story of the educational daring and adventure of the church. Probably no state in the Union is without such reminders and some of them have more than a score of those memories. Statisticians and calculating critics may scoff at the eco-

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. Victor Clifford has made a vigorous campaign for the Advocate in his district, and we believe that there is no doubt about his reaching the goal for his field.

Rev. J. L. Smith, of Newton, Miss., has sent twenty-six subscribers on a quota of sixteen. We call that success in a great way. Thank you and blessings on your work.

Rev. Frank Collins began a meeting at Oakdale, La., on June 30. He is being assisted by Evangelist John A. May of Alabama. We have not had a report on the progress of the meeting.

Rev. C. T. Floyd, pastor at Amory, Miss., is being assisted in a meeting in his church by evangelist Gipsy Simon Smith of Canada. The evangelist is a cousin of Gipsy Smith of England.

Rev. L. A. Cherington, Rev. A. P. Smith and Rev. Otis N. Spinks, of the Louisiana Conference, report that they are enjoying a fine Pastors' School at S. M. U.. Dr. Lynn Herold Hough lectured twice each day.

The mid-year meeting of the trustees of Seashore Methodist Assembly met at the campground tabernacle, on the afternoon of July 3, and upon the call of the chairman, Dr. J. L. Decell of Jackson, Miss.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Meadville, Miss., reports that his meeting at Bude last week was very successful, and that Rev. R. H. Clegg did some effective preaching. Seven members were added on profession of faith.

Rev. C. C. Clark, pastor at Waynesboro, Miss., and one of the most loyal friends the Advocate has, made addition to his list of subscribers, with the promise of a much better list to follow in a few days.

Rev. G. W. McLain, of Safford, Arizona, writes that he expects to spend his summer vacation in "Old Alabama and Mississippi." The land that is home to him. We wish for him the good time that he anticipates and more.

Rev. James H. Felts, Grenada, Miss., the inimitable Felts, rises to report "progress" in his Advocate campaign. We are not undertaking to reproduce his "French," but he says he expects to be in on the home-stretch.

Rev. R. T. Ware reports a fine Daily Vacation Bible School, with an enrollment of 142, at Park Avenue, Shreveport. He reports that he has been in some great revivals recently, and that there was a manifest hunger for the Word.

Rev. W. H. Giles says that Mrs. R. E. Holliday, chairman of the Christian literature committee, is due the credit for a list of twenty-four subscribers from Bastrop, La. The charge is also entitled to at least one other credit, which was handed to the editor.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs carried through a strenuous campaign in behalf of education in Mississippi last week. We have not had a report from the series of meetings held, but we feel sure that it was a time of great things in the educational affairs of the Conference.

Brother R. E. Holliday, Sr., father of Rev. T. J. Holliday of the Louisiana Conference, died at Many, La., last Saturday and was buried at Many the following day. He had suffered a stroke previous to his going, but we do not have further details of his death.

The main building of old Centenary College at Jackson, La., has been sold to a Baton Rouge firm, and is being demolished, according to a note from Rev. R. S. Walton. The east wing was torn down last year, and only the west wing and a residence remains intact.

Mr. Dudley D. Culley, a native of Madison County, Miss., and a Millsaps graduate of the class of 1924, has been chosen full-time alumni secretary of the Institution. He will be associated with Rev. B. M. Hunt, the president, in the effort to bring about a closer relation between the alumni and the College.

Henry B. Varner and Warren C. Black are representing Mississippi in the student body of Candler School of Theology. Both are graduates of Millsaps College. Brother Varner is on trial in the North Mississippi Conference, and Brother Black sustains the same relation to the Mississippi Conference.

Mr. James H. Johnson, a Methodist layman of Clarksdale, Miss., and an outstanding insurance man of the state, has been appointed Insurance Commissioner to succeed the late Hon. George D. Riley. The appointment was made by Governor Connor, and the term will expire in January 1, next year, when the newly elected officers will take the oath.

Two instances of effective work done by the laity, in securing subscriptions in the Advocate Campaign, are Mrs. O. M. Johnson, of Gueydan, La., church, and B. M. Stevens, chairman of the Board of Stewards of Richton, Miss. We hope to be able to publish an honor roll when the campaign is over.

Rev. James C. Ellis, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, died at his home in New Augusta, Miss., according to a notice in the Perry County Herald. He was seventy-five years of age and his death followed a paralytic stroke which he suffered a few days before. He is survived by his widow, five sons and four daughters.

We regret to learn that Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of Como, Miss., has been compelled to give up his work on account of ill health. The North Mississippi Conference has no truer man than Lee Lipscomb. Brother Stormont, the presiding elder, says that Rev. K. I. Tucker has been placed in charge for the remainder of the Conference year.

Sixty-four young ladies of the Character Builders Class, of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., held a week-end outing at Seashore Assembly Grounds June 22, 23. On Saturday evening the class gave a pageant in the auditorium, "Answering His Call," and on Sunday morning a sunrise service was held on the beach. Accommodations were secured at Keller Lodge. Officers of the Class are: Miss Mary Keith Moffatt, President; Miss Maye Brown, Leader of Worship; and Miss Claudia Curtis, Teacher. This example might be followed by others who seek the fellowship of a delightful outing at moderate cost.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

Zone three of the Jackson District, met at Glendale Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., on June 20, 1935, with the zone leader, Mrs. M. E. Herring, of Madison, presiding. Living the Christ-like life was the key note of the talks given by Mrs. M. E. Weston, of Jackson, and Miss Helen Steuart, of Madison. A message in song was brought by the pastor, Rev. J. A. Wells and son, Rev. Monell Wells. Mrs. F. Norman Taylor, the district secretary, stated the objectives for the next quarter and urged all who could do so to attend the training school at Biloxi. Lunch was served by the ladies of the church. Mrs. W. F. Westmorland was elected secretary of this zone.

The fourth Monday meeting in June, of Central auxiliaries, Meridian, was featured by the report of Bessie Trotter, the Negro girl sent by this auxiliary to the training school for Negro women held at Jackson College, Jackson, Miss., June 13-21.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

This is the month set aside by Council for bringing down to the local auxiliaries and so to every Methodist woman a "vision of the nobility and the glory of the enterprise" in which Council has been engaged for the past twenty-five years. The following snapshots are from that first Council meeting.

It was voted to undertake the raising of a $75,000.00 Jubilee Fund for a girls' boarding school in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

The first white woman was set apart and appointed to work among the Negroes in Augusta, Georgia. The South Georgia Conference undertook her support.

Plans were made for the establishment of St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, in co-operation with the general work, Board of Missions.

A memorial was sent to the Board of Education, asking for the inauguration of courses of missions in all the colleges.

The women who launched the united work into the powerful organization of the Woman's Missionary Council were great women. Some of their utterances at the first meeting we give below:

Miss Bennett: Great and radical changes always manifest themselves in somewhat of a revolutionary form. In the dissolution of the women's boards and the readjustment of all the missionary forces of the Church, there could be no exception to this rule of change. Never before in the history of the Church have women been admitted to any of its administrative or legislative councils. Has any other church in our land so honored or dignified womanhood? The General Board needed the women and the women needed the larger outlook and the greater responsibility.

Emily Siler: Grow we must, even though we outgrow all we love.

Mrs. Cable: Would that we could place before all the women of the Church a vision of the nobility and the glory of the enterprise in which we are engaged.

Mrs. McDonald: This year has brought to the women of the Church grave responsibilities and renewed opportunities. It calls for harmonious adjustment of departments so that friction may not retard our efforts.

Mary Helm: I have done only what the grace, the wisdom and the love of God helped me to do. I want no one to think of me as on one side or the other of missionary work, for I love the whole.

Mrs. Luke Johnson: With less than one-fourth of the women of the Church enlisted in this warfare, it behooves us to arouse ourselves and use every means at hand for a forward march to a conquest of the world.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

Mrs. John B. Parker submits in rhyme an account of a meeting of the Rayne Memorial Auxiliary when the members each agreed to earn a dollar for a Houma scholarship. It is submitted with apologies to Edgar Allen Poe:

Once upon a Tuesday dreary
While we pondered, sad and weary,
Over many a weighty problem of missionary lore.

As we pondered, almost napping
Suddenly, the gavel rapping,
Rose the chairman, eyes a-snapping,

Rose upon that polished floor.
Not the least obeisance made she,
Not a moment stopped or stayed she—
"Ladies, listen, I implore.
If we'd keep our missions going,
If we'd feed the hungry poor,
Everyone must give a dollar
Just a dollar, or some more."
Then the silken, sad, uncertain
Rustling of that cretonne curtain
Filled my soul like demon's curses;
Well I knew within my purse is Just a dime—not one cent more.
Not a syllable I uttered,
But beneath my breath I muttered—
"How then can I give a dollar
When I've ten cents, and no more?"
But my jitters little meaning little relevancy bore.
"Everyone can make a dollar,
Just a dollar, maybe more."

Then the chairman, nothing daunted,
Told her tale just as she wanted.
As with honeyed words, beguiling
My sad fancy into smiling,
Told the tale of Houma Mission,
Houma on the Bayou's shore.
Told of Houma, where the breezes
Sway the moss upon the treeses,
Mosses swinging, sweet birds singing
Shadows flying, soft winds sighing.
Houma with its charms galore.

Here the Cajans found a refuge
Banished from their homes of yore,
Sent by some unhappy master
Where unmerciful disaster
Traveled fast and traveled faster
Till they reached this kindly shore.
For a century they've lived here
For a hundred years or more.
Living simply, simply living
As their parents did before.

By hard work they earned a living
From the good earth's fertile store.
Naught of books or culture learning
All their souls within them turning Unto superstition's lore.
Tales of ghosts and "hants" believing
Not a rap of hope relieving Terrors gripped them more and more.

Till Miss Hooper's earnest teaching
In their homes, their heart strings reaching Thrilled them, filled them
With desire for more.

Then Miss Ella's stubborn pleading,
Pleading at the Council's door
For the school house they were needing
One day glad fruition bore.
So fulfilled her heart's ambition
For these folks to build a mission
Hope and learning to restore.
Now her eyes have all the seeming.

Of an angel that's been dreaming.
Dreaming dreams no mortal ever dreamed before.

Visions—in her fancy turning
Their sad yearning into learning
Reading—Writing—'Rithmetic,
And the love their Savior bore.

Now the lovely little Cajean,
From the Bayou's sandy shore,
May learn how to be a scholar
Or domestic arts to "foller"
If you'll only give a dollar.
Give a dollar? Let's give more.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Baton Rouge District Conference met May 28, 29, 1935, at Denham Springs, La., with the presiding elder, the Rev. K. W. Dodson, present and presiding throughout the sessions. It was one of the best attended conferences it has been the writer's privilege to witness. After the chair had appointed the usual committees, the members of the conference were each given a list of the entire membership of the conference with instructions as to how the lay delegates would be elected. While this procedure, by vote of the body, took a long time to get the delegates elected, it gave every member of the conference a chance. It was not until the second day that the list was completed. The delegation are as follows: W. S. Holmes, J. R. Abels, T. H. Henderson, Mrs. J. A. Alford, J. W. Harper, I. C. Nicolls, Mrs. B. W. June, Mrs. J. S. Darby, Miss Mary Searles, W. H. Underwood, I. N. McClendon and Mrs. A. S. Lutz. The alternates are as follows: G. A. Ford, Mrs. W. W. Perry, Mrs. J. P. Bonnetcarre, W. S. Stafford, A. D. Carpenter, and Mrs. F. N. Sweeney. T. H. Henderson, Zachary, was elected district lay leader with H. May, Hammond, and W. O. Burris, Baton Rouge, associates.

The preaching was done by Dr. J. Richard Spann, Dr. R. W. Vaughn, and Dr. A. S. Lutz. Needless to say it was of a high order. A feature of the first services was the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper carried out in solemn fashion.

The Rev. S. A. Seegers, pastor of Rayne and Conference director of the Golden Cross, gave assurance that hospital facilities in every district for the needy would be made possible through the Golden Cross. The plan has the approval of the Bishop and other authorities.

Dr. R. W. Vaughn, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, made an impressive address, stating that the Easter offering this year was $1,400, as compared to $1,300, last year. Dr. J. G. Snelling reported his work and made a strong plea for the Memorial Mercy Home. The Rev. A. K. McLellan gave announcements concerning the Pastors' School in Shreveport, and the various young people's assemblies. Mr. Lee Himes and Mr. W. S. Holmes urged the early payment of our indebtedness on the Bluff Creek improvements, by which the district parsonage is mortgaged. The district stewards were called to meet to make some definite plans for raising this money.

Dr. J. G. Snelling and Dr. J. R. Spann represented the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Committee on Temperance and Peace made a very strong report, which provoked some earnest speeches. Mr. French, Y. M. C. A. secretary at L. S. U., read the report, and was granted the privilege of elaborating on it. We understand a copy will be sent to the Advocate.

siding elder, now completing his four years on the district, were adopted by a rising vote. In this connection, let it be said that every one appreciated the fine hospitality of the good people of Denham Springs, Live Oak, Walker, Red Oak, and the charge generally for their splendid entertainment. Over a hundred homes were available for those who cared to stay over night. Pastor J. P. Bonnetcarre was an untiring host.

Reports of pastors showed a general advance along all lines. There have been 342 accessions to the Church since Annual Conference. The benevolences show quite an increase, and the charges generally made great advances in accepting, and pledging to raise, over the amount actually paid last year.

Dr. Cleanth Brooks, Rev. A. J. Coburn, and Rev. F. N. Sweeney, retired ministers of our Annual Conference, were present, took part in, and were a blessing to our deliberations. Miss Mary Searles, our fine young people's worker, was present, and together with Rev. C. E. McLean, spoke in behalf of youth, and the Bluff Creek camps.

J. CUDE ROUSSEAU, Sec'y.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 7.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

MOSES (LEADER AND LAWGIVER)

The lesson assigned covers the beginning of the Bible, the birth of a nation, the establishment of the church, the sealing of the covenant, as well as the glimpse into the life and work of the greatest man who lived before the Christian era. A people long accustomed to the mist of the valley and the chains of slavery had come to the mountain of vision, and the liberty of the children of God. In its revelation and effects, Sinai ranks next to Calvary, and, like Calvary, it centers in a great personality.

Moses was the child of Providence, a son of Abraham by birth, a son of Pharaoh by adoption, possessed of the heritage of Israel, the education and culture of Egypt, and schooled in the mysticism of the desert priest, Jethro. Loosely, we may say that he had forty years of education, forty years of meditation and forty years of action. God speaks always through prepared men. Ignorance is neither inspired nor inspiring. Revelation follows research. Seekers find, and they find that for which they search. Greece found beauty; Rome found power; Israel found God. The Bible is born of experience. Men walked with God before they had a written word. Moses had met God before the revelations of Sinai. Others had stood on that mountain and seen nothing, heard nothing, received nothing. Moses saw and heard and received because his mind was prepared and his heart was open. He carried to the mountain all the world's past and brought back all its future. There can be no shadow of doubt of the genuineness of his experience, or of the authenticity of the message he received. Who says thou shalt not kill, or steal, or lie, or covet, or commit adultery, is speaking a true and abiding word of the God who alone is worthy of man's loyal devotion and loving worship.

When the people received the message of God through Moses, they quickly promised obedience—and almost as quickly forgot! Youth was instructed and utilized. Sacrifices were offered, not that God delighted in the odor of burning flesh, but that men might learn something of the fearful cost and suffering entailed by sin, a cost and suffering not fully set forth till sin had done its worst and sent the suffering Son of God to Calvary. These sacrifices were the kindergarten building-blocks by which men were taught to give of their best to God till they should enter the school of Christ and learn from "Him who loved us and gave himself for us" to "worship in spirit and in truth." The God who asks is the God who gives. The God whom we seek is the God who seeks us. No more sacred seal is known to man than the "seal of blood." It binds both parties to the covenant. Through the riches of his grace, we are no more bound to God than he is bound to us. Blood on the altar, blood on the people, symbolic of the perpetual union between God and man manifested at Bethlehem and sealed on Calvary. The First Covenant was sealed by man with the blood of beasts; the New Covenant was sealed by Jesus with his own blood. His was a sacrifice to end sacrifices; a death to end death—and it does.

God working with man; man working with God; man sacrificing to God; God sacrificing for man; Moses, leader and lawgiver, showing the way. No wonder he is revered by Jew, Mohammedan, Christian, for back of them all is Moses, and back of Moses is God. Again the trite saying is true: "History is but the lengthened shadow of a man"—the out-working of the purpose of God by the race.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY

Centenary College, Shreveport, La., was the setting for the seventeenth young people's assembly of the Louisiana Annual Conference, held June 17-22, with Rev. J. Henry Bowden, Arcadia, serving as dean.

The morning watch services, held each morning before breakfast, were periods of personal meditation and prayer. D. L. Dykes, Pleasant Hill, led the silent thought, while Miss Edith Bailey, Shreveport, sketched a beautiful nature scene, to which she added each morning one feature symbolic of the abundant life of those who had accepted the assembly theme, "Follow Me." One hundred and eighty young people from various sections of the state received certificates for the enrichment and organization courses taught by Dr. W. L. Duren, New Orleans; Rev. C. E. McLean, Franklinton; Rev. B. F. Rogers, Lake Charles; Rev. G. W. Dameron, Crowley; Mr. E. O. Harbin, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. W. H. Wallace, Jr., New Orleans; Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy, DeRidder; Mrs. G. W. Dameron, Crowley; Miss Mary Searles, Baton Rouge; Miss Mary Eleanor Lutz, Hammond; Rev. R. R. Branton, New Orleans; Rev. D. W. Poole, Mangham; Miss Grace Gatewood, Shreveport; Rev. V. D. Morris, Columbia; Rev. Joe Brown Love, Baton Rouge; and Dr. W. W. Holmes, New Orleans.

"Rethinking Religion" was the basic thought of the inspiring addresses given by Dr. J. Richard Spann, Baton Rouge, for the afternoon vesper services held in the amphitheatre. The young people were drawn closer to God through the wonderful thoughts so beautifully expressed by Dr. Spann and the beauty of the twilight hour. Miss Elizabeth McCain, Hammond, arranged and directed the vesper services.

The night services were most interesting. An evening of music led by Mr. E. O. Harbin, Nashville, was enjoyed by the young people Monday night. Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy had charge of the program Tuesday night, featuring the unions. Miss Grace Gatewood arranged a special program for Wednesday night, presenting missions. An added attraction for Wednesday night was the showing of the Highroad and 1934 Assembly pictures by "Brother Bill" Wallace. The young people are most grateful to Mrs. Clarence Shaffer, Shreveport, and the committee for the banquet which was presented on Thursday evening. The program reviewed the progress of young people's work in the Louisiana Conference since its beginning in 1918, under the leadership of Rev. James B. Grambling, up to the present time. Friday evening a pageant, "The Seeker," was given, reassuring the young people of the Assembly that the only real way was to accept the assembly theme, "Follow Me."

The installation of officers during the morning watch hour Saturday morning was a fitting climax to the assembly. Young people's conference officers for the year 1935-36 are: President, D. L. Dykes, Pleasant Hill; vice-president, Maurice Hart, Monroe; secretary, Pearl Hattie, Shreveport; treasurer, Edelen White, New Orleans; publicity superintendent, Billy Gannaway, Monroe.

The young people were fortunate in having Mr. E. O. Harbin, Nashville, Tenn.,

as their Central Office representative. Mr. Harbin is author of Phonology, Paralogy, and is known as one of the ablest recreational leaders in the United States today.

REVIVAL AND VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL

On June 12, 1935, the pastor of the Summit Methodist Church, Rev. C. W. Wesley, began a revival and vacation church school, with Rev. J. L. Carter of Crystal Springs doing the preaching, and Mrs. L. W. Alford, of McComb, as director of the school, together with a strong force of local workers. We began each morning at 8 o'clock and closed with a 45-minute sermon by Brother Carter, at 10:30 a. m. Preaching by Brother Carter each evening at 8 o'clock.

CORINTH DISTRICT, ATTENTION

Miss Rosalie James, of Myrtle, Miss., has been appointed by Rev. J. D. Wroten, Presiding Elder, to raise the quota for the Advocate in Corinth District. This worthy young lady is working to secure the $100 prize in order that she may go to Grenada College. We trust that she may have the cordial and enthusiastic support of every pastor and church in Corinth District.

We closed the revival and school Wednesday night, June 19. We had no accessions to the church, but we had a revival among the membership and one that reached the entire community. Brother Carter brought some good, practical, thought provoking messages which shall not soon be forgotten.

The vacation church school was different from any school held in the Mississippi Annual Conference in that it reached every age group in the church. We had five groups: beginners, primary, juniors, young people, and adults. There were two studies taken in the adult class, one study on "Devotions, led by Mrs. G. Q. Jones, and one study, "Women Under the Southern Cross," taught by Mrs. C. W. Wesley. We awarded 66 certificates of credit on Wednesday night, June 19, as follows:

- 9 to the Beginners.
- 7 to the Primary Class.
- 18 to the Juniors.
- 9 to the Young People.
- 10 to Adults Class on study, "Women Under the Southern Cross."

13 to Adults Class on the study of "Devotions."

66 Total credits for the school.

Mrs. Alford was at her best and led the school in a wonderful way. She had the preparation, inspiration and leadership that was needed for the occasion. I have never seen such consecration, sincere effort, pep and devotion put into a great undertaking as Mrs. Alford put into this school. We owe a debt of gratitude to her for her faithful, loving service rendered during these days.

C. W. WESLEY, Pastor.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Mat. 4:19—Follow Me.

Jesus seemed to have used the expression a number of times. Matthew is here recording the call of Andrew and Simon, fishermen, who were casting a net into the sea. They "left their nets and followed him." (verse 20).

He used these words on other occasions. For instance in Mark 2:14, we read, "And as He passed by, he saw Levi, the son of Alphaeus sitting at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow Me. And he arose and followed Him."

The early Christians understood that discipleship involved following Jesus. Paul wrote to the Corinthians, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ" (I Cor. 11:1). John later wrote, "He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself also to walk, even as He walked." (1 John 2:6).

So these words are significant because the Lord spoke them.

The two words sound harmless. But when Jesus speaks them, they mean a great deal. We are to strive to be holy as He was holy. We are to be obedient to the Father's will as He was. We are to forgive as He forgave. We are to pray "Thy will be done." We are to reverence every man as a brother. We are to treat every woman as a sister. Love is to be the law of our life.

The world needs this challenge of Jesus. Through the movies, through the popular periodicals, the public is taught the license of the unbridled will. Naturally the carnal man desires to throw aside every restraint and gratify the selfish desires.

But love at the cross changes life. When God identified Himself with the moral struggle of humanity; when God became flesh and dwelt among and made atonement for our sin, He set forth the recreative power of mercy and forgiveness, and gave us the dynamic for self-control. The love of Christ constrains us. Jesus paid the price of redemption and the rehabilitation of human hearts that is necessary in order to achieve a co-operative fellowship with God.

Jesus calls out the best in us. He releases all of our energy. He enables us to accomplish what we could never accomplish before. Following Jesus is the supreme adventure of life.

The Christian wants to be where Jesus is. If Christ stands out on the frontiers of life, the Christian will follow Him.

Obedience is the test of discipleship. How plain this becomes in the light of the teachings of Jesus. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? Whosoever cometh to me and heareth my sayings, I will show you to whom He is like: He is like a man which built a house, and digged deep and laid the foundations on a rock: and when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it: for it was built upon a rock. But he that heareth and doeth not, is like a man that without a foundation built a house upon the earth, against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great." (Luke 6:40-49).

"The eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth." (Prov. 17:24). He is bound for everywhere and reaches nowhere. But the Christian fixes his eyes upon Jesus, the Lord of life. "As many as received Him, to them gave He the power to become the sons of God." (John 1:12).

PRAYER

Our Father, we thank Thee that Jesus has pioneered the way for us. We thank Thee we have found the Master. May we follow Him as He leads us out of complacent formality into an eternal spiritual adventuring. May we be holy for He was holy. We want to "be conformed to the image of God's dear Son." May we live in perfect obedience to the Father's will. May we follow Jesus in service. We are deeply grateful for all the revelation of God that comes through Him. May we live where the light of heaven streams upon us. We ask in Jesus' name.

FAITH OF OUR FATHERS

By Bruce S. Wright

Few, indeed, are the religious occasions when the singing of "Faith of Our Fathers" is inappropriate. Likewise few are the congregations that do not love to sing this great hymn. Its appeal is universal—a Catholic wrote it and Protestants sing it.

It is a hymn of historic significance rather than modern experience. How much do we know about "dungeon, fire and sword?" There are difficulties in our day which we have to meet, and our self-pitying minds may interpret them as persecutions, but they are as far removed as East and West from the cruel tortures the martyrs unflinchingly faced.

Is religion in our day in America too easy? Is its atmosphere that of the nursery rather than the dungeon? In our effort to maintain seventy-degree comfort in our religious life, do we studiously avoid all words or attitudes that might lead to criticism or opposition? Is our church membership a matter of policy or principle? It is all right to go to church because "it is the thing to do." It is better to go because it is the thing our upreaching souls cannot let go undone.

I am not among those who yearn for the "good old days" of our fathers. When analyzed, they were not so good after all. We have progressed marvelously since then, and we simply cannot go back. But our fathers did have a dauntlessness of spirit and a vigor of mind that our day of mental uncertainty and moral flabbiness sadly lacks. Our triumph must be faith of our own, wrought out in our own experience, "living still, in spite of" indifference, discouragement, and trial.—The Christian Advocate (Cincinnati).

In Memoriam

REV. JOHN S. HENLY

(Extract of a sermon delivered on the occasion of the funeral of the pastor of the church at Jonesboro, the Rev. J. S. Henly, who fell dead as he was passing from the Sunday school room to his pulpit, Sunday morning, March 10, 1935).

Text:—"Know ye not that a prince and a great man is fallen this day in Israel and we are weak because of it?"

I. A PRINCE HAS FALLEN

These words of King David express, as perhaps no others could, the feelings and convictions of our hearts today. Truly a prince and a great man is fallen. Rev. John Steele Henly was a true prince in that anything little, or unworthy a Christian, and a minister, was unthinkable of him or by him. Somewhere along life's pathway before most of us knew him, he met and wrestled all night with the angel of his better self and won, and from that moment until his coronation, like Jacob of old, he lived gloriously and died triumphantly praising God and blessing humanity.

John Henly was princely in his loyalty and devotion to his Church and his God. "Just name it 'Church,' and it suits me" was an expression frequently upon his lips. Beyond his highest joy he prized her heavenly ways; her sweet communion, solemn vows; her hymns of love and praise.

He seemed to know all and love all the hymns and tunes. I shall never forget hearing him sing at a "retreat," "When I can read my title clear." He sang it through and when he finished his face was wet with happy tears and radiant with the spirit of God.

He was familiar with the history of his Church and at home with her great leaders, past and present. He loved her great doctrines, preached them and embodied them. He was loyal to the program of the Church and believed in her policies. I never knew him to side-track or soft-pedal any part of the program of the Church, and he always sold it to his people. He was a true Methodist also in his spirit of appreciation and co-operation with other denominations. No worthy enterprise ever lacked a champion when he was around.

II. A GREAT MAN HAS FALLEN

Yes, a great man is fallen. John Henly was princely because he was first of all a man. You cannot grow princes out of any other timber. He had to be respected as a man. He never forgot it himself and he never allowed anyone else to forget it. I dare to say that there is not a person living that doesn't respect and honor him as a man. He was a man among men. He knew everyone in his community and everyone knew him and respected him. Children and young people adored him. He was at home with every group in or out of the church.

III. HE FELL

Know ye not that a prince and a great man is fallen. Yes, he fell. He did not lie down and die in his soft bed, while loved ones ministered lovingly to every comfort. No downy pillow was under his head. He fell, out there on the hard floor, in the aisle of his church. He fell as he ascended to the pulpit which was his throne, and ascended to the Throne of his Father in Heaven. He fell on the firing line, in the front trenches, with garment girt about and with the sword in his hand. "Died Abner like a dog?" No, like Abner, he fell at his post of duty on the field of battle.

It was eminently fitting that he should go that way. It was as he would have wished it. For some reason he had a perfect horror of superannuation. He was so alive to his finger tips and so interested in everything and everybody. He raised thousands of dollars for the superannuate fund but he never received any of it, nor did he wish to receive it.

"Servant of God, well done
Rest from Thy loved employ,
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy.

His sword was in his hand
Still warm with recent fight,
Ready that moment at command
Through rock and steel to smite.

Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be Thy new employ,
And while eternal ages run
Rest in thy Savior's joy."

IV. AND WE ARE WEAK BECAUSE OF IT

Yes, truly a great man is fallen this day in Israel and we are weak because of it. Yes, two of Jonesboro's greatest sons, Rev. J. S. Henly and Judge William Hammond, respectively pastor and superintendent of the Sunday school, lie side by side in new made graves in the church yard. They were both lovely in their lives and in their deaths they were not divided. And we are weak because of it. How shall we carry on without them? And yet, and yet, are we really weaker? Are we not just weak in faith? It would be strange indeed if these two faithful seed-sowers of the kingdom leave behind them no harvest of workers to enter into and carry on their labors. We shall be greatly surprised if some young Elishas do not take up the mantel that is fallen from them and carry on the noble work so nobly begun.

Surely some young men and women under the spell of their influence will grasp the torch that is fallen from their lifeless hands and hold it aloft that another generation may walk in the light of it and stumble not.

MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA

The thirty-ninth annual reunion of the Carruth-Turner families will be held at Dixie Springs, three miles north of Summit, Miss., on Friday, July 12. These are two of the largest and oldest families of that section, and the traditions of the connection are jealously treasured.

Rev. J. A. Whitsett, of Fifth Avenue Church, Montgomery, Ala., who lost his wife a short time ago, is at Touro Infirmary in this city with a son who underwent a very serious operation early in the week. The young man stood the operation well and made as good progress as could be expected up to Friday morning, when the editor of the Advocate stopped to see him. Rev. D. C. Whitsett, of Chisholm charge, Montgomery District, is also at the bedside of his brother.

Wallet of the Week

THE LYNCHING STATISTICS, compiled by Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, show a decrease of 2 for the first six months of 1935 as compared with the figures for 1934. It is gratifying to note that only four persons were lynched during the first half of the current year, but it is humiliating to know that all four of the lynchings were in Mississippi and Louisiana. All those lynched were Negroes—one was for wounding a man in an altercation, one for rape, and two for murder.

KOREA, THE HERMIT KINGDOM, is said to have more than four hundred thousand Christians, and these are gathered into four thousand regular congregations. Such figures are not very impressive to Americans where there is an overwhelming Christian population; but, for a little country where paganism has ruled for centuries and Christianity has been in operation for the short space of fifty years, it is a worthy and even a remarkable record. The Korean idea of Christianity is expressed in the phrase, "Do the doctrine."

OXFORD UNIVERSITY, says The New Outlook, has lowered its last barrier against women, when it decreed that "all degrees in the University shall be open to men and women equally." The statute, which completes the equalization of women, removes the prohibition and allows the conferring of the degrees of bachelor of theology and doctor of divinity on women as well as men. The New Outlook says: "Cambridge still refuses to give women students any degrees at all. But Cambridge will lift its head out of the sand one of these mornings."

DOCTOR PAUL SCHILDER, according to an exchange, told the American Psychiatric Association that sane persons must find their happiness through seven accomplishments, one of which "is the attainment of a private philosophy of death and the future life." The other items were: satisfaction with one's looks; overcoming worry over illness; ability to command a situation, either directly or indirectly; manliness; power to charm the opposite sex; and contentment with what one can expect to earn from the future. Some of the things listed may seem rather frivolous and unimportant; but the "attainment of a private philosophy of death and the future life" certainly summarizes the teachings of the church respecting personal experience and the belief in immortality.

TRINITY CHURCH, BOSTON, which was made famous by the ministry of Phillips Brooks, is said to be in danger on account of its foundation. That part of the city of Boston was reclaimed from the tidal basin of the Charles river. Four thousand five hundred piles were driven for the foundation, and these remained perfectly sound until the new drainage system removed the water from the ground. It appears that the piles are rotting and the foundation may soon give way, or that a tremendous sum of money may be necessary to make it secure.

AN INTERESTING EPISODE occurred recently in the Russian Courts, in connection with "Comrade" Mirzeoff. The "Comrade" was an employee of the Commissariat of Agriculture at Pyatigorsk. When he married a girl one evening and divorced her the next morning he was tried under the Russian bigamy statute. It appears that he had been married and divorced so many times that he could not recall the names of some of his wives. It seems that Russia might learn that the religious tie can not be destroyed without loosening every moral and social bond as well.

MATTHEW WELLINGTON, the African who for sixty years has been known and honored as the friend of David Livingstone, is dead. He was the last living link with the missionary hero of the Dark Continent, was ninety-two years of age, and his death occurred at Mombasa in Africa. He was with Livingstone in his last days, was a witness of his death, and he and his comrades bore the body upon their shoulders on the long journey to the coast—the first stage of the journey to England and the burial among the heroes who sleep in Westminster Abbey. With the passing of Wellington, the story of Livingstone belongs wholly to history.

THE WOMEN SCHOOL TEACHERS OF CINCINNATI are reported to be engaged in a contest with the School Board of that city over the question of salaries. Their demand is for equal pay for women for equal service rendered. It is difficult to argue against the justice of such a demand; but suppose their brothers should become so unchivalrous as to counter by a demand for an equitable distribution of places upon the basis of sex and qualification. At a distance of a thousand miles, it looks as if the women might have at least one long end of the bargain. At any rate, if the board happens to be composed of men, they may be hard to convince that there are not two sides to the argument.

EDITORIAL

ARE THE CHURCHES WORTHY OF THEIR YOUTH?

An editorial in the Christian Century for June 26, has the above caption. We have been a subscriber for that periodical for many years, and, while we have not been in agreement with it on all matters, we have often found stimulation in its aggressive attitudes. But, much as we believe in Peace, we can not think that the editorial to which we refer is wise, or that it will make substantial contribution to the student leadership which it champions. We accept cordially and sincerely the ethical implications of the Gospel; but we can not feel that movements growing out of the problems and interpretations of any period are so fundamental in their character as to be made a test of the worthiness of the Church. We think, too, that a megaphone insistence upon ethical concepts tends to discredit the mystical element, which we still believe is an important factor in Christian belief and experience. We accept Peace as a collateral interest and responsibility of the Christian Church, but we do not believe that a program for its promotion should be made the acid test of the fidelity of the Church to its divine commission. From our study of ethical movements in the Church, we do not feel at all sure that an over-emphasis of their place and importance has not been responsible for subsequent periods of reaction. God is surely interested in all the problems of a great world, and the Church can not afford to become one-sided in its interpretation of Him. Every tomorrow in the world's life will find the scenery of the ethical stage rearranged, and properly so; for ethical emphasis must deal with the practical problem of each new day. The Christian Century is doing a great service to the cause of Peace; but we do not accept the implication that subordination to a student program and student leadership on that subject should be made the test of a church's loyalty to its Lord. Neither do we think it fair or helpful to raise question as to the honesty and loyalty of the church back home. Student idealism will always have its place in the life of the Church; but it will ever need the guiding hand of experience and the tempering of the broader views of those who know the currents of the world's thought and have felt the throbbings of its life. For our part, we believe that the churches, though not perfect, are worthy of their youth.

THE PASTORS' SCHOOL

The Pastors' School, which was held at the Seashore Assembly, Biloxi, last week, was one of the best we have ever had the privilege of attending. It was better attended than the schools of recent years have been; the class work was done for its cultural and leadership values, not for passing a Conference Course; and the platform addresses were of an unusually high order. Dr. Edwin Lewis, head of the department of Systematic Theology of Drew University, gave some of the most effective and helpful addresses that we have ever heard from such a platform. He is a teacher rather than an orator, and one has to become used to his manner of delivery in order to follow him, but his messages were well worth the effort that one must put forth in order to get them. He is conservative in his views, courageous in his attitudes, he states his propositions clearly and forcefully and he speaks with an earnestness that makes his deliverance almost irresistible. The classes taught by Dean Smith, of Centenary College, and Mrs. Lipscomb, of North Mississippi, were well attended. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs made the closing address on Friday evening.

$10,000.00 BEQUEST TO S. M. U.

A $10,000 bequest to Southern Methodist University by the late Viola Mead Kidd has been completed with the receipt of $5,000 President Charles C. Selecman announced. The first $5,000 was received last year. The bequest will be known as the Wilbur M. Kidd and Wife Scholarship Fund. The income from the money will be awarded annually to worthy students in the university.

VICE, GAMBLING, CRIME

Some time ago a man in public life made a statement to the effect that gambling is necessary for certain types of people, and that it is futile to try to suppress it. A University of Chicago professor comes forward with a proposition to legalize all forms of gambling as a means of suppressing crime, and he went so far as to assert that the legalizing of handbooks would be "the greatest step since the repeal of national prohibition in the war against crime." It seems now that the advice of the Professor is about to be crystallized into law in his state. This condition and attitude is by no means confined to America. In the issue of The Methodist Recorder (London), for June 13, a correspondent says that a new form of gambling "is sweeping the midlands as a plague." It appears that bookmaking canvassers call upon the poorer people and sell them $5 cash coupon-books, which the householder pays for at the rate of 25 cents per week until he has paid the sum of $5.25. These coupons are exchanged at stores for goods and the goods pawned for cash, which in turn is then invested with the street bookmaker. It does not require an argument to make one see the iniquity of such a scheme. We do not share the belief that crime can be suppressed by making the stepping-stones to it respectable. Neither do we think that any form of vice or crime can be cured by police power, while the great mass of the people sit by in indifference and fancied respectability. Crime can not be suppressed by superficial processes. Its repression will be a direct responsibility of the officers of the law as long as there are statutes against it, but there is an equally important obligation of the citizen also. We need to re-study our responsibility for social life—with reference to crime as well as to property; and that will call for the inauguration of an educational program in which the church must lead. Denunciation of crime is both unconvincing and ineffective. Evangelism stripped of social obligation, if not utter folly, is certainly far short of the moral and social responsibilities of the Church. The suppression of vice, gambling and crime will require a combined attack of the civic and moral forces of the entire community, from which no officer of the law, no church and no citizen can be excepted.

CAMPAIGN NEARS END

When this issue of the Advocate reaches you, only four days of the campaign will remain. In that four days, much can be done to complete the task. Up to the present time, only one District has secured its quota—the Hattiesburg. Some others are within reach of success, and a determined effort on the part of every pastor can easily mean $100 for the District. We urge every presiding elder and pastor to make these last days count for much, both for themselves and for the Advocate. Look at the record of your District and your charge, and do all you can to make it a little better. Some charges have not even registered in the Campaign, and we do not want to publish a report that may leave out any charge. Let's join hands to have every charge in all the Conferences represented in the final report.

WHY WARS MUST CEASE

By Rev. Benj. F. Rogers

The heading of this brief article is the title of a book published this year by the Macmillan Company. The lack of space does not permit a review of its contents. It is written by ten prominent women of America at the request of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War. The titles of the various chapters indicate its scope which are as follows: "Because if we do not destroy war now, war will destroy us;" "Because the war idea is obsolete;" "Because wars waste human life;" "Because wars cost too much;" "Because wars produce economic chaos;" "Because in war you never know what you are fighting for;" "Because wars unleash demoralizing instincts;" "Because war breeds war;" "Because wars interfere with the normal growth of civilization, and the conclusion." Since our ministers are required to preach a sermon on "World Peace and the Evils of War and those Attendant upon Military Training," I make the suggestion that they not only read this book, but that they commend it to our people. Only by arousing public sentiment in favor of peace can we hope to make any progress toward the goal. The President has recently signed the bill making the largest peace time naval appropriation in the history of our country. The bill was passed with only a few feeble voices being heard in protest. America seems to be fast becoming a militaristic nation largely because of the activity of the militarists and the inaction of the vast majority of our people. We are allowing a noisy minority to fashion the policy of our country which is a dangerous thing for a democracy. The President talks in favor of world peace and then acts in accordance with the desires of the militarists. We must impress upon our national legislators that the people of this country, a majority of them, do not favor such vast expenditures for war purposes. If prosperity is to be regained then peace must be maintained.

LYNCHING

By Rev. A. H. Williams

No one believes in lynching as a substitute for court proceedings. Confusion and grievous distress could only result as a consequence of weakened courts, and of mob regulations. Naturally the question arises, Why do lynchings occur?

1. "Bad people are the hurt of America," said Mr. Sam Jones, and explains many kinds of evil doing, but cannot always account for what is known as "mob violence."

2. It may be said on general principles, that the great enemy of humankind strikes hardest at the most civilized sections of the world. Satan hates enlightened people, and goes hard for influential leaders. Damage to the chief and most prominent must make more easy the conquest for injury to other locations, and kinds of people.

3. No people on the earth flame more quickly against crime than do the Americans. They, as a body, are a crime-hating people, enraged by the tragedy of flagrant transgression, the temptation is tremendous to visit instantly the extreme penalty.

4. Quick protection for individuals and for proper interests is legal, and counted wise in the United States. Every full-fledged American stands in line instantly to make safe the country against an invading foe, and should do so, and even if a man of some kind should trespass upon the "chicken roost," and take therefrom a nice "fryer," the trespasser may be shot with impunity, if discovered in the act, and no harm can come to the owner. If another man basely degenerate, black or white, tramples upon unprotected innocence, creating a tragedy ten thousand times worse than death, it is counted a lynching offense, if he is slain a brief time after the occurrence, and troops will be mustered to protect the criminal until the courts shall act, and such process is legal, and as stated, no one believes in lynching. The voice of the destroyed, however, and the voice of justice and of safety, cry out with tremendous emphasis, for vengeance and for speedy execution of the undeclared outlaw. Stupid indifference at such a time would startle the arch promoter of evil and indicate a prophecy of decaying civilization.

5. Proper education and Christian agencies as all people know, must grade among the essential factors for preventing crime and for solving the problems of individual safety, and of national well-being. Also, with all in every great civilization, it is recognized that "the strong arm of the law" must class as an essential in the suppressing of crime, and in the restraint of evil agencies. America is mentioned as several times the richest of any world country, and, under Divine favor, more than once the most powerful, and very many millions are expended annually for benevolent purposes, and education is offered at well nigh every door step to the entire school population, both white and colored, and all the people alike are "under the law."

"America is Heaven," said a newly arrived student from Turkey, and so far as Christians, the Divine Master would say, "The salt of the earth, and the light of the world." The Christian home and the Christian church have lingered through the ages as recognized conditions without which no country can be great. With equal certainty it is understood that "the things which be Caesar's" are also ordained of God. The might of government therefore must abide in triumph as a condition of safety and of national prosperity.

TOBIAS GIBSON'S BODY REMOVED TO VICKSBURG

By Rev. J. T. O'Neil

Friday, June 28, 1935, the dust of Rev. Tobias Gibson, and the shaft that marked his grave in a lonely, neglected spot near Big Bayou, four miles south of Vicksburg, were removed to Crawford Street Churchyard in Vicksburg, Mississippi.

Rev. Tobias Gibson was emphatically the father of Mississippi Methodism. At the session of the South Carolina Conference of which he was a member, held January 1, 1799, he was appointed by Bishop Francis Asbury to the Natchez Mission which included all of the present states of Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama and a large part of Texas. He reached the mission the latter part of March, 1799, and, in a short time after reaching his new field, he organized the first Methodist church in Mississippi, in the town of Washington, six miles from Natchez, with eight charter members. He lived only five years after coming to the Mississippi Territory, dying April 5, 1804. His body was buried in what was then the Gibson family burying ground, near the home of the widow of his brother, Nathaniel Gibson, where he died.

Soon the title to the property left the Gibson family, and for a time the grave was lost, but in 1857, through the aid of an aged Negro slave, some of his kinspeople located the grave, and placed a marble shaft at the head of it.

Soon the cemetery ceased to be used by white people, and was converted into a pasture where the cows roamed ad libitum, and occasionally a colored person was buried there. Many of the relatives and friends of this sainted and ascended hero of the cross expressed a desire to have his remains removed to where they could be better cared for. The quarterly conference of Crawford Street Church requested that the remains be moved to Crawford Street Church yard. In response to this request, Revs. H. G. Hawkins, N. B. Harmon, M. M. Black, and T. J. O'Neil, together with Mr. A. J. Martin, and Mr. Bernard Fisher who offered their services gratis, removed the dust, and the shaft that marked the grave on that lonely hill in the pasture far away, to the Crawford Street Churchyard, where it is hoped they will remain as long as Methodism has a history.

TO THE PASTORS OF ABERDEEN DISTRICT

How would it do for each pastor, as soon as he reads this, to get out and secure at least one new subscriber to the New Orleans Christian Advocate? As I look over the records by districts I wonder if our Aberdeen District would not enjoy having the place really at the top at least one time in this campaign. I suggest to the pastors that they urge their people to help them make this a real contest. For instance, 33 new subscribers, one from each charge, sent in within the first week after this suggestion appears in print, would put over the idea that we are alive to the situation and propose to make the campaign interesting.

Let us do a little team-work right away! How about it?

ARCHEOLOGY vs. DESTRUCTIVE CRITICISM

By H. N. Pharr

While a certain type of what is termed "Higher Criticism" has unquestionably weakened the faith of many in Old Testament history and consequently in its inspiration, yet it may have "proven a blessing in disguise" in certain ways. It certainly aroused many Bible scholars to "leave no stone unturned" in its defense.

One outstanding result has been the development of a corps of highly trained and skilled scientific workers in the field of archeology, whose discoveries have thrown a flood of light upon numerous hitherto disputed facts.

The whole superstructure of the "Critical Theory" seems to have had for its foundation several main assumptions, which might be abbreviated as follows: (1) Ignorance on the part of Moses, his predecessors and contemporaries of any part of writing. (2) The descendants of Shem (Semites) and not of Ham (Gen. X) were the original settlers of Mesopotamia and Canaan. (3) The development of all religions on the evolutionary principle. (4) The rule of the Hyksos Kings in Egypt was less than two centuries. (5) The impossibility of ever reconciling Egyptian records with the historical references in Genesis and Exodus.

Many conflicting theories were built upon these and other allied assumptions, which archeology seems to have proven rather conclusively, to have had no real foundation. Sir Chas. Marston, in his fascinating "New Bible Evidence," gives interesting details of the recent discoveries in Palestine and adjacent lands, and is our authority for some of the facts stated, in trying to deal with so comprehensive a subject, in an article of this length. Our comments will be made in the same order that the assumptions by the critics have been presented.

I

The Critical Theory had its origin late in the 18th century, in an attempt to explain the use of three different Hebrew names, to designate the Deity, in the opening chapters of Genesis.

It was argued that: (a) The Pentateuch was a Composite of three separate descriptions and man's earliest history from the Hebrew viewpoint. (b) That they were written at different times in the eighth and ninth centuries B. C., and in different parts of Palestine, where and when different names for the Deity were known. (c) That the basis of the stories was folk-lore traditions, handed down orally from generation to generation. (d) That the final compilation was made between 650 and 600 B. C. by Jewish Priests, who embellished them with largely imaginary happenings in Egypt, in the wilderness and in Canaan.

The most effective answer to the assumption that writing was not practiced in some form very early in human history are the mass of cuneiform inscriptions unearthed in Mesopotamia, Palestine, etc., and the hieroglyphics in Egypt, which have been deciphered. Dr. Langton, of Oxford University, is generally recognized as one of the highest authorities on ancient literature, in the light of recent discoveries. He refers to frequent mention by Babylonian and Assyrian scribes, of antediluvian happenings, and quotes one king, who praises himself as "one who loved to read the writings of the age before the Flood."

conomic waste, but after all a residuum remained which set forward that great interest of the church, and the end was achieved through the very failures that were made.

Strange as it may seem, the Methodists made almost no use of printed publicity for nearly half a century. They had in the example of Mr. Wesley an eloquent plea for the recognition of its value, but they contented themselves with personal and direct appeals. They doubtless felt that such a method was best suited to the conditions in the great American wilderness. Robert Williams, who sought to introduce printing at the beginning of the Methodist movement in America, was suppressed. John Dickins, justly entitled to be considered the father of the Methodist press, gave ten years of toil to the enterprise; but the poverty of the publishing business is shown by the list of publications offered at the book room in Philadelphia in 1813. According to Crowther's Portraiture of Methodism, the entire list comprised twenty-four items, only three of which were American productions. They were: Life of Benjamin Abbott; Life of William Watters; and A Scriptural Catechism. Dickins began the publication of the American Arminian Magazine in 1789, but found it necessary to discontinue it at the end of two years. In 1797 he began, by order of the General Conference, the publication of the Methodist Magazine, and it was discontinued at the end of 1798 because of the death of Dickins. The General Conference of 1812 instructed the Book Agents to resume publication of the Methodist Magazine not later than January 1813; and the next General Conference repeated the command; but the publication was not resumed until 1818. The four volumes published by John Dickins are valuable sources of Methodist history; and the score of years during which the church was without a medium of publicity are years in which there is a dearth of information regarding Methodist progress.

The Methodists never came to a full appreciation of the press until the church was beset with problems and torn with controversies. The struggle over administrative and social issues, which were sharply debated in the early part of the nineteenth century, brought thinking Methodists to the consciousness of the need of means for a wider appeal, if the position of the church were to be maintained. Minorities, finding their liberty of discussion restricted, turned to the press for disseminating their theories and beliefs; and majority factions were driven to the use of the same medium for counter-acting agitation against the church. We have noticed already the rise of the Methodist Repository and its successor, Mutual Rights, organs of the "Reformers." In 1829 The Itinerant was issued in Baltimore with Melville Cox as editor, and its mission was to defend the church against the agitations of the Reformers. The paper was not a financial success and was soon discontinued. The first great Methodist paper to be established was Zion's Herald. The first issue appeared January 9, 1823, and it was published in Boston until September 5, 1828, when it was purchased by the Book Concern and consolidated with the Christian Advocate, to which the name Zion's Herald was added. In 1833 twenty laymen, organized as the Boston Wesleyan Association, effected an arrangement by which the publication in Boston was resumed and under the original name. The paper has been issued by that organization ever since; its files are complete; and it is today, as it has been through the years, a worthy representative of the Methodist Church and a staunch defender of righteousness.

The Wesleyan Journal, projected by Stephen Olin, appeared in Charleston, South Carolina, October 1, 1825. It was the second Methodist paper established in the United States. Owing to the illness of Dr. Olin, William Capers became the first editor. On March 17, 1827, it was merged with the Christian Advocate in New York, and its name was perpetuated in the title of that Journal until 1866. The parent member of the group of Christian Advocates sent forth its initial number from New York, on September 9, 1826. In addition to the mergers already noted, it absorbed the Holston Conference Messenger in 1827; The Religious Messenger, Philadelphia, and The Augusta Kentucky Herald in 1828; and in later years, The Methodist, The Northern Christian Advocate, The Methodist Times, The Washington Christian Advocate, and The Pittsburg Christian Advocate. At least three separate and complete files of the Christian Advocate are in existence. The Western Christian Advocate was established in 1834, and the Christian Apologist, German, in 1839, both domiciled in Cincinnati. In 1832 the Christian Sentinel was established in Richmond, Virginia, and in 1836 it was changed to The Richmond Christian Advocate, a paper authorized by the General Conference of that year. Under that name it has been published ever since; it is the oldest paper in the Southern Church; but its files unfortunately are not complete. In 1834 the Western Methodist was established in Nashville, in 1836 the name was changed to the Southwestern Christian Advocate, in 1816 to the Nashville Christian Advocate, in 1851 to the Louisville and Nashville Christian Advocate, and in 1858 to the Christian Advocate. This is the General Organ of the Southern Church. In 1836 a Christian Advocate was established in Charleston, South Carolina, by action of the General Conference. On January 23, 1836, The Mississippi Christian Herald, edited by John Newland Maffitt, was launched at Natchez. It was published under the patronage of the Mississippi Conference, but after about two years it was discontinued.

Numerous other periodicals were established and most of them disappeared; but these are the more important ones and they show the impulse in response to which the Methodist press was developed. It came into being during the period of the greatest controversies through which the church has passed; and no agency which Methodism has employed has been more useful and potent in the establishment and defence of its aims and ideals, than has the system of publications thus developed. The importance of the Methodist press has varied somewhat with the issues before the church, but it has always been a creditable representative of the ecclesiastical and Christian ideals of the Methodist people.

CHAPTER VII

SLAVERY

The discussion of slavery, as a factor in Methodist history, has been deferred to this point in order that the facts might be presented consecutively; and for the no less valid reason that at this period the subject reached the peak of its tragic importance in the progress of the Church. No question which has agitated the minds of the American people is more difficult of treatment, or has exercised a more far-reaching influence upon our social and religious progress. Its political, economic, social and religious bearings make it one of the most complicated of our public affairs. The disruption of the Church and the tragedy of civil strife in which the controversy ended so warped the judgment of all sides as to make almost impossible a judicious approach to the question. At the South, anti-slavery agitations were a kind of sheet lightning in which objects of attack were located and haled to judgment, whether righteously or not. On the other side, the war enhanced the virtue and the ecclesiastical fortune of those who were able to lay large claim to credit for a victorious cause. On both sides, there was probably an overvaluation of all these facts. Slavery was a major factor in the War Between the States; but, as an issue in the Church, it is separate and distinct from the war.

The time has come, we think, when slavery may be studied with courageous frankness and when all the facts should be brought into the light. When that shall be done all parties and all factions will have enough of which to be ashamed and none will have just reason for pride and boasting. Negro slavery was an institution for which no section can claim for its connection with it a counsel of perfection. It was a part of that mysterious social development of the human race handed down from the remotest civilizations; a thing tolerated and practiced by all religions; and a part of the economic and social policy of all governments. Its presence in America, therefore, was an inheritance from civilizations beyond the seas. Bancroft, the historian, says that it was not limited to the exploitation of the Negro race; but that Scots taken on the field of Dunbar and Royalists captured at the battle of Worcester were sold into servitude. He says, too, that the reason for New York's not being a slave state, like Carolina, was due to climate and not to the superior humanity of its founders.

Lecky describes the emancipation of the slaves of the West Indies as one of the "perfectly virtuous acts recorded in the history of nations." Those great words sound well enough so long as one does not know that back of that "perfectly virtuous" moment lies a long era of sordid political iniquity which robs the act of its moral grandeur. At the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution, slavery was an important factor in shaping political thought and action. By the very terms of the Constitution it was made a buffer between contending interests and factions; and when representation in Congress was based upon a "Federal population" computing three-fifths of the slaves, the Negro was doomed to be the victim in our national struggles and a pawn in our political bargaining. In the Convention which framed the Constitution, Colonel Mason, of Virginia, referred to the slave trade as an "infernal traffic originated in the avarice of British merchants." He said also that the British government constantly checked the attempts of Virginia to put a stop to it. A compromise was effected by which slave importation was continued for twenty years after the adoption of the Constitution. That compromise multiplied the difficulties of emancipation a thousand fold, and it is an example of bargaining in social interests and relations which will probably never be wholly eliminated from our political life.

From the beginning, many people in all sections of the country were sincerely opposed to slavery. But the economic importance of the institution in the South gave that section a vital and a peculiar interest in its continuance, and its position was fortified by Constitutional guarantees which it felt must be maintained inviolate. As a consequence, there was developed a vigorous and an unequivocal literature in defence of the economic, social and moral legitimacy of slavery. After a time, the position of the North came to be the opposite of that held in the South, as were its laws and literature; but the history of New England shipping reveals a direct responsibility for slavery, rooted in

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. Travis Filgo, Junior Preacher at Tupelo, Miss., filled the pulpit of Brother Lott at Aberdeen, on June 30.

The parsonage at Booneville, Miss., has been made comfortable and attractive this year. Rev. P. F. Luter is the pastor.

Rev. H. F. Brooks, of Tupelo, Miss., assisted Rev. E. M. Shaw in a meeting at Guntown. There were twelve additions to the church.

Our good friend since college days, Rev. H. A. Wood sends us greetings and a word of encouragement which we greatly appreciate. Brother Wood is pastor at Fayette, Miss.

Rev. J. W. Faulk says that his meeting at Leesville, La., started out with great promise. He was being assisted by his son, Rev. Rowland Faulk, with Rev. Carl Lueg doing the singing.

Rev. J. T. Weems, pastor at Tylertown, Miss., has met in full the asking for his work—twenty-two subscriptions. We count that a worthy achievement. Thank you, both pastor and people.

Rev. W. C. M. Baggett, of Pachuta, Miss., reports a fine meeting in which he was assisted by Rev. A. J. Boyles, of Carthage, doing the preaching. He says that the spirit at Pachuta is fine.

Rev. T. C. Cooper, Collins, Miss., says that he has just closed a successful meeting at Seminary in which he was assisted by Rev. J. B. Holyfield. He reports good preaching and a gracious time.

Rev. H. H. Wallace, Shaw, Miss., writes "I could say a lot of nice things about our work, but am afraid it might not all be true, so I shall only say I am hard at work." We know that such is true.

Mrs. W. O. Whitaker, of Benton, Miss., adds to a business note a word of appreciation which we acknowledge with sincere thanks. No one knows better than an editor the blessedness of an encouraging word.

Rev. J. J. Garner, of Main Street Church, Water Valley, Miss., is doing a magnificent work in that charge. For many years, he has been our friend, and he has done a worthy work in the North Mississippi Conference.

Our good friend, Fred L. Applewhite, of the Mississippi Conference, sends us greetings and says that "all is quiet on the Wesson front." He is doing a splendid part toward making things easy on the Advocate front.

Brother C. C. Clark, of Waynesboro, Miss., writes us that Rev. W. W. Moore of Bucatunna, Miss., is ill. We hope that he is already well on the way to complete recovery. We presume that his illness was not of a serious nature.

The church at Rienzi, Miss., where Rev. E. M. Sharp is pastor, has been completely remodeled. It is now well-appointed and attractive. New pews and a number of new rooms for the church school were included in the changes. Best of all, it is all paid for.

We have a note from our good friend, T. Jefferson Holladay, who has been through the deep waters in the death of his father. His father, a layman, died on June 22, and in his going the Church and every interest of the kingdom has lost a devoted friend.

Rev. James Knight, of Indian Bayou, La., is having a good year on his charge. He has received thirty-eight new members, thirty-three of them on profession of faith. He was assisted in his revival by Rev. A. D. George, of Vinton. Brother Knight expects to pay all assessments for the year in full.

Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, recently returned from the Orient, will deliver the Fondren Lectures at Southern Methodist University during the first week in December. The subject will be: "The Search for a New Strategy in Protestantism." Dr. Holt is pastor of St. John's Church, St. Louis.

Rev. W. C. McCay, pastor at Baldwyn, Miss., is rejoicing with his people over the revival just closed. Rev. W. R. Lott did the preaching, and the singing was led by Rev. E. M. Sharp. Twenty joined the church, the last note on the church indebtedness was paid, and a fine spirit prevails.

We regret to report that the condition of Brother Whitsett, son of Rev. J. A. Whitsett, of the Alabama Conference, has taken a serious turn in the last few days. As we go to press his condition is reported to be extremely grave, and his father and brother have been called to his bedside again.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham, Corinth, Miss., has received 102 new members this year. In sending in his list of subscribers to the Advocate, twenty-four, he pays tribute to the faithful work of the "permanent" Advocate committee: Mrs. R. C. Liddon, Mrs. Roy Rankin, Mrs. J. F. Webb and Miss Bessie Ray.

The preachers of the Hattiesburg District are very happy over the success of their Advocate campaign. And many are the words of appreciation for the capable and effective leadership given by the presiding elder, Rev. V. G. Clifford. The editor joins in their rejoicing, and the Hattiesburg District will have a large place in our hearts for many a day.

Evangelist Harry S. Allen is now engaged in a tent meeting at Lake Arthur, La. From there he goes to assist Rev. S. A. Seegers at Rayne, La., in a similar campaign. Brother Allen writes that he has an open date in August and would like to secure an engagement in Mississippi or Louisiana for a tent revival. Any pastor desiring his assistance should write him at Rayne, La., at once.

We have a very beautiful note from Rev. B. F. Jones, Brookhaven, Miss., enclosing a receipt given to his father by Rev. B. M. Drake, for the Advocate and Journal for 1934; and another given to his aunt, Miss M. O. Leighton, for the New Orleans Advocate in 1878. Brother Jones, now retired, says: "I have been under its (The Advocate) potent influence all my life, and still look with pleasing anticipation for its stated visit to my home. I prize it beyond measure. Especially so, since I have been placed on the 'retired list.' We appreciate the privilege of seeing these receipts, and trust that Brother Jones' esteem for the Advocate may never grow less.

Methodist Women

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

It was the privilege of a number of Louisiana missionary women to take advantage of the Pastors' School of the Mississippi Conference, which was held recently at the Methodist Camp Grounds at Biloxi.

Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb was at her best in the teaching of the courses, "How to Teach Religion," and "The Other America."

The lectures by Dr. Edgar Lewis, of Drew University, were most instructive and inspiring.

Louisiana women felt that it was a real privilege to meet and to know and to have this contact with the women of the Mississippi Conference.

The Louisiana women attending this School were: Mrs. B. L. Kinchen, of Watson; Mrs. Poole, of Mangum; Mrs. Virgil Morris, of Columbia; Mrs. E. C. Gunn, of Lake Charles; Mrs. W. L. Duren; Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Mrs. Walter Grant, Mrs. George Brown, and Mrs. J. B. Pollard, of New Orleans.

Famous Painting Unveiled at Board Meeting

The unveiling of a handsome painting, "Hus Before the Council of Constance," which had been sent as a gift of love and gratitude from Methodists in Czechoslovakia to their brethren in America, proved one of the high points of interest on the first day's program of the meeting of the Board of Missions, May 7-8. The gift was presented in the name of Czech Methodism by Bishop Arthur J. Moore, in charge of Methodist interests in Europe, and accepted by Bishop John M. Moore, President of the Board.

According to the request of the donors, the picture hangs in the Assembly Room of the Board of Missions and is the focus of attention as soon as one enters the room.

The gift, which was made possible by contributions from Methodists all over Czechoslovakia, commemorates the 15th anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Mission in Czechoslovakia, the 200th anniversary of John Wesley's first contact with the Moravians, and the 520th anniversary of the martyrdom of John Hus.

The Nashville picture is Zizala's fine copy of the most famous painting of Vaclav Brozik, great Czech artist, who died in 1901. The original hangs in the Assembly Room of the City Council of Prague. Depicting John Hus in robes of simple black, standing serene and unafraid before all the magnificence of the ecclesiastical court, the painting has caught the spirit of one of the loftiest moments in Czech history.

Accompanying the picture from Czechoslovakia, was a simple statement, expressing the hope that the painting might hang in the assembly room of the Board of Missions, where it might become a pictorial sermon, testifying to the love and gratitude of Czech Methodists for the Mother Church in America and speaking of the sacred ties which bind Methodism to the land of John Hus and their brethren in Czechoslovakia.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

Auxiliaries in the Mississippi Conference are observing "Anniversary Day." During last week two have reported.

The auxiliary at Lauderdale, Meridian District, entertained at the church with Mesdames Mary L. Rush and M. L. McKunion as hostesses. Following the Council program, dainty refreshments were served.

The hostesses for the anniversary day party of the Lucedale auxiliary, Seashore District, were Mesdames McEachern, Bristow, Ward, Hinson, Goff and Vise. Following the program seven members of the auxiliary brought in a huge white anniversary cake with twenty-five lighted tapers on it. The following, who presented the cake and who have been members of the society for twenty-five years, are: Mesdames W. H. Lewis, M. S. Ratliff, L. G. Sellers, J. L. Hammond, J. B. Hinson, S. E. McEachern and Nettie Rae. Refreshment were served.

quarters, 706 Church Street, Nashville, Tenn. It is free).

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church of Batesville, Miss., is well organized and functioning nicely under the leadership of Mrs. M. E. Jarrett, who has been president for the past two years. On the first Monday of each month we meet at the church with our Business Literary program which is well planned and well presented. Each third Monday we meet for our Social Study program in different homes; study some required book, have a fellowship period and partake of dainty refreshments. We are now studying "Suzuka Looks at Japan," and we have just finished a course on Japan in our Children's Work, a fact which makes the book more interesting for some of us. We have a Children's Division which meets at 7 o'clock each Sunday evening. We also have a Cradle Roll Superintendent. We are very proud of our "Spiritual Life Group" work. For the past quarter we have met in the homes of the members who could not attend Sunday school nor missionary society regularly, and we have studied with them the Lord's Prayer as given in the Sunday School Magazine. The ladies seemed to enjoy the study and gladly took part on the program. Mrs. Hartsfield, our pastor's wife, is chairman of this committee. Next quarter we shall meet at the church and study one of the required books. We have done some outstanding work to make money for our society, such as a musical by Mrs. Martin and Miss Ruth McNeill, from Ole, Miss.; birthday dollars, the selling of California Products and Flavoring. We are most interested in Octagon Coupons. We entertained the last zone meeting, which was characterized by the attendance and the unusual program. Mrs. G. H. Hay, of Davis Chapel, is our new zone chairman, and is rendering good service.

The above resume comes from Mrs. Will Marshall, of Batesville. It represents the work of that auxiliary for the past quarter. The following report is sent in by the Starkville Publicity Superintendent and represents the main features of their work during the past quarter. This checking up on the work by quarters establishes clear thinking and lets no goals get by an auxiliary.

A delegate was sent in April to Greenville to attend the North Mississippi Conference. The Annual Missionary Conference for Columbus District was held in Starkville. The Circles have completed the Home Mission Study Book, "Orientals in American Life," and are now studying the Bible Study book, "The Prophet of Israel."

The C. S. R. group has done splendid work in the cotton mill village, also with the colored people. This group sponsored a poster contest in the eighth grade, the subject being "The Effects of Alcohol."

The leaflets with the Outlook programs have been presented each month and the news from the Conference Bulletin has been given at each business meeting.

Our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Melville Johnson, with four members from the Woman's Missionary Society, attended the Leadership Training School held at Grenada College this month.

We have helped send three colored women to the Leadership Training School at Holly Springs.

Plans are being made to start our Daily Vacation Bible School early in July. We have adopted an orphan for the year.

JOINT QUARTERLY CONFERENCES

Dr. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of the Greenwood District, in accordance with the consent by vote in each of the second quarterly conferences called the quarterly conference of Webb and Sumner, Tutwiler, Drew, Ruleville and Doddsville and Sunflower to meet in their third quarterly conference session in a group at Ruleville, Miss., Tuesday, June 25.

Every church was well represented, every pastor present and several visitors besides the officials. There were seventy-five registered. Brother McIlwain preached a splendid sermon at eleven o'clock after which lunch was served at the community home. The visiting groups brought basket lunches and the Ruleville ladies added chicken pie, ice tea, cake and cream. The hour spent in eating and fellowship was delightful.

After lunch a laymen's service was held in the church, presided over by Mr. E. A. Turner, Greenville District lay leader. Judge Percy Bell delivered a most interesting address. Judge Bell is held in very high esteem in this section and his address was much appreciated.

The reports which were given in the business session after the address were very encouraging. There was not a pessimistic note in any of them. The program of the church is being carried out with commendable zeal. The Sunday school reports and reports of young people's work indicate a very satisfactory condition. I doubt that any group of five charges will make a better report on finances than were made in this group of conferences. Every one of these pastors reported the quota of subscriptions to New Orleans Christian Advocate secured and some over subscribed.

Such laymen as Turner from Tutwiler, Johnson from Doddsville, Sledge from Sunflower, Cato from Webb and Dr. Booth from Drew and their faithful collaborators on the official boards of this group know how to surmount difficulties and succeed. Every W. M. S. of these charges was represented and brought most encouraging messages from their auxiliaries. One of the benefits of these group conferences is that the presiding elder can now visit these charges on a wholly spiritual mission and be more helpful in his social contacts. All of my doubts as to the wisdom of holding several quarterly conferences in a group session the third quarter are dissipated.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 14

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

NAOMI (A WOMAN OF FAITH AND COURAGE)

The book of Ruth has been called the most beautiful idyl in history. Beginning with a famine-stricken family, it follows them through exile, romance, bereavement, poverty—three widows under one roof. Then, Naomi the mother-in-law determines to return to her homeland, Judah. Evidently nothing in Moab could be as attractive to her as the worship of Jehovah and association with his people. Years spent among pagans and a triple bereavement had not quenched her faith in God nor cooled her desire to dwell once more with her own. The fact that her Moabitish daughter-in-law desired to follow her is a great tribute to her lofty character and unselfish devotion. Knowing the difficult journey and the unpromising environment of a narrowly Jewish community, she besought them to return to Moab. With three hearts crushed by a common sorrow and welded by a common love, it was not easy to listen to the voice of calm reasoning. Orpah listened, wept, kissed Naomi goodbye, and discreetly returned. Ruth was made of sterner stuff. Dearest than all the ties of kindred and friends were Naomi and Naomi's God. For these she dared the dangerous journey and the possible intolerance of a strange people.

Her solemn vows of loyalty to Naomi have come down to us as one of the most beautiful declarations of devotion in history. Like Israel, she "went forth to go," and she went. There was no turning her back.

Bethlehem was stirred by the arrival of the pilgrims. The inquiries of old friends elicited from Naomi a tale of woe and complaint that hardly does her justice. Back at the old home, she was overcome by depression. Nothing seemed so changed as herself. Greetings over and inquiries done, the gossiping neighbors left the two lonely and helpless widows to shift for themselves or starve.

It was then that Ruth "went out to work." All good is of God, and surely the God who had guided her from the plains of Moab led her to fields of Boaz to glean, and another lofty character is introduced. This noble and generous kinsman of Naomi was not slow to note the comely person and commendable diligence of the Moabite gleaner. Learning from his foreman who she was, he directed her to continue in his fields and instructed the men to leave plenty of scattered grain for her to gather. The report of the day's incidents to Naomi disclosed to her experienced mind a budding romance which perhaps neither of the principals as yet suspected, and she was not slow nor diffident in bringing it to a climax. The heart of the princely landlord having been won by Ruth, he hastens to comply with Jewish custom and redeem the land of Naomi and Elimelek and to marry Ruth, the next of kin having declined to make the purchase. Their first-born son was laid in Naomi's bosom and the neighbors, no longer aloof, congratulated her on the return of love, prosperity and happiness, and the book closes with the much buffeted and bereaved grandmother coming into an estate her loyalty and devotion richly deserved.

Thus in a time when sectarian bigotry and national prejudice ran at fever heat among the Jews was a Gentile bloodstream introduced into great King David's line, and into the line of him who was called David's son. And so in the providence of God was one more lesson given the human family in that greatest art in the world—the art of living together. One views the racial, national, and religious differences and bickerings of our day, and cries: O Lord, how long? Have we traveled as far as we sometimes think?

STATUS OF WOMEN IN THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL, CHURCH, SOUTH

In 1926 the Woman's Missionary Council set up a standing committee on status of women in the church with the purpose of studying this subject in all of its relationships, viz: Women in the home, education, industry, politics, government, economics and the Church and with a further conviction that woman's status in none of the aforementioned situations was altogether Christian.

To this end the members of this committee from quadrennium to quadrennium have continued their research and studying, looking toward better conditions for women in every land and in every phase of their life. But the work of the committee has given added emphasis to the status of women in the church and especially in our own Southern Methodism, feeling that intelligence, personality, loyalty, devotion, consecration and service know no sex.

We are not interested primarily for a place or in recognition for ourselves but for an ever increasing opportunity and an enlarged place in which to serve and use the talents of Christian personality which are God given. We are not concerned about a place for women just because we are women but because we believe that Christian women have a responsibility and a contribution to make to the Kingdom of God and that responsibility can be best met and its contribution fully made when our status in the Church of Jesus Christ is fully Christian.

The study of the status of women should claim the attention of every thinking woman regardless of her particular interest in the work of women in any field of endeavor, but we believe it to be especially interesting to Christian women. In every study book which treats of other lands, there is without fail a chapter on the status of woman and we have come too far along the trail of civilization to fail to be concerned about woman's progress and place in the onward march of the world. But the paramount interest of Church women should be a Christian status for all women.

The personnel of the Woman's Missionary Council, of the conferences and auxiliary societies and the women leaders in all of our local churches, is composed of women eligible to such places of leadership and responsibility. They, themselves, by their acceptance of office and leadership have endorsed the opinion of this committee that women may serve and contribute largely to the Kingdom of God. Their very positions evidence their commitment to this work.

And yet it is very evident that there is an erroneous conception of the work and aims of the status committee. Some have interpreted the whole work and aim of this group in terms of clergy rights for women. This is decidedly in error as this is only a phase and if wholly deleted, the committee would still be necessary and its work large and interesting. We believe that Christian women are called by God to serve Him and for that reason he endowed them with talents, abilities and capacities and for the stewardship of these they shall render an account and with these they may achieve and creditably assume places of leadership in the Church and may go on to an ever enlarging scope of usefulness. This is the chief interest and aim of the Council standing committee on status of women.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

II Kings 6:16—He answered, Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.

The sixth chapter of second Kings reveals the friendly relation that existed between Elisha and the king of Israel, probably Joram. The prophet was a frequent visitor to the capital and a trusted counsellor. It is a safeguard for any nation when God's prophets are heard. A tragic fate awaits any land when the prophet is not heeded.

Elisha was more to Israel than an army. Elisha had warned Joram many times of the danger of raids by the king of Syria. When the king of Syria heard of Elisha's gift of prophetic insight and of his intervention, the king sent an army to Dothan to capture the prophet. By night the army compassed the city. "And when the servant of the man of God was risen early, and gone forth, behold, an host compassed the city both with horses and chariots. And his servant said unto him, 'Alas, my master, how shall we do?' And he answered, 'Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them.'" Note the strictly contrasted pictures of the lad and his master. The servant represents the despair of sense, the prophet represents the confidence of faith. The servant's passionate exclamation was most natural. Fear darkens to bewildered helplessness. Those who see only the enemies and visible dangers that beset life are paralyzed. But in the midst of the servant's alarm, the calmness of the prophet stands out.

Elisha prayed, "Lord, open his eyes that he may see." "And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." Elisha did not pray for the heavenly guards to come. They were already there. Elisha did pray the servant would see them. God is always near, yet we look so constantly at the things seen that we have no sight for the unseen. Worldliness, sin, unbelief, sense and its trifles, blind the eyes of the mind. The truest vision is the vision of faith.

The story of this intrepid soul facing the unequal struggle of the man of God against the world belongs to the ages. On the surface it was an unequal struggle. A lone defenseless man was arrayed against overwhelming forces. But the Bible reveals an added dimension. The Book reveals the spiritual factors.

The man of God always faces an apparently unequal struggle. An unseeing world is arrayed against him. But the world's progress has always been made when man dared to stand alone with God. The Christian need not stand in desperation and despair. The Christian brave enough to stand with God serves the purposes of God. The forces that are with Christians are greater than those against them. The forces of truth and justice and mercy must eventually sweep the field. God stands with the forces of right.

The lights of Broadway may flash, but in the end, it is the eternal stars to which we must turn for our comfort and guidance.

Fearlessness cannot be generated by talk. Courage is born of convictions nurtured in the intense reality of God.

PRAYER

Our Father, we pray Thee that Thou wilt so reveal Thyself that Thou wilt be as clear as the light of day to our souls. May our eyes be open to the eternal realities. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Therefore we pray that we may live so close to Jesus Christ that we may ever be sure of the eternal, invisible things. "They that are with us are more than they that are against us." "It is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom." In this assurance, may we keep the faith and continue the journey and fight the good fight of faith. We ask in Jesus' name.

STATE FARM

Dear Advocate: Permit me to make due acknowledgement to those who have been contributing literature to our boys at Parchman. I want to thank every one who has sent in anything for this splendid help! Our boys up here like to read the same things we read at home, and if you have Popular Magazines which you have read we shall appreciate them as well as the Sunday school literature. We have a partial list of those who responded recently to our call for help, and we give it as we have been able to preserve it.

The names are as follows: Mrs. Truesdale, Ofahoma, Miss.; Mrs. Octavia Hall, Meridian, Miss.; Mrs. J. F. Hollinger, Meadville, Miss.; Mrs. J. S. Callaway, Ellisville, Miss.; Mrs. G. L. Hawkins, Hattiesburg, Miss. For these and many more we sincerely give thanks to Almighty God for their kindness, we again, remind you that we are speaking for those who cannot speak for themselves. To every one of you let me remind you of our Master's words: "I was in prison and ye came unto me." You can really come in the spirit of the Master, to these boys, with your helpfulness! May God bless you, and remember us at a Throne of Grace. We want to make somebody's burden just a bit lighter, for we have broken hearts up here, and others are breaking!

Yours, in the love and service of Jesus Christ.

In Memoriam

IN MEMORY OF MOTHER

God, in His own kind and gracious way, saw fit to give to us a wonderful mother and, thereby hedged us about and surrounded us with a great witness who always testified to us concerning our Lord. God permitted her to be with us for many years and in those years we were tremendously blessed by her wonderful presence and counsel. Always a great Christian; always a lover of her church, the Methodist; always ready to do whatever she could to make everyone happy, Mother, we know, was a benediction to all whom she contacted. She has been away a year now and we wondered how we could bear such separation, but we remember His Word says, "As thy days are, so shall thy strength be"—thus has it been.

Mother was one of the great mothers of the age, of any age, for she was a blessed mother. Yes, her children rise up and call her blessed. She is really not gone, not really, for we see her in everything that is lovely, everything that is beautiful and everything that is winsome and pure. Said she, when she was being translated to be with Him: "I'm ready to go." There was a reason for this, and we find it couched in the words of Oxenham:

And death itself, to her, was but
The wider opening to the door
That had been opening, more and more,
Through all her life, and ne'er was shut.

And never shall be shut. She left
The door ajar for you and me;
And looking after her, we see
The glory shining through the cleft.

(Signed)

Resolutions of Condolence On the Death of a Member of the Har- mony Chapel Sunday School

Whereas, it has seemed good to the Almighty Disposer of events to remove from our midst our late worthy and much beloved member, Mildred Foster, and Whereas, the intimate relations long held by the deceased with the members of this Sunday school render it proper that we should place upon record an appreciation of her services and of her merits as a member. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we deplore the loss of Mildred Foster with deep feelings of regret softened only by the confident hope that her spirit is with those who, having fought the good fight here are enjoying perfect happiness in a better world,

Resolved, that we tender to her afflicted father, mother, brothers, sisters, and other relatives our sincere condolence, and our earnest sympathy in their affliction at the loss of one who was a devoted member and a sweet and lovely character. And be it further

Resolved, that a copy of the foregoing resolutions be spread on the record of our Sunday school; that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and a copy be sent to the bereaved members of the family.

A TRIBUTE TO E. L. CARGILL

By T. F. Glaze

"The Evacuation of an Earthly Temple
—the Epochal Entry Into Heaven"

This old saint from heaven descended to an earthly tabernacle below,
A search for the Holy of Holies, his mission on earth we know.

The Master bore our burdens as none
but an angel could do;

"Nay, nay," said dear old Daddy, "I'll suffer and agonize with you.

I'll shoulder my cross as did Jesus; I'll drink of Golgatha's wine,

I'll enter the approach to the Eternal and invest in glory divine.

I'll prove the faith of the righteous; I'll tap the veins to the heart of the soul, Flooding God's moral vineyard with its fluid more perfect, far purer than gold."

This body was given to shelter the soul and is racked with the deepest of pain.
This tabernacle soon will be vacant, its tent in Heaven again.

Eugene, Brother Cargill or Daddy, as he is lovingly known,

Has proven close relation to Jesus, equal

Lift high Heaven's portals, dear Jesus, his marathon in pain has been run;

He emerges now victorious—another battle for his Master is won.

Though his soul was imprisoned in this Tabernacle and escape impossible seemed,

The angels are breaking the shackles, fast rescuing it for the Master, releasing it spotless and clean.

I see the old tabernacle wither, void of the soul it entombed,

The scars of the saber are upon it, as this servant of God succumbs.

'Tis only a veil to obscure his vision; it soon will be rent in twain,

Heaven's chariot will call for our loved one, where with Jesus God's children remain.

I see him enter the portals of Heaven, so beautiful and fair.

'Tis my own dear mother and Jesus that are waiting to welcome him there.

Hark! 'tis the voice of an angel rejoicing, beseeching, "My Brother, why tarryest thou? Make haste to be with me in glory."

Thou "Messenger of God," when you journey to that home eternal and fair, Tell my dear mother you knew me and loved me. You'll see her; she's there, awaiting us there.

LUCEDALE METHODIST CHURCH

A most successful revival was held at the Lucedale Methodist Church, beginning on May 1, and lasting twelve days.
The Rev. L. J. Power, presiding elder of Seashore District, conducted the services.
Much interest was shown and there were twenty accessions to the church—thirteen of these by faith.

The congregation of this church has recently repaired the roof of the parsonage and completed other needed repairs to porches and inside of the house.

The daily vacation Bible school has just ended after a most interesting eight-day session, held under the capable leadership of Miss Josephine Lewis, the daughter of our pastor. We had an enrollment of ninety-four and an average attendance of sixty-five. Brother Lewis taught the class of Christian stewardship each day. The Woman's missionary auxiliary served refreshment to the pupils and eleven teachers each day.

A CHURCH-WIDE CONFERENCE

Rev. William F. Quillian, D.D.,
Nashville, Tenn.

My dear Dr. Quillian:

You must accept my hearty congratulations upon the program announced for preachers and laymen at the Church-wide conference to be held at Lake Junaluska. Seldom, if ever, have we been offered such an opportunity under conditions so inviting.

I shall gladly co-operate with you in making it possible to draw the attention of the whole Church to those golden hours.

We live in days heavy with opportunity and responsibility, and such seasons will refresh us for the return to our labors.

Thanking you again, and wishing for you the highest and the best, I am

Faithfully yours,

(Signed) Hoyt M. Dobbs.

Morning meditation—Miss Elizabeth McCain, Hammond.

REPORT ON ADVOCATE CIRCULATION CAMPAIGN

With but six days remaining from the date this report was compiled, July 9, until the close of the campaign, July 15, only one of the 19 districts in the territory served by the Advocate has secured its quota of subscriptions. That district is the Hattiesburg, Mississippi Conference, Rev. Victor G. Clifford, Presiding Elder. However, we have encouraging reports from the Presiding Elders of the Meridian, the Brookhaven, the Seashore, the Vicksburg, the Aberdeen, the Greenwood, the Corinth, and the Lake Charles Districts to the effect that their respective pastors are hard at work securing their quotas and that they will be heard from before the campaign closes July 15. And while we have not heard from the other districts we know that they, too, are on the job and we are confidently expecting and preparing for a last minute avalanche of subscriptions during the remaining days of the campaign.

With every pastor doing his proportionate part in presenting the claims of the Advocate during this campaign we can put the Conference organ on a sound financial basis and be in position to better serve Methodism and the Kingdom. May we count on every pastor to do his part?

THE LATE MISS AGNES M. ARTHUR, daughter of the famous author of "The Tongue of Fire," left a bronze lantern which had been in the personal use of John Wesley, and a Latin edition of "The Imitation of Christ," with Mr. Wesley's signature inside. The executors of her estate have turned these over to the Wesley Museum in City Road, London. Their association with Mr. Wesley and with Rev. William Arthur give them a double sacredness.

A NEW VENTURE AT MOODY INSTITUTE is the introduction of a "traveling lectureship" to begin on September 5, of this year. The list of churchmen and teachers announced includes the names of Dr. William Evans, Dr. B. B. Sutcliffe, Dr. H. A. Ironsides, and Dr. Wilbur M. Smith. Each one of this list of pastors and teachers will cover a one-month period. The effect of this arrangement will be to give the students a more direct and practical contact with the problems of religious work.

MUSSOLINI SEIZES BILLIONS in cash from landlords to finance Ethiopian War, is the glaring headline of a morning paper. The story is that Mussolini has seized the rental deposits of helpless tenants all over Italy to finance his war against Abyssinia, and has replaced this vast sum of money by "government bonds." This act is bad enough in the wrong inflicted upon the people, but it is more important as an example of what may be expected of an ambitious and unrestrained dictator. Surely anything that brings about the overturning of constitutional restraints jeopardizes both the liberties and the fortunes of the people.

THE PROPOSED NATURALIZATION OF JAPANESE who enlisted for service with the American forces in the World War, has raised some rather curious and knotty international problems. At the conclusion of the war, Congress passed a special act which seemed to grant citizenship to those who did service under the American flag. Several Japanese in Hawaii took advantage of what they understood to be their privilege under the special act of Congress, and were naturalized by the U. S. Federal Court of the Islands. Later the Supreme Court set aside the action of the court there and held that Congress intended only to shorten the period of probation—not to extend American citizenship to ineligible groups. It appears that the action of the judge in Hawaii amounted to a renunciation of the treaty between the United States and Japan, hence the decision of the Supreme Court.

FEDERAL LOTTERY URGED is the line introducing the proposal of Representative Kenny, Democrat of New Jersey, for the creation of a Federal lottery system as a "painless" method of raising the revenue deficiencies of the country. In the abandon of Congressional thought to the money question, it seems that the moral equation has been completely lost. Perhaps Mr. Kenny thinks that liquor, logomachy, and lottery might be a good slogan for the campaign of his party next year.

DOCTOR ALBERT VAUDREMER, an eminent French bacteriologist, has discovered a positive culture of the leprosy bacillus, the first in medical history, according to announcement recently made before the French Academy of Medicine. This discovery represents seven years of research on the part of Dr. Vaudremer and his young woman assistant, Mlle. Brun. The leprosy bacillus was first isolated by Armauer Hansen, a Norwegian scientist, in 1871. The serum which was exhibited by Dr. Vaudremer was developed from leprosy sufferers, and it is said to destroy the leprosy bacilli within twenty-four hours.

DOCTOR STEVENSON, according to the Registrar General's Decennial Supplement for England and Wales, gives figures for 178 occupational groups, which indicate that beer drinking raises the menace of cancer to an almost alarming figure. The report shows that, while the cancer mortality for the population as a whole is 128.4, the figures for beer-consuming groups rise to an average of 239.3. To state the case concretely, it appears that the consumption of beer practically doubles a person's chance to die with cancer. That is something that should interest people in this day when cancer has become such a threat to human life.

THE CUMMINS COMPANY, pioneers in Diesel engine construction, are said to have a Diesel-powered passenger car almost perfected. According to the New Outlook, a member of the Company recently left New York for a trip to Los Angeles, in one of these cars. The Company expects to get forty miles to the gallon of oil consumed, and that the total fuel cost of the trip across the continent will not exceed eight dollars. If the Diesel-powered car can be made successful and its construction brought down to a reasonable cost, as now seems probable, it may give gasoline companies something to think about beside the construction of fancy filling-stations for dispensing gasoline at a prohibitive price.

OUR PROGRESSIVE GENERATION

Most men are inclined to think that our generation has left the slow and plodding way of our fathers hopelessly behind. If we look up at the airplane, or out into the street at the thousands of motor cars which have replaced the ox cart or the mule, we confess that there is some justification for the attitude of pride. But one glance at the headlines of the New Orleans Christian Advocate of eighty-four years ago will certainly tend to promote humility among Methodist people. Indeed some of it is so modern that we almost felt like we were fundamentalists in spite of ourselves. We find on those yellowed pages such discussions as these: Methodist Reforms—Episcopacy, the Presiding Eldership, and the Time Limit. Opposition to Transfers. Centenary College confers the D.D. Degree on the President of Emory and Henry College, and the LL.D. Degree on Judge William L. Sharkey and Solomon W. Downs. The Church Thermometer—the Prayer-meeting. Or to take a glance at the social aspect of church relations—Bishop Capers on Politics. Liquor License Law. Muzzling the Press. Or take the record of common events—Arrival of the Steamer Europa. Most of us will feel much at home with such a bill-of-fare, and we can say that "Dad" may have died a long while ago, but his grave is evidently by the side of our twentieth century road. We have grown away from the controversial and speculative type of discussion. There were many articles on "Popery," and on such topics as Heavenly Recognition. From such speculative and ecclesiastical discussions, we have drifted toward the practical; but even there our triumph is robbed of completeness by reason of the fact that the New Orleans Advocate was in a campaign eighty-three years ago, and the slogan of the campaign was "Ten Thousand Subscribers." After all, it is more a question of anno Domini than of actual change.

A SHOT ACROSS THE BOW OF GEORGIA METHODISM

We have just received an appeal in behalf of Wesley Memorial Church, Atlanta, which is signed by twenty-three members of the Executive Committee of the National United Committee for Law Enforcement, a national organization with New York and Washington headquarters. The list of signers includes practically all of the outstanding Christian denominations of the country—Catholic and Protestant. The appeal states the case fully, but we do not go into that further than to say that it appears to be a concerted effort of the enemies of Temperance in Georgia to humiliate the Methodists for their part in the recent campaign in which the wet cause went down in defeat. The appeal is made for every minister and Methodist, who can do so, to send one dollar or more to H. Y. McCord, Jr., Treasurer, Wesley Memorial Committee, Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Georgia. This should be done at once, for settlement must be made by August 1. We know the Church and its membership. It is a valuable property, and doubly valuable to the Methodists of the Georgia capital. It is a memorial to the Founder of Methodism in the only American State with which he had contact, and the building was made possible by the generosity of the late Mr. Asa Candler. The wealthier people have moved out to residential churches and have left a church membership who are not able to discharge the debt which remains upon the building. It may be that the finances have not been wisely handled in the past, but that is a question aside. A shot has been fired across the bow of Georgia Methodism, and the property must be saved for the church. We are making our own contribution. We know the church from top to bottom and the membership that compose it. We urge the Christian people throughout this section to help our Georgia friends in a situation which they face as a consequence of their devotion to righteousness and Temperance. Send all contributions to H. Y. McCord, Jr., Treasurer, Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Georgia. Do it at once!

REV. HENRY H. AHRENS PASSES

Just as we were preparing to go to press with this issue of the Advocate, a telephone message announcing the death of Rev. Henry H. Ahrens was received. He died peacefully and triumphantly at 9:45 Monday morning, and the funeral services were held at Rayne Memorial Church Tuesday morning, Rev. W. W. Holmes, Rev. J. G. Snelling, and Rev. W. L. Duren officiating. A fuller notice will appear next week.

PHYSICIAN, HEAL THYSELF

Doctor Sidney L. Gulick, a lifelong friend of Japan, has a very significant statement in his book, "Toward Understanding Japan." It is an interpretation of Japan and her people which we would do well to ponder seriously, not more for understanding the Japanese people, than for realizing the part we may unwittingly have in creating problems in the Far East. He describes Japan as, "An ambitious, intelligent, resourceful people, struggling under tragic limitations of nature and of international conditions, guided by the heritage of an ancient past, and stimulated by the infectious example of the imperialistic nations of the west." It would not be easy to construct a sentence which might be more descriptive of the facts, or of wider international implications. If one is disposed to charge Japan's aggressiveness to national vanity and to pride in her pagan past, one should certainly be willing to place alongside of that the stimulating example of the great Christian nations of the west. It should not be forgotten that, because of that stimulation, we may have contributed in no small degree to the national attitude which led Japan to annex the Hermit Kingdom, Korea, to overrun Manchuria, and to cast her shadow across that age-old barrier of the Celestial Empire, the Great Wall. If the international relations of the Christian nations of the west might be harmonized with our assumptions of virtue, it would add a touch of grace to our attitude toward the Orient and its problems; and a consistent political attitude would add much to the authority of the missionary manifesto of the western Church. The greatness of the Christian message will not be so convincing to the oriental mind as it should be until our own social and national attitudes shall be brought into harmony with the lofty claims of our civilization. Japan needs our sympathy and our confidence; and, along with these, it needs the stimulation of an unselfish example of national good will. Such an example would prove a far more potent influence for the promotion of the peace of the Far East than the grim spectacle of a great battle-fleet returning from its manoeuvres in the Pacific Ocean.

THE SPEECH OF JESUS

(The Christian World)

"The Gospels begin," writes Dr. T. R. Glover in "The Ancient World" (Cambridge University Press. 7s. 6d.), "by showing us a man with ideas of His own, which He wishes men to realize and adopt. If the word did not in English suggest so much of dullness and failure, we might call Him, as men of His day did, a teacher."

"No one ever understood the work, the art, of the teacher better. He, as the Greeks said of the poets they admired, did the right thing and knew why He did it. His first task was to win attention, and we read that never man spoke like this Man; men were astonished at the charm with which he spoke. He was simple, and people could follow Him. Indeed, the French thinker, Pascal, has put it that Jesus speaks so simply about the deepest things that you might almost imagine He had never thought about them. Abstract nouns of the most dismal kind fill the books of the later Greeks, even of such great men as Ploybius and Longinus; but Jesus did without abstract nouns. He never speaks, like the Greeks, of 'the divine' (in the neuter) or of 'the divine goodness' or 'fatherhood'; He says plainly 'God' or 'your Heavenly Father.' He never talks, like modern men, of 'humanity' or 'social righteousness'; He says 'thy brother' or 'thy neighbour.' His speech, as reported, is singularly free from adjectives, as indeed the Gospels are; He checked a young man who called Him 'good Master.' He spoke—and perhaps He thought—in pictures; and His pictures are realistic. Eagles in His parables do not plant trees in market places; lost sheep do not argue, they are sheep and not philosophers in sheep's clothing. He drives to the actual, and makes men look at it—and then take a second look, for it somehow is linked up with something deeper, something eternal; but it is still the real thing, the thing that you can see, though you never thought about it before."

ARCHEOLOGY vs. DESTRUCTIVE CRITICISM

By H. N. Pharr

The elaborate Code of Hamurabi, engraved upon a stone stele 400 years before Moses, enables us to understand how Abraham permitted Sarah to deal harshly with Hagar and Ishmael. We are convinced also that Moses, under Jehovah's guidance, used this same code as the basis of the laws for Israel. As in numerous other instances the ancient Hebrew displayed a genius for appropriating the best from the civilization of his polytheistic neighbors and ennobling and elevating it to a higher plane of monotheistic conception. The most startling recent development, however, was the discovery of two sets of cuneiform tablets, inscribed in only 27 characters, found in widely separated sections. To the Sinaitic peninsula alphabetical inscriptions has been assigned dates varying from 1850 to 1800 B. C. (contemporary with Joseph) and to the Ras Shamra (Syria) inscriptions dates of from 1400 to 1350 B. C. (contemporary with Joshua). From these and other evidences it would seem man has had means of recording history since the most remote periods of antiquity.

II

The Museum Journal of Philadelphia, in its 1928 issues, describes and illustrates the remarkable discoveries made in the excavations of Ur of the Chaldees, by the University of Pennsylvania expeditions. These should convince the most skeptical that the descendants of Ham were not only responsible for the civilizations of Egypt and immediately adjacent lands but that in Mesopotamia and Canaan they reached a much higher state of development than hitherto considered possible. The Sumerians and Acadians, as today termed, were finally overcome by, and amalgamated with the Semites, in forming the many small nationalities known as Canaanites.

III

The evolutionary theory of religion denies any original divine revelation to man and claims the worship of animals and evil spirits preceeded all other forms. Because the plural (Elohim) of the Hebrew El (God) occurs in the first verse of Genesis, this has been declared to be a clear reflection of early polytheistic belief. How much more in keeping with the spirit of the Scriptures it would be to see in the interchangeable use of the singular and plural for the Deity in these opening chapters a foreshadowing of the doctrine of the Holy Trinity.

Dr. Langton says his intensive study of cuneiform tablets convinces him that "the history of the oldest religion of man is a rapid decline from Monotheism to Polytheism and widespread belief in Evil Spirits." He adds that before 2000 B. C. in Babylon frequent mention was made of "a Heaven for the righteous, where is the Bread and Water of Life."

The Ras Shamra inscriptions (written at time of conquest of Canaan) describe ceremonial rituals and liturgies in which Marston says "the technical terms in archaic Hebrew are identical with similar terms in the original of the Bible." The Trespass, Peace, Wave and Tribute Offerings are named with others familiar to Bible readers. "The Divine Names El and Elohim also appear on these tablets. The name Yah (Jehovah) also occurs." These terms must have been borrowed from the religion of the Israelites or vice versa.

IV

The rule of the Hyksos Kings was a period of great humiliation to native Egyptians and consequently there was no good reason for the Egyptian historian, Manetho, to exaggerate its duration. The sober judgment of skilled archeologists today is that it lasted nearer 700 than 500 years. In this respect, therefore, there can be no conflict between Egyptian history and the account of Joseph and the bondage of Israel in Egypt.

V

The recent findings in the excavation of Jericho furnished the missing clues to definitely determine the date of the Exodus and other related events. The art of determining certain known periods of civilization by broken pottery and pot shreds has been reduced to an almost exact science. In addition, whenever and wherever the Egyptians were dominant, another valuable clue is the presence of royal scarabs, which bore the cartouche of the reigning Pharaohs.

All clues at Jericho indicated a much earlier date for its destruction than hitherto considered probable. Instead of Rameses II (1295-1229 B. C.) being the Pharaoh of the Oppression and Menephthah (1229-1210) the Pharaoh of the Exodus, Thotmes III (1501-1447) and Amenhetep II (1447-1423) are proved to have been the rulers during these respective periods in Israel's history. The evidence is rather conclusive also that an earthquake was the physical means used by Jehovah to cause the wall to fall "down flat." Marston entertainingly proves how practically every detail of the biblical account has been substantial, and that Bishop Usher's date is just about 50 years too early. It is much easier now to reconcile Menehthah's reference to Israel and to Asher (in the light of the Jericho findings) on his monuments and to the frequent references to the Habiru (presumably Hebrews) invasion of Canaan on the Tel el Amarna tablets, when the petty kings of that country were appealing to their overlord, Amenhetep III, for military assistance, which was never sent. The scarabs of Amenhetep III were found in the tombs in Jericho. No scarabs of later Pharaohs were discovered. This and other strong evidences indicated Amenhetep III as ruler at the time of Jericho's fall.

It is interesting to note how closely other biblical details correspond with Egyptian history on this hypothesis. Thotmes I (1539-1514) would have been on the throne when Moses was born. His daughter, Princess Hathepsut, has been termed the Queen Elizabeth of Egyptian history. From royal parentage on both sides she would have succeeded her father, if law and custom had permitted. She was Regent for Thotmes II, her minor brother, thirteen years and for Thotmes III, her other brother, fifteen years. Josephus calls her Thermuthis, as the rescuer of Moses. Amenset, Mesphra and Hatasu were other names for her, depending upon the translator. Marston says "If Moses had been Hathepsut's favorite, he had little mercy to expect from Thotmes III. For, after her death, this Pharaoh so detested her memory, that he destroyed or defaced her monuments." It has always seemed strange to me that Moses, a recognized prince of the Egyptian Court, would have to flee into voluntary exile, for the mere killing of a labor foreman. The attitude of his foster brother, on the throne, easily explains his fear.

Several other coincidences are quite striking. (a) During the regency there were no invasions of Palestine. Josephus says Moses led a military expedition into Ethiopia (the present threatened scene of warfare). "After Hathepsut's death Thotmes III commenced and carried out a systematic series of invasions of Palestine and Syria, such as no Pharaoh before or after ever achieved." (b) The wife of Amenhetep III, Queen Tiy, was the mother of the Pharaoh who renounced the polytheistic worship of Amen and adopted a form of monotheistic worship of Aten, the Sun God. The tablets found at Tel el Amarna, his new capital, confirm this. He changed his name from Amenhetep (IV) to Akhen-aten. There is strong suspicion that his mother and also his wife, Queen Noferete, were of Semitic descent and interested in the religion of Moses. "Anyhow," says Marston, "there is one link between Akhenaten and the Israelites. The 104th Psalm is clearly based upon an Egyptian poem, known as Akhenaten's hymn, or of course, vice versa." This religious policy was reversed, however, by his son-in-law, well known today as "King Tut." He changed the aten in his name to amen (Tutank-amen).

(c) The Hornet was the badge of Thotmes III and his successors. Read Ex. XXIII, 28-30, Duet. VII, 20 and Joshua XXIV, 12. Why these veiled allusions to Egypt? Marston answers "Egypt—figures under the guise of a hornet—because she was but an instrument of the Lord God; and because all direct illusions to her aid would dim the glory of the Exodus."

The outcome of the Jericho discoveries will be the rewriting of that portion of Egyptian history dealing with the Exodus and the shifting of the destructive critics to less exposed positions.

"God moves in mysterious ways, his wonders to perform."

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies, D.D.

The faith of some of our people is being disturbed by reading pamphlets and books distributed among them, concerning the second coming of Christ and his millennial reign on earth. Some of the teachers and advocates of this adventism are using the radio for the purpose of propagating their fanciful doctrine. I shall not attempt in this brief signal a refutation of their lengthy arguments and legalistic interpretation of Scripture and symbolic numbers but simply to state what seems to my mind a reasonable and general scriptural view of the subject. The faith that the Old Book teaches is the faith that entrusts the Master in all things pertaining to spirit, life here and life hereafter. It covers two worlds and bridges the charm between the two. Our Lord expressly told his disciples that no man might know the day of his coming. That it would be like the lightning flashing through the whole heavens so that there could not be any doubt about it. Men can calculate the coming of eclipses or measure the distances of remote suns and stars, but no Newton has yet arisen, who is wise enough to formulate a calendar on the vast movements of Christ's Kingdom. So when these chimerical apostles cry "Lo Here," and "Lo There" believe them not, for the times and seasons as well as the mystical numbers are in the Father's keeping. As for me, I am perfectly willing for Him to attend to His own affairs and I have no authority to meddle therewith. In fact the measure of his kingdom given to us, is just about as much or a bit more sufficient to engage our present activities.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

exactly the same motive as that which promoted it in the South—the profit motive. And there is no more defence for the connection of American shipping with the Barbary coast than there is for the literature and the slave-block in the South.

The race prejudice so often charged to the South is a fact which one may confess with all frankness; for it is by no means an exclusive trait or fault of that section. It is the manifestation of a feeling which all sections share and which no statute can remove. Mr. Lincoln is quoted as saying, in the debate with Mr. Douglass, in 1858, that there were physical differences between the two races which would forever forbid them living together on terms of political and social equality. He also advocated the colonization of the Negroes outside the United States; and in his message to Congress in December, 1862, he recommended the colonization of free Negroes in South America. It is clear that Mr. Lincoln sensed an attitude which was not wholly provincial, and that he recognized it as a serious problem. The Constitution, under which the State of Oregon was admitted, forbade slavery; but it provided that: "No free Negro or mulatto not residing in this state at the adoption of this Constitution, shall come, reside or be within this State or hold any real estate or make any contract or maintain any suit therein; and the legislative assembly shall provide penal laws for the removal by public officers of all such free Negroes and mulattoes and for their effectual exclusion from the State." Some years ago the author heard a distinguished speaker from the North say to an assembly of Negroes: "Your people have pushed over into our Northern cities by hundreds and by thousands and we know you; I am frank to say to you that the Southern people are a great deal more fond of you than we are." This was no bald word of discouragement; for it was balanced immediately by the statement that it was a day of opportunity as great as the difficulty. But one does not have to be told that the form in which the words were cast indicates a racial attitude, North and South, which constitutes one of the real problems of American social and political life. The Japanese trouble which occurred in California a few years ago is a case in point; and the incident which occurred more recently in Detroit over the entertainment of a student group including Negroes as well as whites, is another of many that might be cited.

The point in all this is that the responsibility for slavery and for racial antipathies is not a crime which rests upon any particular section of the country, nor does it apply to a single race. The South utilized slavery as an agricultural asset; and, through the slave trade, the North turned the needs of the South into a commercial resource, and we share together the feeling and the attitude of "Nordic superiority." The slavery legislation of the different sections of the country might be contrasted at length, but we are not interested so much with statutes as with attitudes and with the general position on the issue itself.

The full significance of the slavery compromises which were written into the Constitution did not begin to appear until the first session of the eighth Congress, when a large majority of the representatives from New England vigorously opposed the appropriation for carrying out the plighted faith of the Government in the purchase of the Territory of Louisiana. The chief contention was that it was slave territory and its formation into states would disturb the equalities of the political partnership of states established by the terms of the Constitution. There were always, and in all sections, some who addressed themselves to the moral aspects of the issue; but, to the minds of the vast majority, the issues involved were political and economic rather than social or moral. In 1811 this tension was developed again in the debate over the admission of Louisiana into the sisterhood of states. Josiah Quincy of Massachusetts argued that the influence of slave votes upon the political power of the eastern portion of the country, and the anticipated transmission of power to the west were subjects of great jealousy to some of the best patriots in the Northern and Eastern states at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and these patriots, if they had foreseen that the population beyond the Mississippi was to be brought into Congress, to frame our laws, control our rights, and decide our destiny, would not for one moment have listened to it. He then said that they knew that when the weight of particular sections of a confederacy were greatly unequal the resulting power would be abused; and that it was not in the nature of man to exercise it with moderation. It was political power of which they were jealous, and not the moral aspects of slavery. They neither feared the extension of slavery, nor the moral consequences of it; but they feared the abuse of power by the major fraction of the confederation.

The debates of the Convention which framed the Constitution show that there was no manifest conviction as to the crime of slavery. Pinckney of South Carolina said, "If slavery be wrong, it is justified by the example of all the world," and that may be taken as typical of Southern political opinion on the subject.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

Zone No. 5 of the Alexandria District held a most interesting meeting at Rochelle on June 11, with the zone leader, Mrs H. U. Dunford, presiding.

After the communion service Rev. J. E. Hearne, of Olla, gave the devotional. Mrs. R. H. Adams, the local president, extended a welcome to the guests to which Mrs. Homer Given responded. The speakers of the morning session were Mrs. L. A. Sims, district secretary; Deaconess Pearlye Maye Kelly of McDonnell School, Mrs. R. F. Harrell and Mrs. B. C. Taylor.

Mrs. Dunford was presented with a life membership in appreciation of her services as president of the Rochelle auxiliary for three years and as zone leader.

A playlet entitled "The Parable of the Talents" was given by three junior life members and one adult life member.

After an appetizing luncheon and social hour Mrs. W. T. Cunningham led the worship period. Another playlet entitled "My Heritage" was presented which ended with a poster parade, carrying out the thought of the twenty-fifth anniversary.

The meeting was closed with a pledge service conducted by six Rochelle ladies representing Faith, Loyalty, Patience, Sympathy, Wisdom and Love. The service ended with the singing of the hymn "Oh, Jesus I Have Promised." Following the program a large anniversary cake bearing twenty-five candles was cut and served with punch to the members and visitors.

The Plaquemine auxiliary of the Baton Rouge District held their July meeting at the church with Mrs. Robert Ingram as hostess.

The meeting opened with prayer by Mrs. Mark Arnold and papers on "Missionary work in Korea" were read by Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Lee. Miss Etta Obler added to the occasion with a number of musical selections. A social hour followed.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The Mission Study Leaders' Class, at the Pastors' School, Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi, July 1-7, which was sponsored by the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society, was most successful, being the first of its kind to be conducted in this conference.

"That Other America" by John A. McKay, taught by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, was unusually interesting.

Forty women attended the class, thirty-five of them taking credit. Among the officers of the conference present were: Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, of Quitman, president; Mrs. Paul Arrington, Magee, secretary of children's work; and the following district secretaries: Mrs. L. J. Power, Seashore; Mrs. D. L. St. John, Meridian; Mrs. A. S. Oliver, Brookhaven; Mrs. T. H. Fore, Vicksburg. Four women from the Louisiana Conference attended: Mesdames R. L. Kinchen, D. W. Poole, V. D. Morris, and W. L. Duren.

At the close of the course, the members of the class presented Mrs. Lipscomb with a copy of the new edition of the Methodist hymnal, inscribed with her name.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Silver Anniversary of Woman's Missionary Society

At the home of Mrs. Walter Sillers, Jr., on Monday afternoon, July 1, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church was hostess to all church groups in Rosedale. About sixty were in attendance. The occasion was the celebrating of twenty-five years of service for the women of the Southern Methodist Church.

Mrs. Sillers' home was lovely with summer flowers, artistically arranged and offset by sprays of dainty "Queen Anne's Lace." Lovely girls in rainbow tinted dresses were everywhere. The guests were greeted at the door by Miss Kate Scott Patterson and shown into the dining room where punch, cakes, candies, and sandwiches were served in a setting exquisite in daintiness, elegance and beauty.

From the dining room the guests were shown into the living room which was arranged as an assembly room with all the dignity and charm of the home retained. The program was opened by a prayer led by Mrs. Nutt. Miss Glenice Henley, Miss Sara Redding, and Miss Annie Ruth Brister, under the direction of Mrs. Baggett, furnished the music for the afternoon. Mrs. Ernest Moore reviewed the work of the women of the church during the past quarter of a century. The legislative changes in the status of women were pointed out in terms of epochs and the principles and methods that have helped to lead the Woman's Missionary Council in ever widening channels of usefulness were briefly outlined.

The exposition of the years was followed by a short playlet called "Our Heritage" which depicted the need and the call to young women to take up that work that has been handed down to them from their mothers and grandmothers of these past twenty-five years.

The high point of the meeting was an expression from the young daughters to an older member of the auxiliary for her twenty-five years of service. Not only members of the auxiliary but friends in the Methodist Church joined Mrs. Whitesides in presenting Mrs. Lobdell this "Life Membership" in the Woman's Missionary Society, thus making possible a wide extension of service that otherwise might remain purely local.

Miss Redding's group of songs gave just the right tone to the closing moments of the meeting making easily appropriate the usual closing motto.

METHODIST ORPHANS HOME

July, August, September and October are canning, pickling and preserving months. Most provident housekeepers, when so situated, can, preserve and pickle an abundance of vegetables, fruits and pickles for their family for the entire year.

And we know, by the increasing interest which the Methodist people of Mississippi are manifesting in our orphan children here in the home, that all of you, when you are canning, preserving and pickling food for your own families, will want to remember the children of the Church here in the home which you so generously provide for them.

Our superintendent, Fred J. McDonald, advises the executive committee of the board of trustees that the Methodist people are, in increasing numbers, remembering the children here when putting up vegetables, fruit and pickles for their own family, and has thoughtfully suggested that if we would call this to the attention of the people of the Church, every Methodist lady in the state to whom this information was given and who was situated so that she could, would put up a dozen or several dozen cans and jars of vegetables, fruits and pickles for our orphan children down here.

Our superintendent is arranging, with the assistance of the railroads, for the running of the free train during Thanksgiving week this year, and we thought that if we would now, during the canning, preserving and pickling period of the year, call this to your attention, thousands of dozens of cans and jars of vegetables, preserves and pickles would be put up by Methodist ladies over Mississippi and together with other gifts, put on the free train in the Thanksgiving week.

This canned fruit, preserves and pickles will help us so much with the problem of good, wholesome, abundant food for the children, and we know that all that is necessary is that this matter be mentioned, and the result will be several carloads of splendid food, canned preserves and pickles by the busy, generous, industrious Methodist women of Mississippi, as result of their loving interest and the abundant gifts of nature which the seasons are showering on us now.

Please, when you can, preserve and pickle, remember the children in the Methodist Orphans Home in Jackson, and load the cars with these things and other gifts so heavily this coming Thanksgiving that the engine will have a hard time pulling the train over the hill!

Please be sure to pack your boxes carefully to insure against breakage, and please on each box mark for Methodist Orphanage, and put your name and address.

Thanking you for all you have done, and assuring you of our earnest desire to be up and doing, and faithful to these children in our care, we are

REVIVAL MEETING AT LEESVILLE, LA.

The Leesville Methodist Church closed a two-weeks revival meeting on July 7, conducted by Rev. Roland Faulk of New Orleans, and Rev. Carl Lueg of Slidell, La.

Brother Faulk is a brilliant young minister, his messages are deep and inspirational. He possesses a wide vocabulary, a pleasing manner, an appealing delivery, and makes no compromises with sin. The audience from time to time expressed themselves as highly pleased with his uplifting sermons.

Brother Lueg's work among the young people was outstanding. His personality and daily talks were an incentive for lofty aspirations. It is a great satisfaction to know that our boys and girls appreciated the work of one who does not swerve from the path of duty.

No church will make a mistake in securing the services of such splendid young men as Rev. Mr. Faulk and Rev. Mr. Lueg. They get permanent results, and leave the membership with a heart full of longing to live in a larger way.

REV. L. E. CROOKS

Dear Brother Duren: Just a word about myself and wife. We were placed in charge of the Noble and Benson circuit, consisting of five churches in February by our presiding elder, Dr. Sexton. My health has improved wonderfully since last year. I have been preaching twice on Sundays, held one revival meeting, and attended all other pastoral duties. We have recently moved into a brand new parsonage at Converse, which lacks some being finished but have arranged for funds to do that.

But at this writing my dear, good, faithful little wife has fallen a victim of affliction and is now in the hospital in Crowley, La., how serious we do not know yet. You may make mention in Advocate of this short report of my work and troubles at this time that I may have the prayers of my friends and brothers.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 21.

By Dr. J. R. Countliss

DAVID (THE GREAT-HEARTED)

David, descendant of Ruth and Boaz, Israel's greatest king and sweetest singer, possessed many attributes and virtues in addition to the magnanimity stressed in this lesson. His experience sounded every height and depth and his psalms fit every mood of the soul from the full diapason of ecstasy to the minor chords of shame and sorrow, from the mighty chorus in the house of God to the melancholy moan of the lonely individual. Called before Saul, he charmed and soothed the king with the simple lays plucked from his shepherd's harp until the mind and heart of his monarch became clouded and corroded with jealousy. He gave loyal service both at court and on the battle field. His success and popularity angered Saul, who repeatedly sought to take the life of his most distinguished subject, his son's best beloved friend.

This insane enmity and jealousy were at their worst when David and his friend, Abishai, came upon Saul asleep under a barricade of wagons in the midst of his army. Abishai at once saw the hand of providence in their midnight adventure, believed that God had delivered Saul into their hands for execution and asked the privilege of delivering the death blow with Saul's own spear. Magnanimous David chose to wait on the God to whom of right vengeance belongs. His religious principles forbade harm to his king. Not every opportunity is sent of God. One man will question every short cut to personal gain or advantage. Had David's principles controlled his passion, he would have been spared the awful shame and crime of the affair with Bathsheba. It is a pity that the man who held sacred the life of the king could not discern the sacredness of the life of the common soldier whom he sent to the front to die. We may well be thankful that human life has become more sacred, but we have yet to learn that economic weapons are as murderous and deadly as cold steel; that mass duelling is not less criminal than that between individuals. With twentieth century wisdom and skill we devise cunning ways and means to destroy enemies and competitors without getting blood on our hands, but not without stain and guilt in our hearts.

David is at his best in his tribute to Saul and Jonathan. Saul had some noble traits and blessed David with royal favor and honors. He had advanced the material welfare of his people. Jonathan had sacrificed his hope of the throne and risked his life for David, his friend. There is no more beautiful example of self-effacement in human history. David's grief at the downfall of Saul and the death of Jonathan was sincere and noble, and nobly expressed. Great hearts greatly love, greatly suffer, greatly forgive, and greatly appreciate the good in all men. In his best hours David was like God.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE YOUNG PEOPLE

The Collins, Bethel and Mount Olive Young People's Divisions met in Mount Olive, June 30th, for the Young People's Union. Miss Mary Jane Lindsey, of Collins, led the program, as follows: Song, "America;" Devotional, John Pope; Piano Solo, Oneva Head; Report of Young People's Assembly, Joella Gatlin; Democracy, Mrs. Lee Pope; Living for Others, Mary Williams; Song, "When Love Shines in."

Officers elected at the business session were: Mary Jane Lindsey, president;

Frances Calhoun, vice-pres.; Mary Williams, sec.-treasurer, and Joella Gatlin, reporter.

The next meeting for this union will be held at Collins Methodist Episcopal Church on the 5th Sunday of September at 2:30 p.m.

Seventy-five young people were present at Sumrall on Monday night, June 15, for the meeting of the Hattiesburg Young People's Union, composed of three churches in Hattiesburg, Broad, Court and Main; Petal, Bonhomie and Sumrall.

The program was an "echo" of the Mississippi Young People's Conference held in Brooklyn the first week of June. Each speaker gave a talk on the feature that interested him most, thereby giving the entire program of the assembly. Appearing on the program were Cammack Wicht, president, who presided; Louise Wren, Frances Ogden, Argel Hungerford, Eual Samples, Edith and Elaine Barksdale, Beryl Foster, Louise Moore, Lyons

A nominating committee was appointed to draw up a list of candidates for the union officers to be presented at the meeting on July 15 at Kamper Park in Hattiesburg. At this time an impressive emblem service will be held and a good attendance is expected.

Following the business session there was a delightful social meeting of games and refreshments.

MISSISSIPPI SCHOOL SYSTEM

Dear Brother Duren: I am making some suggestions with reference to our school system in Mississippi which I trust you may pass on, in some way, to the readers of the Advocate.

(1) Our elementary schools, to which alone all citizens and taxpayers with educable children have access, are being starved by the state. Except where provided for by special school district tax, the teachers in these schools are receiving less than a living wage, and in many cases not receiving that when it is due.

(2) There are too many state-supported colleges, absorbing too large a proportion of the school money for their maintenance.

(3) More of the cost of education in the state-supported colleges should be paid by those attending them. A large number of students in colleges would perhaps make better and more useful citizens if they did not attend college. (This sentiment, as you know, is being endorsed by leading educators throughout the land); and providing college education for such students is an unwarranted liability upon the state, that could be corrected to a degree by the parents paying more of the cost if they want their children to have college degrees.

(4) Only a small per cent of the people are financially able to send their children to college. Is it fair to ask people who are unable to send their own children to college to pay tax to help send the children of the well-to-do to college? Should not parents who are able to send their children to college pay more of the cost?

(5) By continuing this policy of pouring increasing millions in money into state colleges the state will very soon force out of existence our private and denominational colleges and thus pass to the state the burden of caring for several thousand students now in these private and denominational schools. It is a known fact that the cost of education to the state per student is much higher than in private or denominational schools, so that the taking over of these students would be a severe economic loss to the state.

(6) The denominational colleges of Mississippi have given a long and valuable service to the state and exercised a most wholesome influence on the standards of scholarship and moral atmosphere in our state colleges. What would be the fate of our state colleges if politics was the only voice and influence heard and felt on their campuses? The denominational colleges serve as a splendid antidote at this point. Is it wise for the state to force these noble centers of culture and training to close their doors by a process of economic strangulation and pass the burden they are now carrying to the tax-payers, while the elementary school system that is so vital to the life of the state is being starved into inefficiency? Some of our most valuable and influential citizens never matriculated in any college. But the elementary school system is fundamental.

(7) Better some provision for unusually bright and deserving poor boys and girls to work out part of the cost of their college course than that the state undertake wholesale college training at the expense of the fundamental system.

- If I am in error in these cogitations, please set me right.

Yours very cordially,

L. P. WASSON.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Romans 12:9—Abhor that which is evil.

"If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." The purity of our people and their salvation depends upon their attitude toward evil.

1. Indulgence in evil cannot be defended. It is evidence of a carnal heart. It is a sign of wickedness. It is something for which any sober man or woman apologizes. It is never defended by any right thinking man or woman.

Jesus was tempted in all points as we are, "yet without sin." He could ask, "Who of you convinceth me of sin?" In the light of the white and spotless life of Jesus and the mission of Jesus to save us from our sins, the Christian condemns sin, and cannot attempt to justify any sinful practice.

2. Indifference toward sin is a common attitude, but a dangerous one. It is un-Christian. There is no neutral ground between good and evil. God is on the right side of every moral question. Consequently the child of God is on God's side.

As well talk about a patriot being indifferent toward the invasion of his home by a ruthless foe as to talk about a Christian being indifferent toward sin. As well justify a father harboring a boa constrictor in his nursery as to justify a parent harboring willful sin unrebuked. As well encourage the farmer to grow weeds in his crop as to permit the indifference toward the tares in the garden of the soul. As well allow the indiscriminate spread the typhoid fever as to be indifferent toward the contagious leprosy of sin. As well grow "black widow" spiders in the house as to wink at sin.

There would have been no Incarnation of the Son of God had our Lord been indifferent toward sin. Jesus would not have gone to the cross if He had been indifferent toward evil. "For this cause was the Son of God manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil." I John 3:8. Sin cannot be destroyed save by active struggle.

The indifference toward sin constitutes the major peril to the Kingdom of God. Studdert Kennedy's poem, "When Jesus Came to Birmingham," depicts the overwhelming grief of Jesus when he sees the frigid indifference, the fatal indifference of multitudes.

3. The Scriptures leave no doubt as God's attitude toward sin.

Prov. 6:16-19: "Six things doth the Lord hate, yea, seven are an abomination unto the Lord: a proud look, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood, a heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren."

Ps. 97:10: "Ye that love the Lord, hate evil."

Amos 5:5: Hate the evil, love the good."

When Korak, Dathan, and Abiram rebelled, God wiped them off the face of the earth, and sealed the indignation of Moses. When false prophets challenged the power of Jehovah in Elijah's day, the fire fell, and God sent a veritable holocaust of destruction. "Jesus looked with anger" on malice and hypocrisy. Jesus scourged the temple of the hucksters that desecrated the house of prayer. The attitude of the risen Christ toward antinomianism is revealed in His message to the Church at Ephesus: "Thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitans, which I also hate."

The shepherd loves the sheep. Wolves would destroy the sheep. Hence the Christian is engaged in the holy task of bombarding sin and destroying evil.

"To loathe it in our bosom,
And scorn it with our eye,
Hate it with our latest breath,
And fight it till we die."

PRAYER

Our Father, we see the havoc of evil; the homes it has destroyed; the hearts it has broken; the virtues it has blighted; the suffering and anguish it has brought; the immortal souls it has doomed. We pray that we may be saved from its ravages. We would avoid the very appearance of evil. We thank Thee that Thou are with us in every moral struggle. May we work with Jesus that "we may destroy the works of the devil." We ask in the name of Jesus, Who saves us from our sins.

BABY JEANETTE LANGFORD

Beautiful Jeanette, born June 27, 1933, to Mr. and Mrs. Willie Langford, Lena, Miss., and died June 28, 1935, a short, sweet life of two years and one day.

We say "Beautiful Jeanette" for her sunny, happy disposition and a sweet smile for everybody made her loved by so many.

God was good to lend this "Jewel" to the fond parents and they, with grandparents, and other relatives, humbly bow to His will.

MAMA.

MRS. G. W. SLEDGE

At 7:15 o'clock Saturday evening, June 22, the sweet-spirited soul of Mary Salome Turner Sledge, widow of the late Geo. W. Sledge, passed back to the God who gave it.

Sister Sledge was the oldest citizen of Duck Hill, Miss., and for eighty years a devoted member of the Methodist Church at this place. It was a great pleasure for her pastors to be in her home for they felt that they were in the very presence of a woman of God.

In infancy she received the nick-name "Sweet," because of the fact that a bird flew into her mother's room singing. "Sweet, Sweet" as she lay in her cradle, and until her death she was called "Sweet," a most fitting name for one of her nature.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Storie, the Baptist pastor, and Dr. Guy T. Gillespie, president of Belhaven College, life-time friend of the family. The large crowd and the profusion of flowers gave testimony of the esteem in which she was held.

Sister Sledge is survived by one brother, S. D. Turner, Carrollton, Miss.; one sister, Mrs. Josie Wright, Montgomery, Ala.; and seven children: Mrs. Tillman Crump, Collins, Miss.; Mrs. Margaret Walker and Rev. G. T. Sledge of Duck Hill, Miss.; Mrs. Mary S. Wilson, Arkabutla; Mrs. Salome Marion of Nettleton; Mrs. G. P. Sledge, Abbeville, La.; and Mr. Eddins Sledge of Milwaukee, Wis. Sixteen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren survive her.

Her influence for good will live on in the years yet to come.

Her pastor,

S. B. POTTS.

HYMNS IN CHURCHES

The press report of a new hymnal is very interesting, and I for one am anxious to see it. However, I have never seen any collection as good as the FIRST COKESBURY—the new one has omitted many of the really popular and singable songs.

Let us take a slight backward look, and see what the older Methodists did. I have a copy of the hymns issued in 1847, with the approval of Bishop Early. It contains 1063 hymns—no tunes in my copy, all the old favorites are there, and were no doubt heard in the churches of that day. Then the new hymn book was brought out in 1889, and contained 918 hymns. It was easily the very BEST church hymnal I have ever seen. The present hymnal has 747 and is a good selection. It contains many beautiful and singable hymns. Many of the most tuneful songs of the church are found within its covers. But what is the use? Why should we have a hymnal?

Here are a few observations which I would respectfully call to the attention of the publishing house before many are printed. The average city church uses about twenty hymns, and many of the least pleasing to the ear. During the six years I attended First Church in Little Rock, I fail to recall the use of more than fifteen or sixteen. Possibly twenty, and there are over 500 good hymns in the hymnal. When sent to Houston, Texas, I attended Dr. (now Bishop) Hay's church. He used about fourteen or fifteen during the eight months I was there. Both the above churches have an expensive choir, fine organs, and voices that are clear, sweet and true—but singing the same songs Sunday after Sunday made the services monotonous.

Some of the smaller churches in Houston and Little Rock used more songs, but none used over forty or fifty. Why have a book and not use it? I personally plead with the choir leader to sing some other songs and had promises galore—NO RESULTS.

The young people know nothing at all about our splendid old hymns, and never read them. No wonder they sing everything else, and pay little attention to real songs of ZION. I have never heard any singer, visitor or otherwise, sing as tuneful songs for a voluntary as are found in our present hymnal.

My suggestion is just print about 20 or 30 of the least tuneful hymns and it would be so much cheaper for the churches than paying for a book which will never be used. I can furnish the number of the used hymns.

The Cokesbury had 160 fine songs—though all are good—but about thirty are sung. People who go to church every Sunday should have some consideration shown them. The people who drop in two or three times a year never notice that they hear the same songs. One church I attended sang the same songs every Sunday for six weeks.

Well, let me say in conclusion, I think the church choirs are such patient long suffering people, and as they render fine service usually without cost, that the preachers should in mercy to them exercise more thought in selecting the hymns.

Do not take this as a criticism—just a suggestion. Wonder if some improvement cannot be had.

LAYMAN.

THE SIN OF JEALOUSY

There are many ways by which Satan tries to lead God's people to follow the winding paths of sin. But just let the Devil fill us with jealousy, or envy, and we will soon find ourselves possessed with a Satanic spirit that will make us anything but Christlike in our walk and conversation as we come in contact with other people.

Indeed, some of the worst crimes recorded in the Word of God are those which were prompted by an enviable spirit of jealousy. What was it that led Cain to murder his brother Abel? He was jealous of his brother because God was more pleased with his sacrifice than was He with his own. And it was the same conniving spirit of jealousy that caused Saul to plot against David to slay him. So we might go through the Scriptures and point out one horrible crime after another which was prompted by jealousy.

And do we not oftentimes find this same pernicious spirit manifesting itself in the lives of God's people incidentally today? We fear that not only the laity becomes infatuated victims of it, but that it also finds its way into the ranks of the clergy. You let an alert pastor show signs of great intellectual attainments in this or that particular sphere, or let him be seen climbing the ladder of success in the accomplishment of great things for the spiritual kingdom, and very often little stones of unjust criticism are hurled at him which were gathered from the brook whose waters were poisoned with the sticky-scum of jealousy. You know and I know, that many a good pastor, because he happens to have remarkable success, to crown his ministry, in his congregation, is oftentimes accused of this or that lax practice, even though there may be nothing to warrant such conclusion. Are we sure that many of these unjust criticisms are not contaminated with a spirit of jealousy and envy which is Satanical in its origin?

But, dear church member, must you not admit that you, too, have oftentimes been infatuated with this same ugly spirit of envy which is prevalent today? What kind of a spirit animated your soul when some other member of the church was given special praise for their loyalty or success in this or that particular sphere of service rendered? Perhaps you are a skilled singer in the choir. Have you ever found yourself possessed with a jealous, envious spirit there when some other member of the choir sang beautifully—perhaps more beautifully than you; or, when this or that person was given a solo which you would like to have sung? What about that young man or young

"If there isn't a slip somewhere," writes Rev. A. T. McIlwain, P. E., Greenwood District, North Mississippi Conference, "our district is going over the top in the Advocate campaign. Greenwood, First Church, will send in full quota—10 more than you assigned them. Other places have also exceeded their quotas." And so from all indications another District will receive the $100.00 cash prize offered to every district that secures its quota in full. A letter from Dr. Bradley, pastor, First Church, Greenwood, advises us that 50 subscriptions are being mailed today, which will bring the total of the district to 266, only 59 short of its quota, and with other subscriptions reported as secured, by the time we have been able to compile the full report, charge by charge, the district will have oversubscribed its quota.

Other districts within reach of their quotas at the time of going to press are the Meridian, the New Orleans, the Lake Charles, the Monroe and the Vicksburg.

Just as soon as we have had time to compile the complete results of the campaign we will publish a complete report, charge by charge, of subscriptions received. The following report includes all subscriptions received in our office during the week, July 10 through July 16:

woman who seems to take better than you do and who has more friends than you? Have you found yourself happy with them in their success, or to the contrary, you have felt the rising up of that animos spirit which is agitated by the ghastly fumes of that poison gas—jealousy? Again I say, look, look, look well into the secret recesses of your heart and see if there is no sign of Satanic jealousy or envy there.

Yes, we must all admit that oftentimes this hostile spirit of jealousy takes dominant possession of our hearts, resulting in hateful thoughts, unkind words, and actions which lack the spirit of love divine.

EIGHTY YEARS AGO, the Advocate carried the following news item: "Music—P. Werlein keeps pianos at No. 5 Camp street, and music to play on them. We have a parcel of the latter on our table, fresh as a bird-song. Among the pieces is Little Daisy—(Ruth Hall's Daisy). Old Homestead, music by Wurzel. The last is a very sweet piece, having soothed our ear more than once."

DOCTOR J. FORT NEWTON has resigned his co-rectorship of St. James Episcopal Church, Philadelphia; and he will close his ministry on November 1. Following that he will take a rest while he makes up his mind as to whether he will give the remainder of his life to preaching or to writing. He feels that he can not carry on both, as he has done for many years past.

THE CHINESE LANGUAGE is said to be deficient in words for the expression of many of our western and Christian ideas. Home is said to have no word of similar meaning. The "Amen" of our song and prayer is substituted by the phrase, "Sin yenen ching sin," which means "The heart wishes exactly so." And a bishop in Shanghai is "Heaven top-side josh pidgin man," which means "God of the highest heavens business man."

SOME MISGUIDED PROTESTANTS in Scotland undertook a demonstration against a Catholic procession during the Eucharistic Congress held in the city of Edinburgh. The rioting assumed such proportions that 300 police were required to handle the mob. Protestant people made appeal for the restoration of order, but to little avail. A few hot-headed men have thus brought reproach upon a great city and upon the entire Protestant people, with whom they have, doubtless, little in common.

A COPY OF THE "BREECHES" BIBLE, which was in the Epworth Rectory at the time of the fire in 1709, has been presented to Wesley's Chapel, London. The Bible has the marks of the fire on it—like John Wesley, it was a brand plucked from the burning. Didsbury College, Manchester, presented the Bible and a table which was formerly in the house at City Road, and had been given the College by a member of the family of Charles Wesley. Both are now in that remarkable collection of Wesleyana in the shrine of world-wide Methodism.

THE WORLD SERVICE COMMISSION reports that the benevolent contributions of the Methodist Episcopal Church have exceeded those of the previous year for the first time since 1929. The report for the fiscal year ending May 31, 1935, shows an increase of $46,633.47 over the receipts of the previous year—a percentage increase of 1.47 per cent. In the aggregate, this amount may not seem great for that Church, but it is certainly a hopeful sign and probably indicative of a turning tide in the benevolent enterprises of the Church.

TWO NEGROES LYNCHED IN MISSISSIPPI, is a headline of the past week which should bring a blush of shame to the cheek of those who love justice and seek righteousness. This brings Mississippi's credit up to four of the seven lynchings which have occurred this year. The press dispatches indicate that the two Negroes were already in the hands of the law, and it appears that their conviction was practically certain. But whatever the facts may have been, there is no excuse for such an insult to law and order.

CERTAIN JEWS IN PALESTINE have started an organization called "Markaz," says the Religious Telescope, the purpose of which is to oppose Christian work among the Jews. It is stated that Jews who attend Christian missions or send their children to Christian schools are discriminated against by this organization. Once before their insistence upon religious exclusiveness resulted in the breaking up of homes and gave to history a chapter in social relations which they have not been able to live down. It would seem that a people, who have been as much persecuted as the Jews have, would learn, if not tolerance, at least not to aggravate their own situation.

UNITED STATES SENATOR, JAMES COUZENS, has given $550,000.00 to establish a colony of workers' homes, according to a statement in the Christian Advocate, New York. The money was given to the Government, and the location is a 1,000-acre tract near Pontiac, Mich., where it may be of use to the men working at Detroit, Pontiac, Flint, and Lansing. A nonprofit corporation, Oakland Homes, Inc., has been organized and will have charge of selecting those who are to live in the homes, and of keeping the matter on a cost basis, within the incomes of those who are to enjoy its benefits.

A TRAGEDY OF THE ITINERANT SYSTEM

A few days ago we received a letter which said in part: "I transferred to this Conference . . . so that I might place my wife in the mountains for her health; and within two years her health was completely restored. . . . Two years ago last November, I was superannuated against my will. I was in splendid health then and have been ever since. I was fifty-six years old when I was superannuated. It seems to me I might have served in the regular work for at least twelve years longer, but now it seems all doors for useful service are closed and I shall be forced to forego the satisfaction and joy of preaching Christ's Gospel. . . . Since I was retired I have been unable to find any kind of employment by which I can make anything. . . . Well, in the midst of it all, I am glad to say that my faith is still strong and I find God's grace sustains me."

We knew this man well and he qualified himself for his work, but we do not undertake to pass upon the case, for we do not know all the facts. We have the conviction, however, that this may be an example of an oft-repeated and flagrant ministerial injustice, which should enlist serious attention on the part of the entire Church. A man fifty-six years old and in good health is not a superannuate. He may not be effective for other reasons than age, but a superannuate dole is a poor apology for the lack of courage to refuse to carry a man beyond the period of readjustment when he might be able to establish himself in a different field, and save himself the tragic experience of being thrust out as a matter of Conference policy. A ministry of a quarter of a century entitles one to whatever consideration there may be in superannuate support, and it would be unChristian and even heartless to invoke location. But our Church needs to tighten up, so that ineffective men may not have to be thrust out themselves, or thrust out prepared and experienced men whose friendlessness or years happen to mark them for slaughter. We do not speak of any particular case, but we do insist that "trial" shall not be made an empty convention of ministerial approach. Simple justice demands that we be frank in the beginning rather than bestow paltry benevolence at the end.

CULTIVATING A WAR SPIRIT

The current number of The Army Chaplain, Chaplain Howard E. Snyder, Editor in Chief, carries a cut of a "Massing of the Colors Service" in Washington, D. C. The statement is made that it was attended by 19,000 people, and then follows: "Reserve and National Guard Chaplains can perform a real Patriotic and Religious Service in fostering similar services in their communities. The Reserve Chaplain should be the Liaison officer to bring together all Service and Patriotic organizations."

"While Asiatic mongrels and half-breeds are screaming up and down the land, shrieking that our government must be torn down, this is a good way to let them know: 'that our flag is still there.'"

We have no idea who are referred to as "Asiatic mongrels and half-breeds," but we are certain that such vindictive language ill becomes those who are supposed to represent in the army the faith upon which our government is founded. A "Massing of the Colors Service" in that spirit may be considered patriotic, but we know that it is not religious. It really amounts to little less than beating a tom-tom to rouse the passions of the multitude, and its total effect is to promote the war spirit. Those who "Mass the Colors" in such spirit will certainly miss the Christ. Whatever the reason for those severe words, we do not believe that there is any necessity for making the chaplain an organizer of a repressive pageantry. We do not look upon the promotion of the war spirit by chaplains with greater favor than upon that promoted by munition makers, or upon that of individuals or corporations who seek to exploit the natural resources of a country for material gain. We are opposed to war, and we are not Asiatic, mongrel, nor half-breed.

HENRY H. AHRENS

In the passing of Rev. Henry H. Ahrens, Methodism in the South has lost more than a friend. Probably no man of this section ever had a more unique career, nor did any render a more distinct and valuable service. He was admitted on trial in the Louisiana Conference in 1890, he served pastorates in the Conference for a period of eight years, and then went into the publicity work in which he gained distinction and rendered an invaluable service to the churches for a long period of years. His first work was with the old Picayune. During the period of the World War, he supervised the Federal Religious Census, did the publicity work for the Centenary of Missions Campaign of the Southern Church, and he then became a director of publicity for the Emergency Fleet Corporation. After the war was over, he went to Nashville, where he organized the Secular Press Bureau of the Southern Methodist Church; and in about 1923 he returned to his old place on the staff of the Times-Picayune, and there he remained until his retirement. In his personal relations, Henry Ahrens was one of the most appreciative and loyal friends we have ever known. His religion was without cant and his life was an exemplification of the social and ethical values of the faith which he professed. In his ministry of Church publicity he was a premier, and the reportorial profession has lost an artist in that peculiar field. He was easy and at home in any service and his knowledge of the conventions and terminology of all faiths gave him entree to the press boxes of any religious gathering. He loved those of his own ecclesiastical household, and he had the confidence of all others. His bier was banked with gorgeous flowers—tributes of the love and devotion of those who knew him. But no beauty or fragrance of flowers can remove the painful consciousness that he is gone, nor can the musical cadences of human speech lift the load of sorrow from our hearts. As the rays of the setting sun lift from the last hill-top to the sky, so ended his life, and we believe that celestial trumpeters sounded his welcome to the city of God.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS!

There is apt to be an indolence as happy as it is hopeless in words like the caption of this article. It is a phrase as soothing as rain on a tin roof. It is so much easier to accuse our generation than it is to do something about it, just as it was safer to cry: "A lion is in the streets," than it was to get out and make the streets safe. But were times ever really better? A few days ago we were looking through the files of the Texas Christian Advocate, and we read that there were 700 murders in the United States in 1854, and homicides in Texas were so numerous that the editor refused to publish them. But wasn't there a devotion to the church and to the institutions of the church that our generation has abandoned? Here is the caption of an extended editorial appeal which we found twice in succession in 1855: "We Are in Great Need of Money." No, ours is the Golden Age, because it is our opportunity. The faults and crimes of our yesterdays are softened by the night of oblivion, but the evils of our day are a constant challenge to our minds and hearts.

"The First Case Under the New Law.—Two likely looking mulatto girls were emancipated last Saturday by a jury of slaveholders, on the application of their owner, who was also a mulatto; they were also allowed to remain in the State and enjoy their liberty, upon the master giving bond and security that they should never become a burden to the commonwealth. This is the first case under the law which was passed by the last Legislature. Hitherto the Legislature alone had the power of emancipation."—N. O. Christian Advocate, July 14, 1855.

KEEPING OUR OWN

By Rev. W. R. Lott

Now that so many people have joined our church at Easter and will continue to join during the summer what are we going to do with them? We boast of the fact that our church doors are always open, but we are very silent about the fact that the back door is wide open also. A constant stream of people are passing out the back door. Not by the route of withdrawal but by the way of neglect. Something must be done about that. Enough people have joined the Methodist Church to have turned this nation to God if we had cared for them. Church membership is not an act so much as an achievement. These new people must become a part of the family circle. The children in the church have a place which we must not take away. The mature, faithful members must not only be good shepherds but they must give room for these new ones to express their religious life. The Christian's life is a growing, vital thing; it cannot be static. Recognition of new life is so helpful. The reason early Methodism grew so fast and was so powerful, was just the fact that they kept the new converts on their hearts and saw to it that they made progress in religious work and life. We cannot emphasize this too much. It might be embarrassing to many churches if there were a column in the report blank for every congregation; "How many members have you lost this year by neglect?"

GAMBLING GROWING RAPIDLY

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

Since the World War there has been manifestly a slump in morality throughout our country, and the drift seems to be dragging the nation towards moral chaos.

In the growing disorder there is nothing more alarming than the increase of gambling. Horse racing, absentee betting on races, sweepstakes, policy games known "as numbers," and other forms of gambling have spread like a plague over the country. More recently, the good people of the nation have been shocked by the fact that a member of Congress from New Jersey has been willing to introduce a bill in Congress to legalize a National Lottery. At the same time the post office department is undertaking to discourage and suppress some lotteries already in existence.

This misguided member of Congress from New Jersey seems to have forgotten, or perhaps never knew, that the Louisiana Lottery was suppressed by laws enacted by the Louisiana Legislature and by the refusal of the Federal mails to carry the advertising of that iniquitous scheme. However, the nation seems not disturbed by this foolish, if not foul, proposal for a National Lottery.

Dr Samuel Johnson said: "Gambling is a mode of transferring property without producing any intermediate good." The old Doctor states the case all too mildly. Gambling takes property without giving anything in return; it is a species of stealing.

It is always associated with other gross immoralities, prevailing in the underworld and among men and women generally who indulge in drinking.

Just how much money passes from one hand to another by gambling in the United States is not known, and cannot be accurately estimated. But we may be sure it runs into the billions. A competent authority says it reaches five billions a year, and that it more directly or indirectly involves as much as ten billions.

Of course, it is said by some that gambling should be legalized because five-sixths of all the gambling in the United States is illegal. But the civil authorities cannot surrender to any defiant evil. A great deal of liquor is sold illegally, but it does not follow that all laws that control any such evil or the liquor traffic should be repealed. What is needed is not retreat before the great wave of illegal gambling, but more vigorous enforcement of the laws that prohibit it.

Gambling is related to stealing and robbery like duelling is related to murder. In gambling the gamblers consent to take risks on their own property in order that they may possibly get the property of their opponents; and in duelling each party takes a risk of his own life in order that he may have the chance of taking the life of his foe. In duelling the State has said it is the essence of murder; and likewise in gambling there is the substance of theft. There must be, in any game, winning by one gamester and losing by the other; but in the end both and all the people lose. Discussing this phase of the matter a recent writer said: "The pari-mutual system of betting at race tracks is usually considered the fairest form of gambling, as the machine divides among the players all of the money after the state and the track have taken their share, aggregating usually ten per cent. The state and the operators do not gamble. Their "cut" is a "sure thing." Really the "take" at a race track where pari-mutual betting is conducted is much more than ten per cent of the money at the track on a given day as this money is bet repeatedly and each time yields a percentage. As a rule, the machine and the state collect half of all of the money brought to the track for betting.

"While "square" gambling always has a percentage in favor of the house, gambling is seldom "square." Slot machines are frequently and quite appropriately called "iron pickpockets." They instruct children in the art of gambling. Wherever illegal gambling is permitted, politics of necessity is corrupt; and where legal gambling is conducted, illegal gambling flourishes. Interest in work and thrift is destroyed, defalcations are common. Retail merchants soon feel the heavy drain. Every obnoxious aspect of gangsterism is more and more in evidence and every other vice flourishes. It is surely incredible that this country, after its experience with repeal of prohibition will attempt to "regulate" the vice of gambling."

In recent years the prevalence of bridge parties and other like gambling practices in social life has created a kindergarten for the making of gamblers; and the homes of many people are primarily schools for promoting the spread of this evil which has already grown enormously.

This widespread and demoralizing gaming must be arrested by law or it will be more corrupt and corrupting.

Of course, some will say that you cannot make men moral by law, which saying is a senseless truism since men are free agents they cannot be made moral by law; but immorality can be arrested by law, or all penal statutes should be repealed.

Thieves cannot be made honest by law, but they can be deterred from stealing by law and punished for their crimes. Murder cannot be prevented altogether by law; but it would be a fearful thing to demand the repeal of all laws against murder or other forms of homicide. Our land cannot be given over to a flood of lawlessness under the shallow plea that men cannot be made moral by law.

Every one of the Ten Commandments is a prohibitory law, from the first prohibiting idolatry to the last which forbids covetousness. Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden were under prohibitory law which God enjoined. Obviously our Heavenly Father approves prohibitory statutes.

It is very well and very necessary to enjoin morality and religion positively, and God does thus seek to promote all good things. He condenses all His laws into one commandment that men love God with all their hearts and their neighbors as themselves. Indeed, love is the fulfilling of the law, and law is the inspiration and promoter of love.

There is nothing more selfish than gambling, it is a most ruinous form of selfishness. It is the fruit of covetousness, and it fruits itself in dishonesty and theft. It will continue with increasing prevalence until public opinion and penal law unite in putting it down.

It springs from the mania to get money for nothing, out of which mania springs banditry and highway robbery. It is in its essential nature closely akin to these vile crimes, and it well deserves to be punished by law as they are punished. Bandits and robbers cannot be made honest by law; but they can be imprisoned by law, as gamblers ought to be.

The acquisition of money without work and without honesty is of the essence of banditry, robbery, gambling and other such sins, and their widespread prevalence exemplifies and emphasize the teachings of Saint Paul that covetousness is idolatry and the love of money the fruitful root of every form of evil.

PROFESSOR OF RELIGION ELECTED

(Millsaps College News Service)

Dr. Henry M. Bullock, newly elected associate professor of religion at Millsaps College, will take up his duties with the opening of the regular school session in September.

He comes with high recommendations, and his application was approved without opposition.

He is a doctor of philosophy from Yale in 1932, received his Ph.B. degree from Emory University in 1924; his B.D. from the same school in 1925; his B.D. from Yale in 1928, and the doctor's degree in 1932 after presentation of his dissertation, which the dean of the Yale Divinity school called "one of the most outstanding pieces of work done by a graduate student in the Department of Religious Education."

For the past six years Dr. Bullock has been professor of Bible and Religious Education at Blackburn College, Carlinville, Ill., and during last year he served as acting dean.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

Indecision is such an enemy! It is mental attitude which afflicts so many people. James goes so far as to say that, "A double minded man is unstable in all his ways." It affects the character of a person. In fact it determines the character, for character consists of those positive elements which we allow to direct our lives. The Bible is the best book known among men to give definite directions for earthly life. If in doubt consult the Bible. A definite way is pointed out for practically every conceivable situation in which we may find ourselves. It is as modern as the latest road map. It grips the mind and says "cease your debates, this is the way you should act in this circumstance." It will drive away the fogs of doubt. As a rule devoted students of the Bible do not suffer nearly so much from mental confusion.

This nation needs a word of spiritual life from the White House. The grind of material acting and thinking are having a deadening weight on the populace. "Man cannot live by bread alone." The phenomenal growth of this great nation is based on the historical fact that its founders had a definite place for spiritual ideals. There is an aching void in the life of the nation which only God can fill. How the people would appreciate some clarion calls by voices who see visions of good things! Some one should call the nation to prayer. This unprecedented spree of spending promises a scene of character wreckage which has not been witnessed before. Greed for gold and power makes demons out of men and women. Honesty, truthfulness, unselfishness and such virtues stand in great danger of being lost sight of at this time. Every devoted Christian has a double duty during the few years immediately before us.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

odists regarded as the most religious and the most brotherly of all the Anglican clergy in America, had an acrimonious encounter with Dr. Coke on the subject of the minute on slavery, which the Christmas Conference had adopted. He did not deny his ownership of slaves; but he denied being a friend to slavery, and he said that he did not think that a "disputable matter" should be made a "term of communion," as was the effect of the minute under discussion.

The purchase of Peter Williams, the slave sexton of John Street Church, New York, was another example of the general acceptance of slavery. The records of that historic church show that he was purchased from a Mr. Aymar, a tobacconist, on June 10, 1783; Peter Williams returned the entire amount to the church, completing the payment on November 4, 1785; but he remained a slave for eleven years after all the purchase money had been returned to the church. It is not known why this was so, but it is probable that he was finally emancipated, either in obedience to the Disciplinary regulation of the Church, or on account of legal enactments by the State of New York. In the South, such records could be duplicated many times over, and many able men devoted their talents to sweeping moral and social defences of the institution. These incidents are not introduced for the sake of the grim comfort of involving others, but to show the wide-spread acceptance of Negro slavery. It was an evil which held in its toils, for one reason or another, ministers and religious leaders as well as the rank and file of the church; and that fact made organized opposition to the institution, by the church, extremely difficult.

Despite the practice of slavery in the church and among church people, there was, from the beginning of the Methodist movement in America, a growing resistance to it. This resistance found expression in all the literature of Methodism. Asbury opposed and resented it, and when his efforts for emancipation failed he expressed the feeling that an effort at amelioration might have been of more practical good to the "poor Africans." Coke vehemently denounced the institution; he sought in every manner possible to stamp it out; and more than once he was threatened with personal violence on account of his opposition to it. There were many who shared the views and the feelings of the two great leaders under whom the Methodist Church developed. Even before an organization was effected, the Conferences were grappling with slavery. In 1780, action was taken to the effect that traveling preachers who held slaves must promise to set them free; that slavery was contrary to the law of God, man and nature, hurtful to society and contrary to the dictates of conscience and pure religion; and disapproval of slavery was expressed along with a recommendation for the liberation of slaves. In 1783 local preachers who owned slaves were given a year in which to free themselves of the connection, on pain of being suspended for failure to do so. At the session of the Conference immediately preceding the organization of the church, it was resolved that members who owned slaves and who had been previously warned were to be expelled, local preachers in Virginia were to be tried another year, others were to be suspended at once; and the traveling preacher who was a slave owner faced the blunt edict, "Employ them no more."

At the Christmas Conference, the first book of Discipline was adopted; and the preamble of the legislation on the subject of slavery is apostolic in tone and is worthy of an honored place in the noblest literature of the Christian Church. It says: "We are deeply conscious of the impropriety of making terms of communion for a religious society already established, excepting on the most pressing occasion; and such we esteem the practice of holding our fellow-creatures in slavery. We view it as contrary to the golden law of God on which hang all the law and the prophets, and the unalienable rights of mankind, as well as every principle of the revolution, to hold in the deepest debasement, in more abject slavery than is to be found in any other part of the world except America, so many souls that are capable of the image of God.

"We therefore think it our most bounden duty to take immediately some effectual method to extirpate this abomination from among us: and for that purpose we add the following to the rules of our society, viz." Then follows an elaborate and detailed plan for the gradual emancipation of the slaves of the Methodist people; and the preachers were required to keep a journal containing the names and ages of all slaves, the dates of documents of emancipation, with the book and page of the court record; and these records were to be transmitted to succeeding pastors of the circuit. In paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 this legislation is declared to be "a new term of communion" and a new condition of being admitted "to the Lord's supper." But to these drastic regulations, two fateful exceptions were noted: "N. B. These rules are to affect the members of our society no farther than they are consistent with the laws of the states in which they reside.

"And respecting our brethren in Virginia that are concerned, and after due consideration of their peculiar circumstances, we allow them two years from the notice given, to consider the expedience of compliance or non-compliance with these rules."

Notwithstanding the exceptions which a sense of justice imposed upon those pioneer legislators of Methodism, the utterances of the first Discipline show a bold and courageous stand which should challenge the admiration of the world. Alas, that the church was so soon forced from the high ground it had taken! In the Minutes of 1785, there is this record:

"It is recommended to all our brethren to suspend the execution of the minute on slavery till the deliberations of a future conference; and that an equal space of time be allowed all our members for consideration, when the minute shall be put in force." The pathos of that note of retreat is deepened by what sounds like a plea for the soul of the church: "N.B. We do hold in the deepest abhorrence the practice of slavery; and shall not cease to seek its destruction by all wise and prudent means." A more eloquent commentary upon the state of the church could not be found than is contained in these melancholy words. For the next eleven years, the subject of slavery found little place in the legislation of the Methodists: a direct fulfillment of that discriminating observation of the old prophet, "like people, like priest."

At the second General Conference, held in 1796, the subject was approached again, but with manifest timidity and caution. The Conference registered its deepening conviction on the subject of the evils of slavery; exhorted the preachers to be cautious in admitting slaveholders to official station in the church; and admonished them to counsel members to be admitted freely and faithfully on the subject of slavery. Then follows some directions concerning the emancipation of slaves which are purchased, after a time of service to be determined by the quarterly meeting; and the entire subject of Negro slavery was committed to the membership of the church as a topic for deep personal deliberation, until the next General Conference. In 1800 action was taken to the effect that a traveling preacher who becomes the owner of a slave, by any means, "shall forfeit his ministerial character in our church, unless he execute, if practicable, a legal emancipation of such slaves, conformably to the laws of the state in which he lives." The Annual Conferences were directed to draw up addresses on the gradual emancipation of slaves, which were to be presented to the legislatures of states having no general laws on that subject; and it was resolved that through committees and petitions the matter be pressed from year to year until the desired end should be accomplished. Bishop Asbury said of this action, "Nothing could so effectually alarm and arm the citizens of South Carolina against the Methodists as the Address of the General Conference. On account of that address, John Harper and George Dougherty, in charge of Cumberland circuit in Charleston, were attacked by a mob. Harper escaped without injury; but Dougherty, who was feeble in health, was thrust under a pump and was almost drowned before he was rescued; and some years after, he died of a pulmonary trouble which is said to have dated from that night and experience of abuse.

The next General Conference, 1804, showed signs of a general retreat on the slavery question. The declaration of conviction as to its sinfulness was softened, and the paragraph regarding the emancipation of slaves under the direction of the quarterly meeting had this notable amendment: "Except at the request of the slave, in case of mercy and humanity, agreeable to the judgment of a committee of the male members of the society, appointed by the preacher who has the charge of the circuit." The paragraph advising the sending of addresses to state legislatures on the subject of emancipation was stricken out; and the preachers were charged to admonish the slaves, as they might have opportunity, on the subject of obedience to their masters. This action reveals a tenseness of feeling on the subject which it was not necessary to state, and this new position was certainly a far cry from the bold stand of 1784. What this Conference lacked of a full surrender was completed four years later, when the reaction reached a stage which resulted in the offering of a motion to strike from the Discipline everything on the subject of slavery. The motion was not adopted; but all that related to slaveholding by private members was stricken out; and the General Conference abdicated to local constituencies in the following words: "The General Conference authorizes each annual conference to form their own regulations relative to buying and selling slaves." And to complete this reactionary chapter of Methodist legislation, Bishop Asbury made the motion which was carried, "That there be one thousand Forms of Discipline prepared for the use of the South Carolina Conference, in which the section and rule on slavery be left out."

After 1808 the General Conference seems to have been disposed to abandon the effort as futile and hopeless. Indeed, a committee of nine of that Conference was appointed to consider a memorial from Staunton, Virginia; and it reported that slavery was an evil "past remedy," due to civil authorities and to a membership "contented with laws so unfriendly to freedom." It was moved to strike out certain portions of the paragraph so that the law might read: "Therefore no slaveholder shall be eligible to any official station in our church hereafter where the laws of the state in which he lives will admit of emancipation, and permit the liberated slave to enjoy freedom." This committee, having only three distinctly Southern men on it, stated frankly the reasons for the helplessness of the church, and at the same time it gave a true explanation of what had been the course of Methodist action on this subject.

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. E. C. Driscoll reports that he has had thus far a pleasant and profitable year at the good little city of Lake Cormorant, Miss.

Mrs. Lee H. Bird, Route 3, Monticello, Miss., says that she loves the Advocate, and we are greatly helped by such encouraging and appreciative words.

Rev. C. W. Barham, Church Point, La., reports good revivals for his charge. At the present time he is being assisted by his presiding elder, Rev. B. F. Rogers.

We regret to learn of the illness of Mrs. Christian Keener, who is in a Baton Rouge hospital. We trust that she may soon recover her accustomed health.

Rev. A. S. J. Neill, of Gueydan, La., has done a splendid piece of work during the Advocate campaign, as he has in all other respects in that field. He is in his first year.

Leland, Miss., and Rev. R. G. Moore are making progress, according to a report just received. The union services on Sunday evenings are attracting large crowds.

Rev. Hillary S. Westbrook reports favorably of his work at Florence, Miss., and a good meeting in which he was assisted by Rev. Fred L. Applewhite, of Wesson.

Rev. J. D. Wroten, of the Corinth, Miss., District, is a field representative of Methodism in that large area. He says that he is everywhere except at home these days.

Miss Alpha Puckett, Baton Rouge, La., writes that the vacation church school there has enrolled 184, and there is much interest in the work, both among pupils and teachers.

Rev. T. B. Cottrell, than whom the Advocate has no better friend, is making full proof of his ministry at Quitman, Miss., where he is in the first year of his pastorate.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, recently transferred from the Mississippi Conference, is doing a splendid work at Itta Bena, Miss. He has exceeded his Advocate quota by fifty per cent.

We appreciate a word of commendation and cheer from Dr. R. H. Harper, former editor of the Advocate, and a present pastor at Lafayette, La. We appreciate the copy enclosed also.

The editor acknowledges a note from our good friend, Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Charleston, Miss., which was sent through the Business Manager. We can't tell you what he said, but it wasn't bad.

Rev. W. L. Doss, of Homer, La., was called to Jackson, La., last week on account of the death of Dr. J. W. Lea of that place. Notice of Dr. Lea's death was carried in our issue of last week.

We have received through Miss Alice Wynn, of Crowley, La., two lists, making a total of 17 subscriptions for that charge. We appreciate that response from the heart of the rice section of the state.

Rev. H. M. Johnson, Bogalusa, La., overlooked the coming of his presiding elder recently, but he put the editor on the spot by exceeding a good quota in the Advocate campaign. So the score is even.

Rev. Walter W. Jones, Glen Allan, Miss., sends us a personal word of cheer and appreciation; and in a P.S. he says that Dr. Countiss is a great fellow in those parts, going most of the time—a regular fellow.

From romantic Pascagoula, where lingers the legend of the singing warriors who marched into the river rather than accept defeat, we have word from Rev. E. S. Lewis that his church is singing a song of victory.

Mrs. C. L. Tubb, of Aberdeen, Miss., is the chairman of the Advocate campaign committee of her church, and Brother Lott says that she is entitled to credit for the splendid work which that church has done in the campaign.

Mrs. W. T. Rogers, whom we take to be the wife of our classmate in college, has sent in 35 subscriptions from New Albany, Miss. We appreciate her loyalty as we have appreciated our friend, Walter, since we were together at Millsaps.

It is said that the Texas Methodists will undertake to hold all their Conferences simultaneously in one Texas city, in conjunction with the Texas Centennial. Houston and Dallas seem to be the most likely contenders for the proposed gathering.

Mrs. W. L. Underwood, Amory, Miss., has done splendid work during the Advocate campaign. The Business Manager informs us that she has sent in 50 subscriptions. We sincerely hope that the Advocate may long be worthy of such sacrificial toil.

Rev. David Tarver is carrying on at Morgan City in a faithful and efficient manner. We believe that his is the first charge to meet the appeal of the lay leader which is being carried forward through Mr. S. M. McReynolds and the district lay leaders.

We stopped the press last week to announce the wire from Rev. B. F. Rogers, of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, announcing victory in his Advocate campaign. We extend sincere congratulations and a check for $100.00 will be forthcoming.

Rev. B. F. Rogers, presiding elder, is assisting Rev. G. H. Corry, the pastor, in a meeting at Prospect Church on the Hornbeck charge. At the opening of the meeting he preached the annual memorial sermon to a great crowd, and the indications point to a good meeting.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of Greenwood District, is giving a great administration in that section of the Church. He is demonstrating his leadership in evangelism, as well as in the details of organization. He is in energy, judgment and experience, a real presiding elder.

Rev. F. C. Collins writes: "Our revival meeting, conducted by Rev. John A. May, closed out last Sunday night with a friendly spirit of fellowship which was characteristic of the services throughout." Fourteen were received into the membership of the church, eight of them on profession of faith.

We received a telegram and later a letter from Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Lexington, Miss. In addition to the contribution to the Advocate campaign, he says

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The following program is suggested for the third quarter's zone meeting:

1. Stewardship of talents. (This may be used as the devotional).
2. Mission and Bible Study. (Plan coaching day for early fall).
3. Presentation of "World Outlook." (A new campaign begins soon).
4. Christian Social Relations. (See description of Peace Exhibit of North Georgia Conference in the July Bulletin. Observe day of prayer for peace in Africa and safety for Ethiopia).
5. How to get attendance of at least one-half of the membership to auxiliary meetings. (Discuss membership campaign and anniversary day).

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Lost! TWO HUNDRED CHRISTIAN SOCIAL RELATIONS CHAIRMEN! This column this week is dedicated to these lost ones. Read here what has been done, study what has to be done, and send in a report of what you have done afterwards.

These are Mrs. Neblett's words about the school at Holly Springs: "We are so happy and pleased with our school. Forty-five enrolled for credit. Two came from Water Valley, two from Tupelo, three from Starkville, two from Columbus, two from Oxford, three from Corinth, one from New Albany, one from Greenville, one from Indianola, one from Charleston, one from Grenada, one from Memphis, twenty-five from Holly Springs. The one from Memphis came to observe the school and will teach at Lane College, Jackson, Tenn., in their school July 2-9. I am sure that it was a splendid school in every way."

* * *

Dear C. S. R. superintendents and Missionary Women:

There are two splendid opportunities of service open to us if we are interested in the economic and social welfare of the South. I trust that you will join with the Conference department of Christian Social Relations this week in supporting the following measure:

The Bankhead Tenant Farmer Bill is now in the House Committee on Agriculture. It has already passed the Senate. It is important especially in the South and particularly in Mississippi because we have a farm tenant population of 72.9 per cent. We can see what advantage it would be for the Federal Government to help provide these landless people with homes and make them self-respecting and self-supporting citizens with an interest in maintaining our government.

Will you write Mr. Wall Doxey, who is a member of this Agriculture Committee, to interest himself in getting this bill out of the committee so that it will have time to pass this summer? We understand that Mr. Marvin Jones, of Texas, the chairman of the committee is indifferent to the Bankhead Bill.

The Bill provides for the following:

1. For THE PURCHASE of farm lands by the Federal Government.
2. At PREVAILING LAND prices in each locality.
3. The RESALE to farm tenants.
4. The PURCHASE of tools, seed, etc.
5. The BUILDING of homes and necessary farm buildings.
6. PROHIBITION OF MORTGAGING, reselling of land and produce by farm purchasers until full purchase price is paid to Government.
7. SIXTY YEARS to repay Government.
8. LAND WILL BE subject to usual state taxes whether title is in Government or Farm purchaser.
9. MANAGING BOARD of Secretary of Agriculture, Governor of Farm Credit Administration, and three members appointed by President with consent of Senate.

10. FINANCING by sale of bonds to amount to one billion dollar
11. Interest to farm purchasers, the same as interest paid by the Government to buyers of bonds.

MRS. DAN COMFORT,
Conf. Supt. Christian Social Relations.

THE ANNUAL LAMBUTH MEMORIAL PROGRAM, THURSDAY, AUGUST 1, 1935

The meeting at Pearl River Church, in the southeastern part of Madison County, on the first day of August this year in commemoration of the lives and works of the Lambuth family, will be of more than usual interest. The monument which has stood out in front of the church has recently had additional information inscribed thereon.

The program will consist of an address at 11 a. m. by Dr. J. L. Decell, of Galloway Memorial Church, followed in the afternoon, by an address by Rev. J. B. Cain, of Yazoo City and the reading of a paper which was written by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, when the monument was first erected in 1900. A cordial invitation is extended to all our preachers and laymen, who desire to join with us in this service.

In as much as the membership of this church is small today, we ask all who come to bring a basket of dinner with you.

So far these gatherings have given us a great spiritual feast, and we have had an abundance of everything necessary to satisfy the physical man. Why not make this year the best so far experienced.

REPORT OF LAY ACTIVITIES SEASHORE DISTRICT

By L. T. Fickling, District Lay Leader

In making this brief report of the work of the laymen in our district we do so with the hope that it may be of some interest to our churches in a general way and that it may encourage those who have not put these programs over to make an effort to do so at an early date. Our Conference lay leader has imposed in us a faith that we will do all in our power to help him put over the full program of our lay activities, and I trust he will have no disappointment in this regard.

The Saucier charge has held a laymen's service in each church on the charge using for a basis for each service the topics listed in the suggested program of our general board of lay activities:

"The Christian home—A Christian industrial order—A sober nation—A warless world." We have used in these services our local laymen and lay women, who have rendered efficient services in these meetings.

The Coalville charge has held laymen's day services in each church in the charge. The writer participated in some of these meetings with pleasure and profit.

Handsboro and North Gulfport report full services in each church in the interest of the lay activities.

The Americus charge held a joint laymen's service for the entire work at Old Salem Campground, Sunday, July 14. It was the writer's privilege and pleasure to preside at this meeting and enjoy the sweet Christian fellowship of these good people. Each topic as mentioned above was taken care of in a most effectual manner.

"The Christian Home" was discussed by Rev. N. F. Loftus, the pastor of this charge, in a most pleasing and inspiring manner; we are sure there were seeds of thought sown in this talk that will spring up and bring forth fruit for the Master in days to come.

"Christian Industrial Order" was taken care of by Brother F. L. Lingerian, who did not mince his words but brought us facts worthy of very serious thought, impelling each to recognize their respective places in the great program of bringing to pass the desired goal.

"A Sober Nation." (This topic was taken care of by Prof. Woodley, of Lucedale). The facts in this case were so forcefully, yet so pleasantly put until we are wholly unable to give, even a meagre outline of this address but it is, our candid opinion that good will come of it.

Last, but not least, was the splendid message brought us by Brother A. K. Guinn of Handsboro, on "The Warless World."

These splendid talks by our brethren and the sweet Christian fellowship that was manifest prove to us that this was a worthwhile meeting. The only thing to cause us regret was that our Associate District Lay Leader and the charge Lay Leader was kept away on account of sickness.

A bountiful and delicious luncheon at the noon hour was provided by the ladies and this of course climaxed the social hour.

CHILDREN'S WORKERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Many workers with children in our churches have already planned for vacation sessions. If you have not held such session, will you not call the workers with children together and plan for a vacation school to be held before school starts?

A number of churches held vacation schools last year. We are hoping that many more will make this effort this year to provide the children of the church with a larger opportunity for growth in Christian character.

If you should need help in making plans write Me, or get in touch with your district director of children's work.

The names of the district directors are listed below: Mrs. L. W. Alford, McComb, southern end of Brookhaven District; Mrs. J. H. Green, Barlow, Miss., northern end Brookhaven District; Mrs. Madolin Foster, Hattiesburg, Miss., Hattiesburg District; Mrs. Swearingen, Gulfport, Miss., Gulfport District; Miss Madge Stuart, Meridian, Miss., Meridian District.

MRS. JOHN L. CARTER, Conference Director.

MOORE COMMUNITY HOUSE, BILOXI, MISS.

The vacation Bible school of Epworth Church and Moore Community House has closed after one of the most successful sessions in its history. The school was supervised by Miss Sallie Ellis and Miss Sophie Kuntz, assisted by twenty-four volunteers among whom were Mrs. H. W. F. Vaughn, Mrs. Wiley Ferguson, Mrs. G. C. Hodge of the First Baptist Church and other from the community. The school enrolled all ages from four-year-olds to grandmothers and grandfathers of seventy-five, the total number being 267. We feel that great good was accomplished in the community. Many received honorable mention for perfect memory work required by the school. We take this opportunity to thank all the Missionary Societies who by their contributions made this school possible.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 28.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

AMOS (PROPHET OF SOCIAL JUSTICE)

Amos was a country preacher—most preachers are. As a rule, the city churches pick and call preachers they cannot produce. City crowds and bustle are not conducive to the quiet and meditation required to bring youth to the intimate fellowship with God which ends in life-dedication. City boys know more facts; country boys more values. One burning bush is worth more than a thousand arc lights. Too often, sophistication means adjustment to leaning walls and warped standards. Morals seem but customs. Evils appear to be a necessary part of cosmopolitan life. Extremes meet and contrasts are commonplace. The countryman is not more amazed at city luxuries than shocked at city vices, but modern communication and transportation have carried the city to the country. Suburbs blend with villages and sharp lines of distinction and discernment are no longer discoverable. Urban and urbane are not synonymous. Country youth always welcome to the haunts of vice are often shut out from the finer activities of the city.

Amos was no mere reformer, no blatant demagogue striving to array one group against another. His criticisms were pointed and his charges specific. His eyes had beheld the stars. He knew both straight up and straight ahead. He had kept close to nature and learned how surely effect follows cause. He was not so much a fore-teller as a forth-teller. Moral experiences have an outcome as certain as chemical experiments. Given the factors, the result is inevitable. We honor neither the prophets nor the Bible by straining their language to fit some modern invention or current event. Priests were born to the order and trained for professional service, often well paid for perfunctory routine. Some prophets were not unlike the priests in that they became professional and took training in the schools, thereby becoming "sons of prophets." With such Amos denied all kinship. His authority was truth from God, and credits from the schools. He spoke not to please kings, priests nor people but Jehovah. Like Ahaz, Amaziah laid the troubles of Israel at the door of the prophet who exposed them, as one might charge a fire to the one giving the alarm, and bade him go back to the hills of Judah where his preaching might be appreciated and perhaps rewarded. Amaziah was to learn that dismissing the doctor does not cure disease. Danger and destruction stalked king and priest, the guilty and their families. Salvation was not to be found in banishing or silencing the prophet, nor yet in ridiculing his rustic speech or manner, but in humble penitence for flagrant sins.

Much evil is wrought in the name of patriotism and orthodoxy. Church and nation are great institutions, but decline and death have begun when they cease to stand for freedom and progress. Gloriously useful as vital bodies, they are but carcasses when they lose their souls. Free speech in church and state may be abused, but its falsity or unfairness is easily refuted. The straight-jacket of censorship and repression is fatal to life and progress. The bane of rulers and leaders is not criticism but flattery. Men like Amos with plumb-line and straight-edge are needed today, that vice, corruption, social injustice, and oppression may be exposed and corrected. There is neither merit nor courage in mere ministerial denunciation. The safest spot in civilization is the pulpit, protected by law and supported by the church. With the fire of love in his heart and the light of God in his soul, the preacher-prophet should see clearly, live adventurously and warn earnestly, not regarding his own safety nor material welfare, but with an eye single to the salvation of his people.

PASCAGOULA METHODISM

This has been a busy year with our people here. They had to get acquainted with the new pastor first of all but they finished that job in short order and went to work to build up the kingdom. Fire destroyed the roof of our parsonage early in February, but we are now in the new parsonage, all spic and span. It is a beautiful pastor's home with plenty room for an ordinary family. We are very happy to have so nice a home in which to live and the congregation have cause to be proud of their parsonage.

There has been no phenomenal growth in our work this year but there has been encouraging development. The congregations are larger than they were, more than one-half of the benevolences have been paid and the prospect is good for full payments this year on every thing. We have no big church debt to harass us and I believe we will meet all obligations this year.

Fifty-five people have joined the church this year, twenty-nine of them on profession of faith and there are more to follow. By proper cultivation this field will yield large returns to our labors, and this pastor means to see to it that the needed cultivation is not lacking.

E. S. LEWIS, P. C.

MacDONELL VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

(Viewpoint of an outside helper)

It had been a number of years since I had taken part in this type of work, but when requested to help out with the story hour in the 1935 Bible school, I gladly consented.

The teachers were mostly young women from the outside as the regular workers in the school were, many of them, away on vacation; and I was deeply impressed with the volunteers' earnest desire to give the children not merely a superficial peep into the Word, but to implant in their hearts some real knowledge of the Bible as truly the Word of God, and to make it a force in their lives for right living. The children could hardly fail to gain the conviction that with these teachers it meant something very real to study and grasp and heed its truth.

Then I felt so strongly the influence of a sweetness of spirit among both workers and students, a spirit of love and consideration that could be only the Holy Spirit's power. I think I have never felt more truly that God was blessing than when I sat in the chapel and listened to the little folk as they gave their memory verses, and showed that good seed had been planted deeply in their hearts.

Vacation Bible School—MacDonell French Mission

The vacation Bible school conducted at the MacDonell School in Houma, La., June 17-28 was one of the most successful of a long series of vacation schools. One hundred and thirty-one students attended. The faculty consisted of volunteer workers.

Health and habit talks, lessons in patriotism, missionary stories, games, songs, handwork, and Bible stories all contributed to a well-integrated program.

The school closed with a party given on the spacious school lawn Thursday afternoon, and a special worship program on Friday morning in the school chapel.

knowledge render his services invaluable to minister and layman alike in this age of changing custom and creed. Therefore be it Resolved, That we express to Dr. Smith our sincere and unrestrained appreciation of these valued services.

That we voice our gratitude for his incomparable contribution to the world-wide kingdom by training young life for highest service through the years of his teaching ministry.

That we bear witness to Prof. Smith's highest proficiency in his life's calling, to his keen insight to the needs of those privileged to wait upon his word, and to his exemplary life that serves as a guiding star to youth.

That we register our earnest prayers to the Lord of harvest that his fruitful labors may continue yet many years.

That we respectfully and insistently request our Board of Managers to renew the engagement with this popular instructor for the session of 1936.

SUGGESTIONS

1. There will be no corruption, dependence or poverty when the people realize that development unlocks for themselves the advantages of life, and that aimlessness, apathy, dishonesty, ignorance, indulgence, dishonor and selfishness kill their larger and better opportunities for permanent happiness.

2. There will be no limit to success when the people learn that larger opportunities are in direct ratio to the advancement of others.

3. There will be permanent prosperity when individual self-developments, safeguarding the spiritual and higher interest of man contribute to his comfort and happiness.

4. There will be unhampered progress when the people take pride in what they themselves can accomplish rather than how they can imitate others.

5. There will be justice in courts when the people are honorable enough to live within the limits of moral and civil laws.

6. There will be regard for law and order in private and public conduct when the people know that debauchery despoils advantages for self and when national honor and love of country are not divorced from individual character.

7. There will be universal happiness when the people satisfied with their lot, measure up to life's highest possibilities with an intelligent understanding of its purpose.

8. There will be honest government when the people are big and broad enough and enlightened enough to take pride in meeting all the responsibilities of citizenship.

9. There will be enlightened government when the citizens realize that it is to their advantage to vote the right kind of men into office.

10. There will be unlimited progress in our churches when all members learn to measure up to the Standard in home life, church life, and social life.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Is. 43:2: When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee.

The Clarion Ledger of Jackson, Miss., on June 22, 1935, carried an Associated Press dispatch from Little Rock, Ark., as follows: "Storm and flood wrought additional havoc in Arkansas today . . . Cresting in northwest Arkansas, the big stream crashed another levee near Morrilton, inundating 15,000 acres of plantation property, and a few hours later, broke through Cotton Town . . . Sandbagging crews in both places escaped injury." There have been many such press notices in recent weeks. Many readers of the Advocate have seen the Yazoo delta deluged. Many have seen Pearl River on a rampage. Many have seen the backwaters of the mighty "Father of Waters."

In primitive days, swollen streams caused interminable delays. And all of our modern roads, bridges, and modern contrivances have not obliterated the recurrences of these dangers.

FEEL WONDERFUL EVERY DAY

PERHAPS you could if you did not have to suffer from periodic pains and discomforts. Have you tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets?

Lydia E. Pinkham's
TABLETS

The Scriptures abound in metaphors that describe seasons of affliction as deep waters. We cite a few illustrations from the Psalms: "We went through fire and through water, but Thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place." Ps. 66:12. David stresses this figure in the 69th Psalm: "Save me, God; for the waters are come in unto my soul (verse 1); "I sink in deep mire, where there is no standing: for I am come into deep waters, where the floods overthrow me." (verse 2); "Deliver me out of the mire, and let me not sink: let me be delivered from them that hate me, and out of the deep waters," (verse 14).

He who is plunged into the deep waters is in imminent danger of his life for many reasons.

The waters are broad sometimes. The torrential rains cause the rivers to overflow their banks. Even the levees break under the tremendous pressure. And the rising tides even overflow the levees at times. Often it is impossible to see the further bank of the river at flood tide.

The waters are muddy. The increased quantity of water is not the only source of uneasiness. Anxiety is increased by the muddiness. The traveler cannot see the bottom nor even conjecture the depth or severity.

The waters are deep. There are rivers as well as rivulets. How can the traveler proceed with the journey?

Sometimes the waters are rapid. Sometimes they descend like a torrent and there is no warning. The pilgrim is plunged into distress.

The waters of affliction are numerous. Between the traveler and the promised land are many streams.

"I will be with thee." Certainly the Christian needs a guide and helper to make a safe passage through the deep waters. He cannot resist the impetuosity of the current by means of natural wisdom, courage and strength. But God promises that the waters shall not overflow a child of His for He will be with him.

How striking is the promise of security, "Fear not; for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine. When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee: and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee; when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned, neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. For I am the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Savior." Is. 43:1,3.

When the traveler has God with him he has no needs. God comforts, strengthens, delivers. The promise reaches to every kind of distress. God not only offers occasional relief, but He offers His abiding presence. "As thy days may demand, so shall thy strength be."

God not only strengthens, but He sanctifies the waters of affliction. "Like flocks of sheep which go up from the washing," the believer is purified.

PRAYER

Our Father, we are grateful for the revelation of Thy purpose to save Thy people from every evil. Thou hast even given Thy Son to redeem us. Thy heart is set on the salvation of Thy children. Thou art able to remove all hinderances. Thy Almighty arm is not shortened, but Thou are still mighty to save. Nothing is too hard for Thee.

Thou are pledged to be with those who trust Thee. "Thou dost follow them with thine eye." Thou didst send a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night to Thy people in days of old. Even so direct us, we pray.

We realize the promises rest on our faith. The whole blessing is according to our faith. Thou canst remove or overrule every distress, so a blessing shall come through every trial. We commit our all to Thee in Jesus' name.

VACATION SCHOOL

Miss., June, 1935

The vacation school of the Methodist Church of West Point, Miss., was a great success. It ran for two weeks including two Sundays, making twelve days, from June 16 through June 28. It was run much as on Sunday as the beginners, primary, junior and intermediate departments were grouped in the same way as on Sunday and the regular Sunday school force did the teaching. They were helped in each department by several girls from the young people's department. Two older boys helped superintend the wood work. Two ladies from the Missionary Society superintended the sewing and basket making for the intermediate department. One regular carpenter from the church superintended all the wood work of the boys. No one was brought in from outside.

It had been voted in February by the local Board of Christian Education to use the Missionary units on Japan during the vacation school for primary and junior departments, as in this way we would reach many more pupils for the week-day sessions and would not interfere with the regular Sunday school lessons. This proved to be a splendid plan and we recommend it to all. On the first Sunday we introduced the subject on Japan during the worship service but teachers taught the regular lessons. During the middle Sunday Japan was used during both worship service and teachers lessons. It happened that primary lessons were on Japan for grade 3, we moved up the grade 2 lesson on Japan from next quarter, (lesson 42), lesson 38 to be used later, thus only one regular junior lesson was thrown out.

Besides these two Sundays there were ten consecutive days on Japan, the last day being mostly preparation for the closing exercise. Thus the two books "I Wonder About Japan," and "Workways In Japan," were used directly for nine consecutive lessons, three other lessons bringing in other material which is so plentiful. Almost every child from the regular Sunday school came almost every day, also quite a number of visitors. Some children with relatives here even came over from nearby towns especially for the course. The children were very much interested and enthusiastic. We believe this is the ideal way to handle the spring unit on missions, instead of breaking so much into the regular Sunday school lessons which are themselves important. Is there not danger of overloading the Sunday morning session with missions, leaving out much that is very important to young children, if all the months of March and November are devoted to that, there already being quite a number of missionary lessons in the courses besides these?

We were very fortunate in having three splendid public teachers already in the primary, junior, and intermediate departments, who led in each department. Mrs. B. M. Howorth superintended the entire school. It was inspiring to see the interest of the dozen young people who were helpers.

Now as to the school itself. There were 150 in attendance.

The beginners department studied "The Home." They made a doll house, doll furniture, etc., representing a home. They made posters of homes and colored pictures. They dramatized people in a home being kind and helpful to one another. There were homes of birds and animals also. They learned simple Bible verses and two songs. There were sixteen every day.

The primary department studied "I Wonder About Japan." They learned three mission songs and two simple Japanese songs. They dramatized the people and customs of Japan. They made posters of Japanese people and homes. They made lanterns, paper dolls, flags, carp for the festival of fish and sewed kimonos for their dolls to make the festival of dolls. They also constructed a Japanese village and bright pieces of real bamboo. They learned missionary Bible verses. They brought money to buy a present to send to Japan, also other money for mission work in Japan. There were 43 children on roll, more than in Sunday school. How happy and enthusiastic they were!

(To be continued next week)

SEXTON CHAPEL

The Methodist Church at Sexton Chapel (Harmon) on the Pelican charge, in the Shreveport District, has just closed a very successful revival season.

The month of June was given over to spiritual cultivation in the church and community with mid-week prayer services, special "spiritual life" group meetings in the Missionary Society, an afternoon of prayer in the church, an afternoon of cottage prayer meetings and fellowship services.

The revival campaign opened Wednesday evening, June 19, with Rev. J. C. Price, pastor, preaching at the evening hour through the week-end. Rev. John J. Rasmussen, pastor of Bunkie, arrived Monday and preached twice daily, through Sunday, June 30.

Rev. John L. Rasmussen is a fine young minister, filling a responsible church pulpit, who is deeply consecrated to the task, and preaches in a masterly manner. His messages were evangelistic, inspiring and challenging to the church as well as the unsaved.

Mr. Henry Riser, a fine young musician of Tlaga, La., led the large chorus choir, sang solos, assisted by his young student, Verna Waters, duets, and conducted a fine morning period for the juniors. Many choruses were learned, scripture verses memorized for which Bibles were given as awards, and the ladies of the children's division gave a picnic for the children.

Mrs. J. J. Walker served faithfully as accompanist. Mr. Lloyd Johnson, Lloyd Johnson, Jr., Hewitt Law, and Virginia Johnson assisted with their instruments.

Each evening service was preceded by twenty minutes to devotions in groups led by Mrs. W. H. Parker, Jr., Mrs. C. S. Falgout, Mrs. A. L. Bryant, Mr. Richard D. Clanton, Mrs. Jim E. Woodard, Mrs. P. L. Riley and Mrs. A. O. Richie. "The Upper Room" was used as a basic study for this period.

An average of 100 persons attended these various groups.

Large crowds attended each service. Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, presiding elder, Mr. T. C. Clanton of First Church, Shreveport, Rev. Guy M. Hicks of Mansfield church, Superintendent A. H. Horton and Mrs. Horton of Coushatta, delegations from Coushatta, Naborton, Holly Springs and Pelican were prominent among the visitors.

Great interest was shown by the entire community, nineteen additions to the church, deeper consecration on the part of the members and other visible effects of this revival were made manifest.

This revival team will do any church lasting good.

ANNUAL SEASHORE CAMP MEETING

Mr. Chas. O. Chalmers, Executive Secretary, announces that the Annual Camp Meeting of the Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi, Miss., will begin on Sunday morning, July 28, and continue throughout the week, coming to a close on Sunday evening, August 4. Rev. T. O. Prewitt, pastor of Broad Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, and Rev. E. E. McKeithen, pastor of our church at Petal, Miss., will conduct the meeting, alternating in preaching and leading the singing.

that he finds some friends of the editor there. We are glad to be remembered. He adds a final injunction, however, which is too big an order for us. Scuse us please!

Rev. J. B. Cain reports a helpful meeting at Yazoo City, Miss., in which he had the assistance of Rev. Otto Porter, McComb, Captain Leonard Van Egmond, of Vicksburg, and Rev. J. H. Jolly of Jackson. There was a whole-hearted hospitality and a spiritually helpful time, and some are still being added to the membership of the church.

We have a good friend from west Louisiana who gently reminds us that we are giving Mississippi the edge in the news. To which we reply that of the three Conferences in our constituency, two of them are in Mississippi; and we publish everything that comes to us. We would like to have a good reporter from every district, and we certainly do not wish to be partial.

Mrs. Lucie Dana Hurst, widow of the lamented Brother W. W. Hurst, of the Mississippi Conference, died in Vicksburg, Miss., on July 4 at the home of her nephew, Mr. C. C. Dana, and was buried on the 5th inst. at the old Red Bone Church cemetery in Warren County. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. M. M. Black, of Gibson Memorial Church, assisted by Rev. T. J. O'Neill, pastor of the Crawford Street Methodist Church, and Rev. J. L. Boyd, of the Bowmar Avenue Baptist Church. She lacked thirteen days of being eighty-seven years of age. A suitable memoir will appear in due time.

LAKE CHARLES AND GREENWOOD DISTRICTS REACH QUOTAS

Late Tuesday evening of last week, while the Advocate press was turning out papers at the rate of 2,000 per hour, we received a telegram from Dr. B. F. Rogers, P. E. of the Lake Charles District, announcing that lists and checks completing the district's quota were in the mails. It was too late to include a full account showing how the pastors of the district "put over" the quota, but we managed to include the telegram in most of the Advocates announcing the district's success. In the same issue we printed excerpts from a letter from Dr. A. T. McIlwain, P. E. of the Greenwood District, to the effect that we could expect his district to win the $100.00 prize before the close of the week. We are happy to report that both districts have exceeded their respective quotas, and that we have already mailed to each Presiding Elder the district prize check of $100.00. Elsewhere on this page will be found a charge by charge report of subscriptions received from these quota districts.

In our issue of August 3 we will publish the full results of the campaign, charge by charge. All subscriptions received in our office up until that time will be included, and we will gladly issue our check for $100.00 to each district reaching its quota before the publication of the final results.

MOTOR DEATHS IN WHICH ALCOHOL was a possible factor have practically doubled in the last twelve years, according to figures recently given by various organizations making a study of the effects of alcohol; but there are those still who assume that they can get by on the highways with a liquor-scrambled brain. Better let liquor or automobiles alone—they simply do not mix.

A JANE ADDAMS POSTAGE STAMP, says an exchange, has been issued by the Turkish government, in commemoration of the Istanbul conference, at which women gathered from all around the world. This is probably an only instance of such an honor being bestowed and is a great tribute to the character and worth of the leader whose life was so completely given to the promotion of world-peace.

THAT COMMUNISM MAKES A POOR RELIGION, is being asserted on every side of late, thinks the New Outlook. But, says the Outlook, "If you and I believed in Christianity as the solution of the world's troubles, as some people believe in Communism, it is more than likely that we would be doing more about it than we are." We may denounce the evangelists of Communism as fanatical and "Red," but it is telling in the social and political life of our time. The Church might profit by the example.

EIGHTY YEARS AGO, the Advocate carried the following: Reading Sermons—The antipathy of the Scotch people to read sermons is very well known. At Kirkcudbright, at an inauguration, an old woman on the pulpit stairs asked one of the companions if the new minister was a reader. And how can he read, woman? was the reply; the man's blin'. To which the first made answer, "I'm glad to hear't—I wish they were a' blin'."

DOCTOR EDMUND H. OLIVER, who died suddenly on July 11, is a great loss to the United Church of Canada. He was principal of St. Andrew's College, Saskatoon, and was moderator of the General Council of the Church for the year 1930-1931. He was a man of clear and forceful thought, courageous and forward-looking, and he gave the church a leadership which did much to create bonds of sympathetic understanding between east and west Canada. His going will be a real loss to the Church and to the forces of righteousness and culture in the Dominion.

IN THE GRENADA SENTINEL for July 26, 1935, Editor Whitaker illustrates his idea of a typical country paper. He says, "This issue of The Sentinel is designed as a typical country paper, expressing no views, cussing nobody, praising nobody, taking no sides, tameless, tasteless, inept, innocent, and innocuous." For caption, he says: "How Do You Like This Issue?"

AT VALLAURIS-LE-CANNET, near Cannes in France, the Institute of Actinology has built what is said to be the most up-to-date hospital in France. It has a huge revolving ward which keeps pace with the moving sun. The purpose is to give the patients the benefits of the sun's rays throughout the entire day. That may be scientific so far as the promotion of health is concerned, but for comfort, give us a ward built with reference to shade.

THE INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF STATISTICS at the Hague, says an exchange, announces the world population at two billions, an increase of some four hundred million in the last twenty years. The greatest increase has been among those called "heathen." No wonder we had the depression. The Hague should have warned us before we plowed up so much cotton, cut down corn acreage, killed our pigs and canned our yearlings.

THE AMERICAN ZULU MISSION, founded by the American Board of Commissioners of the Congregational Church in 1835, has just held its centennial celebration. In the hundred years of its existence, a people of savage character and bloody deeds has passed, and there are now 10,000 children in the mission schools, 300 in the agricultural institute and 10,000 Pathfinders—Boy Scouts. And still people ask, "Are missions worth while?"

THE GOOD SHIP, MAURETANIA, of the Cunard Line, according to the New Outlook, has steamed into her last port, and from the bridge, the order has been rung down, "Finish with the engines." For twenty-two years she held the speed record of the north Atlantic and kept her rendezvous with every port. She entered the Tyne to the cheers of thousands and, as she moved into the lock at Rosyth, a piper in the Stuart tartan played the lament, "The Flowers o' the Forest," while many of the crew gave way to tears.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN CLOSES

With this issue of the Advocate, we bring to a close the subscription campaign which has been in progress for practically two months. Three districts have already cleared the last hurdle, and, at this time, it seems to be altogether possible that three others may cross the finishing line before time is called. The tabulation of results will tell its own story and it is not necessary to comment upon that. We think it sufficient to say that we believe that it has been the most satisfactory and the most successful Advocate campaign for many years, and it will go far toward stabilizing the affairs of the paper. During the year, all current bills have been paid promptly and in full—not a dollar has been borrowed for any purpose. We do not expect to spoil that record. In the liquidation of the debts, we are making progress, and we confidently expect that the plans and pledges which have been made will result in changing the color of the figures which have indicated our balance heretofore. The time and the energy of the entire Advocate force have been devoted to the prosecution of the campaign. We deeply appreciate the fine loyalty which has been shown by the preachers and people of the three Conferences; and we do not forget the consecrated leadership of Bishop Dobbs who, though occupied with many tasks, yet made time and place for an unselfish and valuable service to our cause. Some charges had sent in lists before the beginning of the campaign, and in many instances the expirations come later in the fall. If our pastors will help us, we feel sure that we can close the year with a song of triumph. The campaign is over, but we intend to keep the Advocate cause before our people. It is our desire to make it really worthwhile to every pastor and church; and we do not mean to spare any effort to make a large place for it in the hearts of Methodist people in Louisiana and Mississippi. Thank you, one and all! Let's go on to the completion of the work so well begun.

KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT

More than once we have noticed the statement that during the Civil War the missionaries of the Southern Church were paid by the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Any such assertion is based upon a loose and careless interpretation of the real facts. At the General Conference of 1872, Journal p. 667, Dr. Thomas Carlton, Book Agent, and Treasurer of the Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, submitted a statement which he said was done as a matter of fairness and justice to all. Here is a summary of the facts: He submitted the letter of Dr. A. H. Redford, Treasurer of our Board of Missions, making the final payment of the obligation due the Church North, and with it a statement as to the entire transaction. In 1858 or 1859, Dr. E. H. Sehon, secretary of the Board of Missions of the Southern Church, asked Dr. Carlton how they remitted money to their missionaries in China. Dr. Carlton replied that it was done through letters of credit obtained from Brown Bros. & Co., New York, on Brown Bros. & Co., London. Dr. Sehon then sought endorsement to the same firm for his Board. Dr. Carlton said that he could not refuse the endorsement, because the Church, South, had granted terms for the settlement of the property suit, which had saved the Book Concern from embarrassment. Three letters of credit were issued. One December 7, 1859, for £1200; another February 1, 1860, for £1634; and the last June 23, 1860, for £1600. As will be noted, the last of these was dated eight months before the war began; but the demoralization on account of the war and the breaking of communications between the two sections made it impossible to pay the obligations. As soon as the Southern Church could reorganize after the close of the war, steps were taken to reimburse the North for its outlay. The total outlay of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as endorser of the letters of credit, was $20,607.86, and the South paid in principal and interest, $35,215.02; and in addition $11,000 remitted to a New York agent to meet the first note, which sum he embezzled in stock market speculations. The money secured on these letters of credit may have been used to support our missionaries during the war, but it was not the intention of Dr. Carlton to do so, and his statement indicates that he was criticised for the endorsement. Dr. Carlton was, indeed, magnanimous, but his magnanimity reflected that of the South. It is a fascinating myth, but we must keep the record straight.

BOOKS

Prayers for Girls. By Elizabeth Robinson Scovil.
Prayers for Boys. By Herbert C. Alleman. Thomas Nelson & Sons, New York.

These are two little companion volumes of short prayers which take in the range of the needs, relations, problems and ambitions of boys and girls. They are intended to create an atmosphere of prayer and to furnish a simple guide for its use. The prayer-forms on a great variety of subjects are cast in simple, direct and searching phrases which can not fail to build up the moral and spiritual fiber of those who use them.

Special Day Sermons, Etc. By William H. Leach, Litt.D. and J. W. G. Ward, D.D., Litt.D. Cokesbury Press, Nashville. Price $2.

Between "The Magic Portals" and "A Tale That Is Told," is a group of discourses dealing with the special days and interests of the calendar year. They are calculated to quicken interest in the events or causes which are conventionally brought to our attention through these special days. The quality of these studies is vastly superior to what one ordinarily finds in such a collection; and they afford good examples of how even conventional and formal occasions may be made interesting and helpful. The preacher and layman alike will find both factual and inspirational compensation in the reading of this book.

A Book of Chapel Talks. By Elbert Russel. Cokesbury Press, Nashville. Price $1.

This series of brief talks, by the Dean of the School of Religion of Duke University, is designed to grip the mind and heart of the college student. They are what the title implies, chapel talks, and not sermons. Occasionally there is a theme which has a frivolous sound, such as Butterfly Wings, Social Tomatoes, and Light Baggage; but as a whole the list of subjects is remarkably free from theatrical suggestion, and there is a solid teaching in those discourses whose subjects have a less serious sound. The studies show a range of knowledge and a sprightliness of interpretation and illustration well calculated to impress the student mind. In the number of illustrations used, one feels that there might be a sinning against certain canons of good literature; but there also one must not forget the audience or the purpose of the talks. On the whole, we would pronounce them both wholesome and effective, and well adapted for the end in view.

Sermons On Old Testament Heroes. By Clarence E. Macartney. Cokesbury Press, Nashville. Price $1.50.

This volume of sermons is made up of eighteen biographical studies of Old Testament characters. The list is well chosen and forms a representative group. To each hero is attached a brief subject-description—an impressive miniature of the man under consideration. The style is clear and forceful, the argument convincing; and, along with the biographical treatment, are wholesome interludes of application to our own day. The author has a striking effectiveness in bringing out the characteristics of Old Testament heroes, and he uses each individual studied for the enforcement of responsibilities which rest upon us today, as they rested upon the men of that time. Each study is intensely evangelical without being dogmatic, and is cheerful and uplifting without compromise of the demands of righteousness and truth.

From the Pyramids to Paul. Edited by Lewis Gaston Leary. Thomas Nelson & Sons, New York. Price $3.

A collection of twenty-one papers on a variety of subjects, prepared by former pupils and professional colleagues, in honor of the seventieth birthday of Dr. George Livingstone Robinson, of Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago. The first paper is devoted to Dr. Robinson himself, and the others deal with Biblical archaeology and with phases of religious thought and theological interpretation to which Dr. Robinson himself made notable contribution. The list of authors includes many able and eminent scholars from many lands. Each paper is complete in itself, and the unity of the book must be found in the purpose for which it was created and in the devotion of those who made contribution to it. But any one interested in religion and in religious literature will find here, aside from the purpose of those who planned it, a variety of subject matter, and an ability of presentation which will amply repay the reader for his investment of time and money.

The Final Failure of Christianity. By Lawrence W. Neff. The Banner Press, Emory University, Ga. Price $1.

This little book of seventy-six pages is devoted to a Christianity of which St. Paul is declared to be the author, as against a Christianity of which Jesus was the example. As we see it, the book makes a plea for a religion of personality in which all the distinctions of Jew, Gentile, heathen, pagan and Christian shall be dissolved. It denies a religion based upon a blood atonement, classifies our Christianity as a system of Pauline metaphysics akin to the teachings of Buddha, Mohammed and the pagan philosophers. The author seems to assign to Jesus, not a place of Christ, but that of being an accidental example and pragmatic philosopher of an indestructible goodness in man. The book capitalizes scientific prejudices against Christianity as it is, but offers nothing in its stead except the nebulous and undefined ideal of Jesus. It makes Paul worse than a fanatic—he is a theological impostor who combined Hebrew and Greek philosophy for the gratification of personal ambitions, an opportunist who placed personal ends above integrity. The author discusses the Pauline doctrine of Woman, Marriage, Freedom, Election, the Suppression of Personality, and Sin as a residuary deposit without ethical content. He refers to the doctrine of the cross as "a syllogistic salvation with interlocking gears by means of which a particular lever of logic is pulled and a manufactured product is ground out like grist at the farther end." Salvation by faith, is referred to as practically "a false alarm;" and the unwisdom and dishonesty of the ministry are ingeniously caricatured by, "as wise as doves and as harmless as serpents in their attempts to handle the high explosives with which the three genuine gospels are packed," and their "facing the necessity of speaking agreeable things to the constituency which feeds and clothes them." For ourselves, we may say that we have not so learned either Christ or Paul, and we can not agree with the position which the author defends.

VALUES

By J. A. Teague

It is said with authority that Micheal Angelo's "Moses" would be cheap at one hundred million dollars, that most magnificent of statues, now in the church of "St. Peter in Chains," Rome. What is there about this piece of stone that makes it worth a king's ransom?

And what would it be worth individually to you and me? Why does the Catholic Church value it above any material thing they might be offered in exchange for it?

Does not this master-piece of sculpture represent or symbolize something more than the mere chiseler's art, or something more than its model being Moses, our inspired law giver? Back of it all, do we not rather see a symbol of the eternal, an expression of The Paraclete carved out of stone, directed by the same spirit that thundered on Mt. Sinai and gave to Moses the basic laws that govern all civilized nations of the earth?

We plebeians are told that we must cultivate a taste for, and an appreciation of these products of the higher arts, which is evidently true to a certain extent. However, there are higher heights of sublimity that are within the reach of every one, more substantially inspiring than any sculpture or painting, though it be by Michael Angelo himself.

Moses, as well as Angelo, was a mere creature, servant of visible expressions, not the potter but the clay, let us broaden our vision, widen the scope, and take a look at the Creator, the visible truth in all its simplicity, not of stone but flesh and blood, "And thou shalt call his name JESUS."

"Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth."

If the world puts a value of one hundred million dollars for a dead image of sculptured stone, what kind of value should we put on the Creator that made the creature that carved the stone?

The Agnostic might say, "We do not accept your theory that Jesus was the creator of either Moses or Angelo." And we might, as sensible people, believe as he does provided he had any authority for his conclusions, other than man-made theories or doubtful hypothetical reasonings of the limited finite mind of man.

We may not have the "Artistic Temperament" to fully enjoy the interpretation of the so-called fine arts, but thank the good Lord, the sublimest height that is possible for any human to reach is available, even to those that are uncultured, and ignorant. What stone image or painted canvas, could compare with the majestic beauty, the life giving principles brought to all men by the lowly Nazarene, it is to be regretted if we cannot see and enjoy the things that are classed as "artistic," but it is no disgrace or sin if we are unfortunate enough to be limited along these lines. But it is pitiful, indeed, when we are deaf, dumb, and blind to the beauty of life as was demonstrated by Jesus, not only beauty, that fadeth not away, but permanent, victorious vision that recognizes not the evil or ugly.

OLD AGE—CAN IT BE MADE HAPPY?

By D. W. Heidelberg

In the 10th verse of the 90th Psalm we are told by the Psalmist, "The days of our years are three score and ten, and if by reason of strength they be four score, yet is their strength, labor and sorrow." It is meant to be taught by this scripture that after we have reached the age herein allotted it is impossible to live a happy life? If so none of us should want to live beyond the allotted age.

The life of Robert Byers as given in a recent number of the Nashville Christian Advocate shows that one can be happy after he has reached the allotted age.

Byers became paralyzed, and his paralysis reached the centers of sight and hearing, and later he became totally blind and deaf. Lying motionless in his bed he could only think of his plight, conversing in slow sentences to his few friends who came to see him. Finally he entrusted to a few friends an idea which had dawned in his mind. "I have many friends, but there are other blind people, particularly children." He asked each of these friends to bestow a small gift as a birthday offering for a needy child. He would combine these gifts using the money where it would do the most good.

In 1925 Robert Byers still lying motionless in his tiny bed was receiving gifts from approximately 1,500 contributors scattered all over the world. Their donations amounted to between $500 and $6000. With this money Byers is helping blind boys and girls from twenty-one different lands. The trail of this kindness ran from Ceylon to China and from Figig to Brazil. Powers is now in his declining years and is blind and otherwise afflicted. He is nevertheless happy as will all other blind and afflicted persons be in their declining years who spend their time as did he.

Husband and wife should be kind and gentle towards each other. If in a fit of anger you should speak unkindly towards your mate you should never fail to ask forgiveness. They should never discontinue their expressions of admiration towards each other. We not only like to be loved but like to be told that we are. The affectionate kiss so often indulged in in the early part of married life should never be omitted even after the hair becomes white with the frost of many winters and the forehead furrowed from age and sacrifice.

One of the happiest women I ever saw was one who lost her husband many years ago when he was 92 years old, and she is now ninety years old and her hair is as white as cotton and her face beams with happiness though she is almost deaf and blind.

BAHALA CHAPEL HOME-COMING

On Sunday, August 11, a home-coming service will be held at Bahala Chapel, Georgetown charge. The revival services will begin on Sunday night, August 25, and extend through August 30, and Rev. G. E. Allan, the pastor, will do the preaching. The song service will be led by Rev. D. W. Ulmer of Taylorsville. The public is cordially invited to both events.

T. B. HARRIS.

BUS TRIP TO LAKE JUNALUSKA FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

A bus trip to Lake Junaluska for young people who wish to attend the Young People's Leadership Conference, August 15-27, is being planned for those from Mississippi. The total expense will not be more than $30, which includes room and board, ground fee, books, and bus transportation both ways. The bus will be comfortable and carefully chaperoned.

If you are interested, write one of the following: Those from the Mississippi Conference write Miss Louise Denson, Millsaps Building, Jackson, Miss.; those from North Mississippi Conference write Rev. W. C. Newman, Grenada, Miss.

TO THE PASTORS AND MEMBERS OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

I wish to thank the pastors and members of the Greenwood District for their splendid co-operation in helping to make the Advocate campaign a success in our District. The pastors have worked untiringly and the people have co-operated beautifully. In many instances the effort to raise the assigned quota was no less than heroic. The spirit that enabled us to reach our goal is the fine spirit that has been manifest throughout the District the entire year. No presiding elder has ever had better support and co-operation than this elder has received in all the work of the District.

Brother pastors, we now have the $100.00 with which to establish that scholarship at Grenada College. If you have a young woman within the bounds of your charge who would like to make application for this scholarship, please forward her application to me at once. A committee will be appointed to award the scholarship, but all applications should be sent the presiding elder at once. Again thanking you, and with best wishes always,

Yours fraternally,

A. T. McILWAIN, P. E.

VICKSBURG

The Louise Preston Union in the Vicksburg District, composed of the Yazoo City, Eden, Louise, and Silver City churches, met at a camp on Wolf Lake for a picnic on Friday afternoon, July 19. There were about forty young people present with three pastors. Before the picnic supper was spread there were boat rides and a few games. During the supper it was noticed the preachers were most co-operative. After that there were games, jokes and songs, accompanied by a violin some one had brought along. The picnic ended with "Blest Be the Tie," and the Young People's benediction.

There is the probability of a special treat for the young people of this Union at the next meeting, which will be at Louise on Friday night, August 30. You will be hearing from us later about that. In the meantime, remember us, and hope for our success in making our Union "All for Christ."

The young people of the Silver City Methodist Church have reorganized recently, with a new and competent counselor to encourage them. They have taken the responsibility of conducting prayer meeting during the summer and there has been a gradual increase in interest and crowds from one week to the next. For the month of June these young people sent in more than their monthly mission pledge.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

Although practically nothing new was written into the Discipline for the next twenty years, there was not an hour when slavery was not one of the living issues of the church. It was during this time that there occurred the contest over the election of a delegate to the British Conference, which resulted in the election of William Capers, a slaveholder, over Wilbur Fisk, a non-slaveholder, by a vote of 82 to 72.

In 1836 the Committee on Slavery, through John Davis, the chairman, reported: "Resolved, etc., That it is inexpedient to make any change in our book of Discipline respecting slavery, and that we deem it improper further to agitate the subject in the General Conference at present." This same Conference then took a vigorous and almost a unanimous position against the aggressions of the abolitionists. William Lord, delegate from the Wesleyan connection in England, and William Case, delegate from the Wesleyan Church in Upper Canada, gave great offence by their strong anti-slavery sentiments; and Nathan Bangs, William Capers and Thomas A. Morris were appointed to reply on behalf of the Conference. George Storrs and Samuel Norris, delegates to the Conference from New Hampshire and Maine respectively, addressed an abolition meeting in Cincinnati during the sitting of the body. Stephen G. Roszell offered a paper, the preamble of which was a strong indictment of the abolitionists, followed by two resolutions: "1. That they disapprove in most unqualified sense the conduct of two members of the General Conference, who are reported to have lectured in this city recently upon and in favor of modern abolitionism. 2. That they are decidedly opposed to modern abolitionism, and wholly disclaim any right, wish or intention to interfere in the civil and political relation between master and slave as it exists in the slave-holding states of this Union." It is true that the author of the paper was from one of the conservative Conferences, but the paper was adopted by a vote of 122 to 11. Another incident of the Conference was the result of the circulation of what purported to be an Address to the General Conference, by Orange Scott. William Winans and J. Stamper brought it to the floor by the introduction of the following: "On motion, resolved that a pamphlet circulated among the members of this General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by a member of that body, containing reports of the discussion on modern abolitionism, palpably false, and calculated to make an impression to the injury of the character of some of the members engaged in the aforesaid discussion, is an outrage on the dignity of this body, and merited unqualified reprehension." The attitude of the Conference is shown again in the fact that these severe strictures were adopted by a vote of 97 to 19.

At the Conference of 1840, the Westmoreland circuit of Virginia, then a part of the Baltimore Conference, made complaint for a second time against the action of the Baltimore Conference in taking away its privileges under the law of the church. A special committee of nine was appointed to consider the case. The report said: "Resolved, by the delegates of the several Annual Conferences, in General Conference assembled, That, under the provisional exceptions of the general rule of the church on slavery, the simple holding of slaves, or mere ownership of slave property, in states or territories where the laws do not admit the emancipation, and permit the liberated slave to enjoy freedom, constitutes no legal barrier to the election or ordination of ministers to the various grades of office known in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church and cannot, therefore, be considered as operating any forfeiture of right in view of said election and ordination." And this interpretation received the approval of the Conference. Such is the history of slavery in the legislation of the undivided church.

From the very beginning of its history, American Methodism faced an impossible situation. For its anti-slavery action, it was never able to enlist the sympathy and support of the great majority of the Methodists; and its efforts were negated by a civil administration entirely beyond its control. There was an ominous meaning in the medley of action and inaction, of advance and retreat, which any student will appreciate. The church was controlled by good men, but they were wrestling with a problem which consistently defied every solution ever proposed. Church and state alike were rushing helplessly toward the abyss of civil strife. The Conference was trembling upon the brink of a disaster which it sought to avoid. The more the South insisted upon the recognition of its political rights, the more apologetic must be its defence of the practice and perpetuation of slavery. The more the North insisted upon the enormity of the crime of the institution, the more it must realize its part and responsibility for its existence. There was no desire to wreck the social fabric of the South, nor to paralyze Southern industry. All these facts gave pause to right thinking and right feeling men on both sides as the tide of events swept on. No side gained a complete victory and all sides lost. In the records of the church we find but few instances of discipline or expulsion under the rule prohibiting slavery. A man named Tomkins, who lived in North Carolina, was expelled for selling a slave, and Bishop Asbury refused ordination to Philip W. Taylor of Kentucky because he owned slaves. There were other cases, of course, but they were so few as to create no serious agitation among those who were opposed to the rule.

The superficial student of these apparently dilatory and chaotic proceedings is apt to feel that in the end there was an abject surrender to a spirit of defeatism in the church. Such, however, was by no means the net result of the long and desperate struggle within the ranks of Methodism. The Methodist Church probably furnished the widest and the most effective forum in America for the development of anti-slavery sentiment. Had it not been for the ferment of opposition which it propagated, emancipation might have been delayed for a generation. It is true that the action regarding slavery was intermittent and progress was not consistent, but the church did not fail. There was no greater factor in the movement against slavery than the Methodist Church; and, despite all opposition, the South had a share in bringing about the emancipation of the slaves. Its overwhelming economic interest in the institution determined the attitude of the section as a whole, and there could be no organized opposition to slavery except at the peril of those who dared to undertake it. But there were thousands of people in the South who were as sincerely opposed to slavery as were any in the North. They were simply crushed under an avalanche of opposing sentiment; and in the very nature of the case their virtue has not been enhanced by a share of credit for a popular and victorious cause.

It was inevitable that militant opposition to slavery would focus in the North, where there was a friendlier and more detached feeling. Memorials signed by five hundred preachers and ten thousand members were sent to the General Conference of 1840. These petitions were largely from non-slave-holding sections of the church. The North was practically free from slave-holding, but it was not a unit against the institution. There were many instances of unfair and unjust treatment, even persecution. Bishop Hedding was attacked by the abolitionists; Orange Scott and LeRoy Sunderland were charged with slander; Charles K. True, James Floy and Paul R. Brown were tried by the New York Conference; and Lucius C. Matlack, an abolitionist, was refused admission into the Philadelphia Conference and, notwithstanding the fact that his gifts, graces and usefulness were unconditionally approved, he was subsequently refused a renewal of his license as local preacher, by the quarterly conference of Union charge in Philadelphia. Even after the separation, dissensions continued in the North until after the war.

The anti-slavery movement constitutes one of the most tangled skeins of American history; and it is vain for any group or organization to claim entire credit for such a nation-wide social reform. It represented a constant growth of sentiment and ideal, with numerous shiftings of its organic center. There were many factors which contributed to the achievement, but no sharply defined point of origin can be traced. Back of all efforts, no matter by what name they are known, was the Christian Church—the motivating and inspiring influence. Without the spiritual dynamic which it furnished, the Negro might be in slavery still.

The collapse of anti-slavery agitation as a legislative proposition, marked the beginning of a program of personal crusading; and the organization of the anti-slavery cause independently of either political or church connections. In 1835 more than a million pieces of literature were distributed and a staff of fourteen lecturers was maintained. In the forefront of this final phase of the abolition movement was Charles G. Finney. He was an evangelist, not an anti-slavery agitator; but his deep religious convictions gave him interest in every variety of social problem, or proposal for the betterment of mankind. Along with his evangelism, he espoused the cause of temperance; he attacked the social vices of great cities; and in like manner the slave became the subject of his militant appeal. He foresaw the danger of the uncontrolled agitator, and he said such would carry the nation "fast into a civil war." He said further: "Unless the public mind can be engrossed with the subject of salvation, . . . the church and the world, ecclesiastical and state leaders, will become embroiled in one common infernal squabble that will roll a wave of blood over the land." In this Finney proved to be a prophet indeed, for the anti-slavery movement lost its missionary motive and culminated in a bitter and bloody sectional war from which we have not even yet recovered.

The militant leader of the anti-slavery crusade, the man who probably deserves to be ranked as the high priest of the cause, was Theodore Dwight Weld, in many respects the greatest of Finney's converts. Although his activity was outlawed at Lane Seminary, he won a hearing for the most unpopular cause ever championed by a social leader. He organized the "Lane Rebels" and with the financial support of the Tappans of New York, and other independent literary and political leaders, he cemented the opposition to slavery and crystallized into action and achievement that which had been wrought out at the forge of the church.

It is generally assumed that the anti-slavery cause was pre-eminently the projection of Northern virtue and philanthropy. It is easy to form such a conclusion, because opposition to slavery would not be tolerated in the South, and because of secession and the war. It is not necessary and it would not be true to deny the great place which the North had in the movement for emancipation; but it should be remembered, also, that there was a large contingent of Southern men and women

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. J. W. Booth completes his Advocate quota and makes in addition a good report of his work at Houma, La. He is doing an excellent work in our French field.

Rev. L. W. Cain, Winnsboro, La., with fifty per cent of his benevolences raised, and the machinery of his charge running smoothly, says that he is "happy on the way."

Rev. G. W. Pomeroy, of DeRidder, La., charge, is attending a pastors' school in Chicago. He went by way of Washington, D. C., and expects to be gone about two weeks.

Mangham charge, under the leadership of Rev. D. W. Poole, is making progress. A good meeting at Little Creek has just been concluded. Rev. J. D. Fomby of Waterproof did the preaching.

Rev. George H. Jones has held four daily vacation Church Schools on his charge, Montrose, Miss., and is now concluding his round of revivals for the churches. We hear good reports of his work.

Rev. J. A. Wells, of Glendale charge, Jackson, Miss., who is busily engaged with his revival campaign, says that he has been much occupied this year with efforts to meet past due financial obligations of his church.

Brother H. L. Scarborough writes: "Please allow me to express my full agreement with Brother Wasson's cogitations on the Mississippi school system. He thinks the position is founded in common sense and is thoroughly sound.

The enterprising leaders of the young people of the two Mississippi Conferences are planning an overland trip to Lake Junaluska, by bus. The total cost of the trip to be $30.00, and that includes board, room, books and ground fees.

Rev. D. E. Vickers reports that church work on the Brooklyn and Bond charge is moving along auspiciously. He has received twenty-three members into the membership of his church, and nineteen of them have been on profession of faith.

We regret to note the death of Mr. James G. Leavell, a grandson of the late U. S. Senator J. Z. George, of Mississippi. We knew Mr. Leavell in high school at Carrollton. His death occurred in a Greenwood, Miss., hospital, following a short illness.

Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., under the energetic and capable direction of Rev. Otto Porter, is having a great year. Brother Porter's work this year will certainly not fall below the standard of effectiveness which he has set in his ministry.

Rev. G. F. Winfield, the enterprising associate president of Whitworth College, is making an aggressive campaign for students this summer. He has had marked success in other years, and we look for a great enrollment for Whitworth this fall.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Christian Keener, whose illness we announced a few weeks ago, is still quite seriously ill in a Baton Rouge hospital. We understand that she was quite frail to begin with, and her illness has taken much from her resistance.

Rev. W. N. Duncan, of Tunica, Miss., has been much absorbed with an unusual amount of sickness in his own family and among his people lately. A number have had to go to hospitals in Memphis, and such cases bring both work and anxiety for the pastor.

A feature of the annual tabernacle meeting at Carrollton, just closed, was a memorial service in honor of that splendid and public-spirited layman, the late J. R. Bingham. According to The Conservative, the morning service of July 21, was devoted to his memory.

Rev. Ellis Smith says he has been a "little under the weather," but the report for Abbeville charge, of which he is the pastor, does not show it; and his threat to give the editor and the business manager a licking, without assignment of cause, does not sound sickly.

Dr. H. F. Brooks, Tupelo, Miss., remembers the Advocate this week with a good list of subscribers. He has made a remarkable record this year, having received 127 into the membership of his church, and with every indication of a successful conclusion of his year's work.

Mrs. C. C. Miller, of Franklinton, La., is quite seriously ill in a hospital at Bogalusa, La., according to information that came to us a day or so ago. She has many friends throughout Louisiana who will be sorry to know of her illness. We trust, however, that it may be of short duration.

Mr. A. M. Mayo, veteran church school superintendent and wide-awake member of Lake Charles church, sends us a calendar of the First Baptist Church of his city, with two articles marked. The chief article gives four reasons for the church paper, and the other gives a quotation from John Wesley in which he tells Charles that the Methodists "die well."

It is with sincere sorrow that we record the death of Mr. J. A. Petty, who for the last few years has made his home in Mandeville, La. His name was long associated with the affairs of Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, and he was the builder of the Educational plant at Rayne Memorial Church. He was a true and worthy man, and was loyal to his church.

Mrs. B. F. Jones, of Brookhaven, Miss., continues quite ill, according to a news note in the last issue of the Lincoln County Times. We share with her many friends the hope that she may soon be much improved and that she may find strength to bear her illness. Her many friends in Mississippi have graciously remembered her with flowers and with cards of greeting.

Rev. J. D. Simpson, pastor at Olive Branch, Miss., reports that he has just closed a very successful meeting in which he was assisted by Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Holly Springs. There were 15 additions to the church; twelve of them on profession of faith. He says, too, that his recent quarterly conference was after the old order, and was in many respects the best of the year.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found a letter from Rev. W. F. Henderson, our pastor at Oil City, La., concerning an accident in which both he and his wife came near to losing their lives, and from

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

Zone number three of the Monroe District held its quarterly meeting at Buckner early in July. Mrs. C. W. Berry, Sr., zone leader, presided.

Mrs. H. W. Rickey, of Gilbert, gave the opening devotional and Mrs. L. W. Cain, of Winnsboro, led in prayer. Musical numbers were given by Mrs. Biggs of Alto, Mrs. W. L. McDuff of Chase and Mrs. Noble Hatch of Buckner.

Short talks on the work were given as follows: "Houma Day," Mrs. Register of Winnsboro; "Spiritual Life Group," Mrs. Mecom of Wisner; "Mission Study," Mrs. Frank Hatch of Buckner; and "Twenty-fifth Anniversary," Mrs. Fay Walter of Winnsboro.

Mrs. D. C. Metcalf, district secretary, was present and gave much help and information to the auxiliaries present.

A social hour concluded this fine afternoon of fellowship.

St. Mark's Community Center has recently closed a very fine vacation school. Children of many nationalities were in attendance. Deaconess Stroup was principal of the school.

Miss Lydia Mickal was in charge of the primaries, Deaconesses Margaret Hodkins and Dorothy Lundy in charge of juniors and Deaconess Verna Webster in charge of intermediates. Some very interesting handwork was done by the children and the periods of worship and study were most helpful and instructive.

The swimming pool is the main attraction at St. Mark's just at this time. Many children of this community come daily to swim.

Commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Margaret Williamson Hospital, a jubilee celebration was held on the hospital grounds in Shanghai China.

This is a union mission hospital for women and children and founded in 1885. The missionary women of Southern Methodism share in the support of this institution.

Among the congratulatory messages received on this occasion was one from Madame Chiang Kai Shek, first lady of China, who spoke of the hospital as "a monument to unselfish devotion to a plan on the part of noble-minded foreign women to help the Chinese people."

Last year 4,000 patients were cared for in the hospital and more than 30,000 out-patients received treatment in the dispensaries.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

SOME THINGS TO DO IN AUGUST—

1. Plan coaching day for mission study leaders.

2. Make check on "World Outlook" subscriptions.

3. Auxiliaries in Meridian District send boxes to Meridian Wesley House at Meridian, and to Moore Community House, at Biloxi, and to Biloxi Wesley House, at Biloxi.

4. (a) Observe day of prayer for peace between Italy and Abyssinia, August 18. (b) Study carefully the following recommendations made at our 1935 annual meeting by the committee on Christian Social Relations:

CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP AND LAW OBSERVANCE

Believing that as Christian citizens we should use every available means for influencing public opinion with intelligence and discretion on matters of vital importance, we recommend:

1. That women qualify for using their suffrage by: (a) a careful study of candidates for public office and of issues; (b) by enlisting other voters; (c) by sponsoring a new approach to our study of citizenship through reading groups; (d) by the use of Christian Citizenship packets of literature.

2. That we continue to work for better movies through an appraisal of their constructive and entertaining features. We further suggest the use of pamphlet guides and reviews of movies in current periodicals.

3. That we re-affirm our attitude on lynching and continue a vigorous program of education by (a) urging that one of the quarterly zone meetings be devoted to a panel discussion of lynching, with "A New Public Opinion" and other literature as source material * * * and that we continue to press the signing of pledges against lynching. (b) That superintendents of auxiliaries at county seats secure signatures of sheriffs to the pledge and that a further study of proposed anti-lynching legislation be made.

4. That we launch an intensive program for temperance education by (a) making a study of state laws on the teaching in the public schools of the effects of alcohol; (b) of the observance of these laws in the schools; and, (c) by co-operation with such organizations as the W. C. T. U., the Business Men's Foundation and the Anti-Saloon League.

5. That we work to create public opinion on questions of civic righteousness through appeals to the press and radio service, and that we seek to reflect the guiding principles of our Christian religion in our teaching and daily living.

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Last week we brought you a message from the Christian Social Relations superintendent relative to a certain measure before Congress. This week we are giving you the second measure. people, Aubrey Williams and Miss Josephine Roche, for the general advice and counsel, with a staff of young people to handle the project. Here is an opportunity for the administration to include Negroes in the program, yet it is quite possible that this may not be done. Unemployment and idleness is a problem with Negro youth as it is with the young white people."

The board that will be set up will get into action quickly because public opinion, which has been sorely perplexed by the youth problem, will support the move generously. Our part, and we must act at once, is to see that Negro youth be given the benefit of the plan to the full extent of their need. To do this we must convince the two members already named that they must appoint a trained Negro staff to work on the boards in order that the work will be carried on in an impartial manner.

Will you write Miss Josephine Roche, office of Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C., expressing your position on this subject? And will you get other individuals and organizations to write also? AT ONCE.

Miss Priscilla Walker, one of our own North Mississippi girls, a missionary to Mexico at home on furlough, is in the Baptist Hospital with a very serious throat trouble. Many of you know Priscilla personally for she has been to many of your Annual Conferences. Most of you know of her because you sent her through Scarritt and sent her graduation presents when we meet at Washington. I am sure you will wish to follow up these pleasant remembrances by writing to her while she so needs a cheering word.

LAKE ARTHUR INTER-MEDIATE CAMP

By Lillie Mae Pomeroy

As this goes to press, young people from all over Lake Charles District will be getting ready to spend a glorious week together at Lake Arthur Camp Ground August 5-10.

Five days of fellowship, study, fun, inspiration and well-rounded Christian living.

The leaders have planned a well balanced program that will help the intermediates to have a better understanding of the word, "I Would Be True."

The cost of the camp is $5.00 for the five days. Boys and girls from 12 to 16 are urged to be present.

PINE GROVE HOME-COMING

All former presiding elders, pastors and members of the Pine Grove Church, Sibley charge, are urged to be present for an all-day home-coming at the Pine Grove Methodist Church, August 4. The program being under the direction of Miss Mary Mims, assisted by the pastor.

Have just closed a good revival at Dubberly and am now in a revival at Evergreen, Rev. R. H. Staples of Couchatta doing the preaching. Large crowds are attending and indications are for a great revival under the direction of this great man of God.

Sincerely yours

L. A. CARRINGTON.
Pastor Sibley charge.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON AUGUST 4.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

JOSIAH (A RELIGIOUS REFORMER)

Fifty-seven years had passed since "good King Hezekiah" died. The two generations which might have revered his memory and followed his example had given place to those who had grown up under the wicked reigns of Manasseh and Amon, and who were trained in vice and schooled in the worship of idols, a worship made convenient by shrines in every part of the land, as well as by placing images in the very Temple of God. As ever, there was a "remnant" of the faithful, and these preserved the records of the Mosaic Law, observed the true worship, and planted good seed in the heart of the child-king, Josiah. What they could do seemed little enough, but they changed the course of history. Regardless of popular opinion, good is more fruitful, more abiding, and more contagious than evil.

Josiah began his good work by repairing the Temple. There a roll of the law was discovered and called to his attention. Its teachings brought a new sense of his own short-comings, as well as of the wickedness of his people. He caused them to assemble to hear the reading of the book and then and there pledged his own loyalty to God in solemn covenant, and his people followed his example, vowing to perform the words of the covenant "with all their heart and all their soul." "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice." Good laws are ineffective without good officials. The attitude of the White House toward the Eighteenth Amendment ranged from indifference to scorn. It was not executed—it was murdered.

From renovating the Temple, Josiah moved to the reforming of the nation. By present-day standards, it was a ferocious reformation. Perhaps less force and formality with more persuasion and education, less of the priest and more of the prophet, would have been more effective. There can be no permanent reform without regeneration. It was well to accept the one Book, to concentrate in one Temple the worship of the one God, but Judah had drifted already into the rapids. The cataract was even then thundering the doom which fell as Josiah's reign ended. The harvest may be long delayed, but national and international reaping is as certain as their sowing. How absurdly premature the ringing of bells and blowing of whistles to celebrate the end of the World War in 1918—premature by at least 100 years! What men mistook for peace was but the beginning of more drastic and diabolical preparedness; agreements were but the armistice of exhaustion; treaties but "scraps of paper," already trampled in the mire and muck of national hatreds and rivalries.

Corporations and nations may have no souls, but they are weighed and found wanting, sentenced and destroyed, even as individuals. A temporary reform, sealed with a spectacular passover, cannot avert the penalty for years of deliberate misdoing. Thirty-eight years of Josiah cannot undo the work of fifty-seven years of Manasseh and Amon. Even in the midst of the depression, it is time for America to think of character and of God. Her brood-line is more appalling than her bread-line; her poverty of soul more significant than her poverty of purse. But somewhere, devout souls guard a Book and faithful hands guide the feet of a little child who shall lead this nation to a new covenant with God with a wisdom whose "ways are ways of pleasantness, and all whose paths are peace."

DISTRESSING ACCIDENT

Dear Editor: May I have just a little space, just this once? On June 27 Mrs. Henderson and I were on our way from Shreveport to Oil City, our home, when we were forced off the highway by a truck driver who hogged the road. It was turn out or meet him head-on; we turned out and turned over, completely demolishing our car. I was badly cut and bruised, and Mrs. Henderson was seriously injured, having been thrown 20 feet on her face; several bones were broken in her face, and she will probably lose the sight of her right eye. She spent some days in the Highland Sanitarium in Shreveport and is slowly recovering, but it will be some time before she is her old self again. Many messages from friends over Louisiana, with flowers galore, came to us, all of which we appreciate more than we can express in words. I want to thank the following brethren of the ministry whose visits cheered our hearts in one of the darkest hours of our lives, when for days we did not see how she could recover: G. F. Sexton, J. F. Wilson, A. C. Lawton, J. R. Roy, R. M. Brown, A. M. Wynn (who drove 50 miles to see how we were), Rev. B. F. Wallace, pastor of a Shreveport Baptist Church, who came three times.

Yours very truly,

W. F. HENDERSON, JR.

REV. R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH
ON TOUR

Dear Mr. Editor: In the hope that a few lines will be interesting to some of our readers (I know it will be to some), I am writing.

Our people at Tutwiler, Miss., a city of no mean inhabitants, granted me a thirty-day vacation and I am here in the Great West, along with 14 others—Boy Scouts—to my heart's content. I never dreamed that the scenery could be so awe inspiring. If one can take a trip through Carlsbad Caverns and Grand Canyon and not believe in God, surely he must be tough. I wish you had space and I had time and words that I might express the feelings I had while going through Carlsbad Cavern, New Mexico. The description of the cavern may be found in any good encyclopedia but one's feeling is the gift of God. The nineteenth Psalm took on new meaning for me.

I am profoundly grateful to our people of the Tutwiler charge who made this trip possible for me. I hope that I may be able to impart to them some of the information in a helpful way that I am gaining on this trip.

Hear this incident and I close: Yesterday while driving through the Rocky Mountains near Phoenix, Ariz., a large wild deer crossed the road immediately in front of our bus. It was a thrill to hear our boys shout and it looked as if R. E. Simpson would jump out of the bus.

My heart goes out to all of our people on this the Lord's Day, 9:30 a.m., July 8, and my prayer and wish is that we will get our quota, and more, of subscriptions to the Advocate. It seems to me that it's getting better all the time.

Very cordially yours,

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Gen. 26:25: And he builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the Lord, and pitched his tent there: and there Isaac's servants digged a well.

1. "Isaac's servants digged a well." Work feeds both tent and altar. Isaac's well is an ever-flowing source of power and refreshment.

We do not think of Isaac as an empire builder like the mighty Abraham. We do not think of him as clever as the shrewd, pathetic Jacob. But Isaac was a plain man of affairs. He does glorify the commonplace for us. Isaac and his servants worked with a will and with steady enthusiasm amid the rocks and heaps of earth. There is poetry, beauty, and eternal blessedness in common work. Isaac knew there were springs of water under the ground. With energy and patience he dug the well. It is high service to work honestly and faithfully. Jesus said "The Father worketh hitherto, and I work."

"Every mason in the quarry, every builder on the shore, Every woodsman in the forest, every boatman at the oar,
Hewing wood and drawing water, splitting stones and clearing sod,
All the dusty ranks of labor in the regiment of God,
March together toward His temple, do the tasks His hands prepare,
Honest toil is holy service, faithful work is praise and prayer."

2. "He pitched his tent there." Isaac looked after his home.

Solomon built a palatial residence. He spent thirteen years in building a mansion of cedars. (I Kings 7:1; 9:10). It took longer to build the elaborate house than to build the temple. It required seven years to construct the temple, but it took thirteen years to erect such a house. Of what avail such a palace? Only one son of Solomon is mentioned. And Rehoboam rebelled against his father and brought untold grief to him and others.

Isaac had only a tent. He pitched his tent in a short time. But he built a home. He transmitted the faith to his children. His family was devout. Through that home, he was a blessing to the world.

Whence come the recruits to the army of crime? Alas, from the ranks of children. We are told that two hundred thousand children each year are haled before the juvenile courts for delinquency. This figure does not represent the total of apprehended delinquency, for many cases are handled by the police and do not reach the courts. Many other cases are never apprehended.

Family unity and integrity are basic to the welfare and sound development of children. Far better the tent of an Isaac than a palace of Solomon unless there is an altar in that palace.

3. "He builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the Lord." This is the first thing mentioned. Before Isaac pitched his tent or dug his well at Beersheba, Isaac "builded an altar there, and called upon the name of the Lord." The man of the tent is the creature of time; the man of the altar endures forever.

It is in worship that man finds the inspiration to pitch his tent and dig his wells. It is in communion with God that man finds guidance for the home and for his labor. Sociology and Economics cannot explain everything. Religion explains the character of man.

"Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." Nor can man-made towers of Babel reach the heavens. It is only a spiritual foundation society can build. The sure way to build a sound civilization is to build brotherhood in the hearts of man. The sure way to build brotherhood is to worship God.

PRAYER

Our Heavenly Father, we are grateful for those who toil hopefully even amid unpromising surroundings. We are grateful for those who care for their families and minister to the needs of loved ones. We are thankful for the men and women who constantly call upon the name of the Lord.

We would build our altar today. We would call upon Thee for wisdom, grace, and strength to pitch the tent and dig the well for others. We offer our petition in Jesus' name.

VACATION SCHOOL,

Junior department studied "Workways in Japan." They learned mission songs, Japanese songs, and Bible verses. They made posters showing Japanese customs, ways of living, and the people at work. They dramatized life in Japan. The girls did embroidery pieces, while the boys constructed bird houses, book shelves, etc. They made a scrap book showing American homes and work ways. This will be sent to Japan. They brought money for missions in Japan. There were 35 children on roll. These came almost every day.

The intermediate department studied "We All Need Each Other." They made a relief map of Palestine, studied its ways of living in Bible times and now, showing the difference yet similarity. They became acquainted with the customs and people of Palestine as it was and is. They learned two psalms, two missionary hymns, and led worship services.

The girls embroidered table scarfs and dish towels to be given to the Missionary Society for use in the church. The boys made a book case for the intermediate department and three trellises to be used in special decorations at the church. There were 32 on roll. The attendance was good. They also wrote 30 world friendship cards to be sent to different missionary countries, expressing good will. They brought a missionary offering.

In each department flowers were brought each day and sent by committees to the sick and shut-ins. Notes were written in some cases.

At each recess there were play supervisors who helped the children to play Japanese as well as American games, helping them to be thoughtful of others, to share, to play fair.

On the day before the close, in the afternoon, there was a picnic for the whole school. This did not take the place of a morning session. We hired school busses and went five miles to a lake. Here besides boating all kinds of games were played, but still the spirit of kindness to others, to little ones, of fair play was developed.

On Thursday the children wrote invitations to the parents making them Japanese fashion, to come to the closing exercises on Friday evening. It was voted by the children to decorate the assembly room like a Japanese garden. Committees of children had certain parts to do. Trellises were covered with vines and flowers, lanterns hung, Japanese parasols put around, flowers arranged in vases Japanese fashion, Japanese scarfs used. Some of the young lady helpers and many of the children were in Japanese costume. The exhibit of work done was put up in each department room. Committees of children were hostesses and guides. Visitors were taken to each room before the program. The numbers on the program were taken directly from the work of each department. They were voted and arranged by the children themselves.

PROGRAM

Songs and worship service by the intermediate department. They sang, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," and "This Is Our Father's World," and repeated the One Hundredth Psalm which they had learned. A group of girls presented a scarf and dish towels they had made to the Missionary Society for the church. A group of boys presented the three trellises they had made, also the book case.

The beginners gave a song and some verses they had learned. Certificates were presented to fifteen.

The primary department sang "We Are All Children of One Father," and "Children of Many Lands." They repeated two missionary verses, and different ones told of things they had learned about Japan. Certificates were presented to 28.

The junior department gave a short playlet on Japan and World Brotherhood. The children had arranged it themselves. Twenty certificates were given to them and fifteen to the intermediate department, making 78 certificates given for perfect attendance and good work done.

The spirit of the school was good will to other nations and service. All voted to have it again next year.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANNING A VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL

1. Bring the matter before the local Church Board of Christian Education for approval.

2. Select some person as supervisor to organize and direct the school. This person, and as many of the other leaders as possible, should be the regular children's workers of your local church. One worker for every ten to fifteen children in each department or age-group will be needed.

3. Order pamphlet: "The Vacation School in Your Church, No. 77-H, 5 cents" (Pamphlet, "Vacation Schools on a Circuit, No. 77-H, 12 cents," is also good). Read the pamphlet carefully and all articles in the Elementary Teacher dealing with vacation school problems.

4. From the list "Vacation Church School Materials" (also in back of Church School Magazine for May), choose one course for each age-group or department to be included in the school. Your choice should be based on what was used last year and on the present interests and needs of the various groups. The courses on this list "starred," are especially good for the first school, as they give detailed information for daily sessions with instructions in full. Where envelopes of materials are listed, one envelope will be needed for each group of twenty-five children.

5. The workers should have their text books on hand at least two weeks before the opening of the school, so that they may study them carefully and make plans as suggested.

6. The supervisor should call the workers together several times before the school opens to:

- (a) Assign a definite responsibility for each worker.
- (b) Agree upon grouping of children.
- (c) Distribute space.
- (d) Arrange a tentative time schedule, (how long your sessions will run each day, and time given to each activity).
- (e) Discuss the purpose of the vacation school and what they hope to accomplish.
- (f) Study the materials on hand and collect other materials you will need and have them ready.
- (g) Plan carefully for the first day, and discuss tentative plans for closing session.

7. The daily sessions for the vacation school will continue from one to two weeks (or more), each session being divided into periods of study, worship, work and play. The type of activities will be in keeping with the enterprise. Use as much Bible as possible.

8. Visit each home to be represented if possible, let the parents know what you are planning to do for their children, invite them to visit the school. Announcements from the pulpit, in church bulletins, posters and local newspapers help to develop interest. Let the children help make plans when possible. Always keep in mind what you hope to accomplish toward the development of Christian character and a personal relationship with God, in the lives of the boys and girls you teach.

which he indicates there will be permanent injuries. We regret to learn of this misfortune, and we trust that the worst effect indicated in his letter may not come to pass. Such accidents should arouse the citizens of the country to a determined effort to stop the driving which makes a menace on every highway in the land.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR TO LAKE JUNALUSKA

Dr. Shaller Mathews, famous theologian and author, and dean of the Divinity school at the University of Chicago, will spend three days at Lake Junaluska beginning July 31. Dean Mathews will speak at the Missionary Conference held at the Lake July 31 to August 13.

On August 1 and 2 there will be luncheons at which all the preachers on the ground will lunch informally with Dr. Mathews and discuss modern Church problems.

Another distinguished visitor to the Missionary Conference at Lake Junaluska is Dr. Ralph Harlow of Smith College. Dr. Harlow is chairman of the New England division of the Congregational Board of Social Actions.

"THE PALMER CREEK YOUNG PEOPLE'S CAMP"

By Rev. James M. Lewis, Director

The Palmer Creek Young People's Camp was a combined camp, composed of the Christian Adventure Group and the Christian Culture Group of the Gulf Coast Union of the Seashore District. The date of this camp was June 24-29.

There were 63 registered in the Christian Adventure Group, and 35 in the Christian Culture Group. Every one of them met the requirements for credits, but because two were out of the required age limit they did not receive certificates; 62 of the Christian Adventure Group and 34 of the Christian Culture Group received two units each, making a total of 124 units in the Christian Adventure Group and 68 in the Christian Culture Group.

For those who may not think that I know what I am talking about, let me say that the representatives of the Young People's Division of the General Board of Christian Education at Nashville, Tenn., authorized this combined camp for special reasons.

This was the first Young People's Camp ever held in this section of the Seashore District, and it was pronounced by all as a glorious success. There were many "bright conversions" during this camp, and all the young people and most of the teachers and helpers caught a new vision of Christ and His Church.

The teacher staff was as follows: Miss Sophie Kuntz, Mrs. W. A. Welch, Mr. W. A. Welch, Miss Hattie Rea Lewis, Rev. H. W. F. Vaughan, Rev. Roy Wolfe, Miss Martha Robinson, and Rev. W. W. Murry, Jr., Director of Recreation; Mr. William Fulgham, and Director of Craft Work Miss Arnold. There were other helpers who added greatly to the success of the camp.

The Camp Fire consecration service conducted by Mr. Fulgham, of Jackson, Miss., on the last night of the camp, was the most impressive service of the kind I ever witnessed. Devils and Angels were both under the tabernacle at that hour, but the Spirit of the Lord prevailed. It was a sight that gladdened the heart of God and rejoiced the hearts of angels as those 98 young people, one by one, came up to the Camp Fire, laid their fagots on the fire, and said in effect, "As the fire burns this fagot, may God burn out all sin and bad habits in me. I dedicate my life anew to Him and His Church." Is it worth while to have a camp like that for our young people?

I am suggesting that two similar camps be held next summer in this section of our Conference—one at Palmer Creek Camp Ground and one at Salem Camp Ground.

There are some resolutions the young people passed on in the last business session which I hope to have published soon.

Long Beach, Miss.

ADVOCATE CIRCULATION CAMPAIGN REPORT

With this issue of the Advocate the Circulation Campaign officially comes to a close. However, the report below includes only subscriptions received through July 30, the date that this issue goes to press, and all subscriptions received on quotas during the intervening days will be counted. In our next issue, August 8, we will publish a full list of subscriptions received from the various charges. There is a possibility that several additional districts may secure their quotas before this time and win the $100.00 cash prize. The Monroe, the Meridian and the New Orleans Districts are within reach of their quotas and every effort is being made in each instance to go "over the top."

We greatly appreciate the loyal support of Presiding Elders, Pastors and Laymen who contributed to the success of the campaign, and trust that the paper will enjoy a large place in the advancement of Methodism and the Kingdom as it makes its weekly visits into the homes of its readers.

The following report covers subscriptions received during the week, July 24 through July 30:

Whole No. 4143.

Centenary Methodist Church, McComb, Miss.

CENTENARY METHODIST CHURCH, so named because it was founded on the hundredth anniversary of the founding of Methodism in America, is backed by years of interesting history. Three buildings have been used by this congregation. The first was a modest frame building much like the rural churches of today. The second was of brick, covered with ivy, and of an architectural design of rare charm and beauty. The lamented Bishop Galloway officiated at the laying of the cornerstone of the brick structure. The present church, a magnificent stone edifice, a plant costing $125,000, beautifully and practically equipped in all departments, is one of Mississippi's finest and most elaborate.

The three buildings were successively made necessary because of growth. The membership today is in excess of one thousand.

The members of Centenary Church are faithful. Only once since 1896 has this church failed to pay all of its obligations in full. This record is particularly significant in view of the fact that McComb is a railroad town, and during the depression the railroad industry was distressingly hard hit, this causing an unusual situation in the matter of unemployment in this city and in this church. Nevertheless, Centenary Methodist Church has carried on. The task has been difficult, but the reward sufficient to spur the officials and members to the acceptance of the ever impending challenge.

Rev. Otto Porter is the pastor; Dr. Chas. W. Crisler, the presiding elder. These men, and the faithful brethren of the ministry who have preceded them at this charge, have immeasurably contributed to the spiritual welfare of the kingdom as the results of their efforts through Centenary Church of McComb.

"A NEWS REPORT FROM LONDON," says the Religious Telescope, "states that a party of archaeologists, excavating for relics in Palestine south of Antioch, have reported the probable finding of the Holy Grail, or chalice used by Christ at the Last Supper. The report is of a small case containing a glass chalice which experts described as fine Roman work. It is dated roughly from 100 B.C. to 100 A.D." Please page Lord Tennyson!

A CASE OF EYE-STRAIN, is the caption of a facetious paragraph which we take from an exchange. The paragraph says: "A certain congregation noticed that the pastor had taken to wearing glasses. On inquiry it was found that he had strained his eyes looking for official members at the Wednesday evening prayer meeting." But why pick on the stewards? Our observation has been that their batting average is about as good as that of the rank and file of the membership.

"INTELLECTUAL ACHIEVEMENTS," says Canon Streeter, "just like material ones can be used for evil as well as good, and it is not always intellectual considerations that can persuade us to use these achievements aright. One of the reasons why the Church is failing is that it has relied too much on theological and intellectual arguments and forms. What the world needs is not less knowledge, but more goodwill to use the knowledge it has."

THE DEATH OF ALFRED DREYFUS, at the age of seventy-six, on July 12, recalls a French court martial of a generation ago which shook the Third Republic to its foundations. In 1894, Captain Dreyfus of the French army was charged with writing the "bordereau" which offered to betray French military secrets to Germany. In a secret trial, he was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment in Devil's Island. Five years later he was given a new trial through the efforts of Col. Picquart and the novelist, Zola, but was again convicted. He was then pardoned, and seven years later his innocence was completely established. A worthless adventurer named Esterhazy was proved to be the traitor; Dreyfus was restored to his rank in the army and was given the Legion of Honor. Clemenceau, who defended him, said that Dreyfus was the only one who never understood his case, and that he stood "abysmally below his affair."

DOCTOR G. CAMPBELL MORGAN, a British writer, teacher, lecturer and preacher well known in America, has suffered another break-down in health. He was giving a series of lectures at a recent conference in England, and it became necessary to suspend the course. He will probably not be able to work again before October. Dr. Morgan might be aptly described as a man of Genevan severity in manner and appearance; he has been a tireless worker for many years and in many lands; and his break in health will be the occasion of anxiety to many enthusiastic friends in America.

THE FREE METHODIST CHURCH, which was organized within the bounds of the Genesee Conference, New York, in 1860, has steadfastly refused to admit instrumental music into its worship. Last year a second referendum was taken on the removal of the rule, and the vote was 43 for to 112 against and the General Conference refused to hear the result of the vote, and ordered the ballots to be burned. It is said that even the young people oppose the change.

THE OREGON CONFERENCE of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Oregon, says the Scottish Rite News Bureau, has requested the Administration, in the form of a resolution, to design and put into circulation a stamp commemorating the four hundred years of the printed English Bible. It was requested that the stamp show on its face an open Bible. The request was made of the President of the United States through the Postmaster General, and copies were furnished the Governor of Oregon and the Oregon representatives in Congress.

IT APPEARS THAT ITALY, despite the pacific gestures of her dictator, moves steadily toward war with Abyssinia. It may be possible for the friends of Italy to find a shadow-justification for the conquest, in the practice of slavery there; but to the outsider it looks like a war of ruthless aggression on the part of the Italian government. It has the prospect of involving England as jointly interested in the administration of affairs in the Somaliland. Newspaper reporters may write flippantly of the marksmanship of the Abyssinian soldier; but the fact is that nothing but the breaking out of a pestilence or some other unforeseen disaster can save Abyssinia from being overwhelmed, in the event of war.

COLLEGE EDUCATION

The great number of trained men who have come from colleges and universities during the last few years, and the difficulty which they have experienced in adjusting themselves in the changed economic order has brought about a reaction against college training for the rank and file of the people. It is possible that there may have been some lack of guidance as to the vocational meaning and purpose of education. The feeling that college training is a highroad to ease and luxury can not do otherwise than end in disappointment. In academic circles, there seems to be a tendency to discourage the man of plodding type who would go to college, and an inclination to winnow him out in favor of, if not the more brilliant prospect, certainly the man who has greater promise of constructive leadership. It is argued that a college degree adds little to the effectiveness, or to the chances of a mediocre man for success in life; but that it adds a great deal to his discontent with the lot than may fall to him. We are not able to agree with either conclusion. To say that it adds little to the chances of success, is an assumption which can not be verified. It is a question about which one may speculate to his heart's content, but there is no method for measuring the subtle changes which have been wrought in the personality of such a man. On the other hand, the very discontent which academic training might generate is an incentive to and is the energy of progress. For our part, we believe that anything that raises the average of efficiency in the rank and file of the people is a no less important factor in civilization than is the training of commanders for those whose march may be undistinguished. Hence we are inclined to say with the urge and the optimism of the days when our college halls were thronged to capacity: "Young man, Young Woman, go to college." We believe that such advice is justified by every personal consideration, and that such effort is an imperative obligation of citizenship.

ABYSSINIA

The landing of Italian troops upon the inhospitable shores of Africa is another example of the reckless gamble of those who undertake the conquest of the jungles of the Dark Continent. The thermometer, at this season of the year, is said to stand at 122 degrees, and the soldiers can be allowed only two pints of water daily for all purposes. When the Portuguese invaders undertook the subjugation of Abyssinia in 1632, the fanatical devotees of Ethiopian religion exhibited amazing valor and fortitude in defence of their faith and their fatherland, even after two emperors had been persuaded to accept the rule of Rome. Gibbon says: "Whole legions were slaughtered on the field, or suffocated in their caverns; and neither merit nor rank nor sex could save from an ignominious death the enemies of Rome." But despite the merciless ferocity of the invaders, they were eventually expelled, and the new Emperor Basilides "restored to the wishes of the nation the faith and discipline of Egypt." Heat, the scarcity of water and tropical pestilence are natural defences of people who have been immunized by lifelong residence in the jungle. And, if the Abyssinian of today retains the valor and the fanatical determination of his ancestors, Italy and the Italian people may find their conquest a march of sorrow and suffering and victory a costly achievement.

A NEW FEATURE

During the past few weeks we have featured the educational institutions of our territory in the Advocate. It is now our purpose to give similar recognition to a church in every district of our three Conferences. We have written every presiding elder asking him to secure a cut of a church which has done outstanding work this year, and to furnish with it either a brief sketch of the work it has done, or a resume of important things which have transpired in the district this year. We require that a cut be furnished, as we will not be able to have cuts made at our expense. We can have them made cost to us, bill to be paid by those interested. The cuts may be  $3\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ , or  $4\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{2}$ , or  $5 \times 6$  inches. The longer to be the vertical dimension on the page. Please help us by sending cuts and sketches at once. Help us and let us help you.

CAMP MEETING AT MT. SEQUOYAH

Dr. Millar, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, is giving editorial promotion to a new feature for Mt. Sequoyah Assembly this year. It is a camp meeting for August 16-25 to be led by the widely known pastor-evangelist, Dr. R. P. (Bob) Shuler of Los Angeles, Calif. The time is late enough to give pastors an opportunity to share in a great season of spiritual refreshing after their own revivals have been finished. There could be no more fitting conclusion to the evangelistic effort of this section than a great camp meeting at Mt. Sequoyah, and no more aggressive and fearless leader could be found than Dr. Shuler, who will be assisted by Dr. Frank E. Day, of Minneapolis, and others. Let our pastors and people arrange to have part in this new and worthy venture of the assembly.

SELF GOVERNMENT FOR INDIA

The British Parliament has just passed an act conferring self-government upon India. The measure climaxes a contest of eight years' duration and is described as being the most momentous political event of the twentieth century. It cements 600 States covering 700,000 square miles of territory, with 350,000,000 people, into one great Indian federation. The move encountered strong and determined opposition in Parliament; and there was opposition among the Indian princes, who were opposed to such a gigantic scheme of centralization. There will doubtless be criticism by the British people; but it is altogether possible that the deed may prove to be the outstanding event of Premier Baldwin's political career.

YOUTH AND WAR

By Rev. D. B. Raulins, D.D.

It is reported that the Christian Endeavor young people in their recent international convention at Philadelphia were warned against making the anti-war pledge.

If youth wishes to make such a pledge let no adult leader protest. They have more at stake in war than have their adult leaders. One way to stop war is to cease to participate in it. They are entirely within their rights if they pledge.

Furthermore, youth is not without worthy precedent in the matter. A number of our most prominent and effective ministers, along with others, have made such a pledge. And they have seen war from both the inside and the outside. They decline either to participate in or bless another war.

They can be both Christian and patriotic and sign such a pledge. Uncle Sam himself has signed the pledge. He has sworn off.

You don't think so? What do you call this?

"The High Contracting Parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another.

"The High Contracting Parties agree that the settlement or solution of all disputes or conflicts of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them, shall never be sought except by pacific means."

That is what Uncle Sam has signed along with some sixty other nations. Is it merely a "scrap of paper?"

But the signing of the pledge against war does not mean a holiday for the signer. It may mean ostracism and prison. Conscientious objectors may be honored with the crown of martyrs.

However if the young men of the preceding generation were willing to go out and in war die to make the world safe for democracy, those of the present generation should be willing to sacrifice something for peace.

CAMPAIGNS

By A. W. Bryan

Some people believe in campaigns for every thing on earth except church campaigns. Most people do not like a church campaign for money and many "shy off" from a campaign to increase the religious fervor of the valley of dry bones.

At this time there is a great deal being said and plans being laid for the 1936 political campaign, both state and national, and it seems that we are already, knowingly or otherwise, paying our good money into a political swill barrel to perpetuate the evils of the day.

When the Eighteenth Amendment was being attacked by politicians and finally repealed we were told that the old saloon would not and should not return. This was only the story of the camel that only wanted to warm his nose in the travelers tent—now we have the same old saloon, with its familiar smell and hang-out crowd around the door. The same old blind at front door and gambling den in the back. The radio blaring and the usual drunk and half-drunk, loud mouthed patrons.

The state of Louisiana has recently blossomed out in every locality with a crop of slot machines. Local authorities pass the buck saying that the state gave permission to install the slot machines and that they (local authorities) can not override the state authority.

If the church members of this country had not lined up and voted with the brewery interests in the repeal of prohibition we would never have had the job to do all over again—but granting that many church people were misled and honest in their belief that the whiskey business could be "regulated" and be made a perfectly nice commercial business it now becomes their very grave duty to look about and see if the politician and brewery interests have kept their word. Are conditions better? Is there less whiskey consumed? Does "good whiskey" improve the morals and health of the younger generation who are patronizing the boot-legger? Has the boot-legger folded up his tent? Do you see more or fewer drunks on the street and under your nose every place you go?

The churches have always been the deadly enemy of the forces of evil and there is nothing that the politician dreads more than to be "put on the spot" by the churches. The church has a right to know what the office seeker stands for and above all else the good sense and honesty to vote as he prays.

I do not believe it is fair to the preachers for a congregation to sit back and expect him to do all the preaching against the evils of the day, and above all, shame on the crowd that would have a preacher soft pedal the glaring evils of his state and community just because there are some members of the congregation who are either directly or indirectly connected with the evils.

With the approaching campaigns, local, state and national, I believe that every Board of Stewards should lend the preacher every encouragement to plainly and sensibly call attention of the congregation to their duty in voting for men of character and demand of the office seeker an honest declaration of principles and if he does not go straight, go and talk to him instead of talking ABOUT how rotten conditions are—and get no place.

BISHOP CANNON ABROAD

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., sailed for Europe on the Berengaria, July 26, to attend meetings of several International Religious and Reform Bodies: Continuation Committee on Faith and Order will meet in Hindsgaul, Denmark, August 4-8; World Alliance for Peace through the Churches, at Chambray, Switzerland, August 12-18; Continuation Committee of Universal Christian Conference on Life and Work at Chambray, August 18-24. Bishop Cannon has attended meetings of all these organizations every year since 1920 as the representative of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He has been appointed a delegate by the College of Bishops to the World Conference on Faith and Order to be held at Lausanne, August, 1937. The meetings this summer will be especially important in shaping up the plans for the 1937 conferences.

A special meeting has been called at Montreux, Switzerland, September 1-3, by the International Temperance Union. As chairman of the executive committee of the World Alliance Against Alcoholism Bishop Cannon will attend this conference, reporting conditions in the United States and aiding in the formulation of international policies and programs. His report from the United States is both distressing and hopeful. The results of repeal have been so shocking in a tremendous increase of accidents and accompanying increase of drunkenness (especially among women and youth) crime, killing and maiming by drunken drivers, that such a great reaction has set in as to inspire hope for a speedy return of prohibition. Washington, the capital city, is today the disgrace of the nation with its multiplied drinking places and drunkenness. Virginia is so disgusted with its State Control System that it will soon repeal the law and join the other dry Southern States of Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia on the march back to National Prohibition.

DR HENRY M. BULLOCK

The newly elected associate professor of religious education at Millsaps College arrived last week for conferences with the faculty and administration of the college relative to his work in the department of religion, which will begin with the opening of school on September 11.

The administration of the college feels that Dr. Bullock will prove a valuable addition to the general life of the school. He will return to Jackson August 27 for special lectures at the Methodist adult summer conference, and will remain here then to assume his duties with the college when school opens.

Dr. Bullock is a young man, holding degrees of bachelor of philosophy from Emory University, and bachelor of divinity and doctor of philosophy from Yale. The dissertation which he wrote for his doctor's degree on The History of Emory University will be used as a basis for part of the celebration by that university of its 75th anniversary next year.

With a record of six years' experience in the department of religion at a college in Carlinville, Ill., where he served as active dean during the past year, Dr. Bullock comes to Millsaps with high recommendations for teaching ability. He is also equipped for teaching in leadership training schools, and has frequently spoken at young people's conferences and assemblies.

The Department of Religion at Millsaps has had a record of valuable service in training the young men and women of Mississippi in the fundamentals of religion. The catalog description of this department makes the following statement: "It may be observed that these courses of study are not offered for any special professional or pre-professional interest, such as the ministry or Christian life service, but generally for the training of the future laity of the Church universal."

A REQUEST

At the Conference, in November, at First Church, there will be a historical exhibit of First Church and of all the other churches in New Orleans. If you, who read this, have any pictures of the old churches or missions or of any of the workers, who were especially associated with them, or if you know of anyone who has anything that would be interesting for the exhibit, please communicate with Mrs L. M. Carré, 7732 Plum St., New Orleans, phone Walnut 1809-J. She will be responsible for the return in good condition any articles that are loaned.

MEETING OF THE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE OF THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION

The Appropriations Committee of the Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will meet in the office of the Board, 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Kentucky, Wednesday, September 11, 1935, at 9:30 a. m.

All applications must be approved by the Conference Board of Church Extension and in the office of the General Board on or before September 6, 1935. No application will be entered on the Calendar after this date.

enlisted with the crusaders of the thirties. Among them were some of the most effective leaders of the opposition to slavery. Outstanding were Marius Robinson of Tennessee; William T. Allen of Alabama; James Thome and James G. Birney of Kentucky; a Mr. Hedges of Virginia; Huntingdon Lyman of Louisiana; and Sarah and Angelina Grimke of South Carolina. James G. Birney was a slave owner, a lawyer in Kentucky and Alabama and twice nominated for President of the United States by the Liberty Party. He went North for the sake of his convictions on the slavery issue. The Grimke sisters were Episcopalians in South Carolina but when they went North they found hospitality, not in the church of their childhood, but among the Quakers. When it is remembered that enlistment against slavery meant expatriation, it is undoubtedly a great tribute to Southern conviction that so many and such capable men and women joined in the anti-slavery crusade and gave themselves in sacrificial service to the cause of slave-emancipation.

James G. Birney charged that the American churches were the bulwarks of slavery; and to expect that there would not be a clash between its material interests and its soul, must leave out of account the men and women who composed its membership. As we have pointed out, New England shipping was pro-slavery until the right to import slaves expired under the twenty-year Federal limitation. The South had rights and interests in the institution which were fortified by legal sanctions; and the Methodism of the South was pro-slavery because an overwhelming majority of the membership determined its policy. The North was anti-abolitionist because there were influences in that direction which it could not ignore. The North was ultimately captured by abolition; and the South withdrew under what it felt to be an ecclesiastical necessity. It may be true that on both sides there was too great regard for secondary considerations; but it is much easier to analyze and criticize events than it is to sponsor an opposite course in the face of stern opposition, or even to forecast the effect of a different policy.

In the course of events, the churches were disrupted and a social and sectional chasm was made which has kept people of a common blood, a common heritage and history, and kindred ideals apart to the hurt of the nation and the world. When all the facts shall have been sifted, all charges made and all credits allowed, it is probable that the responsibility for secession and the war will lie at the door of a hesitant national government. Only Congress had sufficient power and authority to deal effectively and justly with the issues of that period; and it temporized when it should have entered the breach and have borne bravely and heroically whatever odium might come as a consequence of meeting courageously the demands of a desperate situation.

After the tragic experiences of a great war, the attendant evils of an era of reconstruction, and a longer and sadder period of criticism and misunderstanding, we begin to appreciate the American heart on both sides of the slavery struggle. In the clear and dispassionate judgment of a period seventy-five years removed from the last smoldering embers of our national catastrophe, we come to know that there was an honesty of heart and purpose in all factions which was little understood in those fateful days of turmoil and strife. On the one side, deep and abiding convictions were sacrificed upon the altar of peace; and on the other, passionate yearnings of the soul were crushed under an avalanche of social and economic circumstance. With this survey of the ebb and flow of sentiment and action in church and nation, and of the valiant struggle of Methodism to preserve the integrity of its soul, we turn to the threshold of eighteen forty-four.

CHAPTER VIII. RENT IN TWAIN

The events of the General Conference of 1844 constitute a logical sequence of the facts and feelings which had been often recorded and ever with a more ominous emphasis—a culmination foreshadowed from the very beginning of the American societies. The first century of Methodist history, as we have seen, began in spiritual dearth, and it ended in ecclesiastical disaster. But the delineation of the events which led up to that catastrophe is not so simple a matter as the mere statement of the case might seem to imply. The events of this period truly form one of the most complicated chapters in the history of Methodism. The task of interpreting the upheaval which was the result of so many contributing causes, ancient and modern, social and economic, political and religious, would be difficult enough at best; and when the maze of fact and of conflicting interests and opinions is complicated by deeds and discussions reflecting the prejudices and passions of the men who were parties to the contest, the undertaking assumes proportions from which the strongest might sincerely wish to turn away. But after all, the worth of history does not lie in the embellishment of uncontested areas of progress; it is revealed through the discovery of evidences of greatness and virtue in the desolated and storm-swept zones found in the march of events.

For contemporary discussions of this entire subject, the student is referred to The Disruption of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by Myers; and History of the Great Secession from the Methodist Episcopal Church, by Elliott. It should not be overlooked, however, that the literature from which this period must be interpreted was produced under the smarting of wounds which only heaven could heal; and much of it might very well be expunged from human recollection, if such a thing were possible. The oratory had the pitch of anger and excitement, and the reasoning lacked the judicious poise and the balance of judgment which the seriousness of the hour demanded. A flood of sophistry and special pleading did more to inflame than to inform the Methodist public. The documents and volumes, whose yellowed pages embalm the story of that lamentable contest, reveal the desperate earnestness of good men in an effort to resolve difficulties which were too great for the powers of human wisdom and understanding.

The North had come slowly, steadily and, perhaps, with a measure of unwillingness to the necessity of taking an aggressive position against slaveholding, even among those honored with official position in the church. Its attack was greatly embarrassed by political sanctions which, as we have seen, formed an organic feature of national legislation. To this political embarrassment, was added the fact that the Discipline of the church had uniformly excepted the territory in which slavery existed, in conformity to state laws and where emancipation was prohibited, from the operation of the anti-slavery statutes. It was necessary, therefore, for it to justify the action of 1844, by an appeal to ecclesiastical principle which clashed with civil enactments, and to plead "expediency" for a course which could not be justified by the terms of either state or church law.

The South, from vital economic and social considerations, could not do otherwise than resist the attack. It naturally insisted upon the Disciplinary exceptions made in its behalf; and it plead the civil guarantees under which its industrial and social life had been developed. The representatives of the South in the General Conference of 1844, asserted that failure to respect the political and ecclesiastical immunities granted to that section would ultimate in the complete disintegration of the church, and the disruption of society itself. Its religious thinking was so thoroughly intertwined with its economic interests, and the political restraints regarding emancipation were such that, as a whole, it did not share the change in the currents of thought which were slowly bringing the world to feel that human slavery was a practice not consistent with the ideals of religion or the interests of civilization.

The problems of church administration, North and South alike, were directly affected, on the one hand by the slow-changing civil law, and on the other by the increasing sensitiveness of the religious conscience on the subject of slavery. The conflict on either side was less voluntary, no doubt, than we are apt to think. The law being mandatory in its processes, made an extremely difficult situation for those who would invoke or who might desire action in obedience to moral and religious principles with which such law chanced to be in conflict. We must, therefore, approach the delicate questions of this stormy era of Methodist history with these preliminary observations in mind; and we must give due credit on all sides for the tenseness of feeling which had developed, if we are to arrive at just conclusions as to what was done.

The struggle of 1844 and after is only indirectly chargeable to those who were the actors in the conflict. It was simply the time to which every Conference since 1784 had postponed its troubles. The postponement of trouble is the explanation of much that is implied in the rather cryptic and somewhat evasive records of the early Conferences. The Conference of 1844 is one of the landmarks which we must take into account in the survey of the course and progress of the two great bodies of episcopal Methodism. It was an act of consummate wisdom on the part of those who organized the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, that they took immediate steps to publish a volume containing the official documents and their own interpretation of the literature dealing with that momentous period in the history of the church. No greater tribute could be paid to their historical perspective than is recorded in their own words: "Your committee would further state, that we do not attempt to disguise the fact, that the movements of the Methodist Episcopal Church, both North and South, are at this time characterized by facts and circumstances, which will and must be referred to by generations yet unborn, as an important epoch in our history, and will stand paramount among the records of our beloved Church, until the Trump of God shall awake the dead." Every turn in the ecclesiastical fortune of Methodism since that time has verified the foresight and wisdom of the step taken for the preservation of those invaluable sources of Methodist history. The interpretation of the acts of the General Conference of 1844 and of the subsequent developments is a major responsibility of the historian who would make an adequate portrayal of the story of Methodism.

Outside of merely routine matters, the interest of the last General Conference of the united church revolved around Bishop James O. Andrew of Georgia, whose connection with slavery had suddenly become a source of irritation and the occasion for much agitation at the North. When Bishop Andrew was apprised of the feeling, his desire was to resign his office in the interest

Mississippi and Louisiana

Mrs. J. S. Pigott, of Zachery, La., says that she has been a subscriber for the Advocate for twenty-seven years, and that she can not get along without it.

Rev. Carl Lueg and Mrs. Lueg are on a trip to Florida, with a party of friends. Brother Lueg is doing splendid work at Slidell and he has earned the outing that has been given him.

A telegram from Rev. W. C. Scott, of First Church, Monroe, La., announcing that a list of eighteen subscriptions for his church was on the way, is in hand. Thank you, and thank your people!

Mrs. J. E. Wimberly, eighty-seven years of age and confined to her bed, finds the Advocate a source of joy and comfort each week, and we are glad. Her home is in Port Arthur, Texas.

We are indebted to Mrs. Lee Rush for an appreciated message which includes the entire office. It helps us greatly to be assured that we are making a contribution to the happiness of others.

Mrs. E. B. Foust, Houston, Texas, writes that the Advocate is like a letter from home to her. Thank you, and we hope to keep you in contact with your friends, and thus make life a little happier.

Rev. L. T. Nelson of Adams charge, Mississippi Conference, was assisted in a meeting recently by Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Brookhaven. We learn that the meeting was well attended and did much good.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Homer, La., is looking after every detail of his work as he has always done, and he finds time to write the Advocate a word of encouragement and the assurance of his interest.

Rev. W. F. Baggett, Kreole, Miss., Seashore District, made the Advocate glad with a handsome list from his charge. nineteen subscribers with a possibility of more to follow is simply fine for that work.

Dr. D. B. Raulins and family are on a motor trip to the Illinois home of Mrs. Raulins. Before their return they expect to stop for a time at Castle Heights Academy, where Dr. Raulins went to school.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, Purvis, Miss., is hard at work on his charge. He says that his difficulties are great, but he refuses to believe that they are not to be overcome. That is the spirit that wins in the end.

Rev. Lawrence L. Cowen, of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, continues his energetic ministry regardless of the season or the weather. Three hundred and three new members have been added to his church this year.

At the time of our going to press last week, we received a telegram from Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder of the Monroe District, saying that his district expected to reach its quota in the Advocate campaign, and so it did.

Miss Mavis Godbold writes that Rev. L. L. Matheny has just closed a good meeting at Bethesda church, in which he was assisted by Rev. L. P. Anders of McComb. The messages were of a high order and much good was done.

Dr. Dana Dawson, First Church, Shreveport, appears to have set up an August camp for the bishops. His Sunday services in the month of August will be filled by Bishops Dobbs, A. Frank Smith, Hay and Kern in the order named.

Rev. Rolfe Hunt, Lauderdale, Miss., has just closed a meeting at that place in which he was assisted by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Meridian. Rev. W. H. Lane, a former pastor, was a visitor for one day. There were four accessions on profession of faith.

Rev. O. S. Lewis of Brookhaven, Miss., is a loyal friend of the Advocate and a wide-awake pastor. He and his people are preparing for a series of special services to begin on the fifth Sunday in August. Dr. Virgil H. Fisher, of Houston, Texas, will be the preacher.

Dr. G. C. Ballard, a captain in the medical corps during the World War, a member of the Methodist Church and a native of Natchez, Miss., died in a hotel at Little Rock on Monday of last week. He was a brother of Dr. J. C. Ballard of Biloxi. Burial was in Natchez.

Rev. Floyd Lewis reports a very successful revival at Valley Park, Miss., in which he was assisted by Rev. Frank E. Dement, Jr. Eleven new members were added to the church membership, and the people were much pleased with the ministry of Brother Dement.

The lumber for the church to be built at Dulac for the Indians is on the ground, including the pews which were made and shipped knocked-down. All the material was the gift of Mr. T. C. Clinton, of First Church, Shreveport, and Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, the presiding elder, has greatly assisted in bringing the scheme to realization.

The editor and his wife have been honored with an announcement of the marriage of Miss Olivia Stephenson Weaver to Mr. Reber Fielding Boulton, the marriage taking place at Tupelo, Miss., July 23, 1935. The bride is the youngest daughter of the late Mr. R. A. Weaver and Mrs. Georgia Allen Weaver. We join the many friends in wishing the young couple a happy voyage through life.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, pastor at Hazlehurst, Miss., writes that he has just closed a campaign for $1420 on the church debt, and that this payment makes a total of $2660 which has been raised for that purpose this year. In addition salaries are paid to date, half of the benevolences have been raised, there have been twelve additions to the church, the Advocate quota has been raised, and the pastor has been voted a two-weeks' vacation. On September 1, he is to begin a revival in which he is to be assisted by Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala.

The secretary of the Local Board of Christian Education, of Crowley charge, La., writes that the adult division of that church sponsored a mother-daughter banquet on Thursday evening, July 25, in the social hall of the church. One hundred and fifteen guests were seated at the tables. Men of the church, in white aprons and caps, served the meal in true waiter fashion. An interesting program of music, readings and speeches followed. Mrs. Fadra Holmes Wilson of the faculty of Louisiana State University Department of Psychology, gave an inspiring talk to the mothers. Mrs. G. W. Dameron was toast mistress.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Avenue, New Orleans

The Missionary Society of Natchitoches entertained the membership and friends of the church Friday evening, July 25. The occasion was the celebrating of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the uniting of foreign and home missionary societies.

The program opened with music by Mrs. Agnes Saetre and prayer by the pastor, Rev. B. C. Taylor.

The playlet, "Her Heritage," was given in a most impressive manner by Mrs. Lee Ward and Misses Mary Stephens and Gertrude Palmer.

The history of Methodist women followed, with Mrs. W. T. Cunningham presenting "The Past," Mrs. Clyde Bostick, "The Present," and Mrs. B. C. Taylor, "The Future." All were dressed in costumes of fifty years ago.

Mrs. Cunningham told in her own attractive way of the beginning of the work and of uniting the mission boards. There was both pathos and humor in her message. She spoke of the days of "The Ladies' Aid," when the main thought was to make money to be spent in the local community. With this came suppers, suppers, suppers; ice cream, ice cream, ice cream; and oysters, oysters, oysters.

Mrs. Bostick gave a very thorough review of our present program, beginning with the Council and taking up the work of the Conferences, districts, zones and auxiliaries.

Mrs. B. C. Taylor, who is noted for her originality, was very unique in her presentation of "The Future."

In the cutting of the birthday cake during the social hour, Mrs. Cunningham was asked to blow out the candles and make a wish for the local auxiliary. Her wish (cannot we guess what it would be?) was that every Methodist woman in Natchitoches will become a member of the Missionary Society.

Mrs. S. M. Collins, Conference Superintendent of Bible and Mission Study, is attending the School of Missions at Mt. Sequoyah this week.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

Zone four of the Vicksburg District, held its third quarter's meeting with the Roxie auxiliary. Cane Ridge, Fayette, Greendale, Natchez, Nebo, Roxie and Washington were represented and Mrs. W. A. Coleman presided.

The morning program was featured by the Council anniversary; a report of the study class at the Pastors' School, held at Biloxi; a message from the district secretary, Mrs. T. H. Fore, and splendid reports from the auxiliaries. The afternoon session was devoted to a discussion of Wesley Houses and Bethlehem Centers led by the Fayette and Cane Ridge auxiliaries. At noon a delicious lunch was served at the Commerical Hotel, followed by a social hour.

Several Conference officers attended the zone meeting of the Meridian District, held at Pachuta. Among them were Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Quitman, president; Miss Ella Wayne Ormond, recording secretary and Mrs. D. L. St. John, district secretary.

Mrs. W. E. Williams of Quitman presided as zone chairman and was also in charge of the program on "Youth," presented by the Quitman society.

Raymond McClinton, a senior at Millsaps College, Jackson, spoke on "Problems Facing the Youth;" Miss Geraldine Mayo of Quitman, spoke on "The Challenge to the Youth of Today" and Mrs. Cottrell responded with an address on "How the Women's Society Will Meet the Challenge of the Youth."

* * *

Celebrating the silver anniversary of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Council, the Woman's Society of East End Methodist Church, Meridian, entertained at the church. Mesdames J. L. Neill, and E. M. Ford were in charge of the program and were assisted by twelve women who presented various phases of the work, the circle leaders served dainty refreshments to the sixty women present.

A total of 110 women enjoyed the picnic given at Hillcrest club by the Woman's Society of Central Methodist Church, Meridian. In an attendance contest for the first six months of the year, the side captained by Mrs. Harry McMillan won.

Mesdames E. R. Sigler, of the Lillian Knobles circle; W. B. Carr and J. R. Graham, of the Rosalie Brown circle had perfect attendance at all circle and church meetings during the past six months. The Maude Fall circle had the largest gain in new members during the same period and Mrs. J. S. Bryer, leader of this circle, had personally enlisted the largest number of women. Mrs. W. B. Campbell, leader of the Lois Cooper circle had the largest number at the picnic. The day was spent informally. At noon a lunch was served and during the afternoon iced melons were served on the club house lawn.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

RACE RELATIONS

An Institute of Race Relations sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee has been in progress at Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania during the month of July. While this Institute has been sponsored by a group which is Quaker in background and thinking, delegates have come from many corners of the United States and have represented many religious and political points of view.

There has been a definite attempt to consider the problems of the many minorities in the United States in an objective rather than an emotional way. Minority groups discussed have included the American Indian, the Negro, the European immigrant, the Jew, and also certain groups located outside of the United States.

The resident faculty staff at the school has included Otto Klineberg, anthropologist from Columbia University, Frank D. Watson, an economist from Haverford College, and Forrester B. Washington, director of the Atlanta School of Social Work.

Though the problem of racial frictions has often brought sullen hatreds or rapid acts of violence, it has been the method of the delegates to attempt to evaluate the ethnological qualities of the Negro and other groups from the point of view of the actual scientific facts rather than from an often distorted public belief.

The persecution of Jews in Germany and other countries was given more attention than formerly by the group, largely owing to the increased pressure which has been placed upon this group of people.

The Institute with the aid of many lecturers and technical experts has examined the economic and political backgrounds of slavery, political competitions during the period subsequent to the Civil War, and has concluded with an evaluation of Negro-White relations during the present administration at Washington in order to get a background for an examination of the population, health, economic status and social position of the colored and other races.

Such speakers and authorities as Carleton Beals, author of "The Crime of Cuba," Rudiger Bilden, anthropologist from New York University, R. B. Vance of the department of sociology at the University of North Carolina, and E. B. Reuter of the University of Iowa have each added their general word and ideas to those of a group who differ in many of their beliefs in regard to the ethnological problem, but who are tolerant of conflicting views.

This Institute is particularly outstanding among groups of its kind in the definite attempt which it has made to make the best of an unfortunate situation by developing remedies which will give justice to all groups without oppressing any. Among the conclusions which seem to have been definitely drawn are those which indicate that there are no scientific inherent biological differences in minority groups which would in any way set them off as useless or inferior to the native white population of America. The conclusion drawn is that certain so called differences which have been used as a basis for intolerance are largely a result of present economic inequalities which should be carefully overcome if minorities are not to become a dangerous problem in the patterns of American life.

A SERIES OF BIBLE CONFERENCES FOR NORTH MISSISSIPPI

On the 25th of August we will begin a series of Bible conferences in the North Mississippi Conferences. We will have with us in these conferences Dr. John H. Hicks of Southern Methodist University, who will lecture twice each day on the Bible. Dr. Hicks is a scholar and a splendid Christian gentleman. We are very fortunate indeed in securing his services. The General Board of Christian Education is co-operating with us and making these Bible conferences possible for us.

It is our purpose to cover as much territory as we can in these conferences. There will be at least one conference in each district. Conferences will be held at the following places: Lambert, August 25-28; Clarksdale, August 29-September 1; Greenwood, September 1-6; Starkville, September 8-11; West Point, September 12-15; Aberdeen, September 15-18; Oxford, September 19-22.

A representative of the Board of Christian Education will be at each of these conferences and present the program of adult work. We hope to have with us Dr. M. L. Rippey of Nashville, who is director of adult work for the General Board of Christian Education.

We are asking the pastors in each district to help us get the laymen interested in these Bible conferences. This will be a fine opportunity for both pastors and laymen to become better acquainted with the Bible and to come to have a greater appreciation of the Scriptures. We hope you will co-operate with us and that you will attend the conference that is most convenient for you.

Wm. L. ROBINSON,

WESLEY FELLOWSHIP ASSEMBLY

For the first time the Wesley Fellowship group is projecting a separate assembly. In 1932 this program of adult work was carried on in connection with the young people's assembly at Mansfield. The following two years found it connected with the Conference for Christian workers also held at Mansfield. This year a separate program has been worked out especially for those adults of the church between the ages of 24 and about 35 and the program will be held at the Baptist Encampment at Mandeville, August 19-23.

The assembly will be conducted on a standard training basis. All who attend the five days and complete the work in one of the courses offered will be awarded a Standard Training Credit by the General Board of Christian Education. Two courses, "The World Mission of the Christian Religion" and "Worship," will be taught. In addition the program of the adult division of the local church will be presented in various seminar courses and group discussion periods.

Rev. V. D. Morris, Conference director of adult work, will be the educational director, Rev. R. R. Branton and Rev. D. B. Raulins will teach the two training courses.

The adult division of every local church in the Louisiana Conference is invited to send representatives to this assembly. The cost is $2.00 for registration and $8.00 for board. Pre-registration may be made by sending your name and registration fee to the registrar, Mr. Louis G. Gelbke, 7823 Birch St., New Orleans.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 11.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D.

DANIEL (TEMPERANCE AND HEALTH)

Written for the encouragement of an oppressed people whose conquerors were trying to suppress their faith, the book of Daniel has been an inspiration to all generations since its hero stood the test of loyalty to his faith and convictions. Who eats Belshazzar's food must share Belshazzar's fate—a statement of a tragic truth, learned sometimes by observation, but too often by sad experience. Rich foods are not brain foods. High-powered stimulants provoke the lower nature while they cloud and befuddle the better self. The gluttonous and intemperate fall in the race of life while the rewards go to those who live simply and abstemiously. Religious scruples may not be sound, but they are sacred, always to be regarded by the subject and respected by others. Religion comes first or not at all. The man who consents to violate his conscience will violate any law or loyalty that stands between him and the gratification of his appetites and ambitions. Conscience may be warped, dwarfed, or degraded—may stand in need of education, development, or correction—but its voice is imperative. The man who lacks religious convictions lacks the strongest motive operative in the building of character. The world is in need of men who dare to be different, to face danger for their principles.

Like the modern youth who says "I will try anything once," Daniel might have offered to try the King's wine and dainties for a season. Why not? Was he not in the King's charge? Could not any ill effects have been noted and the accustomed fare resumed? Perhaps. But meantime, conscience would have been stifled, precedent would have been established, and a habit formed. Besides, plenty of others were making that test. There are two ways to discover that a brick wall is hard: butt the head against it; or observe the bump on the head of the man who has made the test. Daniel chose the latter method.

Within a few weeks, thousands of American youth will be off to the city, off to college, out from the narrow walls of home, away from the kindly counsel of parent and pastor, out "on their own," with invitation and opportunity to share the King's dainties. Temptations will come to break away from the training of childhood and "try the world—just once!" Far better to meet the situation with a test of one's simple habits and sound convictions. It will not require a long time nor a wide experience to note whose physical condition is best, whose mind is clearest, whose grades are highest. If in doubt, ask the professors, the coach, employers, life insurance companies. Ask reason, religion, history. The courts are not crowded with the abstemious and temperate. Not water-drinkers, but wine-drinkers strew the highways with wreckage.

Daniel was courteous but firm. He met the steward's offer of forbidden foods with his own suggestion of a better way. Why should his devout conviction be sacrificed to a pagan custom? His act required courage and initiative—marks of personality. He was no chessman to be shoved around the board of life by others. He purposed to live his own life. He believed in God—and himself. He co-operated with providence, coupling diet with diligence, caring for his body and cultivating his mind. He met the steward's test with victory and passed the test of the king with triumph. His valley of temptation led to the mountain of opportunity from whose heights he still speaks to the centuries. Purpose and courage; brain and backbone—happy the youth who has such equipment.

ADULT BIBLE CONFERENCE

We are to have two adult Bible conferences in the Monroe District this year. The first one is at Winnsboro, September 8-11. The second conference will be at Bastrop, September 12-15. A program giving in detail the schedule and other information will be announced soon.

We are very fortunate in securing the services of Dr. R. E. Smith of Centenary College as Bible lecturer.

The purpose of these two Bible conferences is: First, to provide an intelligent, spiritual interpretation of the Bible in order that it may become a living book, making a larger contribution to the spiritual understanding and development of men and women who are seeking to find guidance in Christian living through a study of the Bible. Second, to challenge adults with the opportunities that lie before them in developing and carrying out an effective program of Christian education for adults.

We urge that every church have a delegation of adults at one of the conferences. Attend the conference nearest you. A splendid program will be rendered twice daily.

FROM LIVE OAK CHURCH

Again the people of Live Oak Church and community have been made happy, in that they have had the privilege of entertaining and worshiping with their friends and relatives on another HOME COMING occasion. Our first meeting of this kind was held at the suggestion of the late Rev. A. W. Turner in July, 1933, and it was such a pleasant occasion that by common consent it was unanimously decided to make it an annual affair. Last year Brother Turner again preached the sermon with his usual vigor and power, and had been chosen to preach again this year; had accepted the invitation, had written many of his friends and relatives to meet him here; but alas! the Master called him to his eternal HOME. He loved Old Live Oak Church, his father gave the land on which the church is built, for a church and cemetery, his brother P. D. Turner was chairman of the building committee.

This year when we began building additional Sunday school rooms and other improvements, he sent us a sign to be placed at the main entrance, and a contribution. Yes, he loved the church, and we of the church loved him, and will cherish and revere his memory. Truly a good man never dies. When it became evident that he would not be able to be with us, Brother H. N. Brown, who is also a product of this community was invited to preach the home coming sermon at ten o'clock, the junior choir of the Sunday school sang a number of selections, to the delight of themselves and all who heard them, after which E. S. Easterly in his usual felicitious manner welcomed our guests and made them feel at home among us.

The pastor, Brother McCoy, then thanked the building committee and all those who had contributed in money, material and work, and prayed that each donor might receive both temporal and spiritual blessings.

Brother Brown was then introduced and preached an eloquent and soul-stirring sermon, and, as Peter said to the Master on the Mount of Transfiguration, truly it was good to be there.

A table on the lawn had been prepared three feet wide and 160 feet long, but this proved to be inadequate, and many had to spread their dinners on the ground or improvised tables. After dinner had been eaten, and coffee served, a social hour was enjoyed by all, old times were talked over and friendships renewed. We then reassembled in the church and sang the old songs that gladdens our hearts and thrills our souls.

At 3 o'clock Brother W. W. Perry preached, bringing a spiritual feast to

A NEW COURSE FOR PARENTS

"Achieving a Christian Home Today" is the title of the new elective course for parents which is to be published in the Adult Student during the months of October, November, and December, 1935. Groups of parents in the church school will find this course stimulating and helpful. There is no extra cost for the material since it is found in a regular church school periodical. These classes can meet at the regular church school hour on Sunday morning, thereby making an extra meeting unnecessary. Thus without extra expenditure of time and money the parents of the church can get help in dealing with the religious life of their homes. Churches should make their plans to use this new course for parents during the fall months.

FROM CALIFORNIA

Dear Advocate: I am renewing my subscription to the Advocate, which I have been reading since my earliest recollections, and I am now seventy-three.

I traveled in the Mississippi Conference for fifteen years, being admitted on trial at Jackson, Miss., in December, 1887. In 1902 I had a serious injury, necessitating my retiring from the itineracy. I suffered most intensely for twenty years. I came here eighteen years ago, and by the help of medical science, good luck, or providence, if you please, I got relief from that suffering.

What changes have taken place! nearly all the preachers in 1887 are gone, and the membership of the Conference now are nearly all strangers to me, but I am always interested in Mississippi. I wish I had space to tell of some of the sacred memories. Methodism is strong here, and this is the most moral and religious city of its size in the United States, in spite of what you have heard of Hollywood. Shuler is a great power and leader.

JAMES G. CAMMACK.

JAMES A. PETTY—AN APPRECIATION

With the passing of Mr. J. A. Petty, formerly of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, and of recent years, Mandeville, Louisiana Methodism loses one of its finest laymen.

Mr. Petty was modest and retiring in his nature but big-hearted, sympathetic, loyal and devoted to the church in all his actions. He gave generously to all the great causes of Methodism and was the heaviest contributor to his own local church budget. He was the kind of man who was not offended if you went to him the second time after he had already given generously.

The Petty home life was very beautiful and his pastor and family were greatly blessed by the fellowship. The quiet strength of the father and mother's Christian life overflowed graciously into the lives of all who came into the home.

One of God's noblemen has been called home. Surely the Father will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter into the joys of thy Lord."

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

John 6:5-6: Whence shall we buy bread that these may eat? This He said to prove him.

This is the only miracle recorded by all four evangelists. It was the most widely advertised miracle of Jesus except the raising of Lazarus from the dead. There were more than five thousand people involved.

Jesus had crossed the Galilean Lake diagonally to rest in sparsely settled territory. The crowd had anticipated his movements and assembled. So Jesus spoke to them. When the shadows began to lengthen a practical disciple suggested to Jesus that the crowd should be dispersed to permit them to buy food in neighboring towns before the hour became too late. Think of a disciple offering advice to Jesus! Yet sometimes prayers are presumptuous, and the presumptuous disciple would offer advice to God instead of seeking His counsel.

Jesus asked Philip, "Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?" Jesus knew what He would do, but He was testing His disciple. Up to this point the disciples had never dreamed that they had any responsibility for feeding the multitude. It had not entered their minds that the needs of the public were any concern of theirs. Even so our imagination needs to be quickened, for we cannot cut ourselves off from the needs of mankind without exiling ourselves from God. The love of God quickens our sympathies and makes the need of the world a stabbing challenge to our souls.

The question of Jesus tested the faith of Philip. Christ demands a belief in miracles. He can do no mighty works without faith. There are many problems today which the cynics say baffle any abiding effective solution. But man's extremity is God's opportunity. Only as we attempt the impossible can Christ reveal His grace. Where are we to get this adventurous faith? We can get it only from Christ. In Him we find the resources of love and power and vision of His work.

Christ requires the discovery and consecration of our resources. Andrew brought a lad to Jesus with five barley loaves and two small fishes. What we have must be offered to Jesus. We cannot excuse ourselves because of limited talents or limited means. All that we have MUST be dedicated to Christ. The offering needs His blessing. The offering needs to be broken. And it must be USED. When Christ uses our resources, they are multiplied five thousand fold. Our little—our talents and possessions—consecrated to the use of God and blessed by Him, yields great returns. It is the best investment in the world. The wonderful touch of Jesus has miracle working power. Martin Luther gave his heart; it was only the heart of a poor miner's son, but God blessed the gift, and there came a new day for Europe and America. Jesus is the great Conservator. No labor of love is lost in the Lord. Even those who give a cup of cold water to a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward.

PRAYER

Today has its tasks. Present-day needs challenge our very best. We are comforted as we think of the power of God. There is no problem or difficulty in the way of our service, but that God knows the solution. There is no tangle of life's perplexities which is not clear to Him for He is Light.

We realize that our difficulties and our problems have something to teach us. They awaken our ingenuity, they rally our energies, they fling us back on our undiscovered resources. They cause us to turn to God. "If God be for us, who can be against us?" We "Can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us."

We pray that we may offer our loaves and fishes, our all. We would ask what we can offer to the world? We are unprofitable servants at best. People are hungry for the bread of life. Bless our gifts that Thy wonderful touch may perform the needed work. We thank Thee for the all-sufficiency of our God. We dedicate ourselves to Thee in Jesus' name.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION

Whereas, on the 13th day of July, 1935, our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, caused to pass from this earthly life our brother and co-worker, Shade G. Smith.

It is hereby resolved by the Board of Stewards of Epworth Methodist Church:

First, That our beloved brother will indeed be missed from our counsels, and we are deeply appreciative of his earnest efforts and of his example of regular church attendance and unfailing interest in the work of the kingdom; nevertheless we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

Second, That we extend our sincere and heartfelt sympathy to his wife and the members of his family in their sorrow, commending them for comfort to a loving Savior, praying that His sustaining hand may guide and strengthen them.

Third, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this board; that a copy be sent to the family of our beloved brother; and that a copy be forwarded to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication therein.

Sincerely,

C. A. COULTER,

Chairman.

JAS. B. GRAMBLING,

Pastor.

R. H. NESTLER,

Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS

Our hearts are bowed with sorrow at the death of our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. T. M. Stokes, on June 19, 1935; and we hereby express our sincere grief at her passing from us.

There was no worthy cause, no sympathetic task, but that she had a part in it. She was quiet and gentle, and her friendship was highly valued. Her greeting cheered us along life's way.

The intimate relations long held by the deceased with the members of the Missionary Society render it proper that we should place upon record an appreciation of her services and of her merits as a member.

Resolved, first, that the Woman's Missionary Society has sustained a great loss in the passing of this our dear member, and we, the members of the society, bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.

Resolved, second, that we tender to her husband, sister and other relatives our sincere condolence, and our earnest sympathy in their affliction at the loss of one who was a devoted member and a sweet and lovely character. And be it further Resolved, third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent the husband, Mr. T. M. Stokes, that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and a copy be spread on the minutes of the Picayune Missionary Society.

FINAL REPORT, ADVOCATE CIRCULATION CAMPAIGN

HATTIESBURG, LAKE CHARLES, GREENWOOD AND MONROE DISTRICTS WIN $100.00 CASH PRIZE

While the total number of subscriptions secured during the Advocate circulation campaign, which came to a close on August 1, were considerably short of the goal, the results as a whole were better than any we have enjoyed in similar campaigns during the past five years. The number of new and renewal subscriptions received total 2726.

Four of the 19 districts in the territory served by the Advocate over-subscribed their respective quotas and were awarded the $100.00 cash prize offered to each district securing its quota in full. These districts, listed in the order in which they secured their quotas, are as follows: Hattiesburg, Rev. Victor G. Clifford, P. E.; Lake Charles, Rev. B. F. Rogers, P. E.; Greenwood, Rev. A. T. McIlwain, P. E., and Monroe, Rev. H. L. Johns, P. E.

We want to take this means of thanking every Presiding Elder, Pastor and Layman who contributed to the success of the campaign, and we assure you that we will not spare any effort to make a large place for the paper in the hearts of the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi.

The following report includes: first, acknowledgement of subscriptions received during the week; second, report of districts showing quotas and subscriptions secured; third, charge by charge report of subscriptions received during the campaign, May 1-August 1, 1935. This report does not include subscriptions received prior to May 1, 1935, nor does it include subscriptions placed in budgets by charges early in the year. It may be that we have made some mistakes in compiling the final results of the campaign, and trust that wherever an error appears, the pastor of the charge will notify us immediately so that we can make the necessary correction in our next issue.

Park Avenue Methodist Church

PARK AVENUE METHODIST CHURCH, Shreveport, La., formerly Texas Avenue, began its eventful history in 1890. In December, 1890, during the pastorate of Dr. J. H. Scruggs, the First Methodist Church bought lots and began the new enterprise. Rev. J. M. Henry was appointed the first pastor and the charge was known as "Shreveport City Mission." With the support of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport and the Conference Mission Board the congregation grew. In 1898 the Texas Avenue

Church first appeared in the list of the Louisiana Annual Conference appointments. Rev. P. O. Lowrey was appointed pastor.

Outgrowing the church building on Texas Avenue in 1924, lots were purchased at the corner of Park Avenue and Laurel Streets and the magnificent new church building was erected. Rev. R. T. Ware was appointed to Park Avenue in November, 1926, while the congregation was still worshipping in the old building on Texas Avenue. Brother Ware has served as pastor continuously since 1926, excepting for one year. In 1928 work was started on the new structure.

During the entire history of Park Avenue Church it has been known as an evangelistic church. Brother Ware has conducted, himself, five revivals at the request

THE PHYSICAL AND MATHEMATICAL INSTITUTE of the State University of Tashkent, Russia, proposes to go America one better. While we are proposing to split our pennies into mills, the Russians have just completed a 500,000 volts electrical plant, the use of which is to split the atom of matter. Maybe that is the Russian idea of performing a minor operation.

THE HOME MISSION COUNCIL, says The Religious Telescope, announces that for the first time in the history of Protestant missionary work in this country a definite agreement between various denominations has been made to discontinue all competitive mission work. Thirty-two denominations have already signed this agreement. As an experiment in economy as well as home evangelization, this course will at least commend itself to those who insist upon a policy of co-ordination of all Christian work.

CALIFORNIA'S GOOD NAME has been brought into disrepute, according to press reports, by the lynching of a white man suspected of implication in the shooting of a chief of police. The victim was taken from a marshal who is reported to have run away. The flight of the officer may have been, like Washington Irving said of the trembling of Kendrick Kip, due to "excessive valor." But twenty-five unrecognized men have made another attack upon civilization, and have stained their hands with a crime as black as that which they have made the excuse for a deed which outraged law and order.

FRANKLIN COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA, on July 30, according to press reports, fell upon a demented Negro and lynched him. The North Carolina Christian Advocate says: "That act of savage barbarism perpetrated last Tuesday in Franklin county brings a deep sense of humiliation to every good citizen of North Carolina. It is bad enough to do to death a demented Negro, but this is not half as bad as it is for sane and responsible citizens to lynch the law of a commonwealth. Such incompetent officers are a disgrace to organized society." Lynching will not end until an enlightened public conscience shall demand that the perpetrators of such deeds shall be brought to justice; and an officer with the conscience and the courage to discharge his whole duty in the protection of a criminal in his custody can be a very important factor in making lynching an unpopular pastime.

DOCTOR KEIFER'S TABULATION of religious bodies for The Christian Herald shows 10,027,927 Baptists, 8,976,492 Methodists, and 20,398,509 Catholic communicants. The Baptist gain last year was 161,720, and the Methodists 210,475. The Lutherans are credited with 4,482,212 members, the Presbyterians with 2,696,639, the Protestant Episcopal 1,898,549, the Disciples of Christ 1,596,054, and the Congregational and Christians 1,020,894. All other Christian bodies have less than a million each, and Jewish Congregations have 4,081,242.

SIX TEXAS NEWSPAPER REPORTERS have been cited for contempt of court in connection with the publication of testimony in a murder trial in that state. It is not necessary to give an opinion upon that particular case in order to say that there is a type of reporting such matters which is not helping the crime situation in our country. There is also a type of criminal lawyer who capitalizes that kind of publicity and not infrequently paves the way to a theatrical career for men and women whose deeds have been utterly unworthy of society and civilization.

"A NEW LETHAL WEAPON" is the term which a feature writer of The British Weekly applies to the benevolent appearing and confidential dispensers of rumor, particularly as respects public leaders. Such malignant communications are necessarily softened by tones and professions of sympathy which serve only to deepen the guilt of the culprit. Whatever other virtue the expression may have, as a biting rebuke, it is a piece of art. He places in the "rogues gallery" a daguerreotype of the character killer, which no one can misunderstand.

A MEETING OF LAYMEN from Chicago and the surrounding territory was held at the Union League Club, Chicago, on July 29, according to various notices in the Church press. It appears that about thirty-five laymen from that section met, "To discuss the growing radical propaganda and hostile attitude toward business and the established social order which are being disseminated and proclaimed in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church." We do not know any of the men whose names are given; the statement of purpose gives us no information; and the statement which was issued does not clarify the situation. If it is anti-social, as it seems to be, we doubt if it will get very far with its opposition. But we do not prejudge the movement.

CONTROVERSY OF CHRIST

In certain quarters there seems to be a disposition to revive the old, old controversy as to higher criticism and heretical teachers. We have no disposition to ask leniency for one who would rationalize truth to its destruction. But at the present we can not bring ourselves to believe that our chief peril is in any type of criticism, high or low, or in any school of radical theology. Around the world at this moment is a manifest tendency to demand that the message of the church shall be conformed to dominant social and political theories—that it shall submit to be a mouthpiece for the propaganda of political factions, who are interested in themselves and in perpetuating their control of the political fortunes of the state. The mere demand for such would be unimportant, if there were no disposition to accept the dictation. To be sure, we have our conventional piety, and so had the Pharisees of Jesus' day. But if the church has a mission, it is spiritual—not political, not economic and not social, except in a secondary sense. The eras of weakness and unworthiness in the life of the church, were periods when it became allied with political power. At such times it becomes a mere organ of national diplomacy and a tool of human selfishness. It loses its consciousness of a divine commission and authority, and the inflexible demands of a righteous God are reduced to the level of the public mind and purpose. The peril of a materialist approach to Scripture and a rationalistic theology may be ever so real; but, in our judgment, the most threatening peril of the Christian world today is a poverty of spiritual experience, and a consequent indifference to the demands of righteousness. The mere letter of law or gospel is always of less importance than a clear and positive experience of personal salvation; and the urge of divine reality in the quickened soul is far more powerful than ethical convention. We verily believe that the church needs a baptism of power more than a defense of its Scriptures, and a personal faith more than a fortification of its orthodoxy. It needs to feel the grip of divine reality all the way from the pulpit to the remotest pew.

FRONTIERS OF FREEDOM

The word freedom stands for an idea which constitutes one of the jealously guarded treasures of all peoples; and, yet, there is no clearly defined understanding of its place and function. All too frequently it is thought of as a personal license to misuse privilege and an authorization to abuse every faculty and relation of life. Some time ago Dr. Inge, late Dean of St. Paul's in London, made use of this statement: "Originality means thinking for oneself and not merely thinking differently from other people. Free thinking is fine so long as there is sufficient emphasis on the latter word and not too much on the former." He simply meant that freedom in the realm of thought is secondary because it must be conditioned by one's thinking. Or that there are recognized frontiers to intellectual freedom. A step further back we find St. Paul writing to the Romans that in life no man is a law unto himself, which means that there are liberty boundaries which he may not ignore. In the parable of the Prodigal Son, Jesus emphasizes the same fact. In that simple story, the younger son said, "Father, I want to be free—free to live my own life. Give me the portion of goods that falleth to me." It was a perfectly proper request, the record is that the father divided unto them his living. The trouble came when the young man failed to recognize the frontiers of the freedom which he had acquired. The record is that he gathered his belongings together and took his journey into a far country and there wasted his substance with riotous living. He ambled aimlessly into a far country and dissipated his resources with indifference to his trust. It was that attitude and idea of freedom which turned a dowered son into a prodigal and brought a mendicant back to the threshold of his father's house. The public highways are open thoroughfares for all, but the freedom to use them is conditioned upon a consideration of safety and the observance of the rules of the road. All freedom has limitations. No treasure which we possess is more precious, if we keep in view the ends for which it is conferred, and no gift is more dangerous if it be perverted to unworthy uses.

APPROACHING WEDDING ANNOUNCED

Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Roberts of Franklin, La., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Lillie Margaret, to Mr. Larkin Earl Deacon of Grapevine, Texas, the wedding to be solemnized in the First Methodist Church of Franklin, on August 31, with the bride's father, assisted by Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, officiating."

Such is the announcement which has reached our desk, and the editor makes acknowledgement of an invitation to be present and joins the many friends of the happy young couple in wishing that their lives may be as roseate and beautiful as are the dreams which fill their hearts as their wedding day approaches.

L. M. LIPSCOMB TRANSLATED

It is with sincere sorrow that we record the passing of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference. He died on Friday afternoon, August 9, and was buried from Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., the following afternoon. Brother Lipscomb was a native of Winston county, Miss., and he was graduated from old Southern University, Greensboro, Ala., about 1891. In the fall of that year he was received into the North Mississippi Conference on trial, at Macon, and was ordained deacon by Bishop E. R. Hendrix. In 1895 he was ordained elder by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald at Water Valley. Something more than a year ago Brother Lipscomb lost his wife; he was already in failing health himself and through all the time since her going he has seemed to trail a wing. Only a few weeks ago he gave up his work at Como, Miss.—a prelude of his passing through the gates eternal. Mississippi Methodism has lost a loyal soldier; the ministry of the North Mississippi Conference has lost a comrade worthy of its best traditions; and every righteous cause has lost an advocate and a friend. May the boon of a father's blessing and honor rest upon the children whom he leaves to mourn his going.

PRESIDING ELDERS—PLEASE

Do not postpone the matter of getting your cut for the front page of the Advocate, with the material for publication in connection with it. We desire to run these cuts continuously until we have completed the round of the Districts. We have the one for next week in hand, but we do not want to miss an issue of the series. So please send yours along.

CARE OF CHURCH PROPERTY

By Rev. W. W. Holmes, D.D.

The Southern Methodist Church alone has in this country 16,158 houses of worship, valued at $169,941,778.00 and 6,148 parsonages, valued at $24,340,031.00. The conference records in the patronizing territory of the New Orleans Christian Advocate show:

North Mississippi Conference: houses of worship, 541; value, $3,324,430.00. Parsonages, 184; value, $593,500.00. Mississippi Conference: houses of worship, 488; value, $2,903,450.00. Parsonages, 163; value, $543,850.00. Louisiana Conference: houses of worship, 360; value, $3,724,300.00. Parsonages, 152; value, $633,450.00. Total for these three conferences: Houses of worship, 1,389; value, $9,952,180.00. Parsonages, 499; value, $1,770,800.00. In addition the Church has other valuable properties, such as colleges, hospitals, orphanages, etc.

Not many commercial concerns can claim such property valuation. The possession of such property should bring to the whole church a deep sense of appreciation and gratitude to Almighty God, and should inspire every member to a larger use and a greater care of his own Church property.

We are forced to admit that many of our houses of worship have been very much neglected. "A stitch in time" seems to have been nobody's responsibility; consequently, many churches are in an unkept and dilapidated condition. The roof leaks, the steps have given way, the window panes are broken, the doors are left open for all kind of intrusion, the walls are decorated with spider webs and dirt-dauber nests, the yard has grown up in grass and weeds, there is not a flower anywhere; the whole appearance is that of neglect and desertion. Good business demands better care of church property. A place for the worship of God is worthy of our very best efforts to make it attractive and beautiful. Here is an opportunity for somebody to render a signal service by heading up a group in the local church for the specific purpose of making the house of worship the most inviting, enticing and beautiful place in all the community.

The parsonage, to all effects and purposes, is the property of the preacher, except he doesn't have to pay taxes, insurance, etc. It is his home and whatever he puts into it is shared by the itinerant brotherhood. When moving time comes every preacher should leave the parsonage in better shape than he found it. When this is the spirit of the preacher the people are usually happy to co-operate.

METHODISM IN NORTH LOUISIANA

By W. A. McKennon

A few years ago I was driving from Greenwood, La., to Mooringsport, La., and about four miles from Mooringsport came to a country church across the road from a large cemetery. Interested in old cemeteries I stopped and investigated. Near the front gate I turned over a broken slab and discovered the grave to be that of Rev. Jesse Burch who died in 1857, and "had been a preacher in the Methodist Church for forty-seven years." I decided then and there to find out all I could about Rev. Jesse Burch, and this church across the road. After several years of searching and inquiring I am now informed, and the information is so interesting and historical that I am sending it to the Advocate, as I am sure it will interest others. The church is the Mt. Zion Methodist Church built by Rev. Jesse Burch in 1839-40, now ninety-five years old. Rev. Jesse Burch was born in Georgia in 1791 and when nineteen years of age, in 1810, entered the Methodist ministry and was given a charge in Alabama. In 1835, together with several other families, they started with ox teams to Louisiana. The trip required over a year to make. In 1838 they entered land near Mooringsport, La., and in 1839-40 Rev. Jesse Burch built the Mt. Zion Methodist Church and served as the minister until his death in 1857.

Now for the historical part. As far as the information can be had, this is the oldest Methodist Church and the oldest established place of worship in Caddo Parish.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in Louisiana is said to date back to 1823, when eighty-nine white and ten colored members represented the membership in the state. From 1829 to 1833 William Stephenson preached throughout the state.

Mr. "Burke" attended the "little Methodist societies" in 1841 of Greenwood, Shreveport, Alexandria, Donaldsonville, St. Jessop, Baton Rouge, and Franklin, till 1844. I am led to wonder if it was not "Rev. Jesse Burch" instead of "Mr. Burke."

Caddo circuit existed in 1823 prior to the founding of the city of Shreveport—1839. The Methodists were first to build a church in Shreveport in 1845. The first session of the Louisiana Conference was January 8, 1847, and Rev. R. J. Harp was appointed to First Methodist Church, Shreveport. This shows Mt. Zion Church established the year Shreveport was founded, and just seventeen years after Louisiana was admitted to the Union, and six years before any church was built in Shreveport.

Some of the preachers who have served Mt. Zion church in years past were Currie, Duncan McFarlin, Burt, Harp, Davis, and Davies.

HAWKINS OF HAWKINS MEMORIAL

(From Secular Press Bureau)

Hawkins Memorial Church of Meridian, Miss., recently honored W. D. Hawkins, outstanding Methodist layman, by celebrating the 40th anniversary of his church membership by devoting the 11 o'clock service to a special program, under the direction of the pastor, the Rev. W. A. Terry.

Greetings from former members from as far as Wyoming were received and read; and all denominations, including Roman Catholics, Jews, and Protestants, took part in the exercises.

Every department of the Sunday school and church was represented, from the youngest children who marched into the church carrying banners, the letters on which spelled, "Brother Hawkins, we love you," and singing a song expressing the same sentiment, to the Board of Stewards and Woman's Missionary Society, in the speeches of congratulation and appreciation.

Dr. Terry in his address cited Mr. Hawkins as a model member whose example should be emulated. Holding twenty-eight separate offices in the local church and general boards of the church, he is "faithful and competent in them all, and I have never before been the pastor of a member with such a record."

Mr. Hawkins, in his response to the many felicitations, after expressing his appreciation, cited four rules which he had adopted as a guide in his church life. Briefly they were:

"I have never missed a service; preaching, morning and evening, Sunday school and mid-week prayer meeting, except when I have been necessarily absent from the city.

"I have never fallen behind with my financial pledge.

"I have never showed partiality to any pastor, but have co-operated with them all alike, giving them my loyalty and service.

"When it has been necessary for me to be absent on Sunday I notified my pastor where I was to be and the reason for my absence."

MRS. CHRISTIAN KEENER

The death of Mrs. Christian Keener in a hospital at Baton Rouge, La., on last Friday, brings to a close a long and useful life. She was eighty-five years of age and she had been ill for a long while. She was the widow of the late Rev. Christian Keener, who was a son of Bishop John C. Keener. Mrs. Keener held her membership in the Carrollton Avenue Church of New Orleans, and her demise removes from the roll of membership a name long and prominently associated with New Orleans Methodism. She was buried at Baton Rouge, La., Saturday afternoon.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT INSTITUTES

Plans are in the making for a series of Institutes to be held throughout the Greenwood District early in September. Tentative places and dates as follows: Winona, September 3; Carrollton, September 4; Inverness, September 5; Lexington, September 9; Ruleville, September 10. Standard Training School at Greenwood, September 1-6. These Institutes will be under the direction of Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary of the Conference Board of Christian Education, assisted by the presiding elder and the following District workers: Prof. J. R. Bain, Prof. B. D. McCallister, Rev. M. H. McCormack, and Mrs. Will Matthews. More definite information concerning the program will be announced later.

"An Exchange.—In exchange for the tiara sent by the Queen of Spain to the Pope, and which was valued at 2,000,000 reals, the Pope has sent her majesty the body of Saint Felix, the martyr. We think the Pope has the best of the bargain."—Christian Advocate, August 11, 1855.

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LAY LEADER

Dear Brethren: Reports from presiding elders and pastors indicate that the laymen's day program, as suggested by the Board of Lay Activities, has been used in most of the charges during June and July with very gratifying success. It is our desire and hope that the day will be observed in every charge of the six districts, and district lay leaders are now endeavoring to determine which charges have not yet observed the day. Will pastors of such charges kindly notify the district lay leader, that a complete report may be made, and any desired assistance for the program given.

The Institute for Stewards and other Church Officers recently held for the Jackson District was well attended and greatly enjoyed. Mr. G. L. Morelock, General Secretary of the Board of Lay Activities, was present, at the invitation of the presiding elder, Dr. B. L. Sutherland, and delivered three great addresses. If the stewards of every district in the Conference would co-operate with the presiding elder and district lay leader in arranging for such an Institute and insuring loyal attendance, the practical and inspiring messages of Mr. Morelock and Dr. Crawford would stir every board to greater efficiency in its wide and important field of service.

The report of the Conference treasurer on benevolences to August 1 is as follows:

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

of peace; but his purpose brought forth immediate and vigorous protest from the Southern delegates. They held that such action on his part would amount to a virtual surrender of their cause, and would make an intolerable situation for the church in the South. The Bishop yielded to the wishes and opinions of his brethren and did not resign. In response to the inquiry made through the Committee on Episcopacy, he made a frank statement of all the facts touching his connection with slavery. He first became the owner of a slave girl under the will of a friend in Augusta, Georgia; he afterward inherited a slave boy from the family estate of his first wife; and finally, a short time before the General Conference of 1844 assembled, he became possessed of a number of slaves by his marriage to a woman who had inherited them from the estate of her former husband. To the girl and boy whom he had inherited, Bishop Andrew offered freedom when they were willing to go where it would be possible for them to enjoy it; but they both declined to go, and there was no other way for him to emancipate them except to become a law-breaker himself and, at the same time, to surrender the interests and the freedom of the slaves, since they would be subject to seizure and re-enslavement. The slaves belonging to his second wife, he immediately bound to her, whose they were, by a duly executed legal document. By that instrument he renounced all interest and ownership in them. But that course gave him the appearance too of being conscious of the impropriety of his connection with slavery, and it gave him the appearance of adopting a measure for escaping responsibility for slaveholding.

The records indicate that the course of Bishop Andrew was entirely honorable, both as respects his observance of the law and in his treatment of the slaves themselves. It is also to his credit that he never purchased a slave and he never sold one. But, since his ownership of slaves came about after his election to the episcopacy, it is not easy to believe that he was as sensitive to the delicacy of the situation as he should have been, nor as to what his ownership of slaves, however acquired, might involve for the church. He could not have been uninformed as to the increasing opposition to slaveholding upon the part of ministers. He had been a member of three General Conferences preceding his elevation to the episcopacy in 1832, and he knew of the growing disposition to withhold all official recognition from those connected with slavery. At the General Conference immediately preceding his election, the contest over the election of a delegate to the British Conference had been finally settled. In 1826, Bishops McKendree and Soule nominated for that place, William Capers who was a slaveholder; Bishops George and Hedding objected and nominated instead Wilbur Fisk. The result was a tie vote and the settlement of the contest went over to 1827, when Bishop Roberts was present; but he declined to break the tie either way. The decision then went to the General Conference of 1828, when Dr. Capers was elected on the second ballot by the slender margin of ten votes. Bishop Andrew knew also that he had been favored over Dr. Capers for the office of Bishop, because he was not a slaveholder, while Dr. Capers did own slaves. On the floor of the General Conference of 1844, he admitted that William Winans had spoken to him on the subject: "He said he could not vote for me, because he believed I was nominated under the impression that I was not a slaveholder. I told him I had not sought the nomination, nor did I desire the office, and that my opinions on the propriety of making non-slaveholding a test of qualification for the office of Bishop, were entirely in unison with his own." Whatever interpretation one may put on these words, they must mean that he had a clear understanding of the possible effect of his becoming a slaveholder, and he should have jealously guarded the peace of the church at that point.

Having spoken frankly concerning Bishop Andrew's acquisition of slaves, it remains now to be said that his course was not without positive legal justification. There was in the pronouncements of the General Conference, a distinct offset, as we have seen, to the view of those opposed to slavery; and the issue was less personal than the contest might lead one to believe. It was, at last, a contest between opposing factions on the subject of slavery; and Bishop Andrew's connection with the institution was the occasion for an eruption of the pent up feelings of the church on that subject. It is clear that the members of the General Conference of 1844, were not in a frame of mind which would qualify them to sit as a court of equity in the decision of anything relating to slavery. As soon as the sentence against the Rev. Francis A. Harding, appealed from the Baltimore Conference, had been affirmed, the inquiry turned to the case of Bishop Andrew and a resolution was introduced by Mr. A. Griffith of the Baltimore Conference, asking him "to resign his office as one of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church." This resolution was afterwards replaced by the Finley substitute which said: "It is the sense of this General Conference that he desist from the exercise of this office so long as this impediment remains." The substitute was passed after ten days of rancorous and bitter debate.

No matter what our theory of the powers of a General Conference, we do not see how it would be possible to establish the consistency of what the General Conference did in the case of Bishop Andrew. It is true that the ministry always formed a separate class in the anti-slavery legislation of the church, but the restrictions had been less against slave ownership than against the merchandise in slaves, and the territory in which slaveholding was established by civil law had been uniformly excepted from the operation of such statutes. For the charge of an infraction of church law, any minister was entitled to formal and orderly process of trial before a jury of his ecclesiastical peers. Yet Bishop Andrew, without being charged with the violation of any law and without even the form of a trial, was placed in the anomalous position of being a bishop by confession of the General Conference, a bishop in the pay of the church, but a bishop without assignment of episcopal duties—by a resolution requesting him to "desist." His status under the law regarding slavery was clear. At the General Conference of 1836, the Bishops said: "It cannot be unknown to you, that the question of slavery in these United States, by the constitutional compact which binds us together as a nation, is left to be regulated by the several State legislatures themselves; and thereby it is put beyond the control of the general government, as well as that of the ecclesiastical bodies; it being manifest, that in the slaveholding States themselves the entire responsibility of its existence or non-existence rests with those State legislatures." In the Resolutions censuring the Abolitionists, is this expression: "Resolved that they (the delegates) . . . wholly disclaim any right, wish, or intention to interfere in the civil and political relation between master and slave as it exists in the slaveholding States of this Union." Quoting again from the Episcopal Address, "The only safe, Scriptural, and prudent way for us, both as ministers and people, to take, is wholly to refrain from this agitating subject." It is true that this is not the language of statutes for the regulation of slavery; but they are resolutions and authoritative utterances which, by every fair implication, committed the General Conference to an attitude respecting the institution which it plainly recognized as being protected by the highest law of the land. It was an interpretation of Methodist law which was intended for the restraint of those who were insisting upon a reversal of the policy which the church had consistently maintained toward the section where slavery was a legal fixture. Regardless of the moral and religious questions that were being raised with reference to the institution, the South had a right to expect that there would be no sudden reversal of the policy of granting immunity to those who were bound by civil enactments.

If there remained any lingering doubt in any mind as to what was the attitude of the General Conference on this subject, it must have been removed by the action of 1840. The Westmoreland Circuit of the Baltimore Conference, a circuit located in the State of Virginia, was asking to be excepted from the application of the slavery restrictions of the Conference of which it was a part, and to have its rights recognized under the exception of all slaveholding States. The case related wholly to the ministry and the General Conference said: "While the general rule on the subject of slavery, relating to those States only whose laws admit of emancipation, and permit the liberated slaves to enjoy freedom, should be firmly and constantly enforced, the exception to the general rule applying to those States where emancipation, as defined above, is not practicable, should be recognized and protected with equal firmness and impartiality." The committee respectfully suggests to the Conference the propriety of adopting the following resolution:

"Resolved, by the delegates of the annual conferences in General Conference assembled, That, under the provisional exception to the general rule of the Church on the subject of slavery, the simple holding of slaves, or mere ownership of slave property, in States or territories where the laws do not admit of emancipation, and permit the liberated slaves to enjoy freedom, constitutes no legal barrier to the election or ordination of ministers to the various grades of office known in the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and cannot, therefore, be considered as operating any forfeiture in view of such election and ordination." This unequivocal declaration, which was passed, is too definite and sweeping in its terms to be misunderstood. Orange Scott, an outstanding abolitionist who later left the church, said of this action: "The General Conference of 1840 decided that slaveholders had a disciplinary right to the office of bishop." When the pronouncements of the General Conference are placed alongside the circumstances, under which Bishop Andrew came into the possession of slaves, the case is relieved of what might otherwise have been its censurable features. A. L. P. Green, of Tennessee, said that at one time Bishop McKendree had purposed to buy a slave boy for a servant, but he had dissuaded him from doing so, and it was said that "the first Methodist Bishop was for a time a slaveholder without censure, though he became such by purchase;" but Bishop Andrew made no appeal to the precedents or purposes of his predecessors in the episcopal office, and he made no concealments of the facts in his own case. In a dignified and manly way, he said: "I have no confession to make; I intend to make none. I stand upon the broad ground

Mississippi and Louisiana

Mr. Rhydon Grigsby, of Minden, La., died suddenly on the morning of the 13th. He was a member of the Methodist Church of Minden, La., and his death will be a real loss to that church.

A card from Rev. H. W. Suydam of Macon circuit, North Mississippi Conference, is greatly appreciated. That field of work has many pleasant recollections for the present editor of the Advocate.

Rev. Anthony Hearne, pastor at Cordele, South Georgia Conference, spent a short time in New Orleans and he called at the Advocate office in the absence of the editor. We are sorry that we failed to see him.

Rev. A. T. Law and family have returned from a vacation trip which included the mountains of North Carolina, Virginia, and Washington, D. C. Brother Law is pastor of Fidelity and Chalmette, New Orleans.

Dr. W. W. Holmes and family, of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, are leaving this week for a visit to Atlanta, where they will visit their daughter and her family. They expect to be away about ten days.

Rev. C. H. Strait, of Wiggins, Miss., makes report for that little city, and it indicates the activity for which he is characteristic. We hope that he will give us a report more in detail soon, when his meetings are finished.

Rev. B. F. Hammond, pastor on Cockrum charge, North Mississippi Conference, wins the prize for brevity in his communication. He simply says that "All goes well in these quarters." We call that a good report.

Rev. Clyde H. Gunn calls our attention to a discrepancy in the Advocate of his quota of subscribers. The error was made in the office and was unintentional, of course. Brother Gunn's quota was secured in full and we are happy to make the correction.

Rev. W. W. Perry, of Baker, La., reports that his charge is making splendid progress along all lines, and that a fine spirit prevails. At Black Water church, where he was assisted by Rev. W. E. Thomas, twenty-three members were added to the roll.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, the active and aggressive pastor of First Church, Columbus, Miss., is planning a service commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of that great old church. The anniversary will occur early in September.

Rev. C. B. Powell, Boyce, La., is beginning a meeting with a sunrise service on Friday, August 16. He expects to continue the sunrise service and is looking forward to a good meeting. He will be assisted by Rev. H. W. Cudd, Conference Evangelist, of Monroe.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, pastor at Ripley, Miss., who with his wife is spending a two-weeks' vacation at the Seashore Methodist Assembly, Biloxi, Miss., was the preacher at the Campground last Sunday. He is reported to be looking well and enjoying the outing by the sea.

Montpelier church of the Baton Rouge District in Louisiana, has had a good revival, according to report which has just reached us. Rev. Thurlow Barrett is the pastor and he was assisted by Rev. Alvin McKnight of Angle, La. Eight members were added as a result of the meeting.

Rev. W. C. Barham, pastor of Church Point charge, Louisiana Conference, reports a successful revival at Petreville church, in which the presiding elder, Dr. B. F. Rogers, did the preaching. As a result of the fine spirit which prevails, he expects to have a fine report at Conference.

Rev. John Rasmussen, pastor at Bunkie, La., has been in a meeting during the last two weeks. He was assisted by Dr. Maxton S. Moak, of Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans. We understand that the weather was extremely trying and we have not heard the results of the meeting.

Rev. W. P. Buhrman, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference, finished second in the Advocate campaign for his Conference. He has just returned from a vacation trip in Florida, where, in addition to visiting their own, the ties of other days were renewed.

In the death of Mrs. J. Reitsbol a short time ago, the Methodist Church of Morgan City, La., has sustained a great loss. In addition to her contribution as an individual member of high character, she was a conscientious and faithful official. No one in that congregation could be missed more than she will be.

Rev. H. N. Brown, pastor at Ponchartroula, La., has quite a list of people from his charge in New Orleans hospitals for observation and operations. No pastor looks after his sick more carefully than does Brother Brown. We have a letter from him this week asking that we look after his people who are in hospitals here.

We regret to learn of a tragic accident which happened to Mr. Benson and family, members of First Methodist Church, Monroe, La. They had motored over to Vicksburg and the accident occurred near the river bridge. A daughter, who was a trained nurse, was killed, Mrs. Benson lost an arm, and Mr. Benson suffered a broken leg.

It will bring sorrow to friends in Louisiana to learn of the death of Rev. Frank E. Singleton, of Weatherford, Texas, whose father and brother, now deceased, were once members of the Louisiana Conference, and whose brother, Dr. H. S. Singleton, is now a practicing physician at Slidell, La. Brother Singleton's death followed an operation, and burial was in Dublin, Texas.

Rev. Frank Newton Sweeney, superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, residing at Franklinton, La., announces the marriage of his daughter, June, to Mr. James Madison Burris, on Saturday, August 10. The wedding took place at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. Lewis A. Radalet, in New Orleans, the father of the bride officiating. The Advocate joins their many friends in good wishes for their happiness as they journey through life together.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Have you sent your rural work money? The twenty-five cents per member may seem too much, but read this report from Miss Myrta Davis and see if you do not change your mind.

"Besides the D. V. C. schools I think the most important work I have been privileged to take part in has been the Christian Adventure Camp. I taught handicraft in both Castalian and Greenwood Springs. I also taught at Greenwood Springs the course in "What Can I Do for My Community?" I wonder if the Church as a whole realize just what one of these Christian Adventure Camps can mean to the intermediate boy or girl? So frequently we think of a camp as a place where one goes and does nothing except hike, hunt, fish, swim and be lazy. At Greenwood Springs we began the day with a beautiful worship service on the mountain side. The whole day was permeated with the love of God shown through nature. In asking one girl what she liked best about the whole camp she said: "The worship service." Every evening at sunset we had another worship service in our vespers. At bedtime everything was quiet while the bugler blew Taps. As a rule every person was ready to obey Taps and the night was spent in rest. Never have I seen a group as a whole so ready to join in everything planned for the camp. Usually there are several who think it the thing to sit out and let the others play the games. But not so here. Only two or three sat out and those really had good reasons for doing so. Of course I have not had the opportunity to interview all who attended the camp, but I think I can say that was really a Christian Adventure for all of them.

I always place Vacation Church Schools ahead of any of the work that I do. It is here that the future workers in the church get their first intensive training. If there are to be well trained church workers there must be well conducted church schools. We have had three on the Tishomingo charge. One of these schools was the first to be held in that community. Of course there were only a few who attended—so few, in fact, that we debated whether it was worth while going so far to hold it. But we knew that even a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump. Next year we hope to have at least twice or three times the number. In the school here in Tishomingo we had nineteen in the beginner-primary class. These came every day except one. There were about twenty in the other two classes. These all received such training that they have been more regular in attending Sunday school since that time. The third school was held at Boggs Chapel. The average attendance there was about twenty. Last year on the first day we had only five. Of course a number of these children would not have gotten to attend had it not rained. Had the weather been good they would have had to work in the fields. So we had the rains to thank for the good number to attend. We could not hold schools in the other two churches on the charge because the children were needed in the fields. Maybe there will be time for them yet.

These two portions of labor are so very important that I want to take this opportunity to urge every pastor in the Conference to see to it that his intermediates take advantage of the Christian Adventure Camps and that through the Sunday school or the Missionary Society a Daily Vacation Church School is put on in his church.

We are not far from our goal of our North Mississippi Scarritt Scholarship. The girl is waiting. School opens in September. This is August. Do not overlook your donation in making up the third quarter's report.

Are you making plans for the Retreat at Grenada, September 10-13? Expenses are only $1.25 a day. Not often does a Conference have this opportunity! A hundred women are wanted for this Retreat.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The book recommended for the fall mission study is: "That Other America," by John A. Makay. This book is fascinating, quite different from our usual Latin-American studies.

The price of the book is 60c and it should be ordered from the Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. The following books, which can be ordered from the same place, are suggested as helps:

"A Course on Latin America," by Arthur M. Sherman. Paper, 25 cents.

"New Days in Latin America," by W. E. Browning. 25 cents

"Makers of South America," by Margaret Daniels. 25 cents.

"Wall Map of Latin America," 35x46 inches, 60 cents.

"Large Outline Map of Latin America," 28x32 inches, 25 cents.

"Fun and Festival from Latin America," by Winifred Hulbert. Paper, 25 cents.

Other books suggested as supplementary reading, are:

"The Two Americans," by S. P. H. Duggan.

"Whither Latin America?" by F. Tannenbaum.

"The Other Spanish Christ," by J. A. Mackay.

"Peace by Revolution," by F. Tannenbaum.

"Latin America: Its Rise and Progress," by F. G. Calderon.

"Lupita," a story of Mexico in Revolution, by Alberto Rembao.

"New Worlds to Conquer," by Richard Halliburton; "The Romance of the Rise of the Tropics," by Crowther; "Great Conquerors of South and Central America," by A. Hyatt Verill; "Greater America," by W. Thompson; read "Mexico: Just Next Door," by Leonore Mullen, in the May issue of "Delineator."

ZONE MEETING

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Bonhomie church entertained the Hattiesburg zone when they met for the second meeting of the year on the fifth Monday of July. This was a business and social meeting. The church was decorated with summer flowers of roses, smilax, rose of Montana and potted ferns. The third meeting for the year will be held with the Petal Methodist Woman's Missionary Society as hostess.

"Rock of Ages" played in variations by Mrs. A. H. Lewis, pianist, opened the meeting. The hymn, "Take My Life and Let It Be," was sung. The devotional was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Rutledge, pastor, who used as his subject "Stewardship of Time." Mrs. D. F. McNeill of the Court Street Priscillian Society read a poem, "No Time for God."

Mrs. R. E. Rollings, of Court Street, and president of the Hattiesburg zone, presided during the meeting and she chose as her subject "Life's Highway." She stated as we start out we find the signal lights, "Stop, Caution, and Go." She said the red or "Stop" light in a Christian's life is his conscience; the yellow or "Caution" light is daily Bible reading which will enable you to pass corners congested with traffic in safety and with caution, and the green or "Go" light is the command when the bell rings and light changes to green is the command of Jesus to "Go and teach all nations."

The Christian Social Relations of the Missionary Society was compared to the signs on the highway which read, "Curves Ahead," some of these signs reading "Dangerous Curves Ahead." This was discussed by Mrs. Rollings. An anti-lynching petition was passed, also a map showing lynchings and prevented lynchings in 1934, practically all of these being in the South, and Mississippi showing more than any other state. To this petition 119 names were signed.

span rivers and other streams were compared with the bridges of "Mission Study" which span the rivers of indifference to missionary work. Mrs. W. H. Weathersby, chairman of the zone circulating library, made her report on Mission and Bible study books.

The president told the story of "He Who Travels Best on Life's Highway" and stated the zone was attempting to travel best by removing stones from the pathway of others. Reports were received from the societies who had sent boxes to Rev. Mr. Ellis, superannuate minister of New Augusta. Brother Ellis had died since the last zone meeting, but the zone voted to continue sending these boxes to his family through this year. She also asked the members to remember a local minister who is sick to help brighten up his days.

The line down the center of the highway to keep all on the right side, was compared to the plan for membership and echoes from the Conference. This was discussed by Mrs. R. E. Rutledge.

At this point the program had reached a "railroad crossing" with its "Stop, Look, Listen" sign. The president said they would stop, listen and look back over the past twenty-five years as Mrs. K. B. Allsup, of the Broad Street Missionary Society, presented the "Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the W. M. S."

Mrs. Victor G. Clifford, wife of the presiding elder, discussed the signs at the forks of the roads which are to guide you on the way. This was the presentation of the new Mission study book, "That Other America," by John A. Mackay.

Last, but not least, to be heard from, was the "scenery along the highway." Members of the different societies represented the scenery. At this time members of the Glendale Missionary Society, a new society just organized by the Broad Street Society, were introduced and welcomed into the zone.

The Lydian Society of the Main Street Church reported the splendid work being done by a local girl whom they had sent to Vashti, she having won a scholarship to complete her education.

Mrs. Rollings gave a short talk on missions, after which Mrs. A. H. Lewis sang "The End of the Road." This was accompanied by Mrs. Victor G. Clifford.

Pastors present were the Rev. R. S. Saucier of New Augusta, the Rev. J. T. Leggett of the Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, and the Rev. R. E. Rutledge of the Bonhomie Church.

After the benediction which was pronounced by the Rev. Mr. Leggett the members were invited to the Sunday school room where delicious refreshments of iced tea, sandwiches, cookies, pickles and mints were served.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

There is always a "sadness of farewell" when we see our deaconesses take their leave from the institutions in which they have served so faithfully for a number of years.

A number of New Orleans Missionary women (including Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., who happened to be spending the day in the city), were at St. Mark's the day the departures were made. Deaconesses Nettie Stroup, Margaret Hodgkins, and Dorothy Lundy have left to visit in their homes during the month of August and will go to their new appointments in September.

Deaconess Margaret Young who has done such a magnificent piece of work at Bethlehem Center, Nashville, will arrive in New Orleans early in September to assume her new duties as head resident of St. Mark's Community Center.

Mrs. L. A. Sims, district secretary of the Alexandria District, writes as follows: "I am planning our 'Mission Study Coaching Days' with my zone leaders for this quarter. The three women who attended the school in Shreveport will assist me."

We are always inspired to do greater things when we hear of the enthusiasm of our workers in far away lands. Miss Annie Clyde Price, missionary to China, had this to say when word was received that Laura Haygood School, Soochow, would share in the 1935 week of prayer offering: "Six of us were sitting around the living room table when Miss Bradshaw told us that we were going to have a new building after all. You do not need the last Thursday in November to have a Thanksgiving meeting, neither do you need a church; we had quite a satisfactory one around the table. Our thanks were for the great host of American women who were going to make our new building possible." Missionary women of Louisiana, let's not disappoint our workers on the fields of service. Let's begin at once to make our plans for the week of prayer and also to save our money.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 18.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D.

MARTHA (A HOME-MAKER)

The incident of this lesson is often used to draw a contrast between the two sisters, not too flattering to Martha. Emphasis may be so placed as to put either in an unfavorable light, making Martha appear practically materialistic and Mary impractically spiritual. The outstanding qualities of the two are complementary, and the combination evidently made their hospitality most acceptable to Jesus. Freely interpreted, Martha had a feast; Mary had a guest. A feast might be prepared at will. Rarely was any home honored with such a guest. There is no more pleasing virtue than that of Christian hospitality. Thousands have found Jesus present in their joint breaking of bread. Few people become guests merely for the sake of the food served, and it should never become the chief feature of entertainment. The sharing of food is as nothing compared to the sharing of friendship.

The vocation of home-making stands at the top of the list. It is elementary enough for the woman of ordinary talent, great enough for the gifts of the genius, high enough for a mother, and holy enough for a saint. Home-makers are world-makers. The woman who "has nothing to do but keep house" is often doing far more than her busy husband with his staff of assistants. Many a woman succeeds in being wife and mother, mistress and maid, companion and nurse, help-meet and teacher without thought or thanks from husband and children, and without honor from the world. Others find rest and recreation in outside interests and activities while the home-maker is often left to the ceaseless grind of routine. Happy are those who at the end of the day escape the worry and bustle of business in the sanctuary of a well-ordered home whose atmosphere is more refreshing than a breeze from the sea or ozone from the mountains. It is a pity if a painstaking housekeeper becomes a painful housekeeper—so intent on order and cleanliness that neither family nor guests can feel comfortable. Such a slave to her responsibility misses the high privilege and honor of her position.

Probably most of us are too much absorbed in the practical and the commonplace, taking too little time for meditation and for fellowship with family and friends. Chained to custom, we become slaves of the routine. Tired and nervous, we are jealous of those fine, calm souls who seem always to find time for the nobler factors of life.

Christian hospitality presupposes a Christian home. When is a home Christian? When it reflects the worship of the Christian church, the education of the Christian school, and the mutual service of a Christian society. The home is the training school for every Christian virtue and practice. From the Master to his humblest disciple, it has ever been a joy to be a guest in such a home.

The true Christian guest shares not only the joys but the sorrows of his host. When death broke the family circle, Jesus hastened back to this Bethany home. It was Martha who met him now. Broken by her grief and still setting too much store by the mere physical, she cries: "If thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." Very tenderly, Jesus leads her out to a larger faith. At last she grasps the life immortal and the broken circle is again complete. If Jesus went home with her that day, I wonder if she was "cumbered about much serving?" With the right host and the right guest, how little the food matters!

FROM WISNER, LA.

Dear Dr. Duren: Just a few words from the Wisner work. But first let me say we are to have two adult Bible conferences in the Monroe District and three weeks ago I sent an announcement to be put in the Advocate. It has not been printed to date, but trust you are planning to publish it soon. It was an article giving the dates and program of each conference.

We closed a great meeting here last night. Brother R. M. Bentley from Gordon Avenue in Monroe did the preaching. He certainly proved himself to be a man of God and a splendid man to have for a revival for he knows how to reach folks. We had Brother Johns, our presiding elder, with us for the closing service; he held the third quarterly conference after the service.

Wisner raised her quota and one over on the Advocate campaign.

Fraternally,

of his own congregation. More than 600 members have been received during the nine years pastorate. In the Shreveport District Park Avenue Church is one of the leaders in evangelistic work. The work accomplished by this pastor and his loyal members is outstanding in every department. It is an example to all of our churches in that it is perfectly organized according to the disciplinary plan of church work. The Board of Christian Education and the church school are doing a magnificent piece of work. It has an enrollment in excess of 1,000, having sometimes as many as 987 in attendance in the various departments.

It has a strong official Board following the most modern methods in financing the church work. There is a strong Woman's Missionary Society, strong Young People's organization, all functioning under the new set-up. Being in that part of the city where there is a dense population the summer Vacation Bible Schools reach a high enrollment.

The pastor and members of the Park Avenue Methodist Church are examples to all churches, especially the smaller churches that contend that they can not set up a completely organized church in every department.

This progressive church is free from debt. Its magnificent building and educational department is paid for in full. As would be expected of such a progressive church, it meets its financial obligations year by year and will be one of the churches in the Shreveport District that will pay everything in full this Conference year.

LIFE, DEATH, AND VICTORY

By Arthur Madison Shaw

LIFE:

Sharp is the strain of the struggle with evil—

Legions of foes ever rising a-fresh—
Mighty the shock of the spirit's upheaval;

Tireless the tug and the tear of the flesh!

DEATH:

Sombre and dank seems the air in the gloaming;

Halting and weak is the lingering breath.

Faint grows the soul, that is set for the homing;

Gruesome and grim is the grapple with death.

MRS. LUCIE DANA HURST

Mrs. Lucie Dana Hurst, widow of the late Rev. W. W. Hurst, was born near Warrenton, Warren Co., Miss., July 17, 1848, and passed to her eternal reward on July 4, 1935, in Vicksburg, Miss., at the home of her nephew, Mr. C. C. Dana. She was the daughter of Mr. Charles Dana and Mrs. Nancy M. Dana, and was the seventh of nine children. On October 7, 1890, she was united in marriage to Rev. W. W. Hurst, of the Mississippi Conference, with whom she lived happily until his translation on August 26, 1908. No children were born to them, but she helped to rear two of her husband's children by a former marriage. She was converted and united with the Methodist Church during her girlhood, and for a number of years she served as superintendent of the Sunday school of the old Red Bone Church. For several years before her marriage she taught in the public schools of our state. She was a faithful and consecrated itinerant preacher's wife, and many a life was blessed by her holy influence. For five or six years she taught the ladies' Bible class of the Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg. She was an invalid for the last seven or eight months of her life, but was uniformly cheerful, patient, and trustful. Truly a noble Christian woman has fallen on sleep, and many friends mourn her passing. She is survived by two nephews: Mr. C. C. Dana and Mr. H. E. Dana, of Vicksburg; by three nieces: Mrs. J. N. Miller, of Church Point, La.; Mrs. Ethel Ethridge and Mrs. Mamie Stamford, of Vicksburg; and also by three step-daughters. She was buried beside her husband in the cemetery of the old Red Bone Church in Warren County.

Her pastor, M. M. BLACK.

The year 1934 saw the new brick station church at Wembo Nyama in the Congo Mission almost completed. Prior to this time the station church had been a large open shed, similar to those in the out-villages. The new brick church with dark gray slate roofing was made possible by the gifts of missionaries and the free labor of many native Christians.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE

JACKSON, MISS.

The Survey Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges says in its Report of April, 1935:

"The Committee feels that it cannot conclude its report without brief comment on the excellence of this college. Under the leadership of President Key and his competent faculty the college has maintained through the years a high grade of work in the field of liberal arts.

"In its two days at the College the Committee was impressed with the atmosphere, both on the campus and in the classroom. Students are of high quality, and their relationships with the faculty are most wholesome."

Fall Session opens September 11.

Those expecting to be enrolled in the Freshman Class should send High School Entrance Certificates and Application Fee of $15.00 at once.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Ps. 78:41: They turned back and tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel.

1. The Psalmist described the blessings of the Israelites: "Marvelous things did He in the sight of their fathers." (vs. 12). "He divided the sea, and caused them to pass through; and He made the waters to stand as an heap. In the daytime also He led them with a cloud; and all the night with a light of fire. He clave rocks in the wilderness, and gave them drink as out of the great depths." (vs. 13-15). "He rained down manna on them to eat, and had given them of the corn of heaven. Man did eat angels' food: he sent them meat to the full." (vs. 24, 25).

2. Yet THEY TURNED BACK AND TEMPTED GOD. "They tempted God in their heart by asking meat for their lust." (vs. 18). "They sinned against Him by provoking the Most High in the wilderness," (vs. 17). "For all this they sinned still, and believed not for His wondrous works," (vs. 32). "For their heart was not right with Him, neither were they steadfast in His covenant," (vs. 37). "They remembered not His hand, nor the day when He delivered them," (vs. 42). "They tempted and provoked the most high God, and kept not His testimonies," (vs. 56).

3. THEY LIMITED THE HOLY ONE OF ISRAEL. Jesus was limited in His ministry. After He had announced His mission and demonstrated His power in other sections, He returned to Nazareth. "He could there do no mighty work," (Mark 6:5). "And He did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief," (Mat. 13:58).

Toward the end of His ministry, He looked at Jerusalem and cried, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem . . . how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not," (Mat. 23:37). Jesus held the secret which would have ended all Jerusalem's woes, its strife, its sin. Yet Jerusalem would not receive Jesus and limited God.

4. In limiting God, Nazareth brought trouble upon itself. In limiting God, Jerusalem brought desolation upon itself. So in the 78th Psalm, we see how the Israelites brought terrible calamities upon themselves. God withdrew His Presence. "So that He forsook the tabernacle of Shiloh, the tent which He placed among men; and delivered His strength into captivity, and His glory into the enemy's hand. He gave His people also over unto the sword: and was wroth with His inheritance. The fire consumed their young men; and their maidens were not given to marriage. Their priests fell by the sword," (vs. 60-64). So we see "He put them to a perpetual reproach," (vs. 66). Many plagues came upon them as a result of their blacksliding. They suffered loss of power and honor. They met defeat and slaughter in battle. They suffered great social misery because of their sins.

5. We cannot escape the conclusion that today men are limiting God. Indifference toward Him becomes doubt, doubt hardens into denial, and denial develops even antagonism. The end of that way is death. God is limited today by the lack of faith and lack of consecration of multitudes. Men are wandering aimlessly. But men can repent and readjust their lives to the cleansing, healing, life-giving stream of God's life. This is the way to the true life—to eternal life. This is the way to proper self-realization and the achievement of personally responsible work in the world. This is the way to moral power and abundant life.

PRAYER

Our Father, forgive our sins, our doubts and fears. Henceforth may we take the high road of discipleship and service. Henceforth may we experience Thy abiding companionship and control. Forbid that we should grieve the Holy Spirit of God. We would walk by faith and keep Thy holy commandments all the days of our lives. We ask for grace in the name of Jesus.

CLARENCE MARION CROSSLEY

January 25, 1866—April 5, 1935

By Rev. Geo. H. Jones

It has been said that the soul of culture is the culture of the soul. Clarence Marion Crossley was a cultured soul. Early in life he consecrated himself, finding himself born with a rich heritage bequeathed him by pious Methodist parents. Early in his ministry he professed entire sanctification. His was a rich religious experience and he lived true to his high calling of God in Christ Jesus, sustained by an inner joy and happiness derived from fellowship with his Master.

With an educational foundation supplied only by the common schools of his youthful days, throughout his ministry he improved his mind and increased his knowledge and power by constant contact with the best books supplied by the consecrated scholarship of the Church, until he became one of the best-informed and best-equipped of our ministers. He fairly revelled in the last book which he read, one which had the significant title, "The Secret of Victorious Living," a secret which we think he possessed for a large number of years.

Brother Crossley developed his talents and expanded his soul until he became a pulpit orator seemingly "to the manner born." How graphic he was in his descriptions! How exact in his delineation of character! How unsparing in his condemnation of sin and littleness of soul! He was a preacher of righteousness and a proclaimer of the love of the Heavenly Father as revealed through our Lord Jesus Christ. His passion was that his hearers give all their powers to the service of God and the Church. Many will long remember his great message on the Church and the Christ of the Church, a message which the writer has heard more comment on than any other sermon of our ministers.

In delivering the funeral oration, Louis F. Alford, his friend for forty-five years, emphasized the fact that he was a hero. Truly he was. His courage and devotion were great in his early ministry when year after year he served weak circuits faithfully and uncomplainingly, with bare pittance for earthly remuneration. On one occasion he crossed a swollen stream on his faithful horse, against the earnest entreaty of one of his faithful members, rather than miss a single Sabbath appointment. He knew nothing but faithfulness to his duty. He could not do otherwise. His reward was in heaven. He has now gone to receive it.

Brother Crossley was born near Summit in Pike County on January 25, 1866, being the son of Andrew Crossley, one of the charter members of the old Adams Campground Church, and of Katherine Weathersby Crossley. Of the four brothers and two sisters of this pious home, only three survive: Mrs. T. W. Swearingen, McComb, Miss.; Mrs. Tom Sudduth, Magnolia, Miss.; and J. A. Crossley, Evansville, Ind.

When he was thirteen years old he was converted and joined the Church at the famous China Grove Campground, along with Barney W. Lewis, now among "our Sainted Dead," and Tommy B. Reagan, now a member of the Northwest Conference in Montana.

On March 28, 1884, he was married to Miss Sarah Zipporah Baldrige of Pike County, and to this union five daughters were born: Miss Ola Crossley, Hattiesburg, Miss.; and Mrs. Cora Mae Russell, Philadelphia, Miss., who survive him; and Misses Ernal, Eura, and Louise who went to the Father's house before him. On January 24, 1902, Brother Crossley suffered a great loss in the death of his wife, but on October 1, 1902, he was married again to Miss Elizabeth Edwards of Conehatta, the fine spirit who survives him. Sister Crossley felt the definite call of God to help rear the five little daughters for Brother Crossley and for God. And well did she do it. What devotion there was in the home to the three fine daughters who became afflicted! How considerate the household of their every need and desire and comfort until God called them! To this second wedlock were born four more children, all of whom survive: Clarence Harmon, Newton, Miss.; Miss Christine, Newton, Miss.; James Edward, St. Louis, Mo.; and Mrs. Elizabeth Whyte, Newton, Miss.

Although Brother Crossley was established in his own home at McComb and was connected with the J. J. White Lumber Co., where he received more salary in a month than he did the whole of the first year of his ministry, he felt the call of God to preach and he responded, being licensed by the McComb City quarterly conference in August, 1890, with W. B. Lewis his presiding elder and B. S. Rayner his pastor.

In the class of sixteen, eight of whom still survive, he was admitted on trial into the Annual Conference at Natchez in 1892. He was received into full connection and ordained a deacon by Bishop Hendrix in Port Gibson in 1896, and was ordained an elder by Bishop Key in 1902. In the Conference he served one quadrennium on the Board of Church Extension, one quadrennium on the Board of Finance, and the last three quadrenniums on the Board of Missions.

Perhaps his greatest work in recent years was at Court Street, Hattiesburg, where he spent five happy years in the longest pastorate that that church has had. The old frame building burned in

ROME, MISS.

Dear Brother Duren: Permit me, sir, to say a little about our revival at Rome. The people came to church in spite of the hot weather and election. Rev. J. M. Alford, from Oak Ridge, La., assisted us well. I never hear him preach better, nor did one preach under more difficult circumstances—pastor broke down, too much Rocky Mountain, weather hot and four fellows trying to get the Governor's office.

Well, I am about to say in "quitting" that handicaps are often the best kind of caps. I believe the Lord could move a mountain if He wanted to—even the Rockies. I saw one gigantic column in Carlsbad Cavern that the Lord made in the brief space of 60,000,000 years. My faith was re-enforced. If God can do a job like that in 60,000,000 years, surely he can help anyone who is laboring under handicaps.

The Romans are great people. They love the Lord and the church, thanks to them and thanks to Brother Alford for his splendid ministry. I like my job and my folks and am glad to be back home.

CLARENCE MARION CROSSLEY

1921 when Brother Crossley was there, and in 1922 the present splendid building was erected, and it stands today as a monument to his untiring devotion to his work and to the co-operation of his faithful people.

Brother Crossley served the following appointments: Broohaven Circuit, 1893; Beauregard, 1894; Porterville, 1895-96; Blinnville, 1897-98; Vimville, 1899; Daleville, 1900; Walnut Grove, 1901-02; Trenton, 1903; Deasonville (now Vaughn), 1904-07; Utica, 1908-11; Meridian, South Side, 1912-13; Forest, 1914-16; Philadelphia, 1917-19; Hattiesburg, Court Street, 1920-24; Meridian, Fifth Street, 1925; Columbia, 1926-29; Waynesboro, 1930-31; Newton, 1932-33; and Vicksburg, Gibson Memorial, 1934.

Thus he served forty-two uninterrupted years in nineteen different pastorates, from the smallest to the largest in the Conference, received from $166.80 to $3,600.00 salary; received 902 into the Church on profession of faith, baptized 520 adults and 202 infants, and had the greatest year of ingathering at Walnut Grove in 1901, receiving 102 on profession of faith and baptizing 88 adults, leading the Conference in each of these respects.

Receiving the superannuate relationship in November, 1934, he moved into the parsonage of the old Newton District, little realizing that he had but a few months to live. When his active work ceased he rapidly declined in bodily strength but lingered for several weeks in his final illness, being tenderly ministered unto by his loved ones. Two days before his death he aroused from seeming unconsciousness to sing clearly the first stanza of "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing, Tune My Heart to Sing Thy Grace," in perhaps his last conscious moments. His consecrated spirit slipped away to be with that "Fount of Every Blessing" just before noon on Friday, April 5, 1935.

Brief services were held in the Newton Church on Saturday morning and more elaborate services in the Philadelphia Church that afternoon, with L. F. Alford in charge, assisted by several of his brethren. Beneath a beautiful bank of flowers his body was consigned to earth beside the graves of his three departed daughters in the cemetery at Philadelphia, Miss., with J. A. Smith, his presiding elder, in charge.

Get Rid of Malaria!

Banish Chills and Fever!

To conquer Malaria, you must do two things. (1) Destroy the infection in the blood. (2) Build up the blood to overcome the effects and to fortify against further attack. There is one medicine that does these two things and that is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic! The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic destroys the malarial infection in the blood while the iron builds up the blood. Thousands of people have conquered Malaria with the aid of Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. In addition to being a noted remedy for Malaria, it is also an excellent tonic of general use. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Even children like it and they can take it safely. For sale by all drug stores. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

Fulton Methodist Church

THE FULTON METHODIST CHURCH, Ittawamba County, Miss., will be dedicated on Sunday, August 25, at the 11 o'clock hour, by Rev. W. P. Buhrman, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District.

This brick veneer church, which has an auditorium 36x60 feet and 12 Church school rooms, was built in 1930 at a cost of $14,000 for the church and the furniture.

Rev. W. R. Goudelock was the pastor, and G. C. Pratt, C. B. Cowden, R. A. Haynes and J. M. Gibbs composed the building committee. This is not one of the large churches of the North Mississippi Conference, but its contribution to the spiritual welfare of the community is an important matter, and it is worthy of mention that the task of building at that particular time held difficulties enough to test the sterling qualities of the pastor and the people.

This is the third church building for Fulton, and it replaces the one-room frame building erected and equipped about 1880 by M. C. Cummings, the founder of the town

THIRTY THOUSAND CHILDREN are said to have died this year of malaria in the Island of Ceylon. The figures include only up to June 8, and the scourge was not ended. That is a terrible death toll for such a small area and for such a population. It equals the worst disasters of yellow fever days in the coast cities of America; and the people seem to be as helpless in combating the malaria as we were the yellow fever fifty years ago.

THE MISSIONARY CHURCH is the well-deserved title of the Moravian Church. It has never been a great church either in numbers or in money, but its record for missionary conquest cannot be equalled by any other denomination. Wherever the need is greatest they are there, and the days of their pioneering seem to be just begun. At the present time they are doing work in the West Indies, among the Eskimos and in Tibet. If they had the money of some of our great Boards of Missions, there would be action on a wide front throughout the world.

IN THE HUPEH PROVINCE, CHINA, which has been devastated by floods, the bodies of 14,000 victims have been recovered, and the casualties are estimated at from 50,000 to 100,000. And that is but one of the many disasters which have befallen the Chinese people in modern times; but no disaster seems to discourage them, or to lessen the teeming millions of that age-old Empire. Famine, flood, earthquake, poverty, internal disorder and foreign invaders all combined do not appear sufficient to change the placid demeanor of the Celestial.

MR. PETERSON, A MEMBER OF CONGRESS from Georgia, recently delivered an address in the House of Representatives, in which he gave some very interesting statistics on the condition of American farming, as to debt. The statistics show that two-thirds of the farms of the country are incumbered with debt. In the Southern states, Florida, Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia are listed as being below fifty per cent incumbered; but in the great cotton section: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Texas, nearly eighty per cent of the farms are under mortgage. The depression will not be over until that situation is remedied, and it seems that less is being done to relieve the pivotal industry of the nation than for anything else.

BISHOP THOMAS COKE, it is sometimes said, never exercised his episcopal office in England. But a letter from Rev. William Myles to his brother says that he was ordained by Bishop Coke in the autumn of 1800 at Bristol, and that subsequently he assisted Dr. Coke in ordaining several of the preachers. The letter was dated June 3, 1803, and the post-script containing the above information was dated June 13 of the same year, and was published in the New Orleans Advocate seventy-nine years ago.

"THE NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE Epworth League," says Zion's Herald, "is announcing Lasell Institute extension courses in connection with the Asbury Grove Camp Meeting, leading up to a rally of the Leaguers of the Boston and Lynn Districts." It seems to us that the college extension feature offers a suggestion which might be used to great advantage in all of our courses for young people, both as respects the type of work done and as a means of college enlistment.

THE KRUPP IRON WORKS at Essen, Germany, it is said, covered eight square miles, and worked more than ten thousand men under regulations as strict as those of the German army. That was nearly seventy years ago. One and one-half square miles was under roof. One single hammer in the plant weighed fifty tons and cost $500,000. Everything in the plant was either in duplicate or triplicate. Such was the efficiency of the ordnance producers in the days of the Franco-Prussian War, and that was but a miniature representation of the machine that promoted the World War.

DOCTOR DANIEL A. POLING, President of the International Society of Christian Endeavor, Editor-in-Chief of Christian Herald, and nationally known radio, platform and pulpit speaker, will re-enter the pastorate at the end of the world tour which he is now making in the interest of Christian Endeavor, according to a recent news release. Dr. Poling gives no intimation as to his probable location, and the announcement is given as part of the agreement when he entered his present work more than five years ago. His radio talks and connection with the Christian Herald will be continued; but he will resign the executive responsibilities of the Christian Endeavor movement.

BELIEF IN THE HOLY SPIRIT

An outstanding journal of religious opinion carried recently an excellent article dealing with the practical values of belief in the Holy Spirit. In the opinion of the writer, it is the article of our Christian faith which is responsible for the effective realization of the ideals and the teachings of Christ in the life of the believer. But our day, too much afraid of mysticism and otherworldliness, has deliberately suppressed the emphasis upon the central doctrine of the early Church, and the effect has been to weaken the authority and the appeal of the Christian message. The importance of the Holy Spirit found emphasis in the words of Jesus: "It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you." The reason which he assigned does not relate to himself—it is expedient for you. Such reasoning was entirely different from our human thinking, because the motive and inspiration were different. On the eve of his departure, Socrates told his disciples that his going was well for himself, as he would be set free from misunderstanding and persecution. Even Paul said that he had a "desire to depart, and to be with Christ; which is far better (for himself). Nevertheless to abide in the flesh is more needful for you." But Jesus enthroned the entire company of believers of all ages in the words, "If I depart, I will send him unto you." On the score of His wisdom and understanding, it is sufficient to say that the changes which were wrought in the lives of the disciples and in the fortunes of the Christian Church at Pentecost are proofs both of the validity of the words of Jesus and of the creativeness of belief in the Holy Spirit. That belief was the dynamic of the early Church, for it translated the shadows of a great sorrow into a radiant, jubilant, and triumphant fellowship. The need of the modern church for a new dynamic is simply an expression of the need for the recovery of the Holy Spirit as the vitalizing force in our Christian living.

MINISTERIAL LEADERSHIP

At the opening of the recent session of the British Conference, the President delivered a strong and timely address. His theme was Ministerial Leadership, and he introduced it with a very effective quotation: "If we fail in winning the world to Jesus Christ, we must look for the causes of our failure, not among the things we were not eloquent enough to utter, but among the things we were not wise enough to believe or pure enough to possess." By that he meant to imply that ministerial failure is less often due to equipment than to the lack of an inward experience. The approach to his theme was a plea for an individual and personal force-center for the leadership of the man divinely thrust into the ministry. He then discussed the fields of ministerial leadership as being first of all, a thought leadership of our generation, and a daring devotion to the great dogmas through which the convictions of the Church have found expression. We must bring people to feel that God is more interested in their purity than in their prosperity, and we must make the other world real rather than this world comfortable. He then plead for an evangelistic leadership as being necessary for all men and indispensable to the life and progress of every church, great or small—an evangelism that produces conversions of conduct and character. In this connection, it is some times said that effective evangelists must be found outside of the schools, but he pointed to Moses, the deliverer of Israel, as a man trained in all the wisdom of his generation, and to John Wesley as one of the best educated men of the eighteenth century and an evangelist of the first order. Last of all, a leadership in public affairs, not of sacramental or detached relation, but a religion bearing hope to generations yet to come. A leadership in personal conduct which will lift the ministry above being amiably tolerated or patronizingly praised; but make it appreciated as embodying virtues which the world can not do without. For such leadership, God chooses not great talents or culture, but great likenesses to Christ.

WILL ROGERS

Today the name of Will Rogers was uttered in accents of sadness throughout the civilized world. Millions of men and women who never saw his face have lost a friend. As radio artist, movie actor, humorist, comedian and homespun philosopher, he made a place for himself in the hearts of people in many lands and his tragic death brings a feeling of personal bereavement to the entire English-speaking world. We are not informed as to his personal faith and we can not offer such profession as a testimonial in his behalf. But better far is the fact that his life, an open book, speaks for itself. We have seen him in person and in the movies, we have heard him on the radio and we have read his writings. We do not recall an instance in all his entertaining which might have been considered unworthy of a Christian man. His humor was clean and without malignant stain, he lent to the "silver screen" a touch of patriarchal purity and manliness, and he gave to life, in the distressful days through which we have passed, a radiance and a hope worthy of the noblest human philosophy. We do not think that it does violence to truth to say that he was the most wholesome comedian of his day. In this generation, he was our best exponent of the doctrine that a merry heart doeth good like a medicine. But, alas, alas, the man who for a score of years brought holiday to the hearts of others, has gone on holiday himself! A ripple of laughter o'erspread his noble face as his plane lifted into the sky and he sped away upon his long journey—a journey from which he will not come back. With a heavy heart, the world says good-bye to the genial friend with whom it has often romped its sorrows away, and we will think of him in the glorious land beyond the blue where laughter is changed into an immortal song.

SHALL WE DRINK BEER?

By Mrs. B. M. Howorth

Legal beer had just come to our town of 5,000. Alcoholic drinks had not been legally sold here for forty years. Some of our young people had had some bootleg whiskey but they had not tasted beer. Most of the people grown up since alcoholic liquors were outlawed had not used beer or any other intoxicating liquor. Of course there was a little sporadic drinking, not enough with most to form a habit. There was a small group that obtained bootleg liquor regularly but that was hidden and did not affect the town as a whole.

Beer came, was much advertised, and displayed in the windows down on the business streets. A boy of sixteen said to his father: "Daddie, we can drink all the beer we want now. It seems to be sold everywhere, just like orange juice or Coca-Cola. Young people are drinking it, it must be good. You have always taught me not to drink, but there can be no harm in beer, they say. Let us go on and drink it with the others." The father said: "My son, I am so glad you spoke to me about that before you went ahead. It is true the National and State laws have been repealed and beer can be bought anywhere, but God's law has not been repealed and never will be—God's law that even in the smallest quantities alcohol hurts the human body, the brain first of all."

"But daddie, it does not seem to be hurting the boys who drink. They seem to go along just as well, and they say they'll never get the habit."

"How do they know it is not hurting them? Do they expect to be really drunk before they know it is hurting them? Do you know even the alcohol in a glass of beer slows down the nervous system, muscular responses take longer, the eye does not see quite as accurately, the judgment is clouded? To give one instance, this alone causes more automobile wrecks. Suppose you kill some one because you took a glass of beer. As to that habit—no one ever expects to form the habit, it creeps up until it is difficult to break. As for me I shall not drink beer, no matter how free it is. Won't you let it alone? Remember that business men do not want to employ young men who drink. They find out."

"All right, father, I am glad I spoke to you about it. I'll not drink it. I do wish our young people knew more about what it will do to them."

This is just an example of the temptation that is now going on everywhere in our state. Young people who would not have drunk otherwise are beginning. They do not see the harm. Older ones are taking it up, some who had not used liquor for years, find their appetite returning through beer. They are going from that to something stronger.

Our Church must throw its strength at once into educating as to the evils of alcoholic drink, into putting beer out of the counties of the state, and into keeping the dry laws we have.

A COLLEGE AND ITS IDEALS

"An institution lives because of its ideals," declared Dr. Pierce Cline, president of Centenary College, at the final student assembly of the summer session.

Introduced by Dean John A. Hardin, who expressed his appreciation of the intense "study drive" on the part of the summer students, despite the hot weather, Dr. Cline portrayed the world in which they were living as one which would increasingly challenge thought. "More and more," he said, "there will be a necessity for thought and attention."

"I listened to a man roundly score the whole of education. He declared the country was in a mess, notwithstanding the fact that colleges and universities have been running all the time. In fact, he said, just before the country was precipitated into its distressing social and political troubles, there were more institutions of learning than ever before, and he suggested that that might be one of the reasons for our condition. His indictment was greatly overstated. But, my friends, some of you have been attending college some time, and a few of you for several years; what good has it done you? What are you going to do with what you have accumulated? In what way are you going to be different from what you would have been had you not come or had gone somewhere else?"

"I think there was some injustice in the indictment of education, for it is a sad fact that a great many of those who have had the opportunity either did not avail themselves of it, or having availed themselves of it, did not make proper use of what they had acquired.

"It is the ambition, the hope and purpose of Centenary College, along with many other institutions, that whosoever shall spend a season on its campus shall go forth an individual that will make any scene of activity that he or she may enter a little better than it would be without their presence.

"Reason on the situation for a moment. If you choose to be weak, if you choose to be indifferent, if you choose to be selfish and demand something more than you are willing to give; if you expect to receive more than you are planning to return, what hope have you for a happy, contented, useful life? Regardless of religion, regardless of spiritual values (and anyone who has given any serious thought to the subject of religion and spiritual values knows that they are the highest values in human life)—but regardless of those values, the philosophy of life, the plan of life taught by Jesus Christ, is the only one that gives satisfaction to the human being.

"I believe there are those who, without knowing the teachings of Christ, make an honest endeavor to live up to that ideal. I believe there are those in the Buddhist and Confucian faiths and other areas who, unwittingly, seek to approach the philosophy of life laid down by Jesus Christ, namely, let him that would be greatest among you be the servant of all. Now, whoever attempts to find the highest happiness on some other basis is destined and doomed to failure from the beginning.

"You ask me: 'What about little Centenary College, struggling, poor, never hoping to be rich? Little old frame buildings around on the campus, floors worn out?' Compared with some other institutions, it is a plain place. I can take you to an institution that has spent more money fixing an entrance than has been spent on this campus, but do you know, with all our material poverty, with all our financial shortcomings, this institution has been standing 110 years, not always with its physical plant in Shreveport, but in this part of the South. How can such a humble place live so long? It has lived through depression and prosperity, through war, through peace, through pestilence, through health. It has lived in an age that was as different as that age was different from the time of the Master. The transformation that has taken place during the life of Centenary College is almost past belief. How did it happen? It was no accident, no miracle, nothing strange. This institution was founded with the idea that it would render a service greater than it would receive. It would be great by becoming the servant, to the height of its capacity, to all. You know, an institution dedicated to that ideal is not going to fail, no matter how dark the clouds appear.

"It is to be hoped that those of you who are for the first time enrolled in this institution this summer will carry with you this idea. Those having enrolled upon former occasions, and who will enroll in the future—if you carry it with you in your hearts for a quiet hour's meditation whenever opportunity affords, asking yourself seriously what is the true thing in life, I think you will find it as I have stated it. Following that Man of Galilee, if you will learn to render a service greater than the service you demand, you will then learn the secret of life, for it is by such a process civilization increases, civilization grows.

"Allow me to say in conclusion you have been in a place where you have made your mark. This institution is but the sum total of the marks made by all of those who have gone before, and will be to the end the sum total of those who have gone before. Your own individual mark which is made here will follow you. Your own individual career and destiny will be but the sum total of the acts, thoughts and aspirations that come into your hearts and lives. You have the privilege of controlling and determining, not always the circumstances, but always the purpose that shall animate you; always the desire that shall guide you. And, if the proper purposes, holy ambitions, right desires dominate, the path of success before you is as clear as the needle is true to the pole."

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

One of the deep wells of joy often neglected is the privilege of rejoicing in the success of others. When viewed without prejudice this gives us food daily to help us grow to be Christians of expansive hearts. It is the very small man or woman who discounts the gifts and progress of others. Many labor under the error that if they discredit the success others are making in any field of work that they advance themselves. The reverse is true. No genuine progress is made in religious life except on the foundation of self-forgetfulness. Of course there is a sense in which men can advance themselves by design to certain positions, but their inner life is injured. It is a beautiful sight to see parents rejoicing in the success of their children; employers taking delight in the development of those who labor with them; mature ministers assisting and taking part joyfully in the growth of the younger men who have zeal with knowledge. One of the most fruitful lives I know has enriched her own life by sharing joyfully the success of others

The Methodist Church has a group of very attractive periodicals. It appears that we must make a more determined effort to get these papers and magazines in the homes of our people. The new magazine, which will begin to circulate in October, designed for the home, is a most worthy project. We have recently taken a survey of the type of literature the people are reading. It is surprising how much literature is going into homes, yet it will make you feel uneasy when you know what a small amount of Methodist literature is going into our homes even in the best church areas. The causes of the Church must be gotten into the weekly and daily papers. It makes good news. The informed person will be more interested. Jesus sent men out in advance to make it known among the people what he had in mind to do for them in their midst. The subject matter printed in our church periodicals will fill the greatest need when it is spiritual in character. The vast circulation of extra-church religious periodicals should be a guide to us in furnishing our own people with literature which treats of the spiritual life; its victories, problems, and messages.

PUBLICATIONS WANTED

The Library of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, is trying to gather together for the use of its students and the Church all available historical material of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be kept as research material for any needing it. As the value of this material depends in a large measure on its completeness, it is important to fill the gaps in the files. If anyone has any of the issues listed below it will render a distinct service to scholarship if he will communicate with the library:

of the Discipline, on which I took office; and if I have done wrong, put me out . . . , if I have sinned against the Discipline, I refuse not to die."

In the course of the discussion on the Conference floor, much was said concerning the unacceptability of a slaveholding bishop in Northern Annual Conferences; and it was alleged that the action against Bishop Andrew was necessary on the grounds of "expediency." There is no reason to doubt the unacceptability of a slaveholding bishop at the North, but the assertion does not state the whole truth. Bishop Andrew would not have been less acceptable in the North than an abolitionist bishop would have been in the South. It will be recalled that Dr. Coke was threatened with personal violence on account of his emancipation activity in 1785; and the shameful treatment of George Dougharty in Charleston, South Carolina, in 1800, was due to resentment of the anti-slavery agitation of the Methodists. So the doctrine of "expediency" carried to its logical conclusion might have left the church with a rather colorless episcopacy.

As we have observed before, it is wide of the mark to accept Bishop Andrew's ownership of slaves as the one and only explanation of the upheaval which occurred at the General Conference of 1844. His connection with slavery was the immediate occasion for the troubles which arose, but it was only the spark in the Methodist tinderbox which started a conflagration toward which the church had been progressing for more than half a century. On the part of the North, it was the culmination of resistance to the practice of slavery as a political institution to which it had been forced to lend its sanction through provisions excepting slaveholding states from the operation of the rules against slavery. On the side of the South, it was a defensive struggle for maintaining rights guaranteed by both civil and church law, and for the preservation of its self-respect and its position as an integral part of the Methodism of America. The delegates from the South knew that the heated and bitter controversy over the case of Bishop Andrew was only the prelude to the real conflict—the struggle for the emancipation of the slaves. What the majority in the General Conference did, as the South felt, in contravention of all disciplinary regulation, was accepted as an indication of the desirateness of Northern purpose concerning slavery. Let us, then, dissociate the conflict from Bishop Andrew that we may study it as a contest between distinctly marked groups within the church. It was not in any sense a contest to which the contending factions came after a course of calm and placid reasoning on the principles involved. The situation on both sides lent an insistent urge to action; an urge before which the judicious poise of Methodist leadership collapsed; and, in a riot of feeling, the Conference undertook to find solution for a problem which had rocked the craft of Methodism from the hour of its ecclesiastical birth.

Those who promoted and profited by the slave trade in the North were gone, and the fewness of the slaves left in that section made it comparatively easy to accomplish their emancipation. Slavery had come to be to the North largely an academic question, affecting the moral and the civil life of the country and particularly that of the church. Following the General Conference of 1832, the proponents of abolition had become more active, and the repressive measures adopted by the Conference of 1836, made them militant and aggressive. Abolitionist leaders launched a bitter campaign against the Methodists in the non-slaveholding states, the effect of which began to be felt through protests and petitions and in an ever increasing volume of withdrawals from the membership of the church.

Orange Scott said: "It is not slandering the Church to say that, as a whole, she is pro-slavery to the core. There is as much proof that the General Conference (1840) of the M. E. Church is pro-slavery, as there is that the United States Congress is pro-slavery. And those brethren who come out from pro-slavery political parties, in consequence of their corruption, and still remain in a pro-slavery church are grossly inconsistent." Individuals began to withdraw from the church; the secession of a group occurred in Utica, New York; another in Cleveland, Ohio; and in Michigan there was a more extensive secession. In 1843, the Wesleyan Methodist Connection of America was set up in a convention held at Utica. The new organization soon numbered in its fold seventeen thousand members, drawn largely from the Methodist Episcopal Church. The North was aroused and inflamed on the subject of abolition; the charge of casuistry was brought against the leadership of the church; and it was declared to be "not only a slaveholding, but a slave-defending church." Nine Annual Conferences and ten thousand members sent petitions against slavery to the General Conference of 1844. The New England anti-slavery convention demanded that the rule against slavery be so altered as to make slaveholding a term of membership, and it threatened that if the Conference did not entirely separate the church from all connection with slavery, it would be no longer a home for anti-slavery Methodists. Such was the situation confronting the North at the roll call in 1844. Plainly the church in that section had come to the place where choice must be made of one side or the other, for conciliation was no longer possible.

The Southern section of the church approached the Conference with less of internal agitation and strife, but its problem was the same that it had been from the beginning. Its social and economic life had been constructed around slavery. It had regarded its interests in the institution as being protected by the most sacred civil guarantees; for sixty years the church had made consistent acknowledgement of its rights under those guarantees; and it had recognized the disabilities under which the South labored, concerning any scheme of emancipation. When the General Conference assembled, therefore, the South felt that its rights would not be interfered with; and that they would certainly not be taken away by any sudden reversal of ecclesiastical policy. It is true, also, that the South was not less jealous for the maintenance of its rights in the vast estate, spiritual and otherwise, in the church whose building it had shared. The Methodist Church was as much the idol of Southern hearts and firesides as of those at the North. When the Northern majority held unyieldingly and almost solidly to the resolution to eliminate Bishop Andrew, it meant the sweeping away of the last safeguard, and it meant the reduction of the Southern section of the church to a mere dependence—a position inconsistent with its standing and self-respect. Such was the impasse created by the vote on the Finley substitute by which Bishop Andrew was demoted.

At this point in the proceedings, the issue was definitely joined. The leadership of the Southern group realized that it had come to a critical and dangerous stage in the long struggle, and the delegates were much disturbed. But they refused to take counsel of their emotions and every subsequent move was the result of sober thought and was definitely planned with one end in view—to save the South and the Southern Church from being destroyed. Dr. Mathew Simpson, afterward Bishop, said: "Doctor Capers was in correspondence with John C. Calhoun and other Southern leaders who were watching this phase of the slavery question and the threatened division of the Union." We have not been able to establish that fact; but, if such were the case, it is likely that these eminent statesmen had little occasion to feel ashamed of the achievements of their ecclesiastical understudies. Dr. Simpson then went on to say: "The delegates of the South in the General Conference were more shrewd and diplomatic than those of the North. The latter felt themselves strong, both in the rightfulness of their cause and the strength of their numbers, and the others knew that they were in the minority, and resorted to the use of tact." He was probably correct in saying that the North felt sure of its greater numerical strength; but the assertion that the South used greater diplomacy, shrewdness and tact is open to question.

James Porter, of New England, a leading member of the Conference of 1844, published an article in the Methodist Quarterly Review for April, 1871, in which he made a confession for the New England delegates. He said that the New England Conferences wanted among other things, "That Bishop Andrew should be required to purge himself of slavery or vacate the episcopal office;" and that, in order to avoid prominence "in pushing the measures agreed upon," they put the "laboring oar" into the hands of the conservatives. In the same article, reference is made to the request of Bishop Hedding that no afternoon session be held, in order that the Bishops might consult regarding a compromise. The article states: "The Abolitionists regarded this a most alarming measure. Accordingly the delegates of the New England Conferences were immediately called together, and, after due deliberation, unanimously signed a paper declaring in substance that it was their solemn conviction that if Bishop Andrew should be left by the General Conference in the exercise of episcopal functions, it would break up most of the New England Conferences; and that the only way to be holden together would be to secede in a body, and invite Bishop Hedding to preside over them." Bishop Hedding could not be seen before the Bishops met for consultation, but when the paper which he had signed was presented, he asked that his signature be withdrawn, which was done. This, as will be observed, is the confession of one of the parties to the diplomatic maneuvers of those who were on the other side of the contest.

It does not seem that the Northern delegates comprehended the real seriousness of the situation that had developed, and it is certain that some of them did not accept at their face value the warnings of disruption voiced on the floor of the Conference. Following the adoption of the Finley Resolution, Dr. Lovick Pierce gave notice that a protest would be filed by the Southern delegates. On June 3, Dr. William Capers introduced a series of resolutions which sought to divide the church into two jurisdictional Conferences, one for the free and one for the slaveholding states; but the committee appointed to consider the scheme failed to agree and nothing came of it. On June 5, Judge Longstreet presented a declaration on behalf of the Southern and Southwestern Conferences, which stated that the attitude of the General Conference on slavery and abolition, and the extra-judicial proceedings against Bishop Andrew, "Must produce a state of things in the South which renders a continuance of the jurisdiction

Mississippi and Louisiana

The church at Amory graciously granted Rev. C. T. Floyd a month's vacation which he is sharing with his wife on a trip to Oklahoma.

Rev. G. H. Boyles, of Houston, Miss., is giving four weeks in August to revival services. He is said to be an effective leader in such work.

Dr. C. M. Chapman, preacher in charge at Pontotoc, Miss., is taking his vacation on the gulf coast where the cool breezes blow, when they blow.

A revival is in progress at Winona, Miss., where Rev. W. H. Mounger is pastor. Brother Mounger is being assisted by Rev. W. R. Lott of Aberdeen, Miss.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, of First Church, Columbus, has secured a visiting preacher for each Sunday morning during August, while he takes a well-earned vacation.

Rev. W. L. Robinson, North Mississippi Conference director of adult work, joined recreation with duty by attending the adult workers meetings at Lake Junaluska this summer.

The parsonages of Rev. Julius McRaney, at Nebo, Miss., and of Rev. F. M. Casey, at Roxie, Miss., have been re-roofed, much to the comfort and joy of the pastors and their families.

Rev. H. L. Johns, presiding elder of the Monroe District, is doing a fine work in promoting the building of a church at Epps, La., where their building was destroyed by fire several years ago.

Rev. H. B. Hines of Amite, La., did the preaching in a revival at Killeen church where Rev. Thurlow Barrett is the pastor. We learn that the meeting was well attended and inspired much interest.

The editor makes grateful acknowledgement of an invitation by Presbyterian friends at Vaiden, Miss., to participate in the centennial celebration of the Shon-galo Presbyterian Church, on August 22, 1935.

Rev. J. R. Murff, who is preacher in charge at Kilmichael, Miss., had the assistance of Rev. J. O. Dowdle in a meeting at Salem on that circuit. The meeting began on the second Sunday in August.

Brother C. S. Lewis calls our attention to an error in the date of his meeting as reported in the Advocate. It will begin the fourth Sunday in September instead of August, as originally stated in the Advocate.

Mrs. Florence Travis, of Carthage, Miss., writes us an appreciated note in which she commends the Advocate, and particularly the special features. The kind of appreciation she expresses helps us to carry on.

Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, pastor at Tutwiler, Miss., has just returned from a motor trip through the west. He reports a great time and inspiring experiences among the wonders of nature in that vast region.

Mrs. Rebessa Covington Gorton, of Shreveport, La., sends us a clipping found in her mother's Bible, which we hope to publish in an early issue. We appreciate her desire to share these precious treasures with others.

The parsonages at Satartia and Washington, Miss., have been repainted and renovated. At Washington there was the installation of electric lights. The pastors are Rev. F. J. Jones and Rev. H. L. Norton respectively.

Rev. Claude M. Simpson, Paris, Texas, sends a renewal of his subscription and a congratulatory note to the Advocate. We appreciate the fact that he is still our friend, notwithstanding the fact that we roomed together in college.

The summer services at West Point,

Miss., are being held on a lawn located between the Methodist and the Baptist churches. We presume that the two groups unite in the service. A good attendance and interest are reported.

Miss Sarah Evelyn Franklin was married to Mr. Warner Richard at Crystal Springs, Miss., on August 11. Rev. J. G. Galloway was the officiating minister. The Advocate joins their many friends in wishing the happy pair bon voyage.

The churches of Pickens charge, under the leadership of Rev. C. A. Northington, are putting on the whole program of the Church. At Goodman, where a junior college is located, he has a great opportunity in the large group of young people who come together for the school work.

Rev. S. W. Hemphill, pastor on Crawford charge, says that church work goes forward there in spite of the excessive heat of the summer. He reports a meeting in which he assisted Rev. T. F. Sartin of the Chester circuit, where there were twenty-one additions on profession of faith.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Jonestown, Miss., we have known from the days that he was pastor at Gunnison, and we have not known a more faithful man or a more untiring worker than he. He is still at the task and will be when he hears the summons announcing that his day of work is done.

The editor acknowledges a brotherly word of appreciation from Rev. J. T. Abney, of McComb, Miss., who is now on the honor roll of the Mississippi Conference. The Advocate has no better friend than he and we hope that it may be as a lingering ray of sunshine upon his path to the end of the journey.

Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, surprised the pastor on last Sunday evening with a welcome service in honor of his return from a vacation in Illinois. All departments of the church were well represented and it was one of the happiest and one of the largest audiences in attendance at evening services this year.

The publicity superintendent, Vergil Garlington of Oakdale, La., sends us the reports adopted at a very successful Christian Adventure Camp for intermediates held at Lake Arthur for the Lake Charles District. The reports are too long to be published as they are, but we publish elsewhere in condensed space the report of the findings committee, which contains the substantial elements of the camp's achievement.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, now in his fourth year at Natchitoches, La., plans to spend his vacation at Dresden, Tenn., and at

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

The Missionary Society of St. Francisville enjoyed a most happy and profitable day recently when a trip was made to Houma to visit the MacDonnel French Mission School.

Before starting on the journey the group assembled at the attractive home of Mrs. Claude Ellender, where cake and coffee were served.

Returning from Houma the members of the auxiliary stopped to visit Mrs. Stuart Churchill at "Belle Alliance." This opportunity to inspect this lovely antebellum home was a rare privilege indeed.

Sixteen ladies made the trip and on their return home were most enthusiastic concerning the splendid work carried on at MacDonnel School for the French people.

Mrs. S. M. Collins, Conference superintendent of Bible and mission study, was elected at the recent session of the woman's conference at DeRidder, to represent this Conference at the Pastors' School at Shreveport and also the school of missions at Mt. Sequoyah. Mrs. Collins writes as follows concerning these schools:

"The Pastor's School in Shreveport, June 3-8, set a new high for leadership training in the Louisiana Conference. The week was most pleasantly and profitably spent. Although the school did not reach the number Mr. McLelland expected, the quality of the school was high. The class of work done was excellent. I might compare it with Mt. Sequoyah in some respects. Miss De Bardeleben gave the mission study in both places. Dr. Moerner, from the General Board, conducted the course on Christian Education in both places. While the work on 'The Devotional Use of the Bible' given by Dr. Sprinkle at Mt. Sequoyah was fine, I am sure it was not finer than the Bible course taught by our own Dean Smith.

"The study of the new hymnal conducted by Dr. Fagan Thompson of Vanderbilt University, was exceedingly fine and a most enjoyable part of our program. I hope another year many more of our missionary women will take advantage of this opportunity to prepare themselves for a greater service. The management of the school was good and the living quarters pleasant.

"Many of us feel that it is impossible to go to Lake Junaluska or Mt. Sequoyah. Let every study leader make a greater effort to attend the Pastors' School next year."

Mrs. Collins will conduct a number of "coaching days" at various places throughout the Conference in the next few weeks in the interest of Bible and mission study.

JACKSON DISTRICT COACHING DAY

Sixty women attended the Jackson District coaching day held August 8, at Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss. Mrs. F. C. Hayden of Vaughan, Mrs. I. H. Sells and Mrs. W. H. Porman of Jackson, who attended the class taught by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, at Biloxi, were in charge of the program. Mrs. Hayden outlined the devotionals used in connection with the class. Mrs. Porman gave the methods of teaching for "How Shall I Learn to Teach Religion" and Mrs. Sells explained the plans to be used in studying "That Other America." During the day Mrs. Eurie M. Weston, conference superintendent of Christian Social Relations, spoke of the blot upon our state because of the large number of lynchings this year. At noon the auxiliaries of the Jackson churches served lunch.

In spite of the fact that the unemployment situation among the Mexicans of the Southwest continues serious, yet by special effort, economy, and consecration, every charge in the Los Angeles District of the Western Mexican Conference managed last year to pay all general and conference benevolences in full. Rev. Laurence Reynolds is presiding elder of the district.

Miss Frances Montague of Lydia Patterson Institute, El Paso, Texas, has taught a Sunday school class for women for many years and last year prepared the Bible study program each month for the Conference Woman's Missionary Society. She also assisted in editing and publishing the Conference Bulletin, "La Voz Misionera," for the Western Mexican Conference, taught several courses on missions at Lydia Patterson Institute, and had charge of the culinary department. She has managed so well that the work has been done with only student help and one paid helper in the kitchen.

Rev. Laurence Reynolds, presiding elder of the Los Angeles District, Western Mexican Conference, reports: "The Homer Toberman Mission in Los Angeles, owned and operated by the Woman's Department of the Board of Missions, is a good property and a good work is being accomplished. Miss Mollie Womack is the new head resident. She is ably assisted by Miss Clara Hodgson and other efficient workers in social service, special classes, club work, playground work, dental clinic, and general church work."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The Silver Anniversary Tea given by the Methodist Missionary Society in Ackerman on Monday, July 1, to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Council was a very enjoyable as well as instructive occasion with a representative crowd of members and visitors in attendance.

The church was beautifully decorated in zinnias in shades of rose and pink, while perennial sweet peas were used effectively around the punch bowl, over which Mesdames Joe Weaver and Garland Weaver presided, assisted by Misses Ernestine Beeman, Anna Ruth Helms, and Frank Pinson.

In the receiving line were Mesdames Hanna, Johnson, James, and Glasgow, former presidents of the society, and Mrs. J. H. Beeman, present president. Each of these ladies was presented with a lovely bouquet of flowers by Mrs. W. H. Gaston in appreciation of their services to the society.

Mrs. Spurgeon Adams rendered a lovely organ offertory. Wade Gaston, Jr., played several cornet solos, accompanied by Mrs. Adams. Miss Lucy Carolyn Gillis sang a solo. After a short devotional, led by Mrs. Glasgow and a prayer by Mrs. Langley, Mrs. James and Mrs. Johnson gave very interesting discussions of the work of the women of the Church for the past twenty-five years. A playlet by Misses Onie Murphy, Nona Adams Gillis, and Jane Doughty brought to a close a very splendid program.

Mrs. W. H. Gaston of Ackerman writes of many interesting things they are doing but these I shall list for you. "We have taken a boy from the Orphans Home to clothe. We have had a Co-operative Daily Vacation Bible School. The C. S. R. Chairman works with the Negro Sunday school and church. We are still sending Octagon Coupons to the Orphans Home."

"Scarritt College is anxious to discover outstanding young people who have great potentiality for Christian leadership, and who would like to take special training for Christian service. If you can locate such young people in your Conference and will put them in touch with Scarritt College, this will be a very definite service to them and to the Church. (2) we are making an effort to secure as quickly as possible one thousand "Scarritt Associates"—men, women, and children who wish to have some definite part in the work Scarritt is doing. If we can accomplish this at an early date, it will enable Scarritt to assist the young people who must have financial assistance in their special training. (3) We are also anxious that every local Missionary Society should make its $4.00 contribution to the Scarritt Maintenance Fund, for until we can get an adequate endowment, Scarritt is dependent upon this fund to carry on its work."

The above is an excerpt from a letter from Dr. Cunningham and because it concerns every Missionary woman in the Conference I am sending it on to you. If you would like some literature about Scarritt College or Scarritt Associates, please write me, Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE CAMP

The Baton Rouge District Christian Adventure Camp, held at Bluff Creek, is now an established feature of the District and Conference program. Last year, some fifteen intermediates registered, and although some very fine work was done, it was somewhat discouraging to leaders. This year, at the Christian Adventure Camp, July 30-August 3, forty-four intermediates and eleven staff members registered, and it proved to be a particularly fine group, and the results were most gratifying. Thirteen churches were represented, as compared with six or seven last year. Forty-two Christian Adventure certificates were awarded on Saturday morning.

Due to the serious illness of his little son Jack, Rev. Ira Flowers was unable to be with us as dean. However, Rev. J. B. Grambling, who brought a group of young people from Epworth Church, ably filled the vacancy, with the assistance of other members of the staff. We deeply appreciate Brother Grambling's "pinch-hitting" for us.

The high point of the 1935 Christian Culture Camp at Bluff Creek was a most inspirational consecration service on Friday night, led by Rev. C. E. McLean. At the close of the sermon, which was from Hebrews 8:5—"See that thou make all things according to the pattern shown to thee in the mount," the entire group gathered around the altar for the prayer of consecration led by Rev. J. A. Alford.

With a total registration of fifty-nine, there were forty-eight young people and eleven adults. Two young people registered too late to earn credit, one left a day early, one under age and one over age, so that forty-three certificates were awarded. Fourteen churches were represented.

The theme: "Christian Youth-Builders" was carried out in every phase of the four-day program. Morning watch carried out the thought of character-building, and was led by Miss Flora Mae McClendon of Amite. "Christian Youth Building a New World" was the theme of the vesper services, which were led by Aralynn Hastings, Charlotte Searles, Margie Stewart, and Billy Schuhle.

MARY SEARLES.

THE WORLD With Us and Within Us

Not only is the world too much with us, soon and late, as a good, wise peer gave us warning; alas, it is too much within us. An obsessive externality besets us, subduing the soul, if not actually submerging it under the sheer weight and mass and medley of things. If Emerson could say, in his quiet day, that "things are in the saddle and ride mankind," it is ten times true today, when luxuries have become necessities and life is littered and cluttered. It is not so much a materialism of thought as a suffocating materialism of fact which overwhelms us. At no time has man had such a command of the forces of nature, the resources of invention, and the fruits of industry. The invisible, tangible world has become a home, as to the masses of men, it has never seen before. What wonder that our grasp of things unseen is feeble, fumbling, faltering in the presence of so much obtrusive reality—how could it be otherwise?—Joseph Fort Newton.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 25.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D.

BARNABAS (A Man of Consecrated Means)

Jesus, like Simon, by the grace of God won another name, and worthily wore it—"Barnabas, son of consolation, exhortation, encouragement." Fresh in enthusiasm and earnest in zeal, the disciples appear to have abandoned secular employment that they might give themselves wholly to witnessing to the gospel of the risen Lord, those who had property voluntarily disposing of it for a common fund to support the comparatively small group of workers for the Kingdom. Most notable of the donors was Barnabas who sold his farm and contributed the proceeds to the cause. When this plan was later abandoned, it appears that he, like Paul, worked for his living while he preached, (I Cor. 9:6).

Wherever persecution scattered the disciples, they carried "the word," to Jews, to Hellenists, to Gentiles. The church at Jerusalem had misgivings about the ingathering of such diverse elements, and dispatched Barnabas to Antioch for investigation. Being a Levite, he would be loyal to the essentials of Judaism; being a Cyprian, he would be sympathetic toward Gentiles; being a Christian, he would be fair and just to all God's children. He was a man of consecrated common sense. No better choice could have been made. When he met the converts at Antioch, he rejoiced and exhorted them to continue in the faith. He not only approved what had been done, but saw large opportunity for advance under the right leader—and he knew where that leader could be found. He had the genius of recognizing genius, and hurried away to Tarsus for Saul. The circuit-rider discovered a bishop! What a year they had at Antioch, these two, the consecrated lay-preacher and heaven-ordained scholar of the century! They "had a good year, Bishop." Things "moved" that year. The movement had to be named. The workers were too busy to be concerned about that, so their enemies dubbed them Christians, then a term of reproach, but down the centuries a badge of honor, most honorable where most deserved.

"A man of consecrated means." How enough of his type could bring peace in our strife and order in our confusion! The property question is sharply to the fore, and various "isms" threaten or beckon distraught society, all of them sinister with selfishness. Much do we hear of "share the wealth"—nothing of "share the debt," which was the motive of Barnabas. We face a greed that would grab, in some respects more diabolical than the greed that withholds. Certain popular schemes of distribution would paralyze the savers and pauperize the receivers, leaving the race in the drab equality of misery and despair. Money earned builds character; money donated destroys it. Let saving, slaving parents take note, and paternalistic governments beware. One who is competent to care for inherited or donated fortune is competent to make his own. To the incompetent and unworthy, it is only and always a curse. We need a sense of social responsibility, and equalization of opportunity rather than of wealth. How to share and how much to share may be safely left to enlightened Christian conscience. Certainly the strong should help the weak. Certainly the predatory must be restrained. Not larger fortunes but better people will make a better world. Some should give a tithe; some their entire net income; some, like Barnabas, should give their capital and henceforth devote themselves to the promotion of the Kingdom of God through personal service. A "good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith"—in God and man—will find a way. Barnabas was generous in purse and spirit—happy when he was leading the work, happier still when it was led by his greater friend and co-laborer, Paul.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

By Rev. H. M. McCormack, Jr.,
District Director

The Greenwood District's success in the recent Advocate circulation campaign was due in no way to accidental forces. It was the natural result of well planned, determined, persistent effort. Our presiding elder has a way of presenting his objectives with such a ring of certainty of accomplishment that everyone takes it as a matter of course that we will do what he asks. When he announced that we had to secure 325 subscriptions, why, we simply went out and got them, and more.

One of the surprises of our campaign was that the Advocate is much easier to sell than we had suspected it would be. The difficulty was in getting started. Once started, the rest was easy. Even a member of the publishing committee could sell Advocate subscriptions if you could only get him started.

The Greenwood District young people's division is making splendid progress. On August 8 we had a district-wide young people's meeting in First Church, Greenwood. Our next step will be to organize some additional unions. We had the largest district delegation at the Conference assembly at Grenada. Some outstanding leaders have been discovered among the Greenwood District young people. Among them are: Miss Jewel Green of Itta Bena, secretary of our Conference organization; Miss Martha Boswell, Winona; Mr. James Sharp, Greenwood; Mr. Eugene Chatham, Schlater; Miss Martha McCafferty, Lexington; Mr. Sidney Carlton, Moorhead; Mr. Johnny Hollingsworth, Tutwiler; Miss Josephine Bradley, Belzoni; Miss Mary Emily Dudley, Moorhead; and a number of others. Mrs. J. T. McCafferty, Lexington; Mrs. W. H. Mounger, Winona; Mrs. J. M. Bradley, Greenwood are among the pastors' wives who have shown a large interest in our young people's work. We hope to have one of the finest district organizations in the Church within another year.

We have been having a number of splendid revivals over the district. Brother Henley had with him Brother Jeff Cunningham at Isola and Brother W. C. Newman at Inverness. Brother J. A. George will be with the writer at Moorhead, September 8. Brother H. P. Lewis was with Brother A. J. Henry at Sunflower recently. Brother J. C. Wasson was with Brother Potts at Duck Hill in June. Brother W. M. Campbell assisted Brother Cunningham at Price Memorial, Greenwood. Fine reports come from all

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

The Survey Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges says in its Report of April, 1935:

"The Committee feels that it cannot conclude its report without brief comment on the excellence of this college. Under the leadership of President Key and his competent faculty the college has maintained through the years a high grade of work in the field of liberal arts.

"In its two days at the College the Committee was impressed with the atmosphere, both on the campus and in the classroom. Students are of high quality, and their relationships with the faculty are most wholesome."

Fall Session opens September 11.

these meetings. Brother Murff reports a great meeting at Kilmichael where Dr. McIlwain did the preaching.

Maybe you won't agree, but a few years' observation has convinced the writer that the one great need of present day Methodists is loyalty. Not that we are disloyal—we are not—but because we are unloyal. In the name of broad-mindedness we have become indifferent and half-hearted. Is Methodism making a distinctive contribution to the spiritual welfare of the world? Is our Church worth being loyal to? Then, let us remember that loyalty supplies power, poise, purpose, ballast, and works for health and success. No church has a greater heritage than ours, no name may be worn with any more credit and pride than the name "Methodist." Loyalty is born of love, and if we are to have genuine loyalty in our Church, we must love it, and teach our children to love it. You can be loyal to your Church without being disloyal to another Church, just as you can be loyal to your family without being disloyal to another's family. There is nothing narrow or selfish in genuine loyalty. It is absolutely necessary to normal health and success. Careless, slipshod indifference is neither broad-minded nor altruistic, but it is fatal to victory. If Methodism is to have a rebirth of her early zeal and fervor, it will begin in a return to solid loyalty to our principles and institutions.

volume could be rated as great, it is certain that to those who know the author intimately they must possess a charm that will cause them to be treasured. Written on simple themes and expressing in many cases, homely ideas, the reader feels that the author reveals himself as a man of truest ideals with a love for the enduring things of life—home, work, music, friendship and God, all find a place in his poems. If, however, one is seeking stately rhythm and non-prosaic ideas he will be disappointed in POEMS OF PEACE AND POWER.

GOD'S SYMPHONY

As dawn, the virgin daughter of the day
Sets flaming yellow tapers on the pines,
She gently shakes the tree-tops, shrubs, and vines
To wake the woodland orchestra of May.
An unseen leader seems to blend and sway
The scattered notes, He skillfully combines The Thrasher's song, like sparkling ruby wines,
With plaintive Phoebe's call. He stills
the Jay.

The Whip-Poor-Will a melancholy trombone;
The Piccolo must be some unknown fellow;
The Mocking Bird—the lovely violin's tune;
The Owl is perfect as the vibrant cello—
A symphony too pure to understand.
The baton must be held in God's own hand.

The Methodist Home

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Mark 1:9—So Jesus came out of Nazareth of Galilee.

Here is the picture of Jesus leaving home for His life work; saying farewell to the village in which he had grown up. How anxious Mary would be about her Son's health and about the perils of the way.

Many sons have left home. Many have sought material fortune. Jesus went out to serve. He left His home. He made possible a Heavenly Home.

"Where are you from?" In static Palestine nineteen centuries ago, that inquiry would mean even more than it does today. This information was considered vital. Men designated themselves by the towns from which they came: Judas of Kerioth, Paul of Tarsus, Jesus of Nazareth. Such names of towns served to both identify and characterize men.

Nazareth was not in best repute. The reception Jesus later received at Nazareth reveals some reason for the sinister reputation of the village. Its citizens sought to kill him. Perhaps its mountain isolation made the people intolerant and suspicious. However, Jesus showed no discouragement because He hailed from Nazareth.

There are those today who would explain all conduct on the basis of environment. But no environment can explain Jesus. Nazareth did not master Jesus.

It is also true that man might dwell in a veritable Garden of Eden and still sin. Environment exerts tremendous influence on many people, but personality must be reckoned with. Man can master his circumstances. Worldliness cannot be condoned on the ground of living in a worldly community. If one feels he is the helpless victim of an unworthy environment, he can find help here. It is heartening to think of the great characters that have come from unlikely places. Moses was born in a slave hut. Fifty years hence, will not some cabinet minister confess he received his call in a young people's assembly? Will not some great scientist, statesman, physician, teacher, minister, missionary, testify to the faithful witness of a Church school teacher, pastor, parent? In the Church today there are brave and untiring workers. In their service (no matter how remote the church and humble the setting) there is drama and potential destiny and the whole future of America and the world. Who knows where the life-work will be done, of those who accept Christ's sacrifice and way of life as Methodists proclaim it in these difficult and sometimes disheartening days? Any place may produce them—if it is producing at all.

Whatever Nazareth might mean to others, to Him earth was crammed with Heaven, and every common bush afire with God. Those magnificent mountains were famed in history. The mountainous location overlooked the plain of Esdraelon and the great world highway from the East to the Sea and to Rome beyond. The slopes of corn, vines, and figs and flowers, spoke to Him of the Heavenly Father, who watched over the birds, gave increase to the sower, who clothed the flowers in gorgeous raiment. Nazareth means "flower."

Whatever other homes might have been in Nazareth, there was at least one home which held Joseph and Mary. They fostered the things of the spirit. And he communed with the Heavenly Father. Added to Nature's message, added to home influence, was His personal relationship to the Father and His personal choice of doing the Father's will. Jesus came out of Nazareth for a purpose. He knew what that purpose was. He would carry the good tidings that God was a Heavenly Father. He would bring abundant life. In the wilderness or on the plain, in the city or countryside, on the seashore or mountainside, in the Temple at Jerusalem or in unlikely Samaria, He revealed the things of the Father. Finally He went to the cross to save a world from sin. He "endured the cross and despised the shame and is set down at the right hand of God the Father."

PRAYER

We thank Thee that Jesus came out of Nazareth of Galilee. We thank Thee that unpropitious surroundings need not imprison any spirit.

We thank Thee for the mission of Jesus. We thank Thee that He went about doing good. We thank Thee for His revelation of God; for His words of eternal life; for the salvation that He brought in His sacrificial death and resurrection.

We would be His disciples. We would trust Him as our Savior. We would heed His invitation to follow Him. We pray for constant guidance in Jesus' name.

REV. LEE McDONALD LIPSCOMB

Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock we buried this beloved member of the North Mississippi Conference from the Galloway Memorial Church in Jackson. He had been in poor health for some time. He was serving the church at Como, but because of poor health had to resign his work some weeks ago. He was laid beside his wife who died some two years ago. He leaves six sons and one daughter, all grown. Four of the sons reside in Jackson, one in New Orleans, one in Greenville, and the daughter in Clarksdale. Revs. J. W. Ward, V. C. Curtis, R. G. Moore and the writer conducted the last sad rites. Brother Lipscomb was a strong preacher, guileless in his life, heroic in his faith, consecrated and effective in his ministry. Peace to his ashes.

In Memoriam

L F. DEAR

On July 12, at 10 p.m. our beloved father and grandfather, L. F. Dear, was called to heaven. He was a true Christian and kept the laws of God in deeds as well as in words.

He was born in Jackson, La., on July 29, 1854, and came to this section in young manhood. He married Miss Ella Kelly, of Baton Rouge, and reared eight children, all of whom are still living. He joined the Methodist Church while a young man, and for years, until he was physically unable, he was superintendent of Blackwater Sunday school and an active worker in the church. He was loved by all and will be greatly missed.

He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. B. Lewis, of the Blackwater community, near Baton Rouge and Baker. He leaves his wife, the former Miss Ella Kelly; three daughters, Mrs. J. R. Hausey, Mrs. R. E. Core, and Mrs. J. B. Lewis, of Baton Rouge; five sons, Seymour, Frank and Louis, of Baton Rouge, and Jack and Henry, of Bakersfield, Calif.; eighteen grandchildren and six great-grandchildren; also several nieces and nephews.

But in our memory he is still alive, and, as James W. Riley has said, I cannot say, and I will not say That he is dead—he is just away. With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,

He has wandered into an unknown land. And left us dreaming how very fair It needs be, since he lingers there. And you—O you, who the wildest yearn For the old-time step and the glad return,

Think of him faring on, as dear In the love of there as the love of here. Mild and gentle as he was brave— When the sweetest of his life he gave

DR. B. N. SEWELL

The unexpected death of Dr. Ben Sewell, who died at his residence here on July 21, 1935, was quite a shock to his family and many friends. He was born at Jackson, La., July 21, 1870. He was a son of Rev. Bennett Ware Sewell and Angelina Coleman, the latter of Clinton, La. He graduated from Centenary College, when it was located at Jackson, La., and was also a graduate of the medical department of Tulane University, and a member of the Rapides Parish Medical Society, and the Southern Medical Association and American Medical Association.

He moved to Boyce, La., from Clinton in 1897, and practiced his profession here ever since. Dr. Sewell was a staunch member of the Methodist Church, and from what I have been able to learn of his life, was true and devoted to the Methodist cause, and gave generously to its support. For the last few years his health was not so good, and he did not attend church regularly, but was indeed a warm friend to the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God through the power of the church. He was not only a good physician, and true to his profession, but a kind hearted and a very lovable man, always standing for the thing he believed to be right. Besides his many friends, left to mourn his loss, is his wife, two sons, one a Dr. Bennett Sewell, Jr., of Lake Charles, and Francis A. Sewell of Boyce. He also leaves four sisters. Dr. Sewell did much charity practice.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist Church at 10 a. m. by Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev. L. C. Wilson and the writer. Interment was made in Rapides cemetery, under the direction of O. H. Grant, funeral director of Boyce.

We pray for the bereaved family, that God will bless them in all things.

C. B. POWELL.

GEO. W. McPHERSON

George W. McPherson, who died on Sunday afternoon, June 30, 1935, was in his eighty-third year. His illness was brief, following a stroke, and the funeral services were held from the home on Monday afternoon by Rev. H. F. Brooks of First Church, Tupelo, and Rev. G. C. Gregory of Verona, Miss. Interment was in the family burying ground at Palmetto. For forty years he was a devout member of the Methodist Church and long a steward. He was left an orphan at an early age and he was, therefore, a self-made man. He was interested and active in all philanthropic and charitable enterprises, and was prominently connected with the progress and development of his county and community. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Beula Kennedy McPherson, and three children, Mrs. Roy Foote, Mrs. Gilmer Garmon and Mrs. Walter Doty. He leaves also one brother and one sister, (Walter McPherson and Mrs. Alice Raney. His going leaves a vacant place in the community and in the hearts of those who knew him best.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA

Mt. Sequoyah for the camp meeting. He gives an encouraging report of the work in his church. The services for the summer have been on the church lawn and have been quite successful. He says, too, that the vast throng of young people in the college makes that one of the most challenging tasks in the state.

Rev. R. L. Ellis did a unique thing in his revival at Black Hawk recently. He capitalized the enthusiasm of the occasion by raising his benevolent assessment for the year. He was assisted in the meeting by Rev. Jeff Cunningham.

Rev. W. H. Giles, pastor at Bastrop, La., spent his vacation in Georgia. Excellent reports have reached us concerning his work and it is likely that he will make the best progress in many years in the payment of the debts on his church.

FULTON METHODIST CHURCH

of Fulton and given to the Methodists there.

Mr. John Moss, who built the house of 1880, visited Fulton during the erection of the new building and asked permission to drive a few nails into the building. His request was heartily granted. He was 96 years of age.

Rev. W. L. Atkins is serving in his fourth year as pastor of this church, which has a membership of 380. Dedication has been delayed on account of a balance of indebtedness of over $3,000, which has recently been cleared out under the leadership of Brother Atkins.

The work of this year is coming along well, members have been added on profession of faith, congregations are good, and there is a dependable assurance that finances will be in full at the end of the Conference year.

All former pastors, especially, are invited to the dedication services.

FINDINGS COMMITTEE

We, your finding's committee, submit the following report:

1. We find that this has been one of the best planned, manned, and conducted camps that we have attended.

2. We believe that the delegates to the camp ably represented the intermediates of the district; and that their spirit during camp has greatly helped to make it a success.

3. We recommend that the departmental organization of the camp be made a permanent feature.

4. We like the student leadership of morning watch and vespers. And we think that an adult leader should lead discussion and testimony at the close of each vesper service.

5. Our teachers have made the courses profitable, but would like to see courses included on subjects such as: prayer, personal religion, and what we should believe.

6. We ask that the management seek to borrow several small boats for use in a marked off area during swimming.

7. We believe that the interest groups contributed greatly to the camp.

8. We regret that a good many churches have no representatives here; and we ask that the presiding elder require that each preacher help send one delegate from each church.

9. The worship committee stands for a distinctly worshipful religious service.

10. The evangelism committee recommends that each church hold a young people's revival.

11. The missions committee asks that each department indicate its part of the fourth Sunday offering so as to get credit for it on the mission pledge.

12. The citizenship and community service committee asks that each department take more interest in beautifying the church grounds.

13. The recreation committee suggests that folk games is the only effective answer that the church can give at present to the problem of social dancing.

Central Methodist Church

CENTRAL METHODIST CHURCH, of Meridian, Miss., has a long and notable history. It was established, and the first church erected, in 1860, and the first pastor was the Rev. O. P. Thomas. In 1886 it was rebuilt and the Rev. W. C. Black was its pastor. This building was destroyed by fire in 1913, and the present church was erected in 1917, while the Rev. Herbert B. Watkins was its pastor.

The present church site occupies one-fourth of a city block and it holds a very commanding position in the city. It is within a few blocks of the heart of the business district and is situated near the center of the population of the city. The building is admirably planned so as to serve the needs of a great congregation.

Since the erection of the present building the church has been served by Dr. J. Lloyd Decell, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Dr. Benjamin L. Sutherland, and Dr. Lawrence L. Cowen, in the order named.

THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH in Virginia, according to the Scottish Rite News Bureau, made its last stand for state maintenance by proposing a compromise which should include all denominations. The tax levy was to be paid to the taxpayer's own denomination, or in lieu of that to a school in the country where he resided. Madison and Jefferson fought the measure, the proposition was defeated, and Jefferson's measure for Establishing Religious Freedom was passed instead.

MRS. ADENA MILLER RICH, the wife of a Chicago stockbroker, is to succeed the late and lamented Jane Addams as president of Hull House, according to press reports. Mrs. Rich is said to have been the choice of Miss Addams for the place, and her nomination received the unanimous approval of the Board and of the residents of the institution. But Mrs. Rich succeeds to a very difficult place. She succeeds to the presidency of a great Foundation and her service will be discharged in the shadow of one of the world's greatest personalities.

THE NORTHWESTERN EDITION of the Christian Advocate observes that 10,279 persons were recognized with academic awards of one kind or another by the eighty-eight educational institutions affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal Church, during the commencement season just closed. Of those awards, 8,346 were earned degrees, 161 were honorary degrees, 529 were certificates, and 1,243 were diplomas. That record speaks well for the contribution which the Methodist Episcopal Church is making to education.

THE ENGLISH METHODIST CONFERENCE, at its recent session, sanctioned the issuing of a prayer book for optional and experimental use within the body. The New Outlook, Canadian, says, "There seems to have been a growing demand for a liturgy among the free Church bodies and it will be very interesting to see how general and effective the use of the new book will prove to be. It is quite probable that Mr. Wesley did not have the prejudice against printed prayers that some of his followers have had." It is quite possible that a liturgy might cure some of the sloppy pulpit performances of our time, but its value for deepening spiritual life is open to question, and we think that our English brethren should or should not have adopted it. Making it optional is just a method of straddling the issue.

RUTERSVILLE COLLEGE, organized near the present town of LaGrange, Texas, says the Christian Advocate, New York, was founded by the Rev. Chauncey Richardson, a Methodist preacher in 1839, being the first Protestant school in Texas. Nine preachers meeting in the school building December 25, 1840, made up the first Conference in Texas. Richardson came from Alabama, and was editor, educator, and presiding elder. He died in 1852 and was buried on the college grounds.

WOMEN ASPIRANTS FOR ADMISSION TO THE CLERGY are still finding rough sledding for their cause. The General Conference of Australia, Methodist Church, expressed the willingness to permit women candidates to offer themselves under the conditions prescribed in the law of the Church; but with the saving clause that in view of the difficulties involved in itinerant work, "the Church is unable to accept women candidates for the ministry, but believes that the establishment of an order of deaconesses may offer suitable opportunity for consecrated service." Well, that is at least optimistic talk.

THE CHURCH OF THE AIR, programs of the Columbia Broadcasting Company, will resume the regular broadcast on Sunday, September 1. The morning program will be from 8 to 8:30, and the noon service from 11 to 11:30, Central Standard Time. The speakers for Sunday, September 1, will be Spencer Miller, Jr., of the Protestant Episcopal Church, who will speak on "The Church and Social Idealism," and Dr. Irving Reichter, rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, San Francisco, who will speak on "These Things Shall Not Pass Away." Each speaker will have the assistance of a competent choir.

THERE HAVE BEEN BRIGHT MOMENTS, says an exchange, in this war-clouded summer, and one of them occurred on July 2, in Paris, when war veterans of France, Great Britain, United States, Germany, and other allied nations who had fought as enemies in the World War, assembled to seek a way to prevent future war. The veterans voted to seek mutually to understand and examine without bias the aspirations of each of their countries, and to work together to prevent the propagation of false or prejudiced views which might create misunderstanding and strife. They expressed their conviction that respect for treaties is the only basis of international relations. The German veterans invited the conference to meet in Berlin next year.

LABOR DAY

As we approach the day set apart for the recognition of the place and importance of the toiler, too many are occupied with demonstrations rather than with the eternal principle of justice for those who work with their hands. It is an occasion when there should be no differentiation in rank for any of the vast army of laborers upon whom so much depends. The organized trades of our industrial life make much of the occasion for purposes of publicity and propaganda. We do not object to that, but we do lament the fact that a great army of unorganized, but no less worthy workers, go unremembered in the demonstrations of the day. We think particularly of the agricultural toilers who produce our bread, but for whom less has been done than for any other class of people in American life. If there was any first thing for which Jesus stood, we think it was for a recognition of the rights of the repressed and the forgotten. Again and again he lifted such into the consciousness of men. But his interest was never a plea for mere bread or a better economic position—fleeting material compensations. It was a plea for the man himself. Our Labor Day thinking revolves too much around hours and wages, rather than around the things which build men and make character. We do not deny the importance of the necessities of life; but we do make a plea for the place and value of those virtues which lift the wage of the toiler infinitely above the spoils of the vultures of civilization, though both be measured in the same monetary unit. The honest toiler knows that a dollar earned has in it a satisfaction, and that associated with it is a peace of mind not to be had in any other way. The noblest significance of Labor Day will not be realized until we look beyond material and class distinctions, discover the true virtues of toil and help to weave them into a texture of noble living. We must come to know that our little workshop is God's workshop too. The Carpenter of Nazareth developed not more in the skill of his craft than in that deeper and diviner preparation for the Saviourhood which has been the theme of the ages and is still the hope of mankind.

RECREATIONAL GUIDANCE

The recreational problem of young people will always be one of the real problems of the social life of the church. It is much easier to solve it for the moment than it is to lay a solid foundation for the social development of the younger group of the church. It is not unlikely that one of the most clearly indicated needs of the young life of Methodism is for a sane and wholesome recreational guidance. There are two attitudes to the problem which need to be carefully studied. The first is the attitude of repression. It may have been possible once to achieve success in that direction, and in a certain degree such might still be helpful; but a program built around "Thou shalt nots" offers little toward a solution of the whole problem. The other attitude is that of compromise. The recreational leadership of the church needs to keep in view the fact that undesirable and unwholesome social activities can not be suppressed by the adoption of something so nearly like the worldly practices as to have the same appeal. Temperance sentiment can not be promoted by the song, "There's a Tavern in the Town;" and the rechristening of terpsichorean movements will not change their impact upon the social life of the young people. Jesus never compromised with the forces and practices of sin, and it is the business of the church to create a taste for things that are different from the unwholesome and the morally destructive ways of the world. Herein is the opportunity and the urge for a recreational guidance which shall be morally and socially constructive. And if the demands of our young people can not be lifted above the simulation of worldly practices, then we need to re-examine our program and appeal. We believe that a sympathetic and sound recreational guidance can find the key to our problem, but that key will not be the least common denominator of the social practices whose origin and purpose are anything but Christian and character building.

COL. R. F. WHITE

The announcement of the death of Col. Frank White, eldest son of Judge Horace White of Alexandria, will bring sorrow to many hearts throughout Louisiana. The end came in a Shreveport hospital where he had been ill for a long time. Col. White was a member of the Official Board of First Church, Shreveport, and funeral services were conducted there Sunday morning by Bishop Sam R. Hay, who was supplying for Dr. Dawson, on vacation. Interment was in Alexandria when Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs delivered an address which for its profound Christian outlook, its grace, its soul and its sympathy greatly moved the hearts of the throng that filled the church.

SUPERANNUATES REMEMBERED

Notice has been received by the president of the Louisiana Legal Conference of a bequest for the creation of a trust fund for the benefit of superannuate preachers and the dependents of deceased preachers of the Conference. The money was left by Mrs. Ella Knox Keener, widow of the late Rev. Christian Keener, whose death occurred a few days ago at Baton Rouge, La. The provision of the will, which has been probated, follows:

"Second, in memory of my husband, Rev. Christian Keener, I give and bequeath to the Louisiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the sum of ten thousand (10,000.00) dollars, to be used by the Conference in the establishment of a fund to be called the Knox-Keener Fund, and to be invested in some interest bearing security, and the income to be used only for the support of superannuated ministers of the Louisiana Conference, and the widows and orphans of ministers of the Louisiana Conference."

Mrs. Keener before her marriage was Miss Ella Knox, a name distinguished in Louisiana history, and her husband was the son of Bishop John C. Keener, whose long and distinguished career is a heritage of Louisiana Methodism. This bequest is devoted to a worthy cause and it will worthily perpetuate the ministry of a great Methodist family, and no less will it show the consecration and the devotion of a great and good woman.

CHAOS

This is a day of propaganda and the more one reads the less does he comprehend the situation, and the more he is bewildered as to his own responsibility. This does not result from the lack of a clear-cut conception of moral principle, but from the fact that principle has become so intertwined with political, social and economic interest as to make of seemingly moral issues anything that any one may desire. Political antagonisms make it impossible to separate real issues from partisan politics, and every effort is put forth to suppress the independence of the citizen who would think through issues for himself. But the Church can never fulfill its obligation to society until it gets its consent to drive a straight course, regardless of parties or agitations. The cure for our ills must be solved in righteousness, not in any form of dictation. There may be times when it becomes necessary to circumscribe popular liberties, but "emergency" is a dangerous word. We stand unalterably for the Constitution and the courts. In such safeguards, we believe, rests the hope of a free citizenship and the perpetuation of American liberty. That is an issue upon which we will not surrender, for we believe that the tinkering with our fundamental law would be followed by chaos.

"HOBBY OR NO HOBBY; THAT'S THE QUESTION"

By Rev. B. C. Taylor

Once upon a time a minister went down from the Annual Conference to his new charge, full of enthusiasm and determination, declaring he had no time for outside things, scoffed at the idea of having a hobby, and plunged into his work with that "do or die" attitude. Ere long, he fell among hard problems, which stripped him of his zeal, wounded his pride, and left him perplexed and nervous. By chance, a brother minister of another church, came that way, but seeing the troubled look on his face, passed by on the other side of the street. Not many days hence, a member of his choir called, but finding his pastor gloomy and pessimistic, cut his call short and hurried away. But a certain member of his board, who was known for his wholesome outlook on life, came that way, and when he saw the condition of his minister, loaded him into his car, carried him to the lake, thrust a rod and reel into his hand, and began paddling the boat for him. Suddenly, a fine trout struck the lure, which for the moment excited the clergyman, but he came to himself, tightened up on the line and began to play him about until he finally brought him in reach of the landing net. This process was repeated seven times until his host said: "Enough for today." They drove home with spirits running high and when the member of the board took his leave, his friend said: "Verily thou hast saved my life. Today, I've found a hobby. I'll be a better minister after this." His congregation declared it was so. After his call to the ministry, Simon Peter had time to say: "I go fishing."

WILL ROGERS

By Rev. E. Nash Broyles, D.D.

The death of Will Rogers was a shock to the world. Of Cherokee descent, limited education insofar as schools go, developing right early a business sagacity which was rather extraordinary, internationally minded from early youth, covering awkwardness with wit and humor that was clean and harmless, he became a national friend, a world acquaintance, a newspaper, radio, and playhouse necessity. In his friendliness people forgot his propensity for making money or that he was a millionaire. He was to the end plain Will Rogers, the cowboy and humorist, the companion of every man.

Disliking a dress suit, he rarely wore one, but was at home in the League of Nations, in the legislative halls of the United States, in the great party conventions, before the diplomats of the world, or with the cowboys of Oklahoma. There has never been another like him. Will there ever be again?

"All I know is what I see in the papers," he said; but as an example of mental alertness, he had no equal. In a five-minute speech he would likely touch upon literature, science, statesmanship, personalities, finance, or the live social, national and international questions of his day.

He was a human meteor across the sky of the world, seeing all, hearing all, knowing all—gone out.

His thought clung to fundamentals, whether it was in religion, statescraft, or society; and, all in all, he was one of the most calming influences this country had. His quick wrought philosophy in careless grammar attracted attention among the leaders of thought everywhere. Whether it was art, his saying was not foolish; in literature he showed a rare familiarity; in legislation he penetrated all appearances to the very heart of the thing; his humor at the expense of public men may have been to their temporary embarrassment, but never to their hurt. They all liked him.

Will Rogers was good; he was generous. "Humanity has lost a great and sincere friend," said one who knew him. Said another, "He taught the world to laugh;" and another, "He was the most charitable man I ever knew." He was respectful and appreciative of the fine and true and noble in his daily dispatch, "I'm not going to be funny today, for my friend, Fred Stone, has got religion, and for once I want to be serious." (To Stone himself he wrote and told him how glad he was that he had taken the stand). Then when Fred Stone had fallen from the skies in his own airplane, which he was piloting, and had broken his ankle bone, both legs near the thigh, three ribs, his left collar bone, and his jaw, had almost scalped himself and had broken his nose, millions heard him over the radio from his bed in a New London hospital say: "Everybody has been so good to me since my 'flop.' Will Rogers came from California to 'pinch-hit' for me in the show, thus keeping hundreds of girls and boys from losing their employment. Dorothy has carried on." A friend commenting said, "When Will Rogers came to 'pinch-hit' for him, and Fred knew that the members of his company would not be thrown out of employment, he was the happiest man with fourteen broken bones who ever lived."

Dr. William L. Stidger, writing in his "Men of the Great Redemption, says, "Nor shall we ever forget that another comedian, Will Rogers, canceled half a million dollars' worth of speaking engagements and motion picture contracts to come to the rescue of his friend. That is the most beautiful act of Christian friendship I have seen in my day. I doubt if there has ever been anything like it in the history of the American stage. That is standing the test of friendship and of Christian sacrifice. That beautiful deed on the part of Will Rogers will stand for a generation as one of the most beautiful acts of Christian friendship we have seen." This explains why Dorothy Stone, in speaking of Will Rogers' sudden death, said, "The worst shock I've ever had."

In Boston, in 1930, Will Rogers is reputed to have spoken his own epitaph, "When I die," he said, "my epitaph, or whatever you call those signs on grave stones, is going to read: 'I joked about every prominent man of my time, but I never met a man I didn't like.' I am proud of that." Rogers added, "I can hardly wait to die so it can be carved. And when you come around to my grave, you'll probably find me sitting there proudly reading it."

We will say good-bye to one of America's most unique and friendly personalities, whom every man, woman, and child feel as though they had met face to face; and whom genius and the years will probably never replace.

TRAVEL NOTES

By Rev. A. M. Serex, Ph.D.

ABOARD A FREIGHTER

For the first time out of several trips to Europe during the past fifteen years, I traveled this summer on a freighter. I doubt whether circumstances being alike, I shall cross the Atlantic again any other way than on a cargo ship; and I would advise all my brethren in the ministry desirous of going abroad, to make some inquiries along this line, when they are making their plans.

First of all, it will be much cheaper than any other way. There will be no need of the fare to a Northern port from which passenger liners are sailing. Then, if you go to such a steamship company as Lykes Bros. in New Orleans, Mr. Ralph Rugan will inform you that ministers are given a half fare on the company's ships. Less than $100 will take you to Europe and back.

Secondly, the cabin put at your disposal will likely be the best on board, equal in comfort to the best a regular liner will give you, unless you want to splurge.

Thirdly, you will be relieved of all the noises and hubbub which marks the life on board regular ships. The trip will be somewhat longer, but it will be days of quiet and peace, during which the vastness and beauty of the mighty sea will speak its message to your soul. Long days, no special task to be done in a hurry, hours ahead for undisturbed meditation, a few good books to read at leisure—I am sure I have said enough to make many a busy pastor long for a trip at sea on Lykes Brothers' S. S. "Western Queen."

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS—Perhaps one of the most enlightening experiences of the traveler to Europe is a renewed appreciation of America. We have complained a great deal about the hardships of the past few years; but what we had to go through in the way of suffering was less severe than that felt here.

I do not have the privilege of reporting to the readers of the Advocate sensational interviews with great financiers or the heads of various governments, but I have the good fortune of an entrance into the homes of some ordinary, everyday folks. After all, it is such places that one needs to go to understand the real conditions in which a nation finds itself. I find everybody here keenly alive to these currency operations which go under the name of inflation, deflation, devaluation. In other words, the gold standard is not a joke about which folks talk in a spirit of levity, nor is it a theoretical term of mere academic or professional interest; but it means something which is vital to the life of every individual.

Unlike the United States, European countries are not self-sustaining. Even some of the most fundamental necessities of life have to be imported here and there, so that people may have enough to eat. But to import something means to find an outlet to export the equivalent amount for something else, so that the money you have to spend to buy from a foreign nation will not all go out, but will come back through what you can sell to some one else. And the juggling which is necessary all around in order to maintain somewhat of an equilibrium is a most intricate operation. There stand in the way protective tariffs and regulations of all kinds; for every nation feels called upon to preserve itself and try by all means possible to get the best of the other fellow. Commercial life, consequently, is stifled all around, and business has to overcome obstacles which are even greater than those we meet in our own land. On the top of that, there is always the lurking ghost of speculation which thrives on making raids here and there against the currencies of various nations.

Inflation, deflation or devaluation are operations which governments use to protect themselves in such emergencies. In Europe, they seem to me to have all the same result: "they leave the people a little poorer than they were before." It is not a very technical appreciation of such learned operations, but it is a homely estimate of what it leads to: to take from Peter to pay Paul, and Peter is always the same fellow, the man who is honest, careful and thrifty, in other words the best type of citizen.

In Europe they call the depression: "the crisis." It is the name given to this series of disturbing social and economic phenomena which have, in late years, rocked the life of every nation.

In the seminary I was taught that the word "crisis" meant "judgment." So I like very much the word that Europe uses to describe the economic, political and moral sickness which has spread all over the world. "La crise" it is very much better than to say, "The depression." For, after all, are we not living in a period of judgment, the judgment of past policies, theories and modes of living? There is going on, here, a very searching academic discussion of the problems involved in all these questions. The power of analysis and criticism involved in the various ideologies, is most remarkable. But Europe, alike America, though perhaps more so, suffers from the lack of the moral courage necessary to do the things to be left undone. A feeling of insecurity and restlessness is evident everywhere. It is impossible to make any prediction as to the future. If reason and common sense can have the right of way, well and good; but it is rather to be feared that these problems will be settled by a wave of emotionalism in the masses and that will mean the destructive excesses of communism.

POLITICAL UNREST—The same unrest exists also in the shaping of the political program of every nation, except perhaps in Italy, where Mussolini knows what he wants and goes after it. My guess is that he will get it, because the rest of Europe, though altogether out of sympathy with Italy's designs in Africa, is unable to get together sufficiently to check a program which everybody knows will be disastrous for European civilization. Having always been a strong partisan of the League of Nations, because I believed in Wilson's dreams of a new era in international relationships, it is with great reluctance and misgiving that I have to reconcile myself to the fact that the League, as an effective instrument of peace and security, is dead. The Italo-Ethiopian controversy destroyed the last illusions one may have had, and revealed in its nakedness the deadly process of undermining which the inconsistencies and lack of moral convictions of the past ten years have done to the ideals of the League.

The Council of the League was called upon to decide a clear-cut issue last week. There was Italy's thesis: "I need to expand, and wish to take Abyssinia. Europe ought to be grateful that in my desire of expansion, I do not go after your colonies, but am content to claim the last strip of Africa which has not been conquered." Of course, this blunt thesis is dressed up a little with the use of the wonderful catchword "civilization." It is in the name of "civilization" that Italy proposes to invade Abyssinia, and bring to her the lights of Western culture. Of course if we have to kill a few thousand Ethiopians, it is just too bad, and if we find a few oil wells and mines for ourselves, so much the better—but there are slaves in Abyssinia, and "civilization" must think of these poor dejected creatures.

Abyssinia's claim is also very simple: "We appreciate Italy's 'philanthropic' interest in us," she says, "but our membership in the League of Nations guarantees us the right of that General Conference inconsistent with the success of the ministry in the slaveholding States." The declaration was submitted to a "Committee of Nine"—three from the North, three from the South and three from what were known as the conservative Conferences. Dr. Robert Paine of Tennessee was the chairman. Five of the committee had voted for the Finley Resolution regarding Bishop Andrew and four had voted against it. Under a resolution offered by J. B. McFerrin and Tobias Spicer, the committee was instructed, "Provided they cannot in their judgment devise a plan for an amicable adjustment of the difficulties now existing in the church, on the subject of slavery, to devise, if possible, a constitutional plan for a mutual and friendly division of the church." The resolution of instruction was passed after the Conference had refused to delete the word "constitutional."*

On June 6, The Protest, a voluminous document, was read by Dr. Bascom on behalf of the thirteen Conferences and parts of Conferences in the slaveholding territory. The Protest was signed by several delegates not in slaveholding territory—two from Illinois, one from Ohio, four from Philadelphia, and two from New Jersey. Some of these, at least, were originally from the South. The majority faction was much aggrieved by the manner in which the Protest arraigned its action touching Bishop Andrew, and a "statement" in reply was ordered to be prepared for entry upon the Journal.

On June 7, Dr. Paine, on behalf of the Committee of Nine, submitted the following report:

"Whereas, a declaration has been presented to this General Conference, with the signatures of fifty-one delegates of the body, from thirteen Annual Conferences in the slaveholding States, representing that, for various reasons enumerated, the objects and purposes of the Christian ministry of the Church organization cannot be successfully accomplished by them under the jurisdiction of this General Conference as now constituted; and

"Whereas, in the event of a separation, a contingency to which the declaration asks attention as not improbable, we esteem it the duty of this General Conference to meet the emergency with Christian kindness and the strictest equity; therefore,

"Resolved, by the delegates of the several Annual Conferences in General Conference assembled,

"1. That, should the Annual Conferences in the slaveholding States find it necessary to unite in a distinct ecclesiastical connection, the following rule shall be observed with regard to the Northern boundary of such connection:—All the societies, stations and Conferences adhering to the Church in the South, by a vote of a majority of the members of said societies, stations, and Conferences, shall remain under the unmolested pastoral care of the Southern Church; and the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church shall in no wise attempt to organize churches or societies within the limits of the Church, South, nor shall they attempt to exercise any pastoral oversight therein; it being understood that the ministry of the South reciprocally observe the same rule in relation to stations, societies and Conferences, adhering by vote of a majority to the Methodist Episcopal Church; provided also, that this rule shall apply only to societies, stations, and Conferences bordering on the line of division, and not to interior charges, which shall in all cases be left to the care of that Church within whose territory they are situated.

"2. That ministers, local and traveling, of every grade and office in the Methodist Episcopal Church, may as they prefer, remain in the Church, or, without blame, attach themselves to the Church, South.

"3. Resolved, by the delegates of all the Annual Conferences in General Conference assembled, That we recommend to all the Annual Conferences, at their first approaching session, to authorize a change of the sixth restrictive article, so that the first clause shall read thus: "They shall not appropriate the produce of the Book Concern, nor of the Chartered Fund, to any other purpose than for the benefit of the traveling, superannuated, superannuated, and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows, and children, and to such other purposes as may be determined upon by vote of two-thirds of the members of the General Conference."

"4. That whenever the Annual Conferences, by vote of three-fourths of all their members voting on the third resolution, shall have concurred in the recommendation to alter the sixth restrictive article, the Agents at New York and Cincinnati shall, and they are hereby authorized and directed to deliver over to any authorized agent or appointee of the Church, South, should one be organized, all notes and book accounts against the ministers, church members, or citizens, within the boundaries, with authority to collect the same for the sole use of the Southern Church, and that the said * Attention is called to the fact that Dr. J. T. Peck, in the Methodist Review for April, 1870, disputes the refusal of the Conference to delete the word "constitutional." But the record shows to the contrary and as it had stood apparently unchallenged for a quarter of a century, the author does not feel that great importance should be attached to an unsupported recollection.

Agents also convey to aforesaid agent or appointee of the South, all the real estate, and assign to him all the property, including presses, stock, and all right and interest connected with the printing establishments at Charleston, Richmond, and Nashville, which now belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"5. That when the Annual Conferences shall have approved the aforesaid change in the sixth restrictive article, there shall be transferred to the above agent for the Southern Church so much of the capital and produce of the Methodist Book Concern as will, with the notes, book accounts, presses, etc., mentioned in the last resolution, bear the same proportion to the whole property of said Concern that the traveling preachers in the Southern Church shall bear to all the traveling ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church; the division to be made on the basis of the number of traveling preachers in the forthcoming Minutes.

"6 That the above transfer shall be in the form of annual payments of $25,000 per annum, and specifically in stock of the Book Concern, and in Southern notes and accounts due the establishment, and accruing after the first transfer mentioned above; and until the payments are made, the Southern Church shall share in the net profits of the Book Concern, in the proportion that the amount due them, or in arrears, bears to all the property of the Concern.

"7. That Nathan Bangs, George Peck, and James B. Finley be, and they are hereby appointed commissioners to act in concert with the same number of commissioners appointed by the Southern organization, (should one be formed), to estimate the amount which will fall due to the South by the preceding rule, and to have full power to carry into effect the whole arrangements proposed with regard to the division of the property, should the separation take place. And if by any means a vacancy occurs in this board of commissioners, the Book Concern at New York shall fill such vacancy.

"8. That whenever any agents of the Southern Church are clothed with legal authority or corporate power to act in the premises, the Agents at New York are hereby authorized and directed to act in concert with said Southern agents, so as to give the provisions of these resolutions a legally binding force.

"9. That all the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church in meeting houses, parsonages, colleges, schools, Conference funds, cemeteries, and of every kind within the limits of the Southern organization, shall be forever free from any claim set up on the part of the Methodist Episcopal Church, so far as this resolution can be of force in the premises.

"10. That the Church so formed in the South shall have a common right to use all the copyrights in possession of the Book Concern at New York and Cincinnati, at the time of the settlement by the commissioners.

"11. That the Book Agents at New York be directed to make such compensation to the Conference, South, for their dividend from the Chartered Fund, as the commissioners above provided for shall agree upon.

"12. That the Bishops be respectfully requested to lay that part of this report requiring the action of the Annual Conferences before them as soon as possible, beginning with the New York Conference."

The report was adopted after the change of a single word in the first resolution to make it read "Annual Conferences," instead of "Delegates." The motion for making this change was made by Dr. Paine, and the paper was adopted by an overwhelming vote. But some time after the Conference adjourned, there developed at the North very decided opposition to the "Plan of Separation." It was held that the General Conference had no authority for dividing the Church—a contention which may have had some color of reason, but in which the wish may have been father to the thought. A precedent had already been established, however, for divisions to meet political necessities. As a matter of fact the American Church was set off to meet a condition created by the independence of the United States; and in 1828, the General Conference authorized a division, contingent upon the vote of the Conference in Upper Canada. Dr. Paine, chairman of the "Committee of Nine" which drew up the "Plan of Separation," was one of the committee of five which matured the action for setting up the Church in Upper Canada. Following is the Report signed by Dr. Fisk, the chairman, and inserted in the Journal of the General Conference of 1832.

"Resolved by the delegates of the Annual Conference in General Conference assembled, that, whereas the jurisdiction of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States of America has heretofore been extended over the ministers and members in connection with said Church in the Province of Upper Canada, by mutual agreement, and by the consent and desire of our brethren in that province; and whereas this General Conference is satisfactorily assured that our brethren in the said province, under peculiar and pressing circumstances, do now desire to organize themselves into a distinct Methodist Episcopal Church, in friendly relations with the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, therefore, be it resolved, and it is hereby resolved by the delegates of the Annual Conferences in General Conference assembled:—

"1. If the Annual Conference in Upper Canada, at its ensuing session or any succeeding session previously to the next General Conference, shall definitely determine on this course, and elect a general superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church in that province, this General Conference do hereby authorize any one or more of the general superintendents of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, with

MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA

Mrs. S. C. Pecot, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Countiss of Greenville, Miss., has returned to her home in New York, after a visit of six weeks with her parents.

Mrs. J. M. Sinclair, of Braxton, Miss., in a communication to the office, adds the much appreciated and heartening words, "I just couldn't do without your paper."

Rev. Walter Scott, pastor of First Church, Monroe, La., assisted Rev. A. M. Wynne in a meeting at Cotton Valley recently. We have not had a report of the meeting as yet.

We have good reports from the work of Rev. P. M. Caraway at First Church, Gulfport, Miss. He is in great favor with his people, and the work of the church is going forward under his leadership.

Rev. J. A. George, pastor at Louisville, Miss., sends a good list of subscribers from his church, and sixty per cent of them are new subscribers. Brother George has our sincere thanks for this splendid piece of work.

Rev. Ivan O. Donaldson, of Montrose, La., has just closed a good meeting in which he was assisted by Rev. Jolly B. Harper, of New Orleans. He speaks in highest commendation of the service rendered by Brother Harper.

Rev. Jack H. Midyett, Pioneer charge of the Louisiana Conference, has just closed a good meeting at Pioneer church in which he was assisted by Rev. C. K. Smith of Tallulah. Fifteen new members were received.

Rev. J. R. Countiss reports that it is excessively dry and hot in the upper Mississippi Delta, but that he has neither the time nor the money for a vacation in the mountains. Dr. Countiss is presiding elder of the Greenville District.

Rev. Dan. P. Yeager, of Camden, Miss., is doing an excellent work in that field. He serves "Sharon" church which was once an important educational center of Mississippi Methodism, and about which lingers the fragrance of many great names of that state.

Mr. J. W. Reilly, chairman of the Advocate Publishing Committee, sends us a word of greeting from a beautiful harbor of the Pacific, three hundred miles southwest of Mexico City. He is evidently having a great vacation, for which we are glad.

Rev. W. R. Lyons, pastor of Pearl River, La., charge, is making full proof of his ministry in a hard field. He has collected $56.00 on his benevolences and $50.00 of the amount has been sent to the treasurer. Other parts of his work have made similar progress.

Miss Ann Stevens Lewis, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. O. S. Lewis of Brookhaven, Miss., has been conducting daily vacation Bible schools and assisting in camp meetings in Georgia this summer. She is now spending a month with her parents before going back to Scarritt College, Nashville.

Rev. Irl H. Sells, executive extension secretary of the Mississippi Conference Board of Education, informs us of the illness of Mrs. W. H. Watkins, Conference director of adult work. We sincerely hope that she may be able to resume her activity in the adult work at an early date.

Friends of Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Grambling of Epworth Church, New Orleans, will be interested to know that their son, Bobbie, who underwent an operation for appendicitis last week is well on the way to recovery. It was expected that he would leave the hospital last Sunday or Monday.

Greenwood District of the North Mississippi Conference has used the $100.00 won in the Advocate campaign to establish a scholarship at Grenada College. This scholarship has been awarded to Miss Ruth Flowers of Kilmichael, to whom the Advocate extends congratulations.

Rev. Walter W. Jones, pastor at Glen Allan, Miss., claims that he has topped the record of Rev. E. H. Cunningham of Corinth, since he baptized Thomas and Jacob recently, and received six on profession of faith during election week in Mississippi. But that was the week of the first primary.

Dr. Charles W. Crisler, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, has been ill and unable to meet his appointments, according to statement in a recent issue of the calendar of First Church, Brookhaven. We hope that his illness may be of short duration, and that he may soon be up to normal in health.

Rev. W. M. Hester, Longview and Cedar Bluff charge, reports a series of meetings which resulted in twenty additions on profession of faith and a genuine revival of interest and spiritual power among the people. He confidently expects this to be the best of the three years of his service on that work.

Rev. C. E. Downer, the enterprising pastor of Clinton circuit, Mississippi Conference, has issued a beautiful sixteen-page year-book and directory of the churches of his charge. It is a novel experiment for that type of work, and is doubtless much appreciated by the churches. From the advertising support, we judge that it must have been a financial success also.

Rev. W. C. Galceran, pastor at Hollandale, Miss., is in the King's Daughters Hospital in Greenville, where he is recovering from a serious operation. Brother Galceran is one of the most worthy men of that Conference, and his friends will not forget him in the distresses through which he has passed this year.

Rev. J. M. Lewis, pastor at Long Beach, has his preacher-son for a vacation guest. He says that his presiding elder, Rev. L. J. Power, in addition to being an able administrator of the affairs of the Church, is "one of the best fishermen on the coast." But, by his own confession, Brother Lewis is not an authority on fishing.

Dr. J. G. Snelling, superintendent of Memorial Mercy Home in New Orleans, has sent out a detailed report on the

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

Word has come to us from a number of sources of the delightful Spiritual Life Retreat of the Baton Rouge District. We are indebted to Mrs. J. H. McClendon of Amite for the following account of that fine meeting:

"The third annual retreat of the auxiliaries of the Missionary Societies of the Baton Rouge District was held at Bluff Creek Camp Grounds, July 26, and 27. Thirty members were in attendance.

"A splendid program had been arranged by the efficient leader, Mrs. Riddle of West Feliciana, the theme being: "Discipleship." All of the interesting talks pointed to the simplicity and peace of a Christian life and that by service, reconciliation and Christian fellowship our faith would be strengthened and our lives made more helpful.

"The vesper service and morning watch were especially impressive. In the twilight little cares slipped away and in God's big outdoor world we felt so close to our Creator. With the bright flush of the new day, still untouched, unsoiled, we enter a new life with greater activity.

"Breakfast was served at 7 o'clock, but the tang of the fresh, woody air and chatter of the birds made us almost heedless of the call. After an inspiring morning service, the session closed and everyone felt that the serenity of the place had given them a physical rest and spiritual strength. Good-byes were said and we left for our homes, looking forward to the retreat of 1936."

been seriously ill for a number of weeks at her home in New Orleans, but through it all has managed to keep up the work of her department from her sick bed. Many are praying for her speedy recovery.

Mrs. George Brown, former recording secretary of the Conference, is spending the summer at her cottage at the Methodist Assembly Grounds, Biloxi. This is the thirtieth consecutive year that Dr. and Mrs. Brown have spent in this delightful place on the coast. Their home is a real rendezvous for missionary women and Methodist folks generally during the heated season.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The best news that I have for you is that Miss Priscilla Walker is at home in Ashland and is very much improved. She is not yet able to answer all your letters but appreciates them just the same.

The next best thing is that September, with its full Missionary program, will soon be here. For that reason I am giving you the outline for the program of work for that month.

September program of work:

1. Business meeting.
  - (a) Plan a C. S. R. project.
  - (b) Plan fall mission study classes.
  - (c) Check efficiency aim.
2. Report on coaching day.
3. World Outlook program.
4. Executive meeting; reports mailed.
5. Octagon campaign.

TRAINING SCHOOL HELD AT HOLLY SPRINGS

The Leadership Training School for Negro women was held at M. I. College, Holly Springs, Miss., June 19-26. Forty-five women received credit and thirty-one received certificates in Cokesbury Course, "Pupils and How They Learn," taught by Miss Virginia Thomas, who represents the General Board of Christian Education.

Courses in Bible, Sunday School, Worship, Missions, Organization and Administration of Woman's Missionary Society. Social Service, Health and Craft were offered.

Rev. R. G. Lord addressed the school on "Principles of Christian Living." Rev. J. V. Bennett, pastor of Methodist Church, South, Holly Springs, preached on the opening of the school and administered the Lord's Supper. Miss Priscilla Walker, our missionary from Mexico, delighted the class on missions with a lecture on Mexico and Mrs. J. V. Bennett one on Poland. Rev. Julian Smith, secretary of the General Board of Christian Education of the C. M. E. Church, gave a most helpful and practical talk on the functions of the Board of Christian Education in the local church. Bishops J. H. Moore and E. Cottrell of the C. M. E. Church, were also speakers on the evening programs.

Following the awarding of credits and certificates a lovely consecration service was held which climaxed the closing of the school.

MRS. R. P. NEBLETT, Dean.

The zone meeting met in June at the Columbiana Church. After the hymn, "O, Give Haste," Mrs. Henry Ingram of Kilmichael conducted the devotional, using as her subject, "Our Heavenly Father's Care," closing with prayer. Mrs. Townsend of Winona discussed the Conference aims for the year. Mrs. John Perkins gave a resume of Dr. James' talk on "Civic Relations" as given at Grenada Training School. The leading thought was to guide youth to a personal relation with Jesus. Mesdames Harris, Holmes, and Minga of Winona and Mrs. Forest of Kilmichael sang a spiritual, "Were You There?"

The playlet, "Mrs. Porter Tries Publicity," was presented by the Columbiana young women by way of advertising "The World Outlook."

Splendid reports were made by the chairman and the pastors commended the women's work. Mrs. McKee of Vaiden in her capable way conducted the Spiritual Life Hour using "Quietness and the Tranquil Peace of God," as the lesson. Mrs. Murff of Kilmichael closed the meeting with prayer.

to the property and independence of our own country. We simply wish to avail ourselves of benefits of this solemn pledge given to us by the League of Nations."

The issue was clear-cut—but the League evaded the whole problem by saying: "Let's wait a little longer; it is raining in Abyssinia and Italy cannot start a war for thirty days yet."

The seeming helplessness of the League in face of such a situation has had a reaction which is altogether detrimental to its prestige. The whole reason of being of the League was ethical, because such an institution was to insure the triumph of right, to protect small and weak nations against the covetousness of their stronger neighbors; because it was to put a little justice in international relationships, that it was greeted with such fervor fifteen years ago. That it should have become a mere mantle of hypocrisy to cover up the arbitrary decisions of those who are mighty and have the guns, is a bitter disappointment. It is the breakdown of the ideals of Geneva which contributes so much to the political restlessness of Europe today. And this brings us to the fundamental question: "Will war come again?" There again the visitor is very much disturbed by the prospects. A few years ago I could hear my friends who fought in the trenches emphatically say: "Never again." But this year, I find the tune somewhat changed; they are not as categorical in their expressions, and a great many of them have become resigned to it as an inevitable fate. Thus, with the resistance of the masses against war gradually wearing out and the dangerous game which is played by the various diplomacies, nothing but the pressure of a yet unseen moral influence can prevent the catastrophe.

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING

The annual camp meeting of the Baton Rouge District was held at Bluff Creek Camp Grounds August 10-18. Some of the old-time camp meeting tenters were there and camped throughout the week, among them being J. W. Stokes, Mrs. Lena Jones, F. C. Watson, and Lee Harvell, with their families. Our presiding elder,

Dr. K. W. Dodson, also camped most of the week, Mrs. Dodson and Wilbur Dodson being with him. Dr. Dodson preached at several of the services and invited other ministers to preach. Dr. Richard Spann, the Rev. H. B. Hines, the Rev. A. A. McKnight, the Rev. J. A. Alford, the Rev. R. S. Walton, the Rev. Byron Roberts, the Rev. Henry Bowdon, the Rev. Mr. Garis, the Rev. F. J. McCoy, and the Rev. J. B. Shearer preached one or two sermons each. The Rev. A. A. McKnight directed the song services, and, together with Mrs. McKnight, operated the dining hall. Miss Lucille Curtain rendered a wonderful service as pianist throughout the meeting. One of the most tangible results of the revival was the organization of a new church, the Bluff Creek Methodist Church, with about twelve charter members, of which church the Rev. J. B. Shearer will be pastor, as it will be on the Clinton charge. Upon the closing Sunday a large congregation—estimated to consist of 700 persons—was present. We heard many expressions that there were better attendance and more interest at this meeting than there have been in several years.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 1.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D.

PAUL (Worker With Hand and Brain)

God the Worker made man in his image and commanded co-operation. Work is a duty, a privilege, an honor. It is the first step in god-likeness. Work with hand and brain makes for sound bodies and sane minds. Paul, the greatest Christian of all time, used both. He coveted no man's goods, depended on no man's labor. He found happiness in giving, not in receiving. He set an example of labor and generosity to those to whom he ministered, preaching without price to those who had never heard the gospel, and surrendering his right to live by the gospel that his motives might not be suspected. (He would hardly have done this for an organized church of rich laymen). His heart was greatly rejoiced when those who had been anxious to donate help to the cause but could not reach him, at last got their gift to his hands. Relief from tent-making gave him more time for the work of the ministry, and giving benefited the givers as well as the cause.

Paul's eminence as a Christian and his efficiency as a worker grew out of his relation to Jesus. He was apprehended—seized—by him, became his slave, was constrained by his love, lived to please him, in him found liberty and fellowship so that all else became loss—refuse—and Christ became his very life, "in all things having the pre-eminence." Following that way will make any man great and godlike.

He bade the Philipians rejoice and disclosed the secret of joy to be in moderation, not excess; in contentment, not worry; in filling the mind with things true, honest, pure, beautiful, of good repute, virtuous, praiseworthy. The mind filled and furnished with these has no need to repeat to itself the soothing soporific, "Day by day, in every way, etc." Its improvement will be obvious to the world, pleasing to God, and encouraging to itself. This formula is not magic, nor fraud, but sound sense and religion. It brought to Paul contentment, whether he "abounded" or "suffered need." It has stood the test of the centuries. It is needed today.

It is high time to make Labor Day a Golden Rule Day. Neither capital nor labor is without sin. There are employers who would smother labor and stifle competition, as there are employees who would rob their employers and crush their fellow-workers, especially if they be unskilled, non-union, foreign, or of another race or sex. To pay an unfair wage is as dishonest as to filch from the envelope a part of the pay. To loaf, to shirk, to do shoddy service is as dishonest as to tap the till. Brotherly, Christian dealing on both sides would prevent strikes and lockouts. The employer is entitled to efficient service; the employee to a living wage—and a living is more than subsistence. It means time for rest and recreation, opportunity for education and culture. If it is right for capital to be aggregated and chartered in corporations, it is both right and necessary for labor to be organized into unions and brotherhoods. So long as either capital or labor is controlled by selfishness and greed, there will be need of legal regulations strictly enforced. When both are inspired by a spirit of goodwill, of sharing and co-operation, legal measures will no longer be necessary, nor will there be depressions and bread-lines in a land of plenty.

REV. JOLLY HARPER AT MONTROSE

It is always difficult, if not impossible, to state definitely the results of a revival meeting. Generally speaking, however, Montrose and its minister are glad to report a most wonderful response to the efficient leadership and preaching of "Brother Jolly," beloved former pastor of this charge. August 12-18 will long be remembered as an outstanding event in the history of this little saw mill town.

Brother Harper did a masterful piece of work during the two years in which he served Montrose. Through his pleasing personality and highly trained ability, he was able to put Montrose on the map of Methodism. He is so greatly loved by all our people that it was evident that "Brother Jolly" could lead us in our week of church as no other person could.

Thought provoking messages were brought with deep sincerity in a quiet, forceful way, but the Christ-laden personality of Brother Harper as he visited with us was the touch which brought a town-wide revival of religion. The results are a challenge to the writer and all ministers, for to be able to return to a pastorate we have once served and hold a successful revival is a goal worth attaining.

GARNISHED TRUTH FROM THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT

Dear Mr. Editor: We have been so busy in the Hattiesburg District that we have not had time to tell you about it. You know we had a district conference?—well, it was the most unusual conference that I ever attended. It was more than a conference—it was a revival. The preachers got religion over and the whole district caught a new spirit. The presiding elder thought so much of it that he had the Journal printed in booklet form for distribution over the district. Did you ever hear of anything like that? The spirit of the conference is still felt and is telling in the revival work and in the finances, which are ahead of last year.

Every interest of the Church is being looked after. The elder thinks that if a program is good enough to be ordered by the Conference that is good enough to try out. You ought to see how he gets the boys to working on it. The Church school work has been advanced and better organized. Vacation schools have been the order of the day, more have already been held than ever before in the district, and the goal is one in every charge. The elder has been holding institutes in connection with the quarterly conferences and emphasizing the program as ordered by the board, and this has been great help especially in the circuits. A new school at Dixie, on the Petal charge, has been organized with eighty members.

The building program has not been neglected. Parsonage built at Magee, and Williamsburg, and a new one ordered at Collins. Parsonage repaired and painted at Taylorsville and church repaired and painted at Langsdale. Church finished at McLain and Mt. Zion. Petal church brick veneered and parsonage repaired. Another goal: "Every Church Insured, and the name put on it."

You heard about the Advocate campaign in the district didn't you? . . . Well, we had a celebration when we got that check . . . and that blue ribbon . . . Mr.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

The Survey Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges says in its Report of April, 1935:

"The Committee feels that it cannot conclude its report without brief comment on the excellence of this college. Under the leadership of President Key and his competent faculty the college has maintained through the years a high grade of work in the field of liberal arts.

"In its two days at the College the Committee was impressed with the atmosphere, both on the campus and in the classroom. Students are of high quality, and their relationships with the faculty are most wholesome."

Fall Session opens September 11.

Those expecting to be enrolled in the Freshman Class should send High School Entrance Certificates and Application Fee of $15.00 at once.

Editor, we sure did appreciate your putting that ribbon on the check. We are going to keep that as an emblem of victory.

The conference is coming to this district this fall and we want you to come over and just look around. Don't think about transferring, if we had any preachers to trade we might let you in, but right now things seem to be in good shape.

I beg your pardon, Mr. Editor. I forgot to tell you that Rev. Victor G. Clifford is the presiding elder of this district. Do you know Victor? He is an unusual preacher. We actually announce to the congregations when he is going to preach. Everybody likes him; and he gets out in the district and finds out what is going on. He knows the needs of both the circuits and stations and is able to give advice as to methods of carrying out the program.

I hope to tell you some interesting facts next time.

SWIFTY.

ATTENTION, VICKSBURG DISTRICT

By Rev. H. G. Hawkins, P. E.

The following eight charges have paid in full the amounts apportioned to them on the salary of Rev. W. M. Williams, chaplain at Tuberculosis Sanatorium: Anguilla, Edwards, Lorman, Natchez, Oak Ridge, Rolling Fork and Cary, Woodville, Yazoo City. In some of the remaining fifteen charges possibly the full amount has been raised, and not yet reported at a quarterly conference. Pastors will please use their earliest opportunity to present this cause to the congregations, asking an offering. Remit to Rev. A. M. Broadfoot.

Thus far only four congregations of the district have paid in full their assessment for district work: Liberty, Greendale, Pattison, Mt. Olivet. A remittance several weeks ago by Yazoo City of $30.00 on their assessment of $65.00 was appreciated. In a number of congregations subscriptions were taken by me, and a copy of same left with an agent at each place, to collect and also to secure other subscriptions where the initial list did not cover in full the amount asked. I ask that the agents in all such cases now complete their work. And, I ask that the preachers in charge take this matter up with all the congregations not reached by me. Remit to me.

As to the General and Conference work, pastors are expected to initiate and consummate plans for collecting the full amounts assumed by the quarterly conferences. Surely no charge will come up short this year, as no charge assumed beyond its reasonable ability to pay. To send out a committee that comes back with report of failure is not the right answer. Only where a pastor is in close touch, and knows that his committees, or stewards, if he uses them, will achieve the desired results, is such procedure justified. It is important that remittances for this cause be made promptly to the Conference treasurer.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt.

Acts 5:15—Insomuch that they brought forth the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them.

Peter engaged in definite undertakings that he planned. He also cast shadows when he gave no thought to the blessings that he brought unconsciously.

Every one works for certain objectives and tangible results. But there are also intangible forces at work that exert a powerful influence. These assets or liabilities are just as real. "Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone" when he returned from his forty days of communion with God. He wielded an unconscious influence as well as a conscious one.

It is inevitable that we cast shadows. When the light shines, the shadows cannot be avoided.

Every one casts a shadow. Even a helpless babe casts a shadow. Many a life is ennobled before the infant plans to wield any influence. The baby fingers clutch the heart strings and make life sacred and God's presence is more fully realized.

The shadows are shaped like the objects that stand between them and the light. The shadow of a tree is different from the shadow of a house. The shadow of a dog is different from the shadow of a man.

It is also true that the shadow of a good man is very different from the shadow of a wicked man. The influence of a righteous man is very different from the influence of an evil man.

We are responsible for our character. Therefore we are responsible for the influence that we wield—even when we have no intention of affecting another.

What a tragedy when "acts speak so loud that we cannot hear what they say." What a pity that the shadows reveal a different character from the words that are uttered.

It behooves every one of us to "walk circumspectly" that no ugly shadow shall ever compromise our testimony. When the light shines upon our lives, the world takes knowledge whether or not we have been with Jesus.

PRAYER

Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for the shadows—the unconscious influence of holy men and women. We are awed when we realize that we might make impressions when we are unaware of it. May our lives be "conformed to the image of Thy dear Son" that we may remind people of Jesus. May we be living epistles for Christ, "known and read of all men." We offer our prayer in the name of Jesus.

Shivering with Chills Burning with Fever

Sure Relief for Malarial

Don't try homemade treatments or newfangled remedies! Take that good old Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Soon you will be yourself again, for Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic not only relieves the symptoms of Malaria, but destroys the infection itself.

The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic kills the Malarial infection in the blood while the iron it contains builds up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and fortify against further attack. The twofold effect is absolutely necessary to the overcoming of Malaria. Besides being a dependable remedy for Malaria, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is also an excellent tonic of general use. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle today at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

In Memoriam

MRS. LELIA VIRGINIA HOPE

When the shades of night were falling and while friends and loved ones watched by her bedside, Mrs. Lelia Virginia Hope passed quietly away at her home in Oak Ridge, La., on August 9.

Whereas, it was God's will to remove from our midst our loving friend and co-worker, thus making our loss Heaven's gain, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to His will, thanking Him for her beautiful life and wonderful influence.

2. That our Church has lost a devoted member, the Sunday school a great teacher, the Missionary Society an untiring worker, and the Orphanage a true friend.

3. To her loved ones we express our love and sympathy, and may the memory of such a wife, mother, and grandmother, be an inspiration for a greater service for the Master. May her life be an inspiration to all to strive harder to do the Master's bidding so that we too may be ready to answer the call.

4. A copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy kept on the Minutes of the Missionary Society, and one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, also one to the Morehouse Enterprise for publication.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

By Billy Gannaway, Publicity Supt.

Greetings!

Most of us are so full of camp news that we can't think of anything else. Eleven camps throughout Louisiana Conference this summer! And if you failed to attend one of them you missed a chance of a life time!

We haven't heard directly from Lake Arthur camps, but Brother McLellan reported both of them as being successful and well attended. We heard that their Christian Adventure Camp led the Conference in the largest enrollment—eighty. Camp Ki-Ro-Li Christian Adventure Campers were second with seventy-two.

The Christian Culture Camp at Ki-Ro-Li did not compete for enrollment—as they had only forty-two—but the spirit of the camp, the type leadership, and the excellent program was second to none. The theme "Follow Me," was carried out in the camp. A big "thank-you" goes to those who made the Ki-Ro-Li camps possible for Monroe and Ruston Districts.

Charles White sent in a program of the Alexandria camps at Windywood. They will be in session the week of this publication. Looking over the program makes me know that these two camps will be record breakers for Alexandria District.

Mary Lou Swan has been busy getting ready for the New Orleans Christian Culture Camp. The Christian Education Bulletin carried a fine report of the New Orleans Christian Adventure Camp held at Bluff Creek on June 24-29.

Friends of the Louisiana Conference, these camps are history-making for us. We will touch around one thousand young people with the challenge of Christian Youth Building a New World. Surely such a program promises better Christian citizenship for tomorrow.

William Rankin writes of interesting happenings in Ruston District. The "All For Christ" Union has elected its new officers, with Miss Beverly Williams, of Lisbon, as president. Miss Hazel Lee Nowell of Mansfield is temporarily employed as young people's director of the Homer Church and is doing some splendid work. She will assist Homer in entertaining a Christian Adventure Institute on August 23-24. Gibsland will entertain a Christian Culture Institute on August 30-September 1. The Haynesville young people will be host to a Christian Culture Institute in the middle of October.

Louisiana young people were well represented at Mt. Sequoyah with Misses Sara Roland of Alexandria, Mildred Dennis of Monroe, Alleen Jordan and Chloe Watson of Arcadia, and D. L. Dykes of Pleasant Hill, and Bailey Richardson of Alexandria.

MISSISSIPPI STUDENT HONORED

Robert Ramsey, son of the Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Ramsey of Porterville, student at Millsaps College, Jackson, has been selected as representative of his college among the most outstanding college men and women in the United States. He has been placed in the College-University "Who's Who." This honor is the greatest recognition a boy or girl can attain while in college because approximately only one-half of one per cent are selected from each institution.

Mr. Ramsey was president of the Millsaps Student Association for the session of 1934-35 and was a member of the state championship debate team of Mississippi in 1933. He was awarded a scholarship for the summer quarter to the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, Blue Ridge, N. C., in 1933 and won a scholarship to Duke University for the session of 1934-35. Also first graduate of Millsaps to be awarded a scholarship to Yale, which he has accepted.

This young man who plans to take up college teaching or religion and sociology as a life work, makes hobbies of swimming, reading and writing.

observance of Memorial Home Day in the three Conferences. The sum of money realized was not as great as it might have been, but the general observance of the day is a great credit to Dr. Snelling and to the Methodism of the two states. We should make the observance one hundred per cent.

We received recently a much appreciated letter from Dr. Adrian M. Serex who, with his wife and children, is spending the summer with home folk on the seacoast of Belgium. The household has had good health and a good time. Dr. Serex expected to sail for home on Aug. 21, but owing to changes in sailing, he will not be able to secure passage before September 12. We publish elsewhere an interesting communication from his pen.

church is moving forward in a splendid way.

The Sunday school is thoroughly organized and the instruction in this department of church activity is in very capable hands. The present membership of the church is 1710. The Conference and General Benevolences for this year are $2250.

Central Methodist Church has always been a tower of strength in the Mississippi Conference. Present indications are that it will not only continue as such, but that the scope of its influence in promoting and establishing the cause of the Kingdom will continue to expand.

THE STORY OF ALEXANDRIA METHODISM runs back to the early years of the 19th century, and is full of interesting and inspiring incident. The first decade of the century saw sporadic movements that soon took definite form. In 1811 Rapides Circuit appears as an appointment in the old Western Conference, with Thomas Nelson as the pastor in charge. In 1813 Louisiana is a district in the newly organized Tennessee Conference, and John Schrock is appointed to Rapides Circuit; and in 1814 he preached in the court house at Alexandria, notwithstanding much opposition.

In 1834 the name of the circuit was changed to Alexandria, and from 1836 to 1840 Alexandria Circuit was in the Arkansas Conference. In 1847 Bishop Scule organized the Louisiana Conference and Alexandria Circuit soon became a station and is today one of the leading appointments of the Conference, situated as it is in the DOCTOR R. MOFFAT GAUTRY, a local preacher of the Wesleyan Church, said in a sermon recently, "I would rather be a Methodist minister than the Prime Minister; he deals with time, I deal with eternity." So also when the late Hugh Price Hughes told his father that he desired to enter the Methodist ministry, the father said, "I would rather see you a Methodist minister than Lord Chancellor of England." Such expressions are far less tributes to an office than they are estimates of the opportunity which the office brings.

DOCTOR FREDERICK FAGLEY, one of the departmental secretaries of the American Congregational Council, has gone to Europe to study adult education—the work to which he is devoting part of his time. He attended a course of lectures at Cambridge University. He then went to Sweden and Denmark to study the Danish Adult School system founded by Gruntwig a century ago, which is still in operation.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL HADLOCK, JR., a noted sea captain of New England, hailed from Cranberry Isles, Maine. As a seal fisher, whaler and trafficker, he sailed the seven seas. But his most unique distinction was as a showman, a Barnum of the nineteenth century. He went all over Europe with a show, the main features of which were two Eskimos and many native weapons which he had gathered during his whaling voyages. Not the vastness of the show, but the personality of the showman and the interest of the public were factors of his bid for fame.

THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION continues to ferret out dishonest and false advertising schemes by which the public have been and are still consistently swindled. Among some concerns recently called to account, are the manufacturers of a certain brand of Maple Syrup, for making misleading statements; the purveyors of a certain nationally advertised silver plate ware with a "sectional overlay" which the complaint states is untrue; a widely advertised brand of coffee is up for exaggerated statements; and a book-selling concern by which many people have been duped, it is alleged, neither publishes the work nor maintains the service claimed. This list is taken from Scottish Rite News Bureau.

IN THE LITTLE TOWN OF TONG, in West Riding, York county, England, is one of the ancient and historic monuments of Britain. It is an old sundial which stands upon a great stone base. At first it stood in the Market Place, but later it was moved to the church yard where it now stands. Within a few feet of the base of this monument, lies the body of "Little Nell," the little girl whom Charles Dickens made immortal. In the old church yard above its drooping flowers and the ashes of its dead, the faithful sundial counts the hours until Little Nell shall lead the chorus of the eternal morning.

THE MEDICAL SOCIETY OF CHINA, on November 4, will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the opening of a missionary hospital in Canton. The hospital was opened by Peter Parker, who was a native of Massachusetts and a medical missionary of the American Board. There are now about 5,000 trained physicians in China, and the Chinese government is working on a program which will involve the employment and use of 50,000 trained nurses. All this was inspired by the pioneering labors of Peter Parker, the American missionary.

THE ROCKEFELLER MUSEUM OF ANTIQUITIES, in Palestine, was made possible by a gift of two Million dollars from Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The buildings, which have already been completed, are located in the northeast corner of Jerusalem, opposite to what is believed to be the old wall of the inner city, and it is said to be one of the finest institutions in the Near East. It should prove to be of inestimable value in collecting and interpreting the remains of Hebrew civilization and the early records of the Christian Church.

GEORGE F. ENDICOTT, of Endicott, N.Y., is said to be one of the Country's noblest and most practical examples of wealth-sharing philanthropy. Since 1919, when Endicott-Johnson became a corporate owned shoe business, Mr. Endicott has invested $5,000,000.00 in a home-purchase scheme, a community hospital, parks, playgrounds, swimming pools, golf courses and libraries, for the benefit of the workers. He is now in his late seventies, but he hopes to live long enough to invest his remaining $2,000,000.00 where it will do the greatest good.

EDITORIAL

RADICALISM, EDUCATION AND RELIGION

On moral and religious questions, movements, or leaders, we are not disposed to accept as final the word of any individual of publication who may ever have been adjudged a libeler. We do not mean to imply that such are intentionally untruthful, but rather that their feelings may cause them to make injudicious declaration. But, little as we might be disposed to accept such authority as final, we do believe that both education and religion are facing a real danger in a type of social interpretation which is insinuating itself into the immature and impressionable thought of the young people of this generation. The South is probably freer of Communistic influence and leaning than any other section of our country. Yet, we have had personal contact with college students who prided themselves on their "advanced social ideas," and who afterward gravitated to centers of industrial disturbance, where they became self-appointed guardians of groups or races who were being "exploited," as they believed. To be sure, they went to such places with portfolios, and with social research commissions from educational institutions; but without realizing that the successful prosecution of such a task involves disinterestedness, candor and poise far removed from any enlistment in partisan agitations. We have seen other young people moved by high religious idealism and by a sincere passion for social justice, who became immediately the narrowest of social partisans. We do not inveigh against these things, but we plead rather for an intellectual and a spiritual horizon upon which every group and every interest shall have a place. We believe that the colleges of both church and state, through their hospitality for specious and plausible agitators, are being more liberal than judicious. Parents who have sons and daughters to educate cannot look too narrowly into the views and practices of schools soliciting their patronage. They should inform themselves as to what is euphemistically styled their "liberal social views." Such are not less dangerous than the disarming effect of a "stimulating" theology which too often means a philosophy of negations and a creed of captious repudiations.

WORSHIP

Much thought is expended upon the worship program of the Church, and it is entirely possible that Protestants have paid too little attention to the forms of the believer's approach to God. It has been pointed out that the Eastern Church made a dramatic appeal through the Incarnation, the Roman made its worship to center in the Sacrifice, while Protestantism made the divine Message central in its worship. It may be said that the Eastern and the Roman Churches have become too mechanical and too ritualistic in their worship, but we have probably become too philosophical and too rationalistic in ours. And when argument on both sides has been exhausted, the fact will remain, that all alike have lost too much of the spiritual significance and power of the approach to God. Jesus made it plain to the Samaritan woman with whom he talked at Jacob's well, that worship is spiritual—an ascending of the human spirit met by a descending of divine revelation in response. A recent writer, addressing himself to the facts and the needs of Protestant worship, said: "If we are to develop an adequate form of worship, it must be by a spirit sufficiently patient to read the record of God's dealing, and humble enough to see its application to the spirit of these days." Unfortunately, we think, the writer failed to elaborate that thought. He probably intended to imply that true and effective worship can not be forever typed by a dead civilization, but that it must reflect the needs and the heart cries of the living present. But he certainly meant to say that without the element of conscious spiritual communion, the Cradle, the Cross and the Book are one, and only mechanical instruments of worship. They are but means used conjointly by the human and the divine personalities for the accomplishment of the will of God in the salvation of men.

VACATION ENDS

To the editor of the Advocate, this is the beginning of September; but to many throughout Mississippi and Louisiana, it will be a time of closing camps, packing luggage and a journeying back to the old home address. The older folk may not be much refreshed in body, but their optimism will be tidied-up for the season's change and a treasure of happy recollections will help to keep the "blues" away. The boys and girls who romped away to the shout, "School's out," will be coming back with sun-tanned figures and to the less jubilant reflection, "It's books again." Which being interpreted is, "The noon recess of the year is over and the harvest of abiding realities is on. This change will not be more true of the people and of their general attitudes than it should be of the church and its activities. The people will come back to the pews of their home churches with radiant faces and with earnest inquiries as to how things have gone while they were away. It will be a genuine mark of their devotion and of their sincere good will. The observant pastor will not be slow to understand that the spirit of his people has turned a corner and that they are listening for the call of the captain. Many things can be enterprised and achieved in the first six weeks after vacation that other interests will crowd out and make impossible at a later time. The missionary, the superannuate, the church sick, the delinquent girl, our unpaid debts and the unsaved multitudes from a great beseeching throng in these days of golden opportunity, and they, too, listen anxiously for the call of the captain. It might be easier to allow things to take the accustomed course, but such following in a groove will not reflect credit either upon the church or its leadership. The way of the Christian Church is not that of following a beaten path, but is that of facing a living problem; and the glory of the Christian ministry will be revealed less through its popularity than for its translating days of opportunity into a song of triumph. The fight is on, let the call of the captain be heard.

LABOR DAY ADVOCATE

In order to get the Advocate out on time, we have been forced to close the forms on Friday. This will account for the absence of some material which reached us late, and for the abbreviated list of personals. It also gives us a chance to catch up on material which has been crowded out of earlier issues.

EDITOR McTYEIRE

A Fast Horse—The Delta has a Mississippi correspondent, who a few days ago, while driving out with a horse and buggy, was chased by a drove of mad bulls. After a pursuit of a few minutes, notwithstanding the Colonel threw out his overcoat and carriage cushions, the bellowing herd overtook him and came near destroying his buggy and making a finish of himself and his fleet steed.

EMPIRE-BUILDERS

By Rev. H. T. Carley, D.D.

Jesus and other empire-builders are alike in one respect—they have purposed to rule the world. But the similarity ends with that. Their motives are different, their methods are different, and the results of their efforts are different.

Alexander the Great, for example, sought to continue the conquests of his father Philip that he might extend his dominion, increase his wealth, strengthen his authority, add to the magnificence of his court, for one purpose only—personal glory.

Force was the method he used to accomplish his purpose. A pupil of Aristotle, nevertheless he was ruthless in his strategies and merciless in dealing with those who opposed him. For a time he was successful—"he wept because there were no more worlds to conquer."

But the day of reckoning came. Alexander died, his empire fell to pieces, and his dream of perpetual sovereignty vanished.

Not so with Jesus. He purposed to conquer the world—but not for his own glory and not by force. He sought to conquer that he might bless, and he relied upon love instead of force, in order that he might rule the hearts of men and not take their bodies.

And the day of reckoning came for Jesus. His enemies seemed to triumph as they nailed his body to the cross and scattered his followers to the four corners of the earth.

But, strange to say, his empire did not fall to pieces, and his dream of sovereignty still persists. A purpose grounded in unselfishness and love cannot fail.

How slow the world is to learn! Men still act from selfish motives and pursue their ends by methods of force. Only failure can be the result. Even war to end war seems to lead only to war.

For nations as for individuals, only unselfishness and love can conquer.

ANOTHER GOOD DAY

It was the writer's privilege and pleasure on Sunday, August 25, to enjoy a laymen's day program on the Brooklyn and Bond charge at Brooklyn. Rev. D. E. Vickers, pastor, and Prof. Henry Bending, charge lay leader.

We had a morning and afternoon session with several able speakers to bring us some very helpful and inspiring messages on the following topics: "Church Attendance," "Our Creed," "Tithing," "Duty of Stewards," "Our Church Paper," "Christian Homes," "Spiritual Side of the Church," "A Sober Nation," and "A Warless World."

That faithful old soldier of the Cross, Mrs. E. Lou White, had for her part "Church Attendance" and with her wonderful storehouse of knowledge of the teachings of God's Holy Word, and her life-time experience on the battle field for Christ brought us a message to stir our hearts, strengthen our faith, and brighten our hope for accomplishment in the kingdom of our God: Basing her remarks on the teachings in early life followed by dutiful practice on her part brought us a word picture of a well-rounded and happy life in the service of the Master.

The other speakers on the program were A. K. Guinn, Mrs. B. E. Meigs, G. J. Tritter, Prof. L. T. Travillian, C. B. Carter, and the writer.

Last, but not least, was the splendid Christian fellowship enjoyed by all. We trust that this meeting was the beginning of greater things for this charge and people in the line of lay activities, and we predict for Brother Vickers a rounding out of a successful year on this work.

THE NEW HYMNAL

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

The Methodist Hymnal, the official hymnal of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Protestant Church, will soon be issued from the presses of the Churches named.

It was prepared by a Joint Commission composed of representatives of the three Churches, and deserves to be used by all their congregations.

Most, if not all, the evangelical churches have revised their hymnals during the last several years. The Methodist Hymnal was the last of such revisions made, and its makers derived many benefits from all that preceded it. It is perhaps the best of all.

It is a book of 653 pages, and it contains the ablest of the old hymns and the finest of the new compositions. It is not a perfect compilation, of course; but it is difficult to find a better one. Some good people will miss a few of the older hymns, so dear to their memories, and some newer songs are included which may not meet universal approval. After all allowance is made for these omissions of the old and insertions of the new, the Hymnal is worthy of acceptance and use by all "the people called Methodists" in the United States.

It is doctrinally sound and musically admirable. Let the pastors of all our churches see to it that their congregations procure adequate supplies of the Hymnal without delay. The purchase of the new book will supersede the necessity of bringing any other books for any of the services of the Methodists.

The great hymn by Charles Wesley, "Come, O Thou Traveler Unknown," which Dr. Isaac Watts considered the greatest hymn in the English language, is No. 311 in the new Hymnal, set to a singable tune. Our people have neglected too much this lofty composition, and they should now make up for this neglect by singing it often.

SHALL WE BERATE THE CHURCH?

By Rev. Benj. F. Rogers

During recent years the Church has been the object of much criticism; some of which we may admit has been justified. Some of this criticism has come from friends of the Church, but the greater portion of it has come from its enemies who have maliciously desired to destroy its influence and usefulness. In a country where free speech is held to be one of the inalienable rights of its citizens it is not expected that an institution so valuable as the Church would escape having its defects pointed out and exaggerated, particularly by those who are its sworn enemies. We who love the Church are not surprised when they resort to the grossest sort of misrepresentation.

sentation, but we do expect those who profess to be the friends of the Church to be fair and moderate in giving expression to their opinions concerning its faults.

The writer was greatly shocked recently when he heard a General Evangelist declare from the pulpit with a great deal of vehemence that "hell is full of Church members. Hell is so full of Church members that their arms and legs are sticking out of its doors and windows." With all my soul I resented such a crude and exaggerated statement. I agree with Samuel Johnson when he said that "every man has a right to utter what he thinks truth, and every other man has a right to knock him down for it." It was Voltaire, I believe, who said "I do not agree with what you say, but I will defend with my life your right to say it." Freedom of speech, however, does not mean freedom of vituperation. It does not mean freedom of misrepresentation. We may say what we believe to be true, but we must be willing to be held accountable for what we say. There is always the possibility that we may be mistaken when we make a statement that is of necessity merely an opinion. The brother who made the statement above referred to did not qualify it in any manner. On the other hand it was made with such an air of finality as to leave the impression that he regarded it as an absolute truth concerning which there could not be the slightest doubt.

Now, no one would contend for a moment that the Church is a perfect institution, the reason being that it is composed of imperfect beings like the writer, this Evangelist and others, but to leave the impression that most of the people in our churches are so wicked that they are overflowing Hell would appear to be a very strange method of inducing those outside the church to confess their sins, surrender their lives to Jesus Christ and unite with the church. If this Evangelist believes that his statement concerning the Church is true, then how can he consistently endeavor to induce people to associate themselves with a group of people who are headed straight for perdition?

In the stately words of our ritual, "Brethren, the Church is of God, and will be preserved to the end of time, for the promotion of his worship and the due administration of his word and ordinances, the maintenance of Christian fellowship and discipline, the edification of believers, and the conversion of the world." It is not merely an art gallery for the exhibition of the saints, though most of the saints are found within its pale. That some tares grow with the wheat goes without saying, but I disagree with any wholesale condemnation of the quality of the lives which make up the Church. To berate the Church is not difficult to do. To preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ in such a manner as will cause men and women to cry out, "What must I do to be saved?" is a far more difficult task. Jesus did not denounce sinners; he denounced sin. He portrayed its terrible consequences in a graphic manner and I am convinced that all of his ministers should not hesitate to declare his truth with boldness, but there is a serious question as to the value of denunciation.

The best people in the world are giving of their time, their talents and their substance to the Church and it is my conviction that a great many of them are consecrated, loyal and true to their Master.

SAFETY SIGNALS

By Rev. S. J. Davies, D.D.

Barnabas, someone writing in the Adult Student called him second fiddle, never was a worse or more unfortunate misnomer, but on the contrary, I consider him head of the band, the baton wielder of that gallant company who from Jerusalem and Antioch inaugurated the first movement to take the world for the risen ever-living Christ. Second fiddle indeed! Did he not stand by Paul in the momentous and most hazardous occasions, and dig him out his retreat in Tarsus and brought him to Antioch? And when there labored with him for a year and probably taught this gifted son of Tarsus much about preaching, training him for a missionary, and then went with him into the field. Probably if he had been gifted with the skill in writing that was characteristic of Paul the Church would have been enriched with his epistles. A spurious epistle indeed exists, doubtless written by some ardent admirer of the Son of Consolation, who thought there should be such a letter. But like many other eminent preachers, he was so busy, and so enthralled in declaring the gospel to a needy world, that he had but little if any time for writing. Grand old Barnabas! son of exhortation, preacher, others translate his newly given Christian name. First great missionary in the Apostolic Church, who dared to grapple with the enthroned heathenism of his age and win a place in the hearts and lives of the Gentile world for his Lord. Paul should have been ashamed of himself for ever contending with him on the eve of that second great mission because John Mark got home sick and just had to go back to the old home town to see his kin folks. Maybe if he had had Barnabas with him, level headed old saint, he might have escaped that trouncing and imprisonment in Philippi. When I was teaching my Bible class last Sunday about this good man the subject surely filled my head and heart.

the assistance of any two or more elders, to ordain such general superintendent for the said Church in Upper Canada, provided always, that nothing herein contained be contrary to or inconsistent with the laws existing in the said province; and provided that no such general superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Upper Canada, or any of his successors in office, shall at any time exercise any ecclesiastical jurisdiction whatever in any part of the United States, or of the territories thereof; and provided also, that this article shall be expressly ratified and agreed to by the said Canada Annual Conference, before any such ordination shall take place.

"2. That the delegate who has been elected by this General Conference to attend the ensuing Annual Conference of the British Wesleyan Methodist Connexion be, and hereby is, instructed to express to that body the earnest and affectionate desire of this General Conference that the arrangement made with that connexion in relation to the labours of their missionaries in Upper Canada may still be maintained and observed.

"3 That our brethren and friends, ministers or others in Upper Canada shall, at all times, at their request, be furnished with any of our books and periodical publications on the same terms with those by which our agents are regulated in furnishing them in the United States, and until there shall be an adjustment of any claims which the Canada Church may name. On this connexion, the Book Agents shall divide to the said Canada Church an equal proportion of any annual dividend which may be made from the Book Concern to the several Annual Conferences respectively; provided that however, the aforesaid dividend shall be apportioned to the Canada Church only as long as they may continue to support and patronize our Book Concern, as in the past.

"Respectfully submitted as agreed.

W. FISK, Chairman.

"Pittsburg, May 26, 1828."

These two documents have been given in full, because of their importance and for the sake of comparing their contents. It is manifest that a common thought and a common procedure run through both documents. In both instruments, the division is made to depend entirely upon the action of the Annual Conferences in the sections proposed to be set off. In both cases there was to be a distinct severance of authority, from the episcopacy down. In both cases there was a confession of property interests to be submitted to the Annual Conferences under the "Sixth restrictive article" of the Discipline. In neither case was the modification voted; but in the Canada case, notwithstanding the failure to secure a modification of the restriction, Dr. Paine, as a member of the Committee on Canada Claims in the General Conference in 1836, helped to effect a compromise by which the claim was settled. The plan of settlement was to allow to the Canada Church special discounts on books and periodicals, to continue over a period of sixteen years.

Dr. Paine's connection with the setting up of a separate church for Canada, and the fact that he was chairman of the "Committee of Nine" which drew up the Plan of Separation in 1844, would naturally lead one to think that he had a large share in shaping the latter instrument. But he was strongly opposed to separation, except in a jurisdictional Conference. He proposed an adjustment which was rejected by the Southern delegates; and he made a final effort in the Committee of Nine which failed also. It has now been established, however, that the Report was largely the work of another. In a letter written to Mr. Hugh McCollom of Augusta, Kentucky, under date of September 30, 1845, and apparently a reply to criticisms of the course pursued by him, Dr. William Winans said: "This declaration (of fifty-one Southern delegates) led to the appointment of the Committee of Nine, who framed the Plan of Separation. Of this committee, I was a member. The plan of separation was almost wholly framed by Bishop Hamline, and in its provisions, I concurred, both in the Committee and in the Conference. The Annual Conferences, and nearly all the members in the South, whose voice was heard on the subject, fully confirmed the conviction avowed by the Southern delegates in the General Conference; and consequently a Convention of Southern delegates met at Louisville, and, in perfect accordance with the plan of separation, framed by Bishop Hamline and advocated by Dr. Elliott on the floor of the General Conference, declared themselves and those they represented separated from the General Conference of the M. E. Church, and organized themselves and those they represented into the M. E. Church, South."

After the momentous step taken in the adoption of the Plan of Separation, events on the Southern side, as Dr. Winans' letter implies, hastened to a consummation of the division contingently authorized. The Southern delegates were accurately informed as to opinion and feeling in the South; and before leaving New York, they met and decided upon a plan of action and prepared an Address to the Conferences in the slaveholding States. The Address proposed a delegated Convention to meet in Louisville, Kentucky, May 1, 1845; and for the delegates to be instructed by their Conferences as to their desires for or against organization under the Plan of Separation. It was charged at the time that the Southern delegates had acted with precipitate haste, and had shown a determination to disrupt the Church; but those charges are of little importance now. The wisdom and sagacity of Southern leaders saved the Annual Conferences of the South from the disorder that would have resulted from the excitement of the hour, and from the chaos that would have been produced by an irresponsible type of guidance.

Beginning with the Kentucky Conference, action on the Plan of Separation followed in the order of the episcopal visitation for the year. Kentucky, Missouri, and Holston, border Conferences, were the first to approve the Plan and elect delegates to the Louisville Convention. The Holston Conference proposed alternative plans which were joined in by no other Conference. The Texas Conference repudiated the vote of John Clarke against Bishop Andrew, and expressed the hope that division before 1848 might be avoided if possible. The other Conferences approved, in most instances without a dissenting vote.

The Virginia Conference declared that it did not propose to dissolve its connection with the Methodist Episcopal Church, but with the General Conference of that Church. After asserting its right to an equitable share of the property belonging to the whole Church, it said: "Nevertheless, our delegates to the convention to be held in Louisville, Kentucky, in May, 1845, are hereby instructed not to allow the question of property to enter into the calculation whether or not we shall exist as a separate organization."

The North Carolina Conference said: "The course of the late General Conference demanded a submission on the part of the ministers in the slaveholding Conferences, which the Discipline did not require and the institutions of the South absolutely forbade." Other Conferences made pronouncements of like import, but these are sufficient to show the attitude and feeling of the South touching the action of the General Conference of 1844.

The Louisville Convention met according to call, on May 1, 1845. Bishops Soule, Andrew, and Morris were present, but Bishop Morris declined to take part in the proceedings. An organization committee, of two members from each Annual Conference represented, was appointed; and one of the first resolutions introduced was to instruct the Committee on Organization to inquire if anything had transpired to indicate the possibility of maintaining the unity of the Church under the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The report of the Committee on Organization was read by Dr. Bascom, on May 15, and it concluded with a series of seven resolutions. The first resolution, dissolving the connection with the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was passed with only three dissenting votes—Gunn, Taylor and Harrison, all of Kentucky. The report as a whole was adopted with only two dissenting votes, and five absentees. An additional report providing for the session of the first General Conference, in Petersburg, Virginia, to begin May 1, 1846, and other details for completing the organization, was submitted and adopted. The Convention adjourned on May 19, and with its adjournment the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was an accomplished fact.

It is almost unbelievable that a document, as hastily constructed, the outgrowth of such an excited state of mind and feeling, and of such momentous and far-reaching consequences, could have been as legally perfect and impregnable as the Plan of Separation proved to be. Probably no other church contest ever aroused such general interest among the American people, or presented more curious alignments, or such crossing of natural borders of interest and affiliation. Bishop Matthew Simpson pointed out the fact that on the Northern side, Durbin of Kentucky, Finley of North Carolina, and Cartwright of Virginia were arrayed against Bascom of New York, Soule of Maine, and Winans of Pennsylvania for the South. The reports and papers of the Southern Annual Conferences, responding to the provisions of the Plan of Separation, show an almost unerring precision in every pronouncement and step of the progress toward the setting up of a separate ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Everything was carefully adjusted to the exact terms and limitations prescribed by the document which might be styled, not inaptly, the Magna Charta of Southern Methodism. Whatever may have been the reason for this carefulness, it is manifest that the action of the Church, South, was shaped with a definite end in view; and this carefully considered course is a great tribute to the generalship which steered the South through the long and bitter struggle which followed.

The reception given the new unit of Methodism was not as cordial and unanimous at the North as had been the vote for the Plan of Separation under which it was set up. The Plan was attacked in everything from its caption to its constitutionality. It is true that "Plan of Separation" was not the caption of the report of the Committee of Nine; but the specific instruction under which the report was made, used the words, "a constitutional plan for a mutual division of the Church." It may be admitted that the constitutional authority of the General Conference to divide the Church was a moot question; but the ingenuity of Jesuitical casuistry

Mississippi and Louisiana

Dr. Theodore Copeland recently closed a very successful meeting at Belgreen, Ala. We learn that he is to begin a meeting with Rev. J. H. Felts, at Grenada, Miss., on the second Sunday in September.

Dr. Henry T. Carley has received 75 people into the Methodist Church since the beginning of his pastorate following last Conference. In addition to that excellent membership record, the other interests of the church are in good shape.

Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor at Abbeville, La., paid the Advocate office a call last Friday. He and his wife are taking a vacation on a United Fruit Co., steamer sailing the seas to the south. He is looking well and says that he is very happy in his work.

The twelfth session of the MacDonell French Mission School is scheduled to open on September 4. The editor acknowledges an invitation to be present, and he appreciates also the generous words of Miss Hooper concerning his relation to the French work and the school.

We carried last week the notice of the meeting at Cotton Valley, La., in which Rev. W. C. Scott did the preaching. Rev. A. M. Wynn reports that there were 18 accession to the membership of the church, and that 12 of them were by profession of faith.

Mrs. R. M. Evans, of Holly Springs, Miss., writes that she has been reading the Advocate so long that she feels that she cannot do without it, and she looks forward to its visits. Sister Evans' husband was long a member of the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, of Lake Charles, La., has been on a visit to Hot Springs, Ark., according to information received through friends. He is back at his post where he has handled a difficult task with energy and effectiveness, for the past four years.

Dr. George Lott Harrell, professor in Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss., made us an appreciated visit last week. He and his wife have been honeymooning in the Evangeline country and at the St. Charles Hotel in New Orleans—"Linked sweetness long drawn out."

Rev. C. B. White, Wisner, La., sends us a program of the Adult Bible Conference, to be held at Winnsboro, La., September 8-11. Dr. R. E. Smith, of Shreveport, will give a course of lectures on the Bible, and Rev. C. B. White a course of lectures on adult work. A printed program will be in the hands of those who attend and a large attendance is expected.

N. A. Gassaway, of Tupelo, Miss., reports that the revival at Andrews Chapel Church, in the Corinth District, was the most successful they have had for many years. Rev. B. F. Bullard, Conference Evangelist, did the preaching. Rev. M. E. Armstrong is the pastor. There were 21 additions to the membership and a rededication of many lives.

Rev. W. E. Akin, pastor of Athens charge, reports good meeting on his work which resulted in 41 accessions to the church. The meeting at Athens was a union of the three denominations and the pastors did the preaching. At Wesley Chapel the name of the visiting preacher was not given. At Bethel the pastor was assisted by Rev. F. A. Mathews, of Clay circuit. Bother Akin says that he has been fishing and is rested for the home stretch.

FROM CARTHAGE

We have had good revivals this year. Brother E. W. Ulmer of Lena preached at McAfee church and Edinburg church, eighteen additions at McAfee, eight additions at Edinburg. Brother Ira Williams of Morton preached at Wiggins church, had two additions there, and Brother Jim Campbell of First Church, Laurel, preached in Carthage church. We had one addition here. All these brethren preached wonderful sermons and I feel that our charge has been wonderfully blessed.

This has been a great year in many ways, and now I shall try to close the year in fine shape.

ANDREW J. BOYLES, Pastor.

TOPISAW CAMP MEETING

Dear Dr. Duren: We closed the Topisaw camp meeting last Sunday night. We had a great camp meeting, not much visible results, no one united with the Church, but church people were stirred and blessed and we feel that results will follow.

Rev. Jno. F. Baggett of Nashville, Tenn., brought strong, forceful Gospel messages each morning and night through the ten days camp. He is a great preacher, evangelistic in style and methods. My people were greatly pleased with his work in our midst.

We were brought under obligations to Rev. T. A. Ferguson of the Florida Conference and to Rev. T. M. Ainsworth and Rev. Otto Porter of the Mississippi Conference for the inspiring messages which they brought in the afternoons. They added greatly to the success of the camp meeting and we deeply appreciate all they did to make the revival a success.

Frank Dement of Meridian led the singing and Mrs. Jno. I. Hurst presided at the piano and both did their part well. No one could do better.

The congregations were large. On the first Sunday of the camp we could not seat the people although the tabernacle will seat from 1000 to 1200. We feel that the influence from the camp meeting will be far-reaching in its results.

We are working on the Advocate campaign and will let you hear from us in a substantial way in the near future.

We have paid the Church debt on the Summit Church and have paid since Annual Conference, $600 for repairs to the church and we are to have with us on September 29 Bishop Dobbs, who will dedicate the church.

We are having a great year and hope to report everything in full at Annual Conference in Laurel.

C. W. WESLEY, Pastor.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

Miss MacKinnon to Visit the Orient
Miss Sallie Lou MacKinnon, foreign secretary in charge of woman's work, sails to the Orient from Seattle on S. S. President Grant, October 12. She was elected by the College of Bishops and our General Conference to attend the Japan General Conference. In addition, it has been requested of her by the Japan mission that she aid in making plans for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Hiroshima School. A commission is already at work making a comprehensive investigation of the educational possibilities of the school in the light of present-day needs and opportunities.

Miss MacKinnon will arrive in China in time to attend and have a part in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the China Conference.

Just before sailing on October 12 she will attend the meeting of the International Missionary Council of which she is a member.

TROUT HAS A REAL REVIVAL

On Wednesday evening, July 31, Rev. W. D. Milton began one of the most successful revival meetings ever held in Trout. Brother Milton, who is pastor of the Trout-Good Pine charge, held his own meeting, preaching twice each day. The morning services were from 8:30 to 9:30 and the evening services from 8 to 9 o'clock. Jimmie Anders, the son of Brother D. F. Anders, pastor of Nolly Memorial Church, Jena, La., was in charge of the singing, and also the young people's hour. He truly did a wonderful work and deserves much praise in every way. He tried to show the young people how much they need God in their lives. Brother Milton had charge of the children's hour each evening at 7:30 o'clock for songs and prayer. The women's and men's prayer services were well attended each evening at 7:30 o'clock. Much interest was manifested. Each evening there were volunteers to lead the following service and many beautiful lessons were taught. Evidently Brother Milton felt this backing, for truly no man ever gave so whole-heartedly the best that was his to give as he gave to his congregation at every service and labored so untiringly, unfolding such a beautiful storehouse of knowledge of God's work and how to live it.

One man said of his preaching: "I like him because he dares to tell men they are going to hell if they fail to heed God's word."

Great crowds of people attended these services and many reconsecrated their lives to God. At the closing service on Sunday evening, August 11, after twelve days of this spiritual feast, this good pastor received a class of twenty-five into the church, twenty-one on profession of faith and four by letter. And really if God ever rejoiced over the home-coming of his children, it was at this service. There was a continued manifestation of God's presence and power and people were again made happy in the old time way.

Then Brother Milton, feeling that God had so wonderfully blest his efforts and this community, thought how appropriate an old fashioned "Love Feast" would be. So on Monday night, August 12, a great crowd of earnest people met at the church for a season of testimony and rejoicing. At the close of this marvelous service the people very graciously presented Brother Milton with a fine pounding of groceries and other gifts of love. Surely God has been this way and has left his impression in the lives of many. We rejoice and glorify his name.

MARBLE MARKER FOR SHARON METHODIST CHURCH

By Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, D.D.

The Mississippi Conference Historical Society has placed order for an upright marble slab to be erected at the Sharon Methodist Church, seven miles northeast of Canton, Miss., with inscription as follows:

Sharon Methodist Church,
Organized 1835.
Sixty-two Acres Deeded June 7, 1836.
Second Parsonage and First District
Parsonage in Southwest Built Here.
Site of Sharon Female Academy, and Madison College (1837-74)
Erected 1935 by Mississippi Conference
Historical Society

The fund for erecting this marker was raised at a home-coming and centennial day, held at the church June 27, under the direction of the pastor, Rev. D. P. Yeager, and the presiding elder, Dr. B. L. Sutherland, with a large attendance, including the following five former pastors: C. H. Ellis, F. L. Applewhite, Otto Porter, W. J. Walters, B. M. Hunt. There are seventeen other living former pastors. Interesting papers were read by J. B. Cain, Mrs. Lloyd Pace Mussellwhite, and L. A. Magruder. Brother Magruder's subject was "Recollections of Sharon Sixty and More Years Ago." He joined the church there in 1867, when Harvey F. Johnson was preacher in charge, and W. L. C. Hunnicutt, president of the college. He gave memories of numerous names, including T. W. Adams, T. B. Holoman, and C. B. Galloway, who, in 1869, was teacher at Sharon, and assistant pastor.

The section was included in the treaty with the Choctaw Indians by which five such surface defects and a half million acres of land east of the Mississippi River had been ceded by them. Most of the Choctaws had moved to west of Arkansas. There was an influx of White settlers; and the group of these who had located seven miles north-east of Canton named their church, "Sharon," which became the name of the community. The large way in which they undertook things is evidenced by the fact that Dr. Birdsong W. M. Minter, in 1836, deeded for church purposes sixty-two acres of land. Twenty-five acres were for the home of the presiding elder; and Jones, the historian, says that the district parsonage built thereon was the first between Georgia and the Pacific ocean; and Jones himself was presiding elder at the time, the name of the district for 1834 and 1835 being "Choctaw," and after that until 1864, "Sharon."

The two schools established there enjoyed great prosperity during the twenty-five years preceding the Civil War.

The Sharon church cemetery holds the remains of many people of distinction, such as: H. H. Montgomery, W. M. Curtis, T. C. Thornton, J. W. Adams, Dr. Minter, Mrs. W. T. J. Sullivan, Mrs. A. T. M. Fly.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

By M. H. McCormack, Jr.
District Reporter

The end of the summer vacation period was reached in the Greenwood District Saturday, August 8, when our energetic leader called us from refreshment to labor. The occasion was the meeting of the board of managers of the District Standard Training School, in the study of that affable and genial host, Dr. J. M. Bradley, pastor of First Church, Greenwood. Present at this meeting were Revs. Baird, Beasley, Bradley, Bruner, Cunningham, Dawson, Lord, McIlwain, and the writer. Only one of the co-operating charges was not represented. The school will begin September 1, at First Church, Greenwood, and gives promise of being one of the district's most successful undertakings. A strong faculty has been provided. Dr. Jno. H. Hicks of Southern Methodist University will teach the Bible class. Miss Virginia Thomas, Grenada College, is to teach the course for workers with young people, and Mrs. W. W. Tempieton, Afoka, Tenn., has charge of the class for workers with children.

Christian Education institutes have been announced as follows: Winona, September 3; Carrollton, September 4; Inverness, September 5; Lexington, September 9; and Ruleville, September 10. Every church in the district is urged to send representatives to the institute most convenient for them to attend.

We are happy to report that Rev. A. R. Beasley, pastor of the Minter City and Glendora charge, has recently recovered from a lengthy illness, and has resumed his work, looking toward a fine report for the approaching Annual Conference. Brother Beasley is nearing the end of five happy and successful years in his present appointment, and is one of our district's most successful and esteemed pastors.

Maybe you won't agree, but our leaders seem to have hit upon a plan of unification that will be acceptable to all branches of American Methodism.

Did you notice, in the press, the picture of the bishops attending the recent meeting? Our own Bishop Mouzon, America's most distinguished looking personage, dominates the entire landscape. Paraphrasing an old adage, it may well be said that, where Mouzon sits is the head of the table. Southern Methodism is justly proud to have as its senior effective bishop an irenic churchman-statesman of such towering eminence.

It is to be hoped that American Methodism has reached a stage of sufficient

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS

The Survey Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges says in its Report of April, 1935:

"The Committee feels that it cannot conclude its report without brief comment on the excellence of this college. Under the leadership of President Key and his competent faculty the college has maintained through the years a high grade of work in the field of liberal arts."

"In its two days at the College the Committee was impressed with the atmosphere, both on the campus and in the classroom. Students are of high quality, and their relationships with the faculty are most wholesome."

Fall Session opens September 11.

Those expecting to be enrolled in the Freshman Class should send High School Entrance Certificates and Application Fee of $15.00 at once.

maturity to be able to relegate to the background those juvenile antagonisms that have prevented unification all these years, and be able to present to the world a united and formidable front of 8,000,000 members, 20,000,000 constituents, and a budget of $100,000,000.00 with which to advance the interests of the kingdom of God.

Our people of the Southern branch are ready for unification if a plan can be provided that will guarantee real and equitable union, and not simply a Jonah and the whale get together.

We have been objecting all along, not to unification, but to certain plans of unification which we felt did not contain any real solution of the problems and difficulties that have kept us apart for nearly a century.

Southern Methodists have never been opposed to real union. We expect to be united in Heaven, so why not here on earth; we pray for unification when we say, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done, as in Heaven, so on earth."

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL AT MOORE MEMORIAL METHODIST CHURCH

We have just closed a Daily Vacation Bible School in the Moore Memorial Methodist Church of Winona. The attendance was splendid, and interest was sustained to the last.

Miss Lucile Pierce was the director of the juniors. The course of study offered in this department was: "How to Use Leisure Time." Aside from the study of the course, time was devoted to learning new hymns, Bible verses, folk songs, etc. The school attendants visited and sang for "at-tills." The recreation, which consisted of playing and inventing games, was climaxed by a party given at the close of the school. Noticeable progress was made in learning new songs, the Bible, and, in fact, in every thing which they tried. Not only did a greater Christian fellowship develop among those attending the school, but they developed a greater love for and loyalty to the Church.

Very effective and satisfactory work was carried on in the primary department under the able direction of Mrs. Boswell, assisted by Misses Martha Boswell and Lillian Curtis. After opening with a short period of worship a definite time was allotted to the study of music, Bible stories, missionary stories, and handicraft. The morning was divided into two parts. During the half hour intermission Miss Mary Cella Mounger supervised the recreation.

Mrs. N. V. Hutchinson, who was director of the entire school, was also very efficient in directing the music and in teaching the children to sing. The entire teaching force proved itself capable of carrying on the work of the school and was also exceptionally popular with the children attending.

The Missionary Society of Moore Memorial Church of Winona celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the union of the foreign and home missionary societies at its last meeting in July.

The high lights of the program were beautiful music, a talk by Mrs. J. W. Conger on the history of Methodist women, a birthday cake with candles, and corsages presented to all members of twenty-five years standing. Chapter two, "Peaks and Caverns," from our mission study book "Latin America" was given in costume by Misses Lucile Pierce and Elizabeth Case. Punch was served during the afternoon.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Hebrews 4:16—Let us therefore come boldly to a throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

The words THEREFORE and BOLDLY lead us to previous verses of the chapter, and connect the efficacy of prayer with the atonement, intercession, and character of Christ. "We have a great High Priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God." "This great High Priest is touched with the feeling of our infirmities," having been "tempted in all points like as we are; therefore let us come boldly to a throne of grace."

What an inducement is this to pray! Every harassed mind can find shelter beneath the omnipotence of Him who "ever liveth to make intercession for us." "Watch and pray," said Jesus, "Lest ye enter into temptation." Paul said, "Pray without ceasing." "Be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." To the Ephesians, Paul wrote, "But now in Christ Jesus, ye who were sometimes afar off, are made right by the blood of Christ." It is the combination of the sufferings and the sinlessness of Christ which is ground of our confidence in Him. The character of Christ is also an encouragement to prayer. "He is touched with the feeling of our infirmities." "He was tempted like as we are, yet without sin." He knows the nature of pain and grief. He endured poverty, scorn, and fatigue. He was called "the Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." He carried His sympathies when He passed into the heavens, so that we may carry every burden to Him. "Cast thy burden on the Lord, for He careth for thee." We may confide in Him; depend on Him; pray to Him.

As suppliants at the throne of grace WE MAY OBTAIN MERCY. The mercy to which he refers is mercy sought by the believer. He has already found acceptance in Christ. But the Christian still needs mercy. Mercy is essential for spiritual existence. If God's mercy were cut off, the soul would languish and die. It is through prayer that the Christian enjoys God's holy mercy. It is by faith that the Christian lives.

Prayer also brings GRACE TO HELP IN TIME OF NEED. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous." But he finds grace to conquer. "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes white in the blood of the Lamb." "Call upon me in trouble, and I will hear thee, and thou shalt praise me." In seasons of adversity, in times of bereavement, in hours of temptation, God's grace is sufficient for all of our needs.

PRAYER

We thank Thee for the privilege of intercourse with Thee. Prayer is the source of strength and joy and peace.

Thou hast bidden us to pray without ceasing. We would tarry at the mercy seat, and pray that we may be endued with power from on High. May we always live for Thy glory and exert our full powers for Thee. We ask in Jesus' name.

CHRISTIAN ADVENTURE CAMP

The Monroe-Ruston District Christian Adventure Camp was held at Camp Ki-Ro-Li, August 5-9. The attendance and the work done at this camp was highly gratifying to the leaders. Fifty-two intermediates were registered and with seventeen staff members there was a total of sixty-nine in attendance at the camp. Fifteen churches were represented. Fifty Christian Adventure certificates were awarded.

The theme "Dare We Be True" was carried out in every phase of the four-day program. Some very interesting classes were offered. The opinion of the leaders and the intermediates may be expressed: "This was a great camp."

REVIVAL AT PIONEER, LA.

Dear Dr. Duren: We have just concluded a successful ten-day revival meeting in the Pioneer church of the Monroe District. Rev. C. Karlos Smith, pastor of the Tallulah Methodist Church did the preaching. Much interest was shown in the meeting. Large crowds attended every service, both morning and night.

Fifteen persons were received into the Church: ten on profession of faith and five by letter. A great number of people rededicated their lives to Christ and to the Church. Throughout our whole community there was manifest a deeper interest in things spiritual.

Brother Smith is a very capable evangelist. He is a preacher who puts his very soul and heart into his sermons. His preaching is courageous in the denunciation of sin and appealing in the presentation of Christ and the Church. New spiritual life has entered the church at Pioneer because of his leadership in our revival.

We hope and pray that you may hear of a great number of successful revivals throughout the Church.

JACK H. MIDYETT, Pastor.

Cardui Relieves Periodic Pains and Nervousness

Women who suffer severe pain and nervousness at monthly periods, due to poor nourishment as often shown by a run-down condition, may find Cardui as helpful as so many women have reported. Here is what Mrs. Carl Graf, of Georgetown, Fla., writes: "Cardui has been very beneficial to me—having used it as a young girl and since when in a run-down condition. I can testify to its relieving pain during menstruation periods and as a tonic for women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefitted them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

In Memoriam

MISS ANNIE RAINEY

A light has gone out of our lives, for a precious jewel has been taken from its setting in the passing of our dear Miss Annie Rainey, of Natchez, Miss. Although her chair by the window is empty, and the passer-by can no longer see her smile nor hear her cheery greeting, we cannot realize that she has really gone. She is greatly missed by a score of friends and a few remaining relatives. The latter being: one brother, W. T. Rainey of Rodney, Miss.; two sisters, Mrs. Rachel Moran of Rodney and Mrs. Ellen Gibson of Greenville, Miss.; one son and three daughters of Mrs. Gibson, and her niece and nephew of Natchez, Miss. Mabel and Mr. Walter Matthews, who gave her such loving care during her illness.

Miss Annie, the daughter of the late Tom Rainey and Mary Kennedy Rainey, was born near Union Church in Jefferson county, May 14, 1857, and died May 8, 1935.

She joined the Methodist Church in early life and has been a faithful member, taking part in all church work—including teaching Sunday school in the various places where she lived. For over twenty years Miss Annie has been a member of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church of Natchez. For a number of years she arranged the flowers, and furnished many lovely ferns. The Christian Advocate was her most cherished paper.

I shall always remember how her face lit up when she told me a touching incident. A dear little girl, who has since gone to Jesus, loved to attend prayer meeting every Wednesday night. When her mother was dubious about her going, the child would say, "Why, mother, Miss Annie will be there."

When it's round-up time in heaven and the saints shall gather from the "East and from the West," and the angels so sweetly shall sing amid that beautiful scene—oh, just look around, for I know Miss Annie will be there.

FLORENCE CAMMACK.

RESOLUTIONS BY "FLOWER RIDGE" W. M. S. OF ESTES, MISS.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. J. T. Hurst, who for one year as president of the Missionary Society, proved an efficient and Christian leader, leaving us an example of kindly service and humility in doing the Master's work; and

Whereas, in the years that she lived among us, the good that she did, especially the life that she lived, will linger in our memory. Its influence will continue through the ages to come. Therefore be it

Resolved, That though we grieve for the passing of such a friend, we bow to the will of our Heavenly Father, knowing that our loss is her gain; and be it further

Resolved, That the Missionary Society extend its deepest sympathy to the grief-stricken family in their bereavement; and be it further

Moorhead Methodist Church

THE MOORHEAD METHODIST CHURCH, located in the heart of the fertile Mississippi Delta, serves one of the most strategic educational centers in the North Mississippi Conference. The Sunflower Agricultural High School and Junior College, Mississippi's largest institution of its kind, is located in Moorhead. It has an average enrollment of over 500 boarding students from every part of North Mississippi, and in addition a large number of local students.

The church is located on Olive Street, only one block from the campus, and has a modern building which is adequate to meet the requirements of the congregation. This church has the largest membership of any church in the town. There are two other churches located there—the Baptist and the Presbyterian.

Prof. B. D. McCallister, superintendent of the city school, is the General Superintendent and Chairman of the Board. The other stewards are: Dr. A. M. Applewhite, Mr. J. J. Astin, Mr. A. L. Crook, Mrs. A. L. Crook, Mr. T. H. Dudley, Mr. A. B. Hankins, Mr. Geo. F. Nixon, Dr. U. S. Wasson, and Mr. W. W. White. Mr. J. J. Henry, father of Dr. R. T. Henry, missionary in China, is steward emeritus.

The Moorhead church has a resident membership of 275, in addition to the students who attend during the school session. They are fortunate in having one of the best organized and most business-like boards in the entire Conference. Much of the credit for this goes to Prof. McCallister, Chairman, and Brother Nixon, Secretary.

AN OLD MEETING HOUSE of town and church at Jaffray, New Hampshire, says the Religious Telescope, erected two years before the Declaration of Independence, is still in use. Rev. Peter Ainsworth, the first minister, was called and supported by the town, and he served for seventy-five years. The meeting house is used for town hall, social center, and the bell is rung for the meetings of First Church.

THE NESTORIAN CHURCH, which in the thirteenth century was a very numerous band of Christians, has been reduced to a remnant of 20,000, now living in the neighborhood of Mosul in Turkish territory. According to The New Outlook, the League of Nations has found a home for them in the borders of Syria, on land which the French government has offered them; and the Government of Iraq has appropriated more than half a million dollars for the transportation of this remnant of Christian refugees to their new and permanent home.

JOYCE KILMER, POET, who was a casualty of the World War, is to have a memorial in Flint Park, Larchmont, N. Y. The memorial will consist of a large boulder and bronze tablet which will be placed amid the trees of the park—a fit and proper setting for a memorial to the poet whose greatest and best known contribution to literature was entitled, "Trees." Kilmer once lived in the little village where the people seek to do him honor, but more beautiful and enduring than the granite boulder and the bronze tablet will be the lyrical composition which he executed with his own hands.

GEORGE WASHINGTON is said to have paid court to Mary Cary, a daughter of Wilson Cary who lived in county of Elizabeth City, on the James River in Virginia. The Carys were descended from the English nobility and Washington was neither wealthy nor renowned. The proud father of Mary Cary dismissed the ardent lover with a haughty reminder of the disparity of their stations in life. Mary Cary afterward married Edward Ambler and lived in Williamsburg, the ancient capital of Virginia. When Washington had received the sword of the conquered Cornwallis at Yorktown, he was returning in triumph through Williamsburg, and seeing Mary Cary in the crowd, he saluted her with his sword and she fainted.

MOTHER GOOSE was a real character, and not an imaginary person as has been supposed. She was born in 1665, before her marriage she was Elizabeth Foster, she married Isaac Goose in 1693, was a member of Old South Church, in Boston, and died at the age of ninety-two years. The first edition of her songs were originally sung to her grandchildren, and they were published in Boston, 1716, by her son-in-law, Thomas Fleet.

APPLICATION FOR A LABOR UNION CHARTER, according to an exchange, has been made by an association of thirty clergymen in New York. It is said that the list of applicants includes the names of some prominent men of the leading denominations of the city. One purpose of the proposed union is to raise a minimum salary of $2,500 a year for ministers. Perhaps those clergymen have a "revised" call to the ministry. Paul said, "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel;" but the new attitude would seem to be, "Woe unto the fellow who doesn't pay a standard price for his gospel."

THE STREET OF TRIPODS in the city of Athens, Greece, is so named because of the great number of choragic monuments which were once located along its course. The monuments were erected by private persons in honor of victories in public musical contests, and the tripod was a symbol featured in them all; hence the designation. The monument of Lysicrates and the "Tower of the Winds," both splendid examples of the aesthetic and beautiful in Greek art, are still standing and in an excellent state of preservation. The Bennett Fountain in New Haven, Connecticut is modeled after the Monument of Lysicrates.

THE RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA by the present administration promises not to be an unmixed blessing. Instead it promises to turn out as many "forward-looking" measures do, a boomerang. In making an inventory of the assets which Russia had to offer, Congress should not have overlooked the fact that propaganda is its principal stock in trade. The best place to have dealt with that was at the border. From our earliest recollection, Russia has seemed to us to be a nation that troubled the world, the Recessional did not improve our feeling, we have not gotten over the part it played in the World War, and its atheism certainly offers little encouragement to hope for better things.

OUR BARGAIN COUNTER AGE

Whatever the history of its origin, we seem to have reached a stage in our social development when the bargain counter and the bargain basement are recognized, if not fundamental factors of social and business life. They elicit a greater interest in the shopping district than anything else, and many of us wait impatiently for the announcement of bargain days. Such institutions may promote styles which are a little bizarre and shop-worn, but the humiliation of that is no offset to the thrill of having gotten an article for ninety-eight cents. But there is no use to rail against it, for the habit has become so universal that interest everywhere requires to be stimulated by the offer of a bargain. The shrewd salesman knows that when he offers merchandise at a dollar down, the bargain-hunter never hears the succeeding statement of the contract, "A dollar a month thence forward and forever." The effect is exactly the same as if the article had been offered for one dollar flat. One sometimes wonders if the demand for short sermons and a breezy service is not really the out-cropping of the dollar-down habit. Or if it were not just possible that when St. Paul told Timothy that the time would come that the people would not endure sound doctrine, but that they would "heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears," if he might not have been warning him against religious bargain hunters—gospel dollar-downers? The thing that we need to realize is that the things of unquestioned value and the staple merchandise of life do not have to be offered at cut-rate prices—they are not to be found in bargain basements with 98c tags on them any more than gold dollars are, and that is putting it pretty strong at the present time. They are on the top floors and the tags are marked in three figures. But what will some people do if they get to heaven and find that there are no racket stores, bargain basements, or dollar-down artists? They will be hooked-up wrong, that's all.

THE FLORIDA STORM

The recent hurricane which swept northward from the Caribbean Sea, the zone where tropical storms are incubated, swept inland northwest of Tampa. It was one of the most disastrous of many years, and carried sorrow and anxiety far and wide throughout the country. The Dixie, a vessel of the Morgan line running between New Orleans and New York, was driven upon the coral reefs south of Miami. The ill-fated vessel carried an extensive passenger list, distributed from Vancouver to Boston and from Chicago to New Orleans. None of the passengers were lost and, according to press reports, none were seriously injured, but the situation was tense and distressing not more for those on board than for those who anxiously sought assurance as to the safety of loved ones. The continued reports of a disabled vessel pounding upon the rocks and a fleet of vessels standing by for days in high-running seas which made rescue impossible, spread fear throughout the land. But that which carried deeper and made more abiding the marks of the tragedy, was the fate of a road building camp of World War veterans who were constructing a highway between Miami and Key West. With neither covert nor place of refuge in a great storm they were swept helplessly into the fury of the sea and to death. It is reported that literally hundreds of people met death in the path of the storm, and a geographically local disturbance was turned into a national catastrophe. Even the rescue train, on its mad, but vain dash to carry succor to the distressed, was swept from the rails and utterly wrecked; and the pictures of prostrate coaches add to the pathos of the harrowing and gruesome story of a storm whose terrors will be recited for many a day and at many a fireside throughout America. Florida and all those who have shared in the suffering and anxiety of the disaster will have the sympathy and support of good people everywhere, who have not shared directly and personally in the distressing experiences of those terrible days.

JOINT COMMISSION, INTERDENOMINATIONAL RELATIONS AND CHURCH UNION

Fifty commissioners from the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, recently approved, without a dissenting vote, a plan for merging the three bodies in one, under the title "The Methodist Church." The plan which will not become operative until ratified by vote of the several churches in General and Annual Conferences, a process requiring at least six years, involves reorganization. There will be one General Conference, six Jurisdictional Conferences in the United States, a number of Central Conferences outside the United States, and a Council of Bishops, elected by the several Jurisdictions and Central Conferences. Five of the Jurisdictions are on geographical lines and are designed to secure homogeneity of interest and facility of administration; Northeastern, from Maine to the Potomac and Ohio; Southeastern, from the Potomac and Ohio to the Mississippi; North Central, the six states bordering the Great Lakes, with Iowa and the Dakotas; South Central, including Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico; and Western, the Mountain and Pacific Coast States. The existing Negro Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church are assembled in a single Jurisdiction of equal powers with the others including election of bishops and full representation in the General Conference.

Under the plan the Annual Conferences will be composed of ministers and laymen, who will administer local matters and elect the delegates to the General and Jurisdictional Conferences. The latter will elect their bishops and will take over many of the functions formerly exercised by the General Conferences of the three uniting Churches. They will meet once in four years as will the General Conference.

A Judicial Council is set up which will pass on the constitutionality of legislation and board action and hear and determine appeals from a bishop's ruling. It is in effect a Supreme Court.

The Plan now goes to the several General Conferences for approval, beginning next May with the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant bodies. The Southern General Conference meets in 1938. If it is accepted by majorities of two-thirds it will be passed down to the several Annual Conferences where majorities of two-thirds, and in the Southern Church, three-fourths, are required for ratification.

If and when ratified a Uniting Conference will meet within a year to formulate rules and regulations and write the Discipline of the Methodist Church.

In the Uniting Conference the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will each have 400 representatives and the Methodist Protestant Church will have 100. The bishops who are effective when unification is consummated, together with two bishops who may be elected by the Methodist Protestant delegates in the Uniting Conference, will be the bishops of the Methodist Church.

The foregoing news release was under date of August 16, and its delay in reaching us was due to the absence of Dr. Decell from home. We submit it as a matter of news, and as a statement of the Joint Commission. We do not discuss it, for the reason that it would not be either just or even possible to give an informative study of the plan upon such a partial and incomplete statement. There are details still to be adjusted; but this general summary will give the patrons of the Advocate some conception of the lines along which union may be proposed. We think that it is a question which our people should think through soberly and dispassionately. When we have the completed draft of the plan before us so that it may be discussed intelligently, we will try to give an evaluation of it as we see it. We do not open the columns of the Advocate at this time for the discussion of a plan that is not offered as either full or final.

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

I am looking into a book of Prayers. It is not very modern, for I notice on the fly-leaf that it was printed in 1866. It contains forty prayers used by Theodore Parker in leading his congregation to God while he was pastor of an independent group of Christians in Boston. The ministry of his prayers made as deep impression on his people as the earnestness of his preaching. His life as a clergyman was a stormy one. He seemed not to be suited for any organized group of Christians of his day, yet these prayers which he prayed for his people still warm the heart when they are read. There is a ministry through prayer. It does not need a congregation, or a house, or an atmosphere. It is not restricted to the clergy. All Christians alike may join in this blessed ministry.

DEFLATION OR PROGRESS?

By Rev. W. L. DOSS, D.D.,
President, Louisiana Conference Board of Missions

As the time for the session of the Annual Conference draws near the preachers-in-charge face up to the responsibility of leading their people in the raising of funds to meet the General and the Conference apportionments. This is a year of testing.

We have long been restive under the assessment plan. The General Conference of 1930 changed the name, but did not in reality change the method of securing these finances. Neither did the change of name alter the attitude of the preachers and people toward these claims. As is known to all, the last session of the General Conference instituted the voluntary element in the fixing of the amount that is to be raised by each local church for these causes so that every church now has the privilege of saying how much it will raise for the causes. This constitutes a new test and also a new challenge to us. No preacher or people can now shift the responsibility by saying that the apportionment was handed down from above and that the amount asked is an unreasonable amount. In every case each church through the quarterly conference, the governing body of the local charge, has fixed the amount to be raised by each church in the Annual Conference. Church officials and preachers-in-charge have had the final word to say concerning the amount that is to be raised in every charge.

Rev. Jas. E. Selfe, chairman of the Conference Commission on Budget, reports that the charges of the Louisiana Conference have accepted a total for General and Conference work of $57,239. In its last session the Louisiana Annual Conference reduced the apportionment of the General Conference to this Conference from approximately $50,000 to $40,000, or by twenty per cent. The Annual Conference adopted an apportionment of $60,000 for Conference work. These two items total $100,000.

While the amount accepted by the local quarterly conferences, according to the reports of the presiding elders, is $42,791 less than that apportioned by the Annual Conference, yet the amount accepted is an increase of $11,655 over what was raised last year. Brethren, let us put forth every effort to raise what we pledged to be raised. By doing this we will be making substantial progress and will also show ourselves to be worthy of the confidence that has been reposed in the local charges and churches.

Even though we should raise the total amount pledged by the local churches and charges, we will then be asking these great causes to carry on their work with a fifty-seven-cents dollar instead of a one-hundred-cents dollar. In the very beginning our Annual Conference said to the great general boards that we would reduce their askings by twenty per cent. Now the charges have further reduced this request. Recently we have heard much about deflation and have felt its severe pressure. Surely no Methodist preacher or official who had a share in accepting $57,000 on an asking of $100,000, will want to be a party to further deflation of the dollars to be used in the great benevolent causes of our great Church.

After all, it is not merely a question of so many dollars to be raised for different abstract causes. It is a matter of meeting real needs that have to do with men and women of flesh and of blood just as we ourselves are. It is from these collections that our honored superannuates receive the major part of their support. They have labored to make our Louisiana Methodism. Their needs and those of their families are very real. Others whose necessities must be met from these funds are the men and their families who will for the coming Conference year be assigned to the mission charges of the Louisiana Conference. Many are the regions in the bounds of our Conference where our ministry cannot maintain itself without the aid that comes from these funds. There are yet regions beyond into which we should enter here in Louisiana. These cannot be entered for lack of sufficient mission funds. Then there is the great educational obligation assumed some years back by the Louisiana Conference which involves the very integrity and honor of our Methodism in this Conference. Besides these causes there are still others that look to these collections for their maintenance.

Let every possible honest effort be put forth to raise in full the amount pledged by the charges. As one who has long been familiar with the affairs of the Louisiana Conference and with the needs of many of our great and white fields of harvest, and as the one who has now been charged with the responsibility of serving you in the capacity of President of your Conference Board of Missions, let me ask that this increase of $11,000 be raised so as to make it possible for us to go forward into new fields and not merely to stand holding the lines where we now are.

MOUNT SEQUOYAH

By Rev. B. C. Shuler

God has some beautiful spots. Unfortunately, his people are not in charge of all of them. But some of them are being kept in tune with His purposes. Out in my big, abundant West is Mt. Herman among the Red Woods. I have been there seven times and never left without refreshing. I have a little retreat of my own at Big Bear Lake, 8,000 feet above mad, wicked, selfish, sinful Los Angeles. I can really pray up there beneath the big pines.

Well, I have just spent eight days at one of God's choice spots. Mount Sequoyah, up above a dozen little valleys, pyramided fresh and green and inspiring where the skies have never lost their blue, is in my heart to stay.

Sam Yancey, Dr. Millar, Bishop Paul Kern and those who love this little mountain invited me to hold a camp meeting. I confess I didn't hold it but it did grip me. I tried to preach twice daily. Brother Johnson of Nashville led some wonderful singing and told us about the great hymns of the Church. I found many camping there when I arrived. People came from all about and God came with them. We really had a most happy time and while I am never satisfied any more with the results, I do thank God for the opportunity, the blessing that came and the fellowship that resulted.

What I want to say is this: This camp meeting idea is great. It should be perpetuated. It should spread. We need a season of prayer and meditation, of gospel preaching and heart searching, of spiritual manifestation and challenging rededication. Few sinners may come. Few came to Mount Sequoyah, save the kind that are all about us and to which we ourselves belong, the kind that are saved by grace and need a little more every day. For undoubtedly the Church needs a fresh anointing, and by the foolishness of preaching such has come in the past and will come in the future, if the fires of a glorious manifestation shall ever burn again.

I am urging the Methodists of the middle Southwest to perpetuate this camp meeting, begun this year at Mount Sequoyah. Come next year in great numbers. Bring large delegations. Camping facilities and advantages abound here. Eats are fine on this hill. And, boy, you can eat! Bring your sons and daughters. It will amaze you how the contagion will spread.

In this day of a thousand vexing problems and questions beyond our ken, it is great to feel that God yet lives and that his abundance is undiminished and his mercy still enduring forever. You catch the thread again in such an experience as we have just had on this spot. And it goes with you back to the valley and the plain.

So I sincerely hope that next year some gospel preacher like Arthur Moore, Bud Robinson, Edwin Mouzon, H. C. Morrison or What's-his-name will find his way up this winding road and the multitudes will gather, as gather they did this year, and God will come down our souls to greet and glory crown the mercy seat.

VERA HOUDOVA OF OUR CZECH ORPHANAGE

Shortly after Bishop Arthur J. Moore reached Prague, Czechoslovakia, for the Annual Conference of 1935, the Methodist headquarters at Prague received a telephone message from a manufacturer who had adopted a little girl from our Methodist Orphanage in Horni Pecernice. The message announced that the girl had run away, having jumped from a window while her foster parents were not at home.

The police were immediately notified and the Office was kept in great anxiety for several hours, fearing that this nine-year-old girl was hopelessly lost in the great city of a million population. Then came another telephone message announcing that the lost child had arrived safely back at the Orphanage in Horni Pecernice.

The explanation was that she had been heart sick and lonely and had simply run away in order to return to the Orphanage, the only home she knew. As she came weeping through the streets, some passerby gave her the money for the railroad ticket. She carried with her nothing save her report card from the public school, which showed that her marks were "excellent" in all cases save two, in which they were "good."

The attachment of this young girl to the Orphanage speaks eloquently of the care bestowed upon the boys and girls in our institution in far-away Czechoslovakia.

A Patch of Sunshine.—The day had been overcast, suddenly the sun shone out, and a little patch of sunshine brightened the corner of the carpet. Immediately Tray got up, and with a wise look trotted to the bright place and laid himself down in it. "There's true philosophy," said George; "only one patch of sunlight in the place, and the sagacious little dog walks out of the shadow and rolls himself round in the brightness." Let not Tray's example be lost upon us, but wherever there shall shine one patch of sunlight, let us enjoy it.—N. O. Christian Advocate, February 27, 1858.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

would not be sufficient to prove that the General Conference of 1844 did not intentionally provide for such a contingency. Unfortunately it could not be said of either North or South: "There were green and refreshing spots in the desert of hostility and rancour." Northern publications characterized the new Church as schismatics and secessionists and the periodicals of the South replied in kind. It is altogether possible that more trouble grew out of the criticisms, for which both sides were responsible, than was caused by the resolution respecting Bishop Andrew. The minds of men North and South were confused and it was easy to aggravate the situation by the assertion of hasty and ill-considered judgments. In the course of time, the Supreme Court of the United States gave unassailable validity to the corporate existence of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; but no court decision could heal the wounds which were inflicted by the bitter words of the contestants.

As a Southern man, the author makes no defence of slavery, and neither does he accept the implication that the institution is a sole and solitary sin of the South. We deplore the fact that a divided church, secession, the War Between the States, Reconstruction and race attrition are eternally in the foreground of the history of an institution which was without a single redeeming virtue. On both sides, we have reached an eminence from which we can observe more calmly and speak more judiciously than was possible ninety years ago. We of the South have come to realize that it was not just to charge the leadership of the North with casuistry and double-dealing on the subject of slavery; for, in that section, the Church had been badgered and bludgeoned at quarterly and Annual Conferences until it was almost unbearable. Despite the humiliating attacks made upon them, the Bishops consistently refused to put to vote resolutions offered in Annual Conferences, on the subject of slavery, until abolitionist agitations filled the minds of Methodist people with a distrust of the leadership of the Church, and with doubts as to Methodist sincerity in dealing with what the anti-slavery element characterized as the sin of the age.

The amazing fact connected with the Conference of 1844, is that, after the bitterness of the desperate struggle that had occupied practically the entire session, it should have been able to arrive at such a liberal and Christian adjustment, when the church was about to be rent in twain. Whatever impeachments may be brought against Northern men for their treatment of Bishop Andrew, it must be said that the last act in that lamentable struggle will stand out in the history of the Christian Church, as a memorial to their sense of justice and equity; and it will abide as an incontrovertible evidence of their good will as respects the South. To be sure, the Plan was repudiated by the General Conference of 1848; but nearly two-thirds of those who had voted the Plan of Separation had failed of election in 1848. Among those who were not present in 1848 were Bangs, Olin, Sargent, Spicer, Haughteling, Ames, Spaulding and many others. The rescinding resolution was adopted by a vote of 132 to 10; but only about twenty-five of the forty-one members who had supported the Plan of Separation in 1844 reversed their position in 1848.

Much has been said and written about the censure of Bishop Andrew, but even there we can find a bowl with a golden rim. As has been observed already, probably very few people, familiar with Methodist law, would undertake to defend the legality of the procedure in his case; but the desire of the North to do right is registered again and again. They refused to charge him with crime—even those who denounced slavery as the epitome of wickedness. The sentence under which he was virtually deposed could scarcely have been couched in less offensive terms. After the Finley substitute had been passed, two efforts were made, by different men, to soften it by interpretation. Both efforts failed, but what the majority refused to do by direct resolution, they did with poorer grace in the unparliamentary reply to the Protest. There they declared that the action against Bishop Andrew was neither "judicial nor punitive." The Conference ordered that his name should stand in the list of Bishops in the hymn book, and the provision for his support was to remain unchanged.

The report of the Committee on Organization in the Louisville Convention made use of a statement worthy of being preserved for a day of better understanding and a calmer judgment of its truth: "The controversy of a large and rapidly increasing portion of the North, is not so much with the South as with the Discipline, because it tolerates slavery in any form, whatever, and should the Southern Conferences remain under the present common jurisdiction, or any slaveholding portion of the South unite in the Northern connection in the event of division, it requires very little discernment to see that this controversy will never cease until every slaveholder or every Abolitionist is out of the connection." As we look back upon the struggle of 1844 and after, that would appear to have been a discriminating appraisal of the whole situation and prospect.

CHAPTER IX READJUSTMENT

In a sense it might be said of the disruption of the Methodist Episcopal Church: "It had no authors, no leaders, and no guides." It was an explosion for which the opposing constituencies had made no plans; and, on both sides, the efforts at recovery represented a similar disordered and unplanned movement to save the Church from ruin that seemed imminent. It might be possible to deal with the events of this chapter in a more dispassionate manner, without a review of the distressing details of the General Conference, the doings of which were echoed and re-echoed until the most frontier settlement in the land was filled with a spirit of partisanship and distrust whose baleful effects have not been eliminated even until this day. There are certain facts to which reference must be made, however, and we refer to them simply for the sake of making the connection clear.

The show of strength made by the anti-slavery wing of the Church, on the appeal of Rev. Francis A. Harding, had the effect of emboldening that faction; and, in a way, committed the Church, North, to a course of action which it had not meditated and for which it was not prepared. This interpretation seems to be borne out by the fact that the leadership, such as there was, fell to a group who were not the best qualified, nor the most dependable men on that side. The leadership of the period, which most of all needed clear seeing and clear thinking, fell to those who were not able to lift the action of the Church above the level of a partisan contest; and the years which followed witnessed a constant deploying of forces to meet attack, rather than a constructive effort for the solution of difficulty. The quadrennium which followed 1844 was unfortunate in its leadership, and as a consequence, the General Conference of 1848 was injudiciously managed.

After the General Conference of 1844, we deal with a period in which men were supposed to have settled down in the composure of their own thoughts to meet the terms and the consequences of the overwhelming declaration of the General Conference. We must think of anything that was done as resulting from a more deliberate and meditated purpose upon the part of those concerned; for the element of emergency had been removed and the pressure of disaster was no longer a factor in what was done or said. But the tragedy is in the fact that the Church did not recover its judicial poise; but it went forth to meet the new issues with all the feeling aroused by discussion in the General Conference; and with the added resentment of what must have seemed to the triumphant faction to have been a surrender of the victory that had been achieved on the slavery issue. It is needless to say that it was an unfortunate combination for that time.

We approach the study of this period with the assumption that the Finley resolution was passed with the distinct understanding that it would probably result in the dismemberment of the Church. Such was clearly reflected in the discussions on both sides of the controversy, and the unanimity of the delegates on the report of the Committee of Nine shows that the mind of the Conference was fully made up to the result which followed. The Church, North, had reached a state of feeling of such intensity that if it had yielded, it would have been consumed by the fires of opposition which would have been kindled against it. On the other hand, if the South had yielded, it would have meant irretrievable disaster for the Church in that section. So when argument against the wisdom of the Plan of Separation has been completely exhausted, it can still be said that its adoption was a triumph of irenic statesmanship on both sides. And looking back upon those fateful days of controversy and strife, one is inclined to say that it was a great pity that the action of 1844 might not have been accepted by all sides as the final settlement, not of the question of slavery, but of the internal problem which had disturbed the Church from the beginning. But, alas, such was not to be the case.

The South was charged with acting in precipitate haste, and thereby accepting responsibility for the dismemberment of the Church. To that indictment, it may be answered with perfect frankness, the South should not have been expected to take the stupid course of leaving to a weak, inflamed, designing and irresponsible leadership matters which involved its very life, as well as its social and political institutions. In laying plans for the inevitable result of the action that had been taken, the Southern delegates established for themselves a credential of wisdom and generalship of which no generation need be ashamed. Their action had the effect of unifying and solidifying all factions, and the avoidance of damaging cross-currents of thought and discussion. In the Methodist Church Property Suit, Mr. George Wood of the counsel for the Methodist Episcopal Church, gave good reason for the Plan of Separation when he said: "That unfortunate question of abolitionism—which has been for the last fifteen or twenty years in this country, Pandora's box to let out every evil—has wrought them (the South) to a pitch of excitement which forms, if not a justification, at least some excuse for the precipitancy with which they have acted; and therefore allowances ought

Mississippi and Louisiana

Dr. C. B. Alford, in a business note to the office adds the much appreciated word of commendation, "I am thoroughly enjoying the Advocate."

Rev. W. W. Bruner, pastor at Carrollton, Miss., has just finished seven weeks of revival services. He says that he is now at work for the closing out of the Conference year.

Rev. H. H. Wallace writes from Shaw, Miss., saying that he cannot brag about what he has accomplished, but that he is at work. Well, that is what makes bragin' possible further on.

Rev. C. K. Smith began a meeting at Tallulah, La., on September 1. He is being assisted by Rev. John A. May of Alabama. Brother May has held several good meetings in the Louisiana Conference this year.

Dean and Mrs. R. E. Smith report a very pleasant and profitable time at Junaluska recently. Dean Smith had been somewhat indisposed, and the rest and invigorating climate greatly refreshed him.

We regret to note the illness of Mrs. Hoyt M. Dobbs, as reported in the calendar of First Church, Shreveport, La. We trust that it may be only a fleeting illness and that she may soon be entirely recovered.

Rev. D. B. Boddie, pastor at Lake Providence, La., says that there is an upturn in the affairs of his section and that the appreciation of the Advocate abides. The Advocate has no better friend than Brother Boddie.

Rev. Guy Ray who is serving his fourth year on the New Albany circuit, North Mississippi Conference, says that he has had a very happy year. We trust that he may have a great conclusion of a splendid pastorate.

Rev. C. W. Wesley, Summit and Topi-saw charge, is making extensive preparation for the dedication of the Summit church, on September 29. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will preach and will conduct the service of dedication.

Dr. J. L. Decell of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., was the special preacher at the Kentucky Conference which met in Harrodsburg last week. Bishop U. V. W. Dalington is the Bishop in charge of the Conference.

Rev. E. M. Sharp of the Rienzi, Miss., charge reports that he has had four successful revivals, and that he expects to pay all obligations in full. Twenty-five new members were added as the result of the revivals on the charge.

Rev. Otto Porter, pastor at Centenary Church, McComb, Miss., is making full proof of his ministry in that important center of South Mississippi, and in addition to his own work he generously lends of his time and effort to others.

Rev. E. C. Dufresne says that the work at Rochelle, La., is moving along smoothly, and that he has had three good meetings. At Rochelle, he was assisted by Rev. John Rasmussen of Bunkie, and he did his own preaching in the other two.

Rev. R. M. Bentley, pastor at Gordon Avenue Church, Monroe, La., held a meeting at Crew Lake, with 32 accessions to the membership of the church. This church is not in a populous community, but the meetings were largely attended.

Mr. A. M. Mayo that veteran Church School superintendent of Lake Charles, La., was recently nominated and elected to that position for the forty-fourth consecutive time. Louisiana Methodism has no truer or more faithful man than he.

Rev. C. T. Floyd, our pastor at Amory, Miss., where the North Mississippi Annual Conference will open the last day of October, reports that his people are eagerly looking forward for the gathering of preachers and laymen in their new church.

Dr. J. W. Bell, one of our honored superannuates, living now at Verona, Miss., continues to enjoy the fellowship of the preachers. He attends most of the meetings of the church in his district and takes an interest in what the church is trying to do.

The presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference are meeting at Jackson, Miss., on September 10, and those of the North Mississippi Conference at Winona on the following day. The presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference will meet at Shreveport on September 17.

In the sudden and unexpected death of Dr. L. S. Flournoy, of the Virginia Conference, Methodism in that section has lost a capable and consecrated leader. The editor of the Advocate traveled with Dr. Flournoy and his wife through Egypt and Palestine, and we regret to learn of his untimely death.

Dr. W. P. Buhrman, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, has divided the district into five zones with the following pastors as zone leaders: W. R. Lott, A. Y. Brown, T. H. Dorsey, G. H. Boyles

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.,

The second annual "Coaching Day for Mission and Bible Study Leaders," of the Meridian District was held at Central Church, Meridian, September 3, with Mrs. D. L. St. John, district secretary, in charge.

The devotional period was conducted by our Conference president, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, using the theme, "Our Common Need."

Mrs. W. B. Carr of Meridian was the instructor for the day. Using as illustrative material, "That Other America," by John A. Mackay, she gave methods for teaching and discussed plans for making our mission study classes profitable.

Some of the interesting ideas set forth were: The use of map study, making one woman responsible for a country in the Pan-American Union, finding appealing facts concerning it; second, the introduction of a Diction Critic, impersonated by Mrs. Stanley Wilson, who gave the definition, pronunciation and use of difficult words in the text, telling where such help could be found. She was assisted by Mrs. F. H. Prince in the explanation of Spanish expressions.

A demonstration class was another attractive idea. In this a group of local women endeavored to show how a mission study should be conducted, when each person to take part had been given their assignments in advance. They used as their material the third chapter of the text book, studying it topically.

The noon hour was a delightfully entertaining one, with Miss Dovie Bridges of Braxton, Miss. as honor guest. Miss Bridges has been a teacher in Mexico, and dressed in a native costume, she exhibited an attractive collection of Mexican handicraft in the way of laces, feather pictures, bead-work, etc. She also sang several songs in Spanish.

At one end of the dining room, in a semi-circle arrangement, were seated twenty-one women in colorful native costumes, representing and giving a brief biography of a notable woman of each country in the Pan-American Union. As each country was called its flag was displayed.

The women attending voted it an outstanding day of instruction and inspiration. Forty of the text books were sold.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

"To get a job or to secure better preparation"—that is the question just now confronting a multitude of young people. What should they do? Where should they go? Have you suggested Scarritt College to any of them?

Scarritt College is your college. It belongs to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and every man, woman and child in that Church should know about Scarritt.

Scarritt College holds a unique place among educational institutions. It offers senior college and graduate courses. It emphasizes thorough scholarship and vital Christian experience. It is organized as nearly as possible as a Christian home, with every feature of college life educationally significant. It offers courses of instruction in Christian home making and local community leadership, in social work, in religious education, and in missionary service abroad.

Scarritt College invites its friends throughout the Church to associate themselves with those specifically charged with the conduct of the institution in enabling the institution to realize its largest usefulness. Such interested friends are called "Scarritt Associates." Scarritt Associates serve the college by intelligently interpreting it to the Church, by bringing it to the attention of promising young people who wish special training for the various forms of Christian service, and by contributing to the financial support of the college.

The "depression" has left the idealism of our youth untouched. Multitudes of splendid young people are eager to dedicate their lives to Christian service and to the thorough going preparation required for such service. Serve Scarritt College by directing such young people toward it and by helping make possible their attendance.

There are ways in which every one can contribute to these financial needs. Scarritt associates make personal contributions in keeping with their abilities, ranging from a dollar upwards. They also contribute by bringing the college to the attention of those who can give larger amounts in the form of transfer of property, annuities, bequests etc. Serve Scarritt College by assisting in these various ways in meeting its financial needs.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

Louisiana Conference has accomplished a splendid piece of interracial work this summer by co-operating with the Texas Conference in carrying on a "Leadership Training School for Negroes" at Tyler, Texas. A large number of auxiliaries in this Conference sent Negro leaders from their communities to this school. Mrs. J. N. McDonald, district secretary of the Lake Charles District, says she got a real joy out of arranging for delegates both from Leesville and Lake Charles.

Gertrude Kirk, delegate from Leesville, writes to Mrs. McDonald from Tyler as follows: "What a joy it is to sit and listen to Mrs. Williams Cleveland as she teaches the organization and administration of missionary work. She is vice-president of the National Council of Colored women and is wonderfully loved by both White and Black. Mrs. Davis is just wonderful in her teaching of Christian Social Relations. I do think that every student will leave here full of inspiration, information and aspirations. How we do love the White women of the M. E. Church, South for this wonderful movement. May God ever bless you and the M. E. Church, South."

It is hoped that this training school will be an annual event and that every society in Louisiana will find a way to send a Negro delegate next year. What finer interracial work can be done than to help these colored friends of ours to help themselves. They are indeed an appreciative people.

September 12 and 13 will be red letter days for the New Orleans District. On the morning of the 12th a "Coaching Day" for Bible and Mission Study Leaders will be conducted by Mrs. S. M. ### RESOLUTIONS OF REGRET Possibly were it not for the thoughts of separation, many of us would, for the time being, fail to fully appreciate the character and worth of those with whom we have been associated.

This fact has been forcibly brought to our attention by the act of our great Church which now makes it impossible for a presiding elder to serve more than four years without first returning to the pastorate.

This act brings us the realization that we of the Columbus District and more particularly the Macon charge, are about to lose a man who has so excellently filled that place, and we are brought face to face with the fact that his going will furnish a great void that will be hard to fill.

With a full understanding of the meaning of the word great, we wish to say that we consider Dr. V. C. Curtis a great man. Great in character, great in ability, and great in piety.

Truly he is a man who serves the Lord. He has labored with us, and for us, and now at this time we humbly wish to express our appreciation for him and his services; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, of the Macon M. E. Church, South, do resolve that we greatly regret the necessity of his removal, but we bow to rules of our great Church. We wish him God's speed in his new work, and we wish for him the success that is sure to follow.

Resolved, That Dr. Curtis be presented with a copy of these resolutions, a copy be sent to our bishop, and one retained for our files.

E. F. HARDIN,
W. M. LAMBERSON,
Committee.

HOME-COMING DAY AT HOLLY GROVE

Saturday, September 14, the Holly Grove Methodist Church, Hornbeck charge, in the Louisiana Conference, will observe a great Home-coming Day. It is the occasion of the one hundredth anniversary of that church, and a historical program is being prepared. The bishop has been invited to preach at eleven o'clock. All former pastors of this church are hereby invited to be present, as well as former members. A basket dinner will be served on the beautiful and historic church grounds.

G. H. CORRY, Pastor.

BROOKLYN AND BOND CHARGE

A very interesting and helpful all-day layman's program for the Brooklyn and Bond charge was rendered at Brooklyn August 30, 1935.

A most excellent Daily Vacation Bible School closed at the Methodist Church in Brooklyn August 30, 1935. Diplomas were granted to forty-two.

Each church on the charge has held a revival this year. The attendance at each meeting was real good, and much interest manifested. The preaching was very ably cared for by Revs. C. C. Clark, Van R. Landrum, W. J. Ferguson and W. C. M. Baggett.

and H. F. Brooks for the purpose of holding institutes to help secure full payments on benevolences.

The meeting of the Northern group of pastors of the Brookhaven District will meet at Bethesda church Thursday, September 19. A full-day program including two sermons and covering the various interests of the church has been prepared, with luncheon to be served by the host church into the bargain.

Rev. R. L. Lane, pastor on Carrierre charge, reported benevolent apportionment, including District Work, paid in full. This is an increase of more than 100 per cent over the payments of last year, and he has the fourth quarter to go. This is a great record.

Rev. J. O. Hanes, one of the General Evangelists, is assisting Rev. R. H. Clegg in a two weeks revival campaign at Hazlehurst, Miss. Rev. Frank E. Dement, of Meridian, is leading the singing. Brother Clegg reports good congregations and increasing interest in the meeting which will run through September 15.

Rev. F. J. McCoy and his people are rejoicing over the fact that Keener Memorial Church, Baton Rouge, was remembered in the will of Mrs. Christian Keener who died a few weeks ago. The $2,000 bequeathed to the church will do a great deal toward saving that valuable property in the very heart of Louisiana's capital city.

According to announcement from Millsaps College, Miss Eunice Durham, Jackson, has been awarded the Tribblett scholarship, and Purser Sturgeon and James Ferguson the Trevelli Fund scholarships. The list of student assistants for the next year are: Caxton Doggett, Dorothy Boyles, Gilcin Meadors, Harold Stacy, H. V. Allen, Jr., Wyatt Clowe, James Lauderdale, William H. Parker, Tommie Ross, Aubrey Maxted, Evelyn Clark, G. C. Clark, Jr., W. B. Glover, and Lola Davis. Others assigned to various places are: Victor Roby, William Wofford, Jean Kinnaid, Melba Sherman, Sophia Grittman, Martha Suydam, Dorothy Strahan, Winnie Buckles, Jack Bowen, Earlino Johnson, Lillian Jo Colson, Otis Bufkin, and Malcolm Pigford.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 15.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

TIMOTHY (A CHRISTIAN WORKER IN TRAINING)

Paul's Epistle to Timothy, his last and tenderest, is a personal note to a dear young friend, written a few months before the fall of Nero's ax which sealed his lips but caused not even an interlude in his work which still goes on. The two had met some fifteen or eighteen years before, probably on Paul's first missionary journey. On his second journey he visited Lystra and supposedly ordained Timothy, who was ever afterward his best beloved friend, accompanying his chief in his travels and going as his representative to Ephesus. At the time of this Epistle, the days are dark for Christians, especially for the young man who has so largely relied upon and been directed by Paul. The letter was written to give courage and inspiration to a timid, but loyal and faithful disciple. Timothy was good, though not great. That he remained true to the faith and shared in the persecution and suffering that came to his master is disclosed by mention of his release from prison in Hebrews.

The training of Timothy had its origin two generations back in his godly grandmother, was advanced by his own mother, and a graduate course added under the guidance of Paul. Faith under such instruction would be both "unfeigned"—sincere—and reasoned. That faith had not lapsed, but it was perhaps cooled by advancing years, as well as by his natural shrinking from the place of leadership into which he was about to be thrust by the imminent passing of Paul, and by the fearful persecutions which made all effort seem so futile. This faith Paul exhorts him to "stir up"—rekindle, an exhortation needed by at least fifty per cent of mature ministers and Christian workers today. Timothy had a great family heritage; he must live up to it. Holy hands had been laid on his head; a holy life must vindicate and crown that day of separation from the world. His own personality must be developed; neither parents nor apostles can make a man complete without his own efforts.

Most of all, his conduct was to be fashioned by the God he worshiped. That God made no man a coward—gave none "a spirit of fear; but of power, love and healthy-mindedness." It would be a shame to be ashamed of such a God, especially since his purpose and grace have been set forth by Jesus Christ. "Fear?" Fear what? Death? Why, Jesus "abolished death"—subdued it, conquered it! It is existent, but not potent. It has lost its sting. The light of life and immortality have dissipated its shadows and scattered its gloom. How could any man appointed to preach such a gospel be cast down, even by suffering or imprisonment? With triumphant courage, Paul declares his own faith, now blended into knowledge—"I know whom I have believed"—trusted—and "he is able to keep that trust."

So passed the torch! Happy the leader who can pass it to such a son. Happy the son receiving it from such a leader. So the gospel goes on. Carried only by the compulsion of conviction it has spanned these two thousand years. Old men teach; young men learn. Blessings come to both as they are associated in this glorious fellowship. Ours is a gospel for difficult days. Depressions elevate it; persecutions disseminate it; prisons broadcast it. It specializes in chaos. An upside-down world is its opportunity. Not the sword of Nero in the palace, but the pen of Paul in prison fashioned the future of the world.

TO PASTORS, PARENTS, AND FRIENDS OF STUDENTS IN LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY

Young people from your homes and from your church will be leaving soon for the university. Their happiness and welfare during this year and in the future depend in large measure upon the associations and habits which they will form during these opening weeks. You are interested in helping them. I shall suggest five simple but probably significant things which you may do.

1. Send to me before their arrival if possible detailed information about each student, his ability, interests, and experience.
2. Invite each student to come to the Methodist Student Center on the campus upon his arrival and to participate regularly in the fellowship and varied program provided there.
3. Remind them that university credit courses in religion are being offered by the Wesley Foundation both for freshmen and for advanced students, and advise them to register for these courses.
4. Suggest to each some of the values in regular participation and a continued allegiance to the church services and the church school.
5. Keep in close personal touch with each student and let him know that you are interested in all that he is doing through the Wesley Foundation on the campus and at the church.

A much larger Methodist Student Center located at the very heart of the campus and with greatly improved facilities will make possible a marked expansion of the Wesley Foundation program for

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Ps. 72:20—The prayers of David, the son of Jesse, are ended.

In the book of Psalms we find many of David's prayers. They were inspired. He expressed every human emotion. He expressed thankfulness and sorrow, despair and hope, love and faith.

In the Psalm of our meditation, David is concerned for his son, Solomon, who is soon to sit upon the throne. He begins: "Give the king Thy judgements, O God, and Thy righteousness unto the king's son," (vs. 1). But very soon he sees beyond Solomon that greater Son of David whose dominion will be forever and ever. "Blessed be His glorious name forever and let the whole earth be filled with His glory. Amen and amen." (vs. 19). Thus closes David's prayer. The scribe adds, "The prayers of David, the son of Jesse, are ended." (vs. 20).

In one sense, David's prayers were ended. David would lead the temple services no more. The nation wept at his funeral. The people would hear his voice no more. The physical voice would offer no more prayers because his heart had ceased to beat.

But the scribe was referring only to his physical voice. For we know the prayers of David went on. They are still blessing the world. When Mary, the mother of Jesus, offered her prayer of jubilation, she echoed the 34th Psalm. The 31st Psalm sustained Savonarola in the face of martyrdom, "In Thee, O Lord, do I put my trust." Multitudes of Christians have found comfort and inspiration as they have found themselves side by side with David in the cavern of Adullam or on the cliffs of Engedi or beyond the Jordan, escaping their Saul or Absalom, the Philistines or Assyrians.

The prayers of David continue their beneficent influence. Rev. 5:8: "And when He had taken the book, the four beasts and the four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials of odors, which are THE PRAYERS OF SAINTS." The prayers of saints are preserved to be offered as perpetual oblations before the throne of God.

Let us pray on with the assurance that our prayers go on forever. "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of."

PRAYER

Our Father, we thank Thee that there is power in God through fellowship with God. Strengthened by prayer, we would enter the daily work of life. May Thy will be wrought in and through us. We would pray without ceasing. We offer ourselves to Thee in Jesus' name.

FROM SUMRALL, MISS.

A vacation school for children closed a very successful session Friday, August 3, with an enrollment of thirty-five. The school was under the capable supervision of the pastor, Rev. L. M. Reeves, assisted by Mrs. J. S. Temple, Mrs. R. R. Hudson, Mrs. W. B. Henslee, teachers; Misses Mildred Waits and Dorothy Campbell, pianists; Rev. Eual Samples, playground director.

The workers in this vacation school have accomplished some very specific things, such as interest and greater appreciation of children of other races, a desire to be of service in the community, and sharing their knowledge of Jesus with others. They learned habits of self-control and the secret of making this a happier world.

The program on the closing day consisted of stories, songs, and poems.

The vacation school has greatly stimulated and enriched both the lives of the children and the workers. The final closing was marked by a picnic.

Plans for a school next year have already been discussed.

FROM BENTON CHARGE

The Benton charge is doing a fine work this year. We accepted the apportionment on benevolences given us by the district stewards. We have paid half of it and the balance will be paid in full by Annual Conference along with all other askings of the Church.

We have installed new opera seats in the Benton church at a cost of $500.00.

We have held three good revival meetings assisted by Revs. B. L. Sutherland and M. K. Miller. The pastor did the preaching at the third meeting. Several members were received, seven on profession of faith.

We are serving these fine people our fourth year and they are and have been very kind indeed.

A PROMINENT LAYMAN PASSES

Mr. Wallace W. Godbold was born March 3, 1857. At the age of thirteen he united with the Methodist Church, thus being one of the charter members of the Caseyville Methodist Church.

On July 23, 1877, he married Miss Nannie Davis. God blessed that happy union with nine children; four boys and five girls, all of which are still living except Vera, a little girl who died at the tender age of three.

Beside the immediate family there are two brothers, eighteen grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

He was not a man of many words but of deeds. As a neighbor he was always willing and ready to help those in need.

As a church member he was always faithful to every task assigned him, and they were many. His interest in church affairs did not stop with his local church but throughout the district and on to the Annual Conference.

Those who are familiar with the faces who have appeared in our Annual Conferences during the past fifty years will recall with pleasure the face of this faithful saint of God.

In the early morning of August 15, 1935, he was called to be with God.

Funeral services were held under the tabernacle of the Caseyville camp ground. The camp which he was largely responsible for its building and maintenance.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. B. F. Jones, J. L. Carter and J. A. Wells.

MRS. LELIA VIRGINIA HOPE

Mrs. Lelia Virginia Hope, wife of Dr. C. L. Hope, was born near Bastrop, La., Morehouse Parish, November 22, 1863, and departed this life at her home in Oak Ridge, La., August 10, 1935, being 71 years, 8 months and 17 days old when she was translated from earth to her heavenly home above.

She was a daughter of Elam J. and Mrs. Annie R. (Hendrick) Hope, and lived her entire life in the parish where she was born. On November 25 she was happily married to Dr. C. L. Hope, to which union were born three children—two sons, Charles Elam, Nuell, and one daughter, Mrs. H. J. (Gladys) Norris. She also leaves four grandchildren beside other relatives and a host of friends. Aside from the public schools of her day she attended Mary Baldwin College of Staunton, Va.

Many years ago she was converted and united with the Methodist Church under the pastorate of Rev. D. C. Barr, and during the forty or more years that she lived in Oak Ridge she was a useful and consistent member of the church, and always stood for God and righteousness. Sister Hope possessed those characteristics that go to make one truly great, always identified with the constructive forces of the community. For many years she served as Sunday school superintendent and was active in the Missionary Society. She was a leader of recognized ability not only in the church but in society; kind and considerate in the home, and was known and recognized as one who stood in the forefront for everything that makes for the betterment of mankind. She was a consistent friend and a liberal supporter of the Methodist Orphanage; and was always faithful and true to her church and her pastor. Her home was the preachers' home. She was cheerful and optimistic even up to the last moment of her useful life. It was a real joy to be in her home and an inspiration to be in her presence. Her name was "as the ointment poured forth." She enjoyed the blessed hope of life immortal while pursuing her journey to the land of fadeless light and everlasting joy.

The world was made better for Sister Hope's having lived in it more than "three score years and ten." Sunshine and happiness radiated from her beautiful Christian character.

She was unselfish, living for others; counting it a joy to labor and even suffer for the advancement of her Master's kingdom.

I first knew Sister Hope as her pastor twenty-three years ago, and it was my happy privilege to be her pastor again the last few months of her life. In all my ministry I have never known one who surpassed her in constant devotion and faithful loyalty to duty. Truly she possessed those rare virtues which make human character a shining light in the world. Her life was victorious, the setting of the sun was glorious. She has a home with the "spirits of just men made perfect." We shall meet her "In the

MARBLE TABLET ON BRICK WALL TO MARK SITE OF COKEBURY CHAPEL, NATCHEZ, 1807.

By Rev. H. G. Hawkins, D.D.

The Jubilee Circle, a young women's branch of the Woman's Missionary Society of Natchez, has turned over to the Mississippi Conference Historical Society the amount necessary for erecting in the brick front of a building at the corner of Franklin and Locust streets, Natchez, a marble tablet, with inscription as follows:

Cokesbury Chapel, Earliest Methodist Church in Natchez, Erected 1807.

Launer Blackman—Presiding Elder
Caleb W. Cloud—Preacher in charge
Trustees: Launer Blackman, Newit Vick, Reuben Gibson, William Foster, Philip Gortall, David Lattimore.

This Tablet Erected by Jubilee Circle of Jefferson St. W. M. S., for Mississippi Conference Historical Society, 1935.

Launer Blackman was the first presiding elder in fact in Mississippi. Newit Vick lived at the time in Jefferson county, near where Fayette now is. His name and those of others from other communities than Natchez, indicate the connection, or more than local, interest in the building of a church at Natchez in 1807.

Quite probably Lorenzo Dow held services in this building, as also John Johnson, Miles Harper, John Lane.

Vol. 82—No. 38.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1935.

Whole No. 4149.

Summit Church Dedication

BISHOP HOYT M. DOBBS will dedicate the Summit Methodist Church, Summit, Miss., on Sunday, September 29, 1935, at 11 a. m.

This beautiful brick structure was built in 1928 at a cost of about $14,000, taking the place of a frame building of the far distant past. In 1933 and 1934 we paid a debt on the church of $3,000. In the first part of this year we spent $600 on repairs of the church. The overhead plaster began falling which made it unsafe for use, and we finished knocking it down and put ceiling overhead. We think it is more beautiful now than it was at first with the plaster. We are very proud of our church building and more than happy over the fact that we are once more out of debt.

The membership of this church is small, but most of them are faithful members, ready to do their part in order that the church may carry on and develop and grow. We are expecting greater things in the future from this little band of faithful Methodists because they have built this magnificent church and now have it paid for.

We are expecting a great day on Sunday, September 29, when Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs will dedicate the church. We extend to all former pastors an invitation to be present at the dedicatory service.

Rev. C. W. Wesley is the pastor and Dr. C. W. Crisler is the presiding elder.

Wallet of the Week

NATION-WORSHIP is a phrase which the author of The Ghost of Caesar Walks has coined to indicate the new nationalism which is pushing the secularism of the past few years aside, by asserting dominion over the motives, loyalties and lives of men. In the opinion of the writer, the scientific appeal of the first three decades of the twentieth century is being supplanted by a new dogma of political right. Certainly Russia, Germany and Italy offer sufficient reason for the feeling that life is swinging toward such a standard of loyalty and allegiance.

"CANDIDATE FOR BISHOPRIC." Believe it or not, such was the line under a cut carried by an exchange which came to our desk this week. In forthright fashion, the aspirant plead his case. He names his personal achievements, a clean record, unimpeachable integrity, his being married, a fine wife and little daughter as reasons for considering his claim. It was not a white church, but it may be questioned if the practice is so much different, after all, except in its brutal frankness.

THE NEW YEAR BOOK OF THE UNITED CHURCH of Canada places the total membership of the Church at 686,253. The Church School enrollment is nearly equal to the total membership of the Church. On the question as to the ordination of women, 79 presbyteries voted favorably and 26 unfavorably. An unfavorable indication was the fact that the Finance Committee of the Church felt compelled to make a $75,000 reduction in the general budget of the Church, and a further item showing the embarrassment of the program of the Church was the interest charge of $96,500 carried for the various funds.

A BEAUTIFUL PERSIAN RUG, it is said, is made by a man who works from the wrong side of the carpet. The rug is fixed in a vertical position and little boys seated in front of what is to be the right side of the rug aid in the execution of the design by applying the colors according to the instruction of the maker. If the boys make a mistake in applying the colors, as sometimes happens, it is said that the weaver does not destroy the work, but that he frequently adopts the mistake and makes it a part of his color scheme and design. That story may be more fable than fact, but it beautifully illustrates the genius, the patience and the forbearance of the great Weaver of Life. He took the "Sons of Thunder," the impetuous fisherman, and the grasping tax-gatherer and made them his co-workers in the building of a kingdom of righteousness and truth.

MOODY INSTITUTE, CHICAGO, plans to celebrate the centenary of the birth of its founder in 1937. D. L. Moody was born at Northfield, Mass., on February 5, 1837, and it is the plan to celebrate this notable event throughout the year 1937. Beginning with the Founder's Week Conference in February, throughout the year Bible conferences and other gatherings will be held in churches and schools in metropolitan centers and elsewhere, stressing the great values for which Moody stood—evangelism and Bible study.

THE NATIONAL SAFETY COUNCIL Report, for the first six months of this year shows that 15,030 people have been killed on the highways of the United States. Three people are killed every hour and we call ourselves civilized. Some cities have inaugurated "safety first" campaigns, but it is alleged that the record shows a decrease of only 370 from the previous year's deaths. The great number of American automobiles and the unrestricted, unrestrained and even encouraged use of liquor are both recorded in a casualty list that sounds like the report of a battle.

PHILIP III, SURNAMED "THE HARDY," was the son of Louis IX. (St. Louis) of France, and succeeded to the throne when he was only twenty-five years of age. He was with his father when the latter died of the plague at the siege of Tunis, and was at once proclaimed king. He continued the war against the Moors in Africa, until, with the assistance of his uncle, Charles of Anjou, he had reduced the King of Tunis to submission. He then returned to France, bearing in his train five coffins, those of his father, his wife, his son, his brother, and his brother-in-law. Philip reigned fifteen years, and in that time the only important event was what is known in history as "The Massacre of the Sicilian Vespers."

MR. MUSSOLINI, according to Town and Country, London, said some years ago: "We are hungry for land, because we are prolific and intend to remain so." Italy's desire to expand is founded on her rapidly increasing population, her comparative poverty in raw materials, and her desire for new, safe markets for her trade. Within the last four years her population has increased by nearly two millions to forty-three millions, and by 1950 it is predicted that it will reach fifty millions. The same journal says also that Mussolini is determined on his project, and Emperor Haile Selassie is equally determined not to submit his country to any military control whatsoever.

THE BENEVOLENCES

A report sent out by the General Board of Lay Activities sets before our people a concrete picture of the entire benevolent situation in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. In only one Conference in the entire connection, the Texas-Mexican Mission, has the total askings for General work been accepted by the quarterly conferences. The total askings in that case was $2,448. The report shows that twenty-two Conferences accepted the total askings, and sixteen reduced the askings. In only the Texas-Mexican Mission was the Annual Conference acceptance ratified by the quarterly conferences; and the record for the entire Church was that only 61.9 per cent of the askings for General work was accepted by the quarterly conferences. If the entire amount accepted should be paid, it would mean an increase over the revenues of the previous year, of $91,064.97. If, on the other hand, only 90 per cent of what has been accepted should be paid, it would mean a net decrease of $32,251.91 in the revenues for General work. These simple comparisons are sufficient to show the peril which confronts the Church, if the present financial policy should fail. The future of every general interest of the Church depends upon the loyalty of every circuit and station, and we must discharge the obligations which we have underwritten. We can not afford to do less, unless we are willing to allow the benevolent enterprises of Methodism to suffer. We cannot fail the Church in this crucial time without a betrayal of its confidence in our loyalty to its program and work. Every interest of the Church, General or Conference, is in our keeping as it has never been before, and we must not fail. The quarterly conferences of Mississippi, North Mississippi, and Louisiana accepted 57.6 per cent of the askings. If we meet our obligation, it will mean that for General work we must raise $20,660.67 more than was raised for that purpose by these same Conferences last year. We must pay our pledge, and we should begin now a cultivation looking to a safer margin and a better support of our benevolent causes.

SIGN AND RETURN

We have just received a communication from a New York source which includes a reply postal card on which is written the following authorization: "This will authorize you to use my name in connection with the statement sent to me." The statement relates to the anti-Semitic disturbances in Germany. We are opposed to every variety of persecution and intolerance, but we are equally opposed to allowing any person or group to interpret our mind in such an important matter. And we are the less inclined to do so in this case because it involves the Church as well as the individual. We will refuse to give any person or cause a power of attorney for the use of our name and the prestige which it may carry. Our ministers should consider what such action might lead to. One may lend his own name, but he has no right to permit its association, by title or otherwise, with the Church which he represents.

RUM ROW

The reality of Rum Row, notwithstanding the legalizing of liquor, is in evidence again. The public was promised that the legalizing of liquor would not be followed by the open saloon, it would abolish crime, exterminate the rum runner, save the total cost of Prohibition enforcement and hasten the millennium of public morality. The facts of no situation or condition ever more completely belied such promises and assurances. The very children on their way to school are daily assaulted by crude signs advertising cut-price liquor due to a rum war, saloons and worse are everywhere, drug stores have become booze dispensaries, grog shops in department stores are catering mainly to women, and now it is proposed to extend the twelve-mile limit to fifty miles for vessels of American registry, suspected of being in the rum business. Why such a work of supererogation? The pure-souled liquor business can do no harm, surely. Every right thinking person should put his finger down on these evidences of the wretched betrayal of the social and moral interests of the American people, and when the time comes to vote it should be made a day of moral reckoning. We are against liquor.

DISTANCE AND IDEALISM

The Methodist year furnishes a strange contrast in Methodist attitudes. We approach Easter with the superb idealism of the spring time, the summer slows up our pace, and when the fall arrives it finds our leaders confirmed conservatives. One wonders if the distance of the spring from the day of reckoning does not have something to do with our assurance in the earlier part of the year, and if the stern realities of the approaching Conference does not really tend to cause us to discount unreasonably the possibilities of our people. But, be that as it may, we all have learned that it is a short-sighted leadership that waits until the end of the Church year is just around the corner, to prepare for the answer that is expected for the year of grace and blessing through which we have passed. True idealism is not related to distance in any sense, it is a matter of faith and consecration. But it is nevertheless true that a good start is a tremendous reinforcement to faith, and an early attack upon the task of the year helps our consecration to weather the equinoctial gales of conservatism which are sure to come. Storm warnings serve a worthy purpose, no doubt, but a berth in a well-sheltered harbor is far better than a warning of approaching danger. No time should be lost in rounding out the work of our Conference year. The sands are already running low, and every interest of the Kingdom waits upon the answer which shall be returned by the charges that make up our Church. It may seem to you and me that ours is an insignificant part in the total report of Methodism, but that report will be a summing up of the achievements of units just like the one which we represent. Every preacher's report is vital to the success and progress of the Church. There is an optimism pervading the ranks of Methodism throughout the South, because of what was done in the earlier part of the year. No pastor should lose sight of that. He may be moved to a new charge, but he should lay the foundation for a new year's organization and work, that the inspiration of our success may be capitalized in still larger achievements.

EXPLOITS IN TEXAS

I kept in company with the parson until we arrived at Greenville, and I do say, he was just about as pleasant an old gentleman to travel with, as any man who wasn't too darned particular could ask for. We talked about politics, religion, and nature, farming, and bear hunting, and the many blessings that an all-bountiful Providence has bestowed upon our happy country. He continued to talk upon this subject, traveling over the whole ground as it were, until his imagination glowed, and his soul became full to overflowing; and he checked his horse, and I stopped mine also, and a stream of eloquence burst forth from his aged lips, such as I have seldom listened to; it came from the overflowing fountain of a pure and grateful heart. We were alone in the wilderness, but as he proceeded, it seemed to me as if the tall trees bent their tops to listen—that the mountain stream laughed out joyfully as it bounded on like some living thing; that the fading flowers of autumn smiled, and sent forth fresher fragrance, as if conscious that they would revive in spring, and even the sterile rocks seemed to be endued with some mysterious influence. We were alone in the wilderness, but all things told me that God was there. The thought renewed my strength and courage. I had left my country, felt somewhat like an outcast, believed that I had been neglected and lost sight of; but I was now conscious that there was still one watchful Eye over me; no matter whether I dwelt in the populous cities, or threaded the pathless forest alone; no matter whether I stood in the high places among men, or made my solitary lair in the untrodden wild, that Eye was still upon me. My very soul leaped joyfully at the thought; I never felt so grateful in all my life; I never loved my God so sincerely in all my life. I felt that I still had a friend.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF DAVID CROCKETT.

EDITOR McTYEIRE

"A New Extinguisher.—A steam fire engine manufactured in Cincinnati, was received by the city Friday. On Wednesday night it paid for itself ten times over. A fire broke out in the Verandah. This beautiful hotel was consumed, but the valuable surrounding property protected. The new pattern is costly, but does the work of a dozen of the old. What is better, it will ultimately lead to the disbanding of fire companies, a fruitful source of immorality."—N. O. Christian Advocate, July 21, 1855.

"KITTY'S COTTAGE"

By Bishop W. A. Candler

No man was ever criticized more for his goodness and persecuted for his kindness than was Bishop James Osgood Andrew.

He was especially tender in his dealings with the poor and his treatment of the Negroes.

Nevertheless, he was painfully censured and unjustly dealt with by the General Conference of 1844, where he was practically deposed for having in his possession slaves which he did not purchase and could not under the laws of Georgia emancipate.

In truth, Bishop Andrew never purchased the slaves, and never had any slaves in his possession except a few who came to him as legacies; and they were left to him on account of his well-known tenderness to the Negroes.

Among these was a girl named Kitty, who was willed to him by Mrs. Power, of Augusta, Ga., on condition that he bring up and educate Kitty as far as he could; and when she reached the age of nineteen she was to be free to go to Liberia or remain with the Bishop as a slave.

Kitty was a model girl, brought up by a Mistress who loved her and watched over by a Master who felt the tenderest solicitude for her welfare. Under these conditions she grew up to be a pure and good woman. She married a colored man named Nathan, and Bishop Andrew had erected on his own lot a neat little cottage for her.

Before the death of Mrs. Andrew in 1842, Kitty reached her maturity and the question of what she would choose was submitted to her by Judge Augustus B. Longstreet and Prof. George W. Lane. These two members of the faculty of Emory College were selected by Bishop Andrew to interview Kitty, because he desired that she should not be influenced by his presence.

Judge Longstreet has left in his own handwriting a document of their interview with Kitty which records the results. It is as follows:

"This day, Kitty, a woman of color, left in charge of the Rev. James O. Andrew by the will of Mrs. Power, came before us, when, in the absence of every one but herself and the undersigned, the following conversation occurred:

"A. B. Longstreet—'Kitty, your mistress directed in her will that you should remain with Bishop Andrew until you reached the age of nineteen, when it was to be left to your choice to go to Liberia or remain with the Bishop. The time has now come when you are to make your choice, and you will do well to think seriously of the matter. If you go to Liberia you will be perfectly free, as free as I am now. You will be under the laws, to be sure, just as I am, to prevent you from doing anything very bad, but you will have no master, no mistress; you will be in all respects just like white women in this country; you will have to work for a living, as all must, but what you make will be your own. The climate is not as healthy as this, particularly to persons going there for the first time, but after you get used to it you would probably live as long there as you will here. If you conclude to go the Bishop will send you at his expense. It is a long voyage by water. If you stay with the Bishop he will direct that he is to grant you all the privileges of a free woman that the law will allow, but you will have to depend upon his character for that; and you will still be a slave. Now, think of this matter and make your choice for all time to come. If you have had any stories told you about that country that have alarmed you, disregard them. I have told you the truth so far as I know it. Now, make your choice.'

"Kitty—'I don't want to go to that country. I know nobody there. It is a long ways and I might die before I get there.'

"A. B. Longstreet—'This, then, is your choice?'

"Kitty—'Yes, sir.'

"A. B. Longstreet—'Then I may write it down as your final choice that you remain with Bishop Andrew?'

"Kitty—'Yes, sir. I don't want to go there.'

"We certify that the above is as nearly a literal report of our interview with Kitty as we can make. Not a word was said that could influence her decision which is not here recorded.

"A. B. LONGSTREET,
"GEORGE W. LANE."

Dec. 4, 1841.

Of Kitty, Bishop Andrew exacted no service as a slave; but she rendered such voluntary service as she chose; and she was particularly attentive and tender to Mrs. Andrew during the latter's last illness.

When other nurses were exhausted by watching, and left the bedside of Mrs. Andrew, Kitty still clung to her post, and could with great difficulty be prevailed upon to retire to rest.

"To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the M. E. Church:

"Reverend and Dear Brethren:—The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, at their session in May, 1846, appointed me their delegate to bear to you their Christian salutation, and through me to offer to you the establishment of fraternal relations and intercourse between us, as two legitimate portions of the great Wesleyan family. And as my state of mind must be one of painful suspense until your wish shall be declared, I respectfully ask your earliest attention to the object of my mission,

"Very respectfully yours, in the unity of Wesleyan Methodism.

"L. PIERCE,

Delegate from the M. E. Church, South.

It is not necessary to discuss the refusal of Dr. Pierce as fraternal messenger of the Southern Church, except to say that the reasons for the action were not personal, but were couched in the rather cryptic phrase, "questions and difficulties." Dr. Pierce did not hasten from the seat of the Conference, as some might have done, but he remained sufficiently long to leave it without excuse in the matter, and he sent in a copy of the action of the Conference of the Southern Church in 1846, which had been certified by Bishop Soule, and he accompanied it with the following note:

"Reverend and Dear Brethren:—I have received two extracts from your Journal of the 4th and 5th instant. From these extracts I learn you decline receiving me in my proper character, as the accredited delegate of the M. E. Church, South, and only invite me to a seat within the bar as due me on account of my private and personal merits. These considerations I shall appreciate, and will reciprocate them in all the private and social walks of life. But within the bar of the General Conference I can only be known in my official character.

"You will therefore regard this communication as final on the part of the M. E. Church, South. She can never renew the offer of fraternal relations between the two great bodies of Wesleyan Methodists in the United States. But the proposition can be renewed at any time, either now, or hereafter, by the M. E. Church. And if ever made upon the basis of the Plan of Separation, as adopted by the General Conference of 1844, the Church, South, will cordially entertain the proposition.

"With sentiments of deep regret, and with feelings of disappointed hopes, I am yours, in Christian fellowship,

"L. PIERCE,

"Delegate from the M. E. Church, South."

In 1850 the Bishops, in their address to the General Conference of the Southern Church, said: "At the General Conference held in Pittsburg, in 1848, our Northern friends pursued such a course of action as destroyed all hope on the part of the Southern Church, that she should either be able to obtain justice, or that fraternal relations would be established between the two Connections." The gloomy forebodings of the Bishops as to the prospect for Methodist peace and good will proved to be all too well founded. From the disruption in 1844, to the meeting of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1874, no word of fraternity was exchanged between North and South; and no approach to the matter, following the rejection of Dr. Pierce in 1848, was made until 1869, when the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church sent Bishops Janes and Simpson to confer with the Southern Bishop at St. Louis, on the subject of a reunion of the two great branches of Episcopal Methodism. At that time the estranged sons of Wesley addressed themselves to the healing of the wounds of ecclesiastical conflict, to which the gruesome and gaping wounds of war had been added.

The approach of the Bishops of the Northern Church found a cordial response on the part of the Church, South; but the question of reunion was not to be considered at that time. Dr. Lovick Pierce referred to the visit of Bishops Janes and Simpson as, "A star of hope rising above the gloomy horizon." The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church said in 1865: "The great cause which had led to the separation from us of both the Wesleyan Methodists and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has passed away, and we trust that the day is not far distant when there shall be but one organization, which shall embrace the whole Methodist family in the United States." That statement placed the Church, South, in the same class with the Wesleyan Methodists of New England who simply withdrew, and the South was in no mood to accept such implication. And if Bishops Janes and Simpson imagined that there were no "questions and difficulties" to be adjusted at the South, they were in for a rude awakening when they met the Southern Bishops at St. Louis.

The Southern Bishops made it clear that the question of fraternal relations would have to be taken up where the effort on their part had left it in 1848; and that, "The separation was by compact and mutual, and that nearer approaches to each other can be conducted, with a hope of successful issue, only on this basis." Since Bishops Janes and Simpson were without authority from the General Conference to negotiate with the South, except for reunion, they made no reply to the statement of the Southern Bishops; but in 1870, Bishop Janes and Dr. Harris visited the Southern General Conference at Memphis. Upon that visit, they were rep-

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. C. B. Powell reports a great meeting at Boyce, La., in which he was assisted by Rev. H. W. Cudd. Seven members were added to the membership of the church.

Rev. B. H. Andrews, of New Iberia, La., was in New Orleans last Monday with a friend who was seeking hospital care. Brother Andrews paid the Advocate an appreciated call.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles was a visitor at Winona during the time of the meeting of the presiding elders. He is looking unusually well and we learn that his work is making good headway at First Church, Columbus.

Rev. Bruner M. Hunt, pastor at Capitol Street, Jackson, is having a great year in that church. His people have recently redecorated and renovated the parsonage, and Brother Hunt is in great favor with his people.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, lay leader of the Mississippi Conference, is energetically pressing the work of his office, notwithstanding the duties which devolve upon him as the head of a department at Millsaps College.

The editor acknowledges the receipt of an advance copy of the new Methodist Hymnal which comes with the compliments of the publishers. We shall give our readers an appraisal of its merits at the earliest possible moment.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs held the fall cabinet meetings for the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences last week. We understand that the outlook is encouraging in both Conferences, though we have no details of the reports.

A correspondent sends an account of the marriage of Mrs. W. W. Nicholson and Mr. W. M. Baker. Mrs. Nicholson was of Good Pine and Mr. Baker of Jena, La. The ceremony was performed at the parsonage in Gueydan, by Rev. A. S. J. Neill.

Rev. A. A. McKnight, Angie, La., writes, "Everything points now toward the closing of the best year we have had on the Angie charge. For the first time in its history, we believe that we will be able to say at Conference, 'Everything in full.'"

We chanced to meet Rev. Paul H. Grice on the train, as he was returning from Memphis last week. He is happy and hopeful regarding the work at Gloster, notwithstanding the disastrous storm which destroyed a considerable part of the town in the early part of the year.

Rev. and Mrs. L. C. Wilson, of Alco, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Alice, to Mr. Walter H. Tietjen, on Thursday, September 5. The marriage was celebrated in the Methodist Church at Mer Rouge, by the father of the bride, who was assisted by Rev. J. A. McCormack, the pastor.

Rev. J. A. George, pastor at Louisville, Miss., writes us a much appreciated note. He says: "I am thoroughly convinced that any church can exceed its quota for our paper when the pastor gets it on his heart and takes it up with his people in earnest." Brother George speaks out of his own experience.

Mrs. T. B. Holloman, widow of the late T. B. Holloman of the Mississippi Conference, has been named house-mother of the freshman dormitory at Millsaps College. The next session will begin next week instead of at the time originally planned. The slight delay was caused by the government school for the training of teachers of adults, which has just closed.

Rev. G. A. La Grange reports a revival at Oak Grove, on the Marksville charge, in which seventeen members were added to the church membership. The pastor did his own preaching, and he has received a total of forty members this year, paid one-half of the benevolent apportionment, and the parsonage has been renovated from cellar to roof with the bills paid in full.

An event of interest throughout this section is the announcement that Bishop A. Frank Smith will assist Dr. J. Richard Spann in a meeting at First Church, Baton Rouge, La., beginning September 29 and continuing through October 6. This announcement was sent in some days ago, but through some mischance it was misplaced and its insertion overlooked.

Rev. F. L. Applewhite reports a series of gracious revivals on the Wesson, Miss., charge. He was assisted by Rev. Seth Granberry and Rev. G. E. Allan. Some time in October, the date to be determined, Brother Applewhite expects to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the erection of the present church building. All former pastors will be invited to attend the celebration.

SIDELIGHTS OF THE GREENWOOD DISTRICT

By M. H. McCormack, Jr.,
District Reporter

Dr. Jno. H. Hicks of Southern Methodist University, who is working in our district in the Standard Training School at Greenwood and in the several Christian Education Institutes throughout the district, is making a profound impression upon our people. It is not often that we have the privilege of studying under such an outstanding authority on the Bible.

In his course on the "Prophets of Israel" he makes real and vivid the social, political, and religious background of the prophets, and this makes it easy to catch the full color and significance of their heart-searching messages.

He has brought us to see that the contribution the Hebrew prophets have to make to us is not so much their teachings as their passion and spirit. The messages of the prophets are great, and it is impossible to understand them apart from the times in which they lived and the conditions which confronted them and the people with whom they dealt. But once you get this background, you can feel the pulsating vitality and the throbbing passion in the breasts of these rugged pioneers from the hills of Judea and the cities of Canaan. How much they had in common with the impassioned Carpenter of Nazareth, and with all those heroes of the faith, down through the cen-

CLAIBORNE CHURCH CELEBRATES

Dear Editor: Please publish the following: Claiborne Church, near West Monroe, La., will celebrate its 15th anniversary of its organization with a home coming day the 5th Sunday in September. All former pastors are invited to be present. This will be at the close of a week's revival.

H. W. LEDBETTER, Pastor.

FROM GRENADA, MISS.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, pastor-evangelist, par excellence, has "captured" all Grenada that is hearing him, and capacity congregations are doing that very thing in a series of revival sermons. He began last Sunday. The meeting will continue indefinitely. In my whole ministry I have not worked with a more delightful and effective leader. It now looks like "the old time religion." All ages, all denominations, and members of no church are hearing him. More, they are responding to his earnest calls.

Hope to see you at the meeting of the Publishing Committee October 10. Your Advocate Editor is winning "golden opinions" in this section. "May his bow abide in strength."

JAMES H. FELTS.

FROM HARPERVILLE, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: We hope we are doing something more than just "marking time." Our special revival services have all been held and we feel that good was accomplished in these services although the visible results are not just what we would like to have seen.

Beginning at Mt. Zion Church we were

Could See Cardui

Was Helping Her

From the First

"I have found Cardui a great help to me," writes Mrs. G. W. Bennett, of Biloxi, Miss. "During change of life, I was weak, nervous and run-down. I knew I must do something or get down in bed, for I was just dragging about. When I first began to take Cardui, I could see it was helping me. By the time I had taken five bottles of Cardui, there was a great difference in my condition. I was so pleased with Cardui I wanted others to try it." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

ably assisted by our beloved presiding elder, Dr. B. L. Sutherland, who did the preaching and it was well done and we feel the membership of the church was wonderfully blessed by his messages. Just a month after this meeting Brother Sutherland was with us again at Mt. Zion for a Saturday appointment, preaching at 11 a.m., after which the ladies served a bounteous lunch on the church lawn, and then he held the third quarterly conference, the reports being encouraging in many ways while the finances of the charge were considerably behind.

Mt. Zion Church reported its quota on benevolences paid in full.

Our next meeting was with Oak Grove Church where the pastor did his own preaching and we feel that the membership was revived here if we are to judge

REV. C. W. CRISLER, D.D.,
Presiding Elder, Brookhaven District, who will assist in the dedication services of the Summit Church by the expressions made by the people. Following this meeting we dropped down to Hillsboro, and here we were assisted by our local preacher, Brother Guy Sigrest, who was reared at Hillsboro and the people all love him and have confidence in him. Here in his boyhood town and church he did some unusually good preaching for a man who has been licensed only three years. Brother Sigrest is connected with the Smith-Hughes School at Harpersville, and is next door neighbor to the pastor and no pastor ever had better and more thoughtful neighbors than he and his good wife. We hope before many years to see him in the ranks of the Annual Conference serving a regular charge.

Our last meeting was with the Harpersville Church where we were assisted by Dr. Joseph A. Smith, presiding elder of the Meridian District. Those who have heard Dr. Smith do not need to be told of the type of sermons he preached. There were two outstanding features of his preaching which impressed me. One was, no matter what his subject was nor if his text was in the Old or New Testament, he would always reach his climax by placing Jesus Christ at the very center of Christian experience and living. The other feature of his preaching was taking the fundamentals of the gospel and fitting them into present day conditions and applying them to modern living. Dr. Smith is a Christian gentleman and a great preacher. As to the additions to the church, we find by our records that we have had on profession of faith eight accessions, and one by certificate.

We now turn our faces toward Conference at Laurel and are on the home stretch for much better reports made at Hattiesburg last year.

F. B. ORMOND, Pastor.

PURVIS, MISS.

August the 25th, we closed our vacation school for the Purvis church. The program put on by the teachers and pupils gave great satisfaction and inspired our congregations to begin this early to talk about a much better school for next year.

Last Sunday, the first Sunday in September, was a great day for our church. We celebrated the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in a fine spirit and attendance, and received twelve members into the church. Some of this number are the new teachers coming into our city schools, who are taking their places as teachers and leaders in the various departments of the local church.

Monday evening the local board of the Church School met to plan and arrange for the new year. This should have been done earlier but we knew when time arrived for our young folks to go to college and our teachers had to go take charge of their school jobs we would have to rearrange and adjust the situation. Wednesday evening we had a special meeting of the board of stewards to plan and inspire our board and congregation for the winding up of the year's work.

Plans were made earlier in the year by the Missionary Society to make needed improvements on the parsonage, which improvements have been completed. The pastor and his wife are much pleased and are very thankful for the comfort and convenience of this addition to the home.

Plans are well advanced to make improvements on the two rural churches connected with the Purvis charge. When this improvement is completed these churches will hold a stronger place in the community life and convince the people that we are here to stay and are in business for the kingdom.

One thing very worthy of mention is that Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, superannuate member of the North Alabama Conference, has moved into the city of Purvis, to become a citizen of Lamar County and Purvis community. Formerly he was a member of this Conference and served for several years on various charges. He determined to seek further qualifications to serve in the ministry and attended college at Conway, Ark. He served several stations in the Arkansas Conference and finally transferred to his home State and home Conference, the North Alabama. Because of illness he accepted the superannuate relation and has lived at Guin, Ala. He has so fully recovered that you would never suspicion that he was ever in that relation. A man of fine spirit, evangelistic in spirit, and good help in revival meetings. I count it a privilege to be associated with him, to have him as my companion and fellow

REV. C. W. WESLEY,
Pastor of Summit, Miss., Methodist Church, which will be dedicated worker in the ministry. I predict that his influence and life work will be a great blessing to Lamar County and bespeak for him a warm place in the friendship of all lovers of the servants of the Lord Jesus Christ, of those both in and out of the regular ministry. He is a servant that serves in the Master's cause.

W. H. SAUNDERS.

A YOUNG PEOPLE'S REVIVAL

"What is a young people's revival?" the young people of Blackater Church, on the Baker charge, asked, when the idea of having one was suggested to them by their director of the summer. "Who will preach?—etc.," were questions that followed hard on the first. After careful discussion in council meeting, prayerful and careful planning and publicity, the first young people's revival of that community was launched.

The revival was held August 26-30, with the general theme, "Open My Eyes." Leaders for the week were Mary Searles, Bessie and Eva Mae Carpenter, Kathryn Gurney and Alma Craig, Vivian Craig, Wallace Mangum, Nettie Maye Young.

The services each evening began with a song service during which period new folk songs, pep songs, and sacred songs of choruses were learned by the group. The vesper service followed, and most enlightening, "eye-opening" were the talks, the singing, the praying. At the close games were played in the recreation room. At this time it was endeavored to teach new games, new ideas or recreation.

On Friday night the entire group of thirty-five or more trekked out to "Welcome Lodge," the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Hausey, after vespers, for recreation and delicious refreshments. The spirit of fun was of so high an order that when songs were spontaneously started by someone, it was natural for the beautiful hymns, such as, "Day is Dying in the West," "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow," "Jesus Never Fails," "Into My Heart," to follow the deliciously enjoyable "Zum-ta-di-a" and so on. So the happy evening closed with a prayer of thanksgiving and consecration, out on the lawn.

We mortals are too prone to wish for immediate and tangible results, and are sometimes disappointed and discouraged if they do not appear. However that may be, we do feel that the Blackwater young people's revival helped to open the eyes and the hearts of those participating. With renewed vision, consecrated purpose, they cannot but hold high the torch.

MARY SEARLES.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 22.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

JAMES (A GREAT CHRISTIAN LEADER)

The New Testament mentions four men by the name of James. It is not certain which wrote the book bearing the name, but the lesson is meant to draw attention to the character and work of James, the brother of Jesus, who was not even a believer till after the resurrection. Once convinced, his background of home training and his intimate association with Jesus tended to bring him at once into prominence, and he became the recognized leader of the church at Jerusalem. He was steadfast and conservative without being reactionary. His decision with regard to the gentile converts absolved them from the letter of the Mosaic law, but enjoined abstinence from things revolting and immoral. Christianity was to fulfill, not annul the Law or the Prophets. Ancient values were to be conserved, old connections to be maintained, and the new faith rooted in the old.

The "temptations" mentioned in the lesson are of two kinds—external and internal—tests and tendencies. On every hand and in every way Christians were being tested. They met ridicule, scorn, violence. Why could not men of peace have peace? Why did a good God permit them to suffer? What good could come from it all? Much in every way. An untested faith is an uncertain faith, both to one's self and to others. The Christian faith was not take men out of the world, but to deliver them from its evil. Would it work? Tests would show. Disciples must endure to perpetuate an enduring religion. The internal must overcome the external; spirit must triumph over sword; sheep must live among wolves and vindicate the superiority of their manner of life. It demanded patience, but patience brings perfection, especially to those who ask wisdom of a generous God who does not scold that they ask much and often. However, only disappointment and failure await double-minded, two-faced, mist-like pretenders. The true Christian must remain steadfast, "stay put." Internal joy and power prevent envy of the "high" by the "low" and enable rich to become poor without bitterness, as they come to understand that life does not consist of possessions. Both physical life and material goods are transitory. Only the spiritual endures. The crown of life awaits those who patiently endure the test.

The hardest tests are internal. Results here are most disastrous, "lust" (desire), "sin," "death." Moral death is moral suicide. "Man is tempted when he is enticed by his own desire." There is no alibi. It is no excuse to say "God made me so," or "the woman tempted me, and I did eat." "Do not err, my beloved brethren." "Lead us not into temptation" is perhaps better translated, "Let us not yield to temptation." Only good comes from God, and all good comes from Him, even the smallest good in the least worthy person. Even in the spark of "smoldering flax" (kindlings), the Master saw a possible flame. He fanned the spark. Let us do likewise with self and others. A universal gospel means universal hope. Outward tests call for endurance; inward temptations for resistance. Joy comes when endurance proves the genuineness, and resistance the strength of our faith.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

Hello Young People!

News from Camp Windywood—the Alexandria District camp—sounds like we are still looking up our record of the biggest and best camps ever. Miss Langford went from here as one of the instructors and while there earned her D.D. After arriving at the camp she was informed that several of the leaders could not come and that Charles White had named her "Day Dean." With his arriving each evening to be Night Dean the camp moved on to a successful climax. Fifty-two young people registered and sixty were present in all. The campers regretted that Brother Grambling could not be present because of Bobbie, his son, undergoing an emergency operation on the Monday that camp opened.

The intermediate camp is in session this week and we are anxious to have a report from them.

New Orleans District young people are in camp at Mandeville this week. Mary Lou, send us a report of how your camp showed up.

Now that camps are about over we are turning our minds toward several fall activities—namely, the Young People's Poster Contest; the "On to Memphis" Conference; Promotion Day in our local churches and Annual Conference.

Suppose I tell you about the poster contest now. The Conference Board of Christian Education has made us young folks a great offer. Any young person in our church may enter a poster on some phase of Christian Education. The posters are to be sent to First Methodist Church, New Orleans, by November 18, and will be on display at the Annual Conference. They will be judged during the Conference and the first winner will receive transportation and expenses at the 1936 assembly at Centenary. Second award will be all expenses at assembly, and third place will be one-half of expenses at assembly. The contestants must be between the ages of 12 and 23 inclusive. The poster must be made by the young person. It may illustrate any phase of Christian Education.

Now come on—let's see who the winners will be.

Begin now to get ready for Promotion Day. New officers are to be elected in the young people's division. A new year in our Church School begins on the first Sunday in October. We have only one month in which to get ready.

Next week I want to talk to you about that great young people's conference to be held in Memphis on December 27 through 31.

BILLY.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,

1574 Jefferson Avenue, New Orleans

The Woman's Missionary Society of Rayville entertained recently with a Silver Anniversary Tea on the lawn of the church annex. The hours were from five to seven. The table, which was quite lengthy, was decorated most beautifully for the occasion, and was centered with a huge birthday cake bearing twenty-five candles.

The president, Mrs. Mark A. Cooper, was assisted in receiving by the following past presidents: Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, Mrs. E. E. Stodghill, Mrs. H. C. Jones, Mrs. C. A. Blatchford, and Mrs. J. T. Harris.

An interesting program, composed of a talk by Mrs. O. H. Bynum, musical numbers by Mrs. Elvi Guarch and Miss Dorothy Hodge, accompanied by Mrs. Will Calhoun; a reading by Mrs. W. D. Cotton, who was dressed in Colonial costume, were given.

There was a large attendance on this happy occasion, some being present who had been members since this organization was a Ladies' Aid Society in 1905.

A silver offering was made, which was sent as a "Houma Day Offering" to Mac-Donell School.

Mrs. G. W. Dameron, Conference Superintendent of Literature and Publicity, writes that the World Outlook campaign is on, having started September 1. Last year the campaign was called "The World Outlook Recovery Campaign;" this year it will be called "The World Outlook Climbing." The Conference goal is 522. Mrs. Dameron suggests that if each auxiliary will secure just three new subscriptions the Louisiana Conference will go over the top by more than 100. What do you say? Let's all get busy!

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,

2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

One of the most instructive as well as inspirational meetings of the W. M. S. of the Hattiesburg District was held at Ellis-ville Methodist Church, August 29, in carrying out leadership Training day, preparatory to the study "That Other America," by J. A. Mackay. Mrs. E. A. Loftin of Magee, the newly elected district secretary and a most consecrated and efficient worker, together with Mrs. P. R. Arrington of Magee, Conference children's work superintendent, had worked on posters, maps, charts, and flags pertaining to conditions in the twenty-one republics. These were placed to an advantageous view of all members present and with the beautiful decoration of cut flowers furnished by the hostess church, one's heart was made to rejoice that in Christ there is "no East or West." The morning session began at 10:15 o'clock with Mrs. E. A. Loftin presiding.

After singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," Mrs. C. S. Craig of Ellisville conducted the devotional, using Acts, first chapter. Prayer was voiced by Mrs. Calloway of Ellisville. A beautiful missionary message in song, "God so loved the world," was given by Miss Dovie Bridges of Harrisville, with her brother, Mr. Lester Bridges, at the piano.

"Why have a mission study program?" was a round table discussion, ably led by Mrs. P. R. Arrington with black board in which various members gave reasons that led all to believe it serves in a concrete way of following Jesus' teaching and makes us get acquainted with our neighbors. This discussion was followed by "Weaknesses in Mission Study," in which a number were presented. Then the challenge, "What are we going to do about it?" Various remedies were offered and Mrs. Arrington proved herself as valuable as a mission study leader as superintendent of children's work, urging all to let nothing dissuade them from an extensive study and to educate themselves to standard of book. Mrs. E. L. Walker of Magee dismissed the assembly at the close of the morning session. At 12:30 a Pan American luncheon was served by the hostess church at the dining hall of Jones County A. H. S. and junior college. Seated at one table were representatives from the twenty-one countries of Pan American Union in conference and gave most interesting facts concerning their countries. In the center of the table were flags representative of all countries, and the good old U. S. A. was on a par with all others, again demonstrating "The Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man."

Mrs. Arrington, mistress of ceremonies, introduced two very interesting and unique Mexican personages, wearing the true regalia, Miss Dovie Bridges and Lester Bridges. For some time they delighted the audience with Spanish songs and history of Mexico. Senorita exhibited beautiful pieces of pottery, pictures and other articles brought direct from Mexico.

The afternoon session was opened by singing, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," prayer voiced by Mrs. D. L. St. John of Meridian District. Senorita again delighted the congregation with two vocal selections in Spanish, accompanied by her brother. Mrs. Arrington then introduced these two Mexican musicians to the congregation, as our own Mr. Lester and Miss Dovie Bridges of Harrisville, and as

MILLSAPS COLLEGE

JACKSON, MISS.

The Survey Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges says in its Report of April, 1935:

"The Committee feels that it cannot conclude its report without brief comment on the excellence of this college. Under the leadership of President Key and his competent faculty the college has maintained through the years a high grade of work in the field of liberal arts.

"In its two days at the College the Committee was impressed with the atmosphere, both on the campus and in the classroom. Students are of high quality, and their relationships with the faculty are most wholesome."

Fall Session opens September 11.

Those expecting to be enrolled in the Freshman Class should send High School Entrance Certificates and Application Fee of $15.00 at once.

an appreciation of their most valuable service presented Miss Bridges with a copy of "Lupita," a beautiful story of a Mexican girl and no one could better appreciate it than Miss Bridges for she has spent several years in Mexico teaching and knows her people and speaks fluently the language. Mrs. V. G. Clifford of Hattiesburg, in a most instructive talk, presented "Methods of teaching Course-Creative vs. Transmissive."

Next Dr. John R. Mackay, an author of study book was presented by Mrs. T. O. Prewett of Hattiesburg. Dr. Mackay, in the person of Mrs. Clifford, told why he had written the book during his extensive travels, he had tried to present the undertone of Latin-America life. Mrs. T. O. Prewett also demonstrated, a council class based on the first chapter in the book, which was carried out very effectively.

Roll call and distribution of literature that would be beneficial in the study, showed an attendance of fifty-six from nearly every auxiliary over the Hattiesburg District. Each mission study leader gained a clearer knowledge of the work and a more determined effort to make Christ's love enthroned in hearts of all men. Mrs. Loftin extended words of thanks and appreciation to the hostess church for their hospitality during the day, and the delightful luncheon which carried out most effectively the ideas of the program. The benediction was voiced by Mrs. Albert Hand of Shubuta.

What Better Background Could a Laxative Have!

Civilized man has tried thousands of remedies for constipation, but comparatively few have held their place in reputable medical use and retained approval in medical literature. From among these few highly favored laxatives—favor established by many years of successful use in this and other countries—are selected the ingredients which are combined in Thedford's Black-Draught. Such a scientific, dependable background should encourage any one needing a laxative to try purely vegetable Thedford's Black-Draught. It is popular because it brings such refreshing relief without being expensive.

Have you ordered your WEEK OF PRAYER ENVELOPES?

Now is the time to begin preparation for the gifts of that first week in November. Eighty thousand dollars sounds like a lot of money but we can do it if we pray and give. Already we have been getting thank-you letters from those who are to receive the funds. Let us go the other mile with them.

We are sorry that we have distressing news in the next two sentences. Mrs. R. P. Brooks who has been ill with fever in Nashville for several weeks is at home but still confined to her bed with fever. Mrs. R. P. Neblett is at home with a broken arm and a bad shoulder, the result of an automobile accident as she was returning to Brooksville from Birmingham. The Conference will miss their active leadership for these weeks that they are kept at home and their personal friends throughout the Conference will miss them sorely.

Last week we talked about Scarritt Associates. This week we wish to talk about Scarritt College. In 1924 Scarritt Bible and Training School was removed from Kansas City, Missouri, to Nashville, Tennessee, and reorganized as Scarritt College for Christian workers. By Charter the ownership and control of the new institution was given to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The General Conference of 1926 accepted the College as "an institution of the Methodist Church, South."

It is the purpose of this College to prepare Christian workers for a service in the home, the church, and other agencies. It offers young people unique opportunities to secure professional training for work as home-makers, pastors' assistants, directors of religious education, missionaries, deaconesses, social workers, recreational leaders, rural workers, and parent education leaders.

The college offers special courses each quarter which are designed to give back training for various types of Christian service. Many students who have devoted six or twelve weeks to these special courses of study bear testimony to their value as aids for improving their efficiency in church work. Affiliation with George Peabody College for teachers makes the wide range of courses offered by that institution available to both regular and special students at Scarritt.

If you would like further information or literature on Scarritt College write to Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

POPLAR CREEK CIRCUIT

Dear Brother Duren: In this brief report you will note that we closed our regular round of summer revivals last Sunday night with a total of twenty-five additions, most of them on profession of faith.

Among those who assisted me in these meetings, that princely young preacher, Rev. Geo. Williams of Ebenezer charge, deserves special mention, because of the valuable assistance he rendered.

Then my brother, Rev. J. B. Burns of Ethel charge, did us splendid service. Of our own district men Brothers F. H. McKee of the Vaiden charge and W. H. Mounger of Winona, did us very fine service. To each of these, and Brothers L. Betterton and E. Brantley, local preachers of this district and charge, we extend our greatest thanks and heart-felt appreciation for the splendid services rendered.

We organized a prayer meeting and Sunday school which will add much to the efficiency of the charge.

We recovered and put new windows in Friendship Church and new doors and windows in North Union Church.

Our very congenial and helpful presiding elder, Brother A. T. McIlwain, is doing a fine piece of constructive work on the district.

Here's hoping to have full financial report and to see you at Amory, when our Annual Conference convenes there the last of next month.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Matt. 11:16—Whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children, sitting in the marketplace and calling to their fellows.

Jesus made this statement when He called attention to the lack of response to the message of John and to His own message. Both preached repentance. John was an ascetic while Jesus was social, yet the generation was equally callous and unwilling to accept either. It was in no mood to listen to a message of contrition. It was averse to ascetic or like-affirming adventures. Jesus had noted the play of children. Some participated. Some held aloof and criticized whether the game was piping at a wedding or mourning at a funeral.

Jesus charged that His generation was incapable of either profound sorrow or great happiness. Obviously the implication is that deep sorrow and profound joy have the same root. Children laugh and cry. Even so, anxiety and peace spring from the same root of spiritual and moral sensitivity. The very capabilities which make for happiness also subject the soul to greater grief and more poignant pain. It is quite impossible to make happiness the sole end of life. The same Jesus who shared the dining room and wedding function went to the cross. A musician who is enraptured by beautiful harmony also suffers under the sounds of discords and jazz. So moral sensitiveness brings people into harmony with God. It also causes a burden for sinners. The saints have repented more than anyone else. St. Paul called himself the "chief of sinners," (I Tim. 1:15).

Mother love brings happiness. It also brings great anxiety. No man who loves is perfectly free. But life devoid of love is too superficial to count. We might avoid the pain of love's way. But that means life would be degraded and brutalized. Jesus knew the tragedy and burdens of life. He came to grips with life. But nothing could dim the vividness of His oneness with God. The Man of sorrows suffered most. He also speaks of "My peace I leave with you." He told His disciples, "These things I have spoken unto you, that my joy might remain in you and that your joy might be full." (John 15). He had just washed His disciples feet when He uttered these words, Judas had gone out to betray Him. Jesus had not been favored of fortune. He had not ignored the pain. But He lived in union with the Father. It was His meat and drink to do the Father's will. This harmony is fruitful of pain as well as joy. Happiness comes through love. The blase man may shun a cross by refusing to answer love's call. His callousness also makes him most miserable. The vacuous multitudes are dead to deep sorrow and joy. In verses 20-24 of this chapter we read, "Then began He to upbraid the cities wherein most of His mighty works were done, because they REPENTED NOT; Woe unto thee, Chorazin; woe unto thee, Bethsaida! For if the mighty works which were done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgement than for you. And thou, Capernaum, which are exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell; for if the mighty works which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day. But I say unto you that it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgement than for you." In refusing the agonies of contrition and moral amendment, they missed every good thing. Those who bear a cross will some day see of the travail of their soul and be satisfied. Second only to love, joy is a fruit of the Spirit. (Gal. 5:22).

PRAYER

Our Father, we would come to grips with life. We would repent for every sin. We would not enjoy our measure of comfort, disregarding of the rights of others. We would remember that those who suffer with Christ shall also reign with Him. We would taste of the power of the age to come and remember that it is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom. We would abide in Thee. As the branch is knit to the vine, so would we be vitally related to Thee.

We offer ourselves to Thee in Jesus' name.

TROUT AND GOODPINE

Dear Dr. Duren: Before Conference calls us together again I would like to give some account of our work in the Trout-Goodpine charge. We have been very graciously treated from the beginning of the year. The work is small, with only 106 members when we came and we have received 40 this year, 35 on profession of faith. We have just closed a revival at Trout, with 25 new members and one of the largest poundings any preacher ever received.

On July 10, the occasion of my wife's birthday, the folks surprised us with a beautiful birthday party and shower. My wife was made happy by the evidence of such love and esteem.

Everything is going fine here and we plan to bring a full report to Conference, with 50 new members on roll.

Ninety-one per cent of those entering the school last year expressed a preference for a particular religious denomination. Of the 1,539 new students, 263 favored the Presbyterian Church, 238 the Methodist, 229 the Episcopalian, and so on through a list including practically all the religious denominations of the country.

RACIAL BARRIERS IN AFRICA seem to be introducing a new social problem into the life of that Continent of backward civilization. The Congregationalist (South Africa), quotes the head of the department of philosophy in a Johannesburg university to the effect that the native Bantu is becoming thoroughly Europeanized in his tastes and his demands, by contacts with white people in mine, factory, and domestic service. But his social and economic subordination is being maintained by criminal laws against the breach of a contract for service, the imposition of taxes disproportionate to his income, and a price discrimination in the purchase of the articles which he has learned to use. It appears to be a repeating of the old story of the exploitation of the helpless.

THE BATTLE OF CULLODEN MOOR in Scotland was the last battle fought on the soil of England. It was a battle between the forces of the "Pretender," Charles Edward, a grandson of James II., and the Duke of Cumberland. Charles Edward sought to recover the throne of England for the House of Stuarts, and his utter defeat was the end of the active efforts of those who represented that line of distinguished rulers.

AMERICAN ILLITERACY has been given a new interest by the 1930 census figures. To the more than four million people who cannot read and write in any language, has been added another eight million who are called "functional illiterates." This latter class includes those who are able to read and write in a strictly technical sense, but whose understanding is quite as limited as their ability to read and write. The combined figures of these two classes bring the total of American illiteracy up to more than twelve millions. The surprising thing is that nearly four hundred thousand of these are in New York State—mostly in New York City.

WAR AND RELIGION

In this day when war clouds are gathering upon the horizon of the world, we should think soberly and righteously about the consequences of war as taught by the experiences of the past. War does not end with the silencing of the artillery, nor are its sorrows confined to new-made soldier graves. Since the World War, when no invading force was near our shores, our country has gone through a period of total collapse of its activities and ideals, and a wholesale reorganization of our economic, social and religious life. Such was neither unnecessary nor unusual. It is a process of recovery made necessary by war. Following the Revolution, Dr. Dana, of Connecticut, said: "Voluptuousness, pride and contempt of religion and providence are the natural outgrowth of opulence and military success." All this he charged to the Revolution. In 1801, Timothy Dwight summed up the situation thus: "The profanation of the Sabbath, before unusual, profaneness of language, drunkenness, gambling, and lewdness, were exceedingly increased; and what is less commonly remarked, but is not less mischievous than any of them, a light, vain method of thinking concerning sacred things, a cold and contemptuous indifference toward every moral and religious subject. In the meantime, that enormous evil, a depreciated currency gave birth to a new spirit of fraud, and opened numerous temptations, and a boundless field for its operations; while a new and intimate correspondence with corrupted foreigners introduced a multiplicity of loose doctrines, which were generally embraced by licentious men as the means of palliating and justifying their sins." William E. Channing described the age as a period of "diseased imagination." Dartmouth College had one lone student who would confess that he was a Christian, Princeton had only three or four, and Bishop Meade College of William and Mary was a "hotbed of infidelity." The literature of that day is reeking with such things. The editor once received a manuscript for criticism. It was by a young woman who was chaste and conventionally loyal to the morality and the religion of her day, but the manuscript was an unblushing plea for free love and the right of issue regardless of matrimonial opportunity. War had destroyed her prospect for legitimate motherhood, and in defeat she turned to a social philosophy which is a repudiation of every conventional restraint and overturns the domestic virtues which lie at the base of civilization. It is said that when Captain Thomas Webb preached he reverently placed his sword on the table, and it is still true that no minister, church, or nation can proclaim the gospel of the Prince of Peace to the accompaniment of a clanking sword.

"RADIO—A PUBLIC ENEMY"

Under the above caption, an article which appeared recently in the Illinois Alumni News, is worthy of serious and thoughtful consideration. In the opinion of the writer, the Federal Radio Commission has not met its responsibility for public welfare, because it has proceeded upon the vicious theory that "broadcasting must be mainly supported by advertising," and it has, therefore, surrendered nine-tenths of the program content to those whose only purpose is to make money. He also points out that England, on the other hand, has taken steps to prevent the commercial exploitation of the channels of the air. But our situation in America is even worse than a surrender of radio to commercial interests. It is a surrender of the people to an exploitation of their morals, by an uncensored liberty allowed both commercial and personal interests. Night clubs with all their vicious practices and debasing programs of jazz, liquor, cigarettes and other habit-forming and debasing things, and the most wretched and coarse and even profane political slush is poured forth in all its vileness with the tacit approval of the controlling authorities. Political denunciations often border upon the indecent and the blasphemous, and nothing is done about it. From morning to night and night until morning again, a perfect bedlam of soaps, toothpastes, cosmetics, lotions, tobacco, and laxatives is on the air; and, whether you own a radio or not, it floats into your windows from every side, from the ring-side and the seamy-side, and one feels that ninety-nine per cent of it is from the hurtful side of life. But one can turn his radio off! He can do no such thing, unless he is willing to close his windows and stuff wool in his ears. We believe that the unrestricted liberty of the air and its abandonment to objectionable and questionable interests is doing much to destroy its usefulness and more to destroy the finer sensibilities and even the morals of the present generation.

PAGAN OR SAVAGE?

A few days ago an educator in an address delivered in New Orleans declared that, "The human race is still largely pagan in its worship and in its philosophy." He then went on to say that no one need be surprised at the chaotic state of politics and international relations, nor at the wretched condition of the financial and social structure of the present time. One instinctively resists such a pessimistic view of civilization, and is unwilling to admit the justice of such a sweeping indictment of the human race. For our part, we think that such broad indictments are based upon a partial survey of the facts and may be as far from accurate as are some of the addresses which dispense an effusive optimism. But even at that, there can be no doubt that we are still far from the condition of moral purging which must precede the millennium. When, for instance, a nation can deliberately flout its solemnly attested pledge to abide by an international agreement regarding war, for any reason less than the invasion of its territorial dominions, there is still an unattained moral horizon for such a nation. Such is true regardless of the progress which it may have made in scientific achievement, or in the mechanics of culture. And when a prisoner can be taken from his cell under the very shadow of a great State University, while a jury is deliberating his fate under the instructions of a court, and that prisoner be done to death by a mob, there are at least some embellishments of civilization which have not been realized. And when more than a hundred men in a perfectly well-established community, can make face to face demands upon a jailor, search premises in his presence, demand the identification of keys, demolish doors and barriers and drag the prisoner forth without the recognition of a solitary person, there is still something to be hoped for. Unless something can be done to stop such deeds, a dependence upon the local administration of law is both futile and foolish; and unless such can be effectually suppressed, it is inevitable that the idea of justice is a travesty and the administration of a law a farce.

CONFIDENCE

By Rev. T. F. King

If we let our minds go back in history, to the great heroes of the faith, we are impressed with the fact that one supreme quality was common to them all. The leaders in religion were men possessing, and possessed with, an amazing confidence in God. In the eleventh chapter of the Book of Hebrews, the word "faith" is used to convey the thought of this dominant characteristic. Unfortunately the word today is burdened with certain denominational and theological implications which were not present in the mind of the early church. The root idea of faith is confidence. To walk by faith is to live in simple and child-like certainty of the Eternal Presence of God.

Here is the beginning of religion. The first step in the Christian life is confidence in spiritual Reality. I am afraid that at the present time we are doing some shallow thinking in religious matters. We speak for instance, of the function of the Christian education being character building. Now, if that be true, my only comment is that Christian education and the Christian religion are not in harmony. I have no hesitation in stating that the primary purpose of our religion is not character building. Character is the result of the religious life, and without the life there is no adequate Christian character. The primary purpose of the Christian religion is to develop first an assurance—a confidence in God so glorious, that death itself can not shatter it. From this union with God, there is born a desire to be like God. Here then, is the basis of character—a character no force in the world can destroy. This type of character can of course be guided and reinforced by teaching; but it is character born of a deathless desire—a divine desire to be like the God abiding in us.

Perhaps it is essential in these days when we are thinking from material view-points, to reexamine the elementary facts of religion. We must be certain of our foundations. The mere training of character will not create confidence in God, but on the other hand, union with God does transform life. If we have put the cart before the horse, it is not too late to reverse the process.

DR. W. B. PALMORE—AN APPRECIATION

By Rev. Theodore Copeland, D.D.

Whether a man is to be regarded as great or insignificant depends upon the unit with which he is measured, and the scale of values is not always and everywhere the same. From time immemorial two standards have obtained, the hero and the saint, and these belong to widely different spheres. Secular history is so occupied with the cabinets of kings and the exploits of conquering armies that meager attention is given to the men whose moral strength and purity of soul have swayed the minds of their contemporaries, who rising above their times, have assailed all forms of error, rescued great truths from the corruption of ages, and by their characters, deeds and sufferings have proved themselves the benefactors of the race.

A fair specimen of the world's celebrities was Mirabeau, the genius of the French Revolution, endowed with an athletic frame and extraordinary mental powers; an illustrious orator and statesman, but closing his checkered, profligate career in utter and ignominious failure, exclaiming as he left the world, "If I had only been a good man, if I had not wasted my life by sensuality, and my youth by evil passions, I could have saved France."

A great man is he who stands out from others, not for some accidental difference, but for something which makes others follow his lead, acknowledge his power, accept his teachings and admire his conduct.

During my pastorate in New Orleans, Dr. Palmore walked into my Sabbath school one Sunday morning, preached that day to my congregation, and took a collection for the San Francisco sufferers. This was our first acquaintance; and with the passing years my love and admiration for him have grown and intensified, for I soon learned that "his life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that nature might stand up and say to all the world, this was a man."

Dr. Palmore possessed in an eminent degree the sterling qualities that fitted him for the highest service; and service, we learn from the great Teacher, is the badge of true greatness. His gifted mind grasped and felt in full force the truths and impulses which were dimly and dumbly moving in the minds of others. In his soul was room for many interests and many aims, while he possessed the power to comprehend and reconcile them all into one great purpose.

As editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, he displayed marked ability and extensive knowledge of the men and the movements of his generation. His weekly editorials and the general management of the paper kept it in the front rank of religious journalism. He stood for personal purity and civic righteousness, denounced craft, cruelty and hypocrisy, and encouraged every enterprise looking to the welfare of society. His frequent visits to foreign countries, and his wide observation of men in every clime, found expression in his numerous notes of travel published in the religious press.

To his large soul was added deep, abiding conviction. Constantly aiming at that which was to last for centuries, he met with such obstacles as none but leaders ever encounter, and found straight in his path the passing passions of the day, roused to fiercer enmity by their own shallowness. Amid opposition and discouragement, he held firmly to his high purpose. The only real moral power influencing the world is courage to act in accordance with our convictions. The irresolute who never can be got to take a decided stand; the frivolous who can not perform a serious purpose, or take a sober view of their responsibilities; the timorous who will not undertake a duty lest they will have no strength to perform it—these classes fail us utterly in the emergencies of life.

One other trait must be mentioned, his resolute will. If not the highest element in a great man's nature, the will is at least the one which saves the others from downright degradation. No spectacle is more contemptible than clear knowledge combined with weakness. No character is more universally despised than that of a coward. Dr. Palmore, knowing the right, pursued it with inflexible perseverance, allowing no compromise to deflect him from his high endeavor, looking for his recompense at the resurrection of the just.

With a heart that felt another's woe, his sympathy was co-extensive with his knowledge of human want, suffering and misfortune.

The disposition of his estate, as shown in his last will and testament, evinced his abiding interest in the institutions which exist for the glory of God and the extension of his Kingdom. A Prince and a great man is fallen in Israel.

GENERAL MISSIONARY COUNCIL, WASHINGTON, D. C., JANUARY 7-9, 1936.

The General Missionary Council, at its meeting in Little Rock last winter, launched plans for the greatest gathering of the quadrennium, to be held in connection with its meeting at Washington, D. C., January 7-9, 1936. The plan contemplated that the Washington meeting be for this generation what the New Orleans meeting was to the last generation.

Several months have been devoted to building a program of outstanding distinction and the preliminary announcement indicates that most previous efforts in this direction have been out-done. A glance at the notable names appearing on the program evidences the fact that something most unusual is in store.

One day will be devoted to Foreign Missions. The speakers and their subjects are as follows:

Dr. Ivan Lee Holt—"The Christ of Asia."

Dr. John R. Mott—"Christianity Leavening the Nation."

Dr. Fred B. Fisher—"The Contribution of Younger Churches to Christianity."

Dr. A. W. Beaven—"The Pastor's Place in Foreign Missions."

Bishop John M. Moore—"Our Missionary Heritage."

Bishop James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington—"Christ for All the World."

Bishop Paul B. Kern—"Our Next Step in Foreign Missions."

Dr. W. G. Cram—"What I Saw Around the World."

Half a day will be devoted to the work of the Commission on the Town and Country Church. Bishop A. Frank Smith will present the report of the Commission. Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church will speak on "Methodism and the Plain People," and at the conclusion of the period Dr. Lynn Harold Hough, dean of the Divinity school of Drew University, will deliver an address on "The Pastor In a Day Like This."

Another half day will be devoted to evangelism. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington will present the report of the Committee on Evangelism. Dr. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church at Washington and chairman of the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of Churches, will speak on "An Adequate Evangelism for Our Day." Bishop E. D. Mouzon will speak on "Can Methodism Repeat?"

The Council will reach its climax on the last evening. Honorable Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, has been selected for an address on "The Mission of America." Hon. D. C. Roper, Secretary of Commerce, will preside.

The program of the General Missionary Council has been built on the assumption that great preaching is the most effective agency of the Kingdom. Not less than fifteen great sermons and addresses by the theological leadership of America will be featured. In addition, however, a full day will be devoted to round table discussions of current Church questions, and there will also be a tour of Washington and environs, including the White House and the Capitol.

Because of space limitation and the multitudes desiring to attend the Council, it has been deemed necessary to supervise the attendance. Special delegates will be appointed by the General and Annual Conference Boards of Missions and preference will be given to these in seating arrangements. Those desiring a detailed preliminary program and information should write to their Conference Missionary secretary, the chairman of their Annual Conference Board of Missions or to Dr. Elmer T. Clark, Board of Missions, Doctors' Building, Nashville, Tenn.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT

Very interesting indeed is a tabulated report of the Greenwood District, sent out by Rev. A. T. McIlwain, the enterprising and aggressive presiding elder. The report shows 164 members received on profession, 209 by certificate, making a total of 373. On a salary account of $35,987, $24,490 has been paid. For Church School Day, $130.50 is reported. On the benevolent assessment of $9,750, $1,356 has been paid. And 456 copies of the Advocate go into the homes of the district. That is a magnificent report except as to the benevolences, and that is explained by the fact that it is almost exclusively a cotton section, and the income of the people will become available in the next few weeks. The report is encouraging and it shows a careful consideration of the total program of the church in that section.

A CALL FOR HELP

I have a man in my district who is just recovering from an operation for appendicitis and has been sick a good deal this year. His work has paid him but little.

Besides his sickness, that has taken much of his time and absorbed his resources, he is about to lose his car for failure to keep up payments.

This is a worthy case. Any one having some of the Lord's money in their possession would do well to send some to me for the relief of this brother. Acknowledgment and full contributions will be made in the Advocate.

BY W. L. DUREN

resenting a commission formed by the General Conference of 1868 to negotiate union with other branches of Methodism, but still without specific instructions from the General Conference touching the matter of the establishing of fraternal relations between the two Churches. The Southern Church did not feel that it was a properly accredited deputation, but the General Conference passed a resolution declaring its position, "In reference to any overtures which may proceed from that Church having in them an official and proper recognition of that body." Accordingly the General Conferences of 1872, of the Northern Church, passed resolutions which, after reciting the facts said: "To place ourselves in the truly fraternal relations toward our Southern brethren which the sentiments of our people demand, and to prepare the way for the opening of formal fraternity with them, be it hereby

"Resolved, That this General Conference will appoint a delegation consisting of two ministers and one layman, to convey fraternal greetings to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." In pursuance of this action, Doctors Albert S. Hunt and Charles H. Fowler, and General Clinton B. Fisk brought the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in General Conference session at Louisville, Kentucky, on May 8, 1874. Thus began a relationship which had been deferred for a generation.

The action provided for the sending of two ministers and one layman as fraternal messengers to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1874. The Northern Church approached the South under the most delicate and difficult circumstances that could have been developed. Dr. Edward H. Myers quoted the words of Dr. Elliott to the effect that the refusal to hear the fraternal greetings of Dr. Pierce was a defensive step. If he had been admitted, it would imply that the South was right in its course, and would make further adjustments impossible. Whether Dr. Elliott's interpretation is correct or not is of minor importance here. We only refer to it as indicating something of the backgrounds of an approach to the setting up of fraternal relations with the Church, South. On this point we leave the subject with a quotation from the biographer of Bishop Matthew Simpson, who said: "After the soreness which we felt when we discovered, in 1848, that in agreeing to the Plan of Separation we had been outmanoeuvred, outwitted, and, as we said, duped; after repealing the plan as null and void; after having declared for nearly thirty years that Southern Methodism was a secession, and not legitimately derived from the parent stock; after having fought out, as Methodist citizens, by thousands and ten thousands, in the national armies, the one issue which had divided both Church and State, we asked for a restored fraternity with the brethren from whom we had been long severed." What a volume of hurt, of courage, and of hope are gathered into that summary of three decades of disunion and strife!

The second step taken, at the General Conference of 1848, was the action rescinding the Plan of Separation. Bishop Simpson's biographer said: "The General Conference of 1848 met in a state of mind which might be very moderately described as bordering on exasperation. The forms of courtesy were, however, carefully observed." The movement for revoking the plan was doubtless accelerated by the bitter feelings which had been developed on both sides, and no one would undertake to justify now what was done and said under the heat and passion of that day. Under a resolution offered by Dr. Simpson, the General Conference formally revoked the action which had been taken by an overwhelming majority of the General Conference of 1844, and which involved the rights of the entire Southern Church. The General Conference also passed a resolution rescinding the action of 1840 on the Westmoreland petition, giving as the reason the fact that the resolution "is liable to misconstruction, and has been misconstrued greatly to the prejudice of our beloved Methodism." Such was probably the feeling of the delegates to the Conference of 1848, but we can not believe that the rescision of a resolution, after eight years and under such circumstances, was wise ecclesiastical policy, and it was certainly not calculated to promote good will between the antagonistic Methodisms.

It was charged that the South had acted with precipitate haste, thereby indicating the determination of the leadership of that section to disrupt the Church, and the feeling was such as to promote such action; but no haste of the Southern delegates ran ahead of the demands of the Southern people. On June 8, 1844, two days before the close of the memorable session of the General Conference, a meeting of citizens in the State of Alabama, held for some local political purpose, passed resolutions saying that they had observed the proceedings of the Conference "with intense interest and painful anxiety," and they urged the clergy of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the South "to take immediate measures for secession," assuring them "of warm sympathy and unalterable support of the whole

CONFIDENTIAL

Mississippi and Louisiana

Centenary College is adding a department of Home Economics this year. This is the first time that such a department has been undertaken in the institution.

We are glad to know that Mrs. R. L. Walton, the wife of our pastor at Chunky, Miss., is steadily regaining her strength, following a serious operation some weeks ago.

A note from Brother T. C. Cooper of Collins, Miss., brings us his greetings and the evidence of his continued interest in the Advocate. This is his third year on that charge.

Dr. Pierce Cline, president of Centenary College, reports that the prospects for the enrollment at Centenary College are exceptionally good. We have heard as much from other sources, also.

Mrs. R. F. Scott, of Kilbourne, La., writes: "Please continue my Advocate another year, as it means so much to us." The editor has pleasant recollections of Brother and Sister Scott in connection with that church.

Rev. W. C. Newman, dean of Grenada College, will assist Rev. O. S. Lewis in a meeting at Brookhaven, Miss., according to the Lincoln County Times. The meeting will begin next Sunday and continue through October 6.

During the approaching session of the Mississippi Conference at Laurel the historical program will be held Saturday night, at which time Rev. Chas. F. Smith, of Houston, Texas, will speak on "Eminent Methodists I Have Known."

Mrs. Ivan O. Donaldson, wife of Rev. Ivan O. Donaldson of Montrose, La., has been at "The Pines," a sanitarium near Shreveport, for about three months. She has made considerable progress, according to reports, but is not able to leave the sanitarium yet.

A correspondent writes to know why we do not put the street address of the Advocate on the paper. In the change of the form of the paper some time ago it was inadvertently left out and no one had observed it. Editor and Manager apologize. It has been inserted.

We learn that the meeting at Grenada, in which the pastor, Rev. James H. Felts, is being assisted by Dr. Theodore Copeland, is making a considerable impression in that little city. Dr. Copeland was pastor there for a short time earlier in his ministry.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, the capable and energetic lay leader of the Meridian Miss. District, spent the summer at Lake Junaluska, where he was the manager of the Mission Inn. He reports a great season for the assembly, and he is now back with home folk and his all-time task.

Mansfield College buildings were partially destroyed by fire on the night of September 17, according to private information received by the editor. We do not know anything as to the details or the extent of the damage, and we have not seen a report of it in the daily press.

Whitworth College has enrolled 160 students for the session which opened last week. Thirty are local students, 49 are from Louisiana, 8 from Arkansas and the others from Mississippi outside of Brookhaven. Dean Winfield is to be congratulated on this excellent showing for the new college year.

Rev. H. C. Norsworthy, 204 N. 25th Ave., Hattiesburg, Miss., has been busy assisting in revival services recently. He assisted Rev. G. A. Broadus at Homewood church, and Rev. J. W. Thompson at a church in the McBey Community. He is also engaged to assist Rev. R. S. Saucier in a meeting on the New Augusta charge.

A news note from Millsaps College informs us that one hundred and thirty-two freshmen were registered on Monday and Tuesday of last week, and the registration had not been completed. No figures were given as to the probable registration of other classmen, but we think this an excellent showing for the beginning of the new year's work.

We have an appreciated letter from Mrs. Will Marshall of Batesville, Miss., in which she bears beautiful and appreciated testimony to the value of the Christian Advocate in the home. She is literature and publicity superintendent of the Missionary Society, and she says she does not remember when she began her subscription to the Advocate.

An item of interest to friends in New Orleans and especially at St. Mark's Church, was the marriage of Miss Dorothy Lundy to Mr. Edward Smira. Miss Lundy served as a deaconess at St. Mark's for the past three years, and Mr. Smira is a member of the board of stewards of the church. The advocate joins in sincere good wishes for their happiness and success in life.

Rev. Robert A. Clark, presiding elder of the Dyersburg District, Tennessee Conference, writes that the Lord has blessed him with good health, and that he has tried to honor Him with the best service that he knows how to render. We have known him from college days and we have not known a more faithful man. The Advocate visited his home in Atalla County, Miss., in his childhood and he has been a subscriber for thirty-four years in his own name.

At the meeting of the Cabinet in Shreveport, the reports for the Louisiana Conference are perhaps better than they have been at this time for a number of years. Several charges have already paid their benevolences in full and there has been a substantial addition to the membership of the churches. And not a few debts have been materially reduced. The indications are that the session of the Conference in New Orleans a few weeks hence will reveal a hopeful outlook for church work in this section.

The fourth quarterly conference of the Nebo charge, Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, held September 15, was an inspiring occasion. The business reports from most points on the circuit showed commendable activity on the part of the stewards; and during the time between the third and fourth quarterly conferences the pastor, Rev. Julius A. McRaney, had visited every home of the charge. There is enthusiasm over the proposition to rebuild the parsonage, instead of just re-roofing the old one, as was previously planned. A committee to rebuild was elected.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Mrs. R. P. Neblett is kept at home with a broken arm and a bad shoulder, the result of an automobile accident as she was returning from Birmingham where she had been teaching in a Leadership Training School for Negro women.

Mrs. B. P. Brooks continues ill at her home at Belzoni.

Our retreat at Grenada was not quite what it would have been had these two leaders of our Conference work been there to enjoy the fellowship of the days together.

Miss Elsie Hudson of Durant, who goes to Scarritt on the 23rd of next month as our Scarritt Scholarship girl, added much with her music and songs to the hours we spent in worship. In this she was assisted by Mrs. J. V. Bennett of Holly Springs.

Grenada College was an ideal place for a retreat. The beauty and quietness of the campus, the cool days, the graciousness of the official family, the co-operation of Brother Newman, all lent themselves to the plan, comfort, and success of the retreat. When we next plan a retreat we hope we may be given the privilege of going back to Grenada College.

We are glad to learn that this year there are eighty registered students against fifty of last year. Ask for a copy of "While-a-Way" if you would have an idea of student activities at Grenada College.

To those of you who could not make an occasion to go to the Spiritual Life Retreat at Grenada, September 10-13, I can offer no consolation. Such an opportunity you will not have again until all other Conferences making up our Council have had just such an opportunity. It may be so, but I cannot believe any other retreat will be just like this one.

The group was small but after the first meeting we forgot numbers. A co-operative spirit in bringing about the objective of the retreat made the three days beautifully harmonious. The silent times were new experiences to most of us but they were such infilling times that we resolved to make them part of our life program. The quiet hour period from eight to nine for personal reading, meditation and prayer sent us forth with prepared hearts to services of worship, prayer, discussion, exposition.

Rev. Lester Rumble of Athens, Ga., talked to us on three occasions on the subject, "Deepening Our Experiences of God." The first day he qualified his subject with the phrase, "By Being Alone With Him." The second day he used the phrase, "Through Intercession." The third day he limited his topic by the use of the phrase, "Through Working With Him."

Miss Howell opened the understanding of the retreatants as to the history purpose, and plan, of the Spiritual Life Movement in Council and Missionary Society. Here many of us for the first time saw how far short our local plan was of the ideal set for us by Council. But it was not until the small groups were separated for night services that we had a real demonstration of what a Spiritual Life group in the local auxiliary might be.

Mrs. Helen Bourne led us in an afternoon session of intercession that proved a real Pentecost to many of us.

In another afternoon service Mrs. Lipscomb led us to see ourselves as we might be, practicing Christian living.

These are a few of the many lovely services, each of which made its contribution to what we shall always look back upon as a rare privilege.

The Week of Prayer and Self Denial for the Woman's Missionary Society, November 3-9, 1935.

Begin at once to save your offering for

1. The Social Evangelistic Center, Seoul, Korea. The buildings now used are four hundred years old and are rapidly falling into decay.

2. The Laura Haygood Normal, Soochow, China. The class rooms now used are only large enough to accommodate half the number who wish to become trained Christian teachers.

3. The Community House, Ensley, Ala. All the activities of this center are crowded into one small building. A gymnasium is needed; the nearest one is six miles distant.

4. An Emergency Fund for Current Expenses. During the depression there has been a greatly lowered budget; this offering will help in the necessary expenses of our home work.

To meet these demands eighty thousand dollars is needed. If possible, find a way to double your offering.—Bulletin of Missionary News, October, 1935.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Avenue, New Orleans

The Gleaners Missionary Society of Shreveport celebrated their twenty-fifth anniversary recently with a garden party and pageant, given at the attractive home of Mrs. Glenn L. Miller.

The rose garden and open lawn served as an improvised outdoor theatre and it was there that three hundred guests or more were seated.

The pageant depicted the history of this organization for the past twenty-five years. The first act was the organization scene in 1910, with Mrs. John Shuttleworth, sponsor, surrounded by the charter members gowned in dresses of that year. The history of the work throughout the year, with its ups and downs, its triumphs and defeats, was wittily told by tableaux and dialogue. The curtain fell on a living picture of Millet's "Gleaners."

At the close of the pageant a social hour was enjoyed, with the following "Gleaners" assisting Mrs. Miller: Mrs. Fred Wiesman, Mrs. A. D. Fowler, Mrs. Clarence Shaffer, Mrs. Claude Kinnebrew, Mrs. J. J. Hammiter, Mrs. C. M. Hutchinson, Mrs. Florie Wafford, Mrs. Dana Dawson, Mrs. Elmo Lee, Mrs. S. W. Boyce, Mrs. F. J. Decker and Mrs. J. E. Todd.

St. Mark's Community Center has enjoyed a number of interesting visitors recently. Deaconess Ora M. Durham, dean of Women at Scarritt College, Nashville; Deaconess Emma Burnin, of Rosa Valdez Settlement, at Tampa, Fla., and Mrs. O. E. Woodard, Conference Superintendent of Supplies, paid flying visits to this institution during August.

Smith and Deaconess Grace Gatewood, of Shreveport, motored out to Dulac on the bayou to see the splendid school for Indians which has been established by Miss Ella Hooper and her co-workers at MacDonell School. Too much cannot be said in praise of this outstanding piece of work which has been done by these consecrated women.

Two fine young women, Miss Hoffpauir and Miss Wilhelmina Hooper, are serving their second year as teachers without remuneration. At the Council meeting, to be held in Dallas, Texas, next spring, the Louisiana Conference Missionary Society will memorialize the Woman's Missionary Council to take over this worthy work and give it full support.

DALEVILLE CIRCUIT

There has been donated to me all the land necessary on which to build a religious and recreational church camp. It is situated about the center of this charge, one-quarter mile off Highway 39, fourteen miles north of Meridian. I am offering it to the Meridian District for a district site if the district wishes to help develop same. Else we will develop it for this section.

I was pleased to read Rev. James M. Lewis' account of a successful combined camp of the Christian Adventure Group and the Christian Culture Group of the Gulf Coast Union of the Seashore District; and that the young people's division of the General Board of Christian Education was continuing to authorize such a camp in the Seashore District. Rev. John C. Chambers, in Mississippi Conference notes in the New Orleans Christian Advocate April 27, 1933, said: "Brother Simpson is leading in one of the finest pieces of work ever undertaken in this territory. He is planning to have a young people's camp and a Christian Adventure Camp. He will use the campgrounds for this effort. Certainly this will lead the way in a venture that should be most helpful to circuits, and even cities where camps are close by. I am thrilled with the prospects. When this is over I am asking him to write up all the steps so that others may have some guidance as to the way to proceed." A short while before this camp was held Brother Chambers passed to his great reward. And Dr. Jos. A. Smith, vice-chairman of the Mississippi Conference Board of Christian Education, helped me carry out my plans as sanctioned by Rev. Chambers. Rev. J. B. Cain, Mississippi Conference director of the young people's division, was present at the camp and gave of his valuable time and efficient instruction to help make the camp a success. Brother Cain, shortly after the close of the camp, published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate high points of the camp and advised that the camp should be continued in the Seashore District. It was continued under the efficient leadership of Rev. W. H. VanHook. Rev. Ira H. Sells, Mississippi Conference secretary of Christian Education, visited this camp while in progress and gave it his approval and stated that such a camp should continue in the Seashore District as this camp was announced to be a district camp. Three cheers for Rev. Mr. Lewis and faculty and campers for their great accomplishments for in three years the credits have grown three times. There are many other places where such a camp would be of wonderful value.

We have finished our revivals with pleasing results. Revs. A. M. Broadfoot, J. H. Jolly, G. G. Yeager and Dr. Jos. A. Smith rendered valuable assistance through their genial companionship and marvelous sermons. We have received seventeen on profession of faith. I preached on infant baptism and had the pleasure of baptizing eight infants at Andrew Chapel.

Yours in Christ,
REV. E. D. SIMPSON.

POPLAR SPRINGS CHURCH

The following item may prove of interest to your list of readers:

The Poplar Springs Methodist Church, Rev. H. Mellard, pastor, Meridian, Miss., conducted a most successful revival; the meeting beginning on Sunday, August 18, and running through the following Friday evening, with Dr. J. L. Neill, pastor of the East End, Meridian, doing the preaching, and Rev. Frank E. Dement assisting in the song services.

A splendid choir together with a large junior choir added inspiration to these services, rendering good musical programs, using two pianos, Mrs. Al Key and Mrs. E. E. Vance, pianists.

Dr. Neill preached the gospel with power and much fervor, and as members of the congregation expressed it: "When one attended these services you somehow felt the heart strangely warmed."

Four members were received on profession of faith, and others indicated a desire to come at a later date, and quite a number were strengthened.

Dr. Neill gave himself to these services and also a generous contribution to the benevolent assessments, and we feel that much and lasting good has been accomplished.

The following Sunday the congregation raised the balance due on the benevolences, and we are advised that this is the first church in the district to pay the benevolent assessment in full.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 29.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

LOVE THE LAW OF LIFE (A Missionary Lesson)

"Abide in me . . . ask . . . and it shall be done." He who wills God's will has a conquering, victorious will. We have here a condition and a promise—nay, more, a guarantee. The condition is ours; the guarantee is God's. If we attend to our business, God will attend to his. Many of us neglect ours to worry about his. The glory and honor of God are at stake in man's success. He is not only the Author, but the senior Partner. Over the doorway of the world is written "God and Sons." Large success, "much fruit," is even more pleasing to God than gratifying to us. The firm will not fail, but neglect will bring loss, especially to the negligent. We share in the profits only as we serve in the business. In addition to other benefits, we have the inexpressible, inexhaustible love of the Father. God loved and gave his Son. Jesus loved and gave his life. He loves us as the Father loved him, and bids us love others as he has loved us. "As . . . so"—as we have been loved, so are we to love.

Love is life and life is love. Love is godlikeness. Love is the bond between man and God, and between man and his fellows. The same tie binds the three in one. If we lose our brother, we lose God. Incarnation means identification. Only when we feed the hungry do we feed Him. Action is the test of our profession.

Saying prayers or singing psalms is but mockery if we forget our needy fellow men. Only as we face men in service do we really face God in devotion.

Love is the only worthy missionary motive. Because of their by-products, missions would be well worth while as business adventures, for trade has followed the cross more consistently than the flag has followed trade, but no mission has been established or supported by commerce. The promotion of Western culture may be a desirable end, but it directs no mission field. Denominational propaganda and extension cannot become the motive of a genuine Christian mission, however appealing they may be to sectarians. Godly men and women have dared danger and deprivation, have faced scorn and persecution, have sacrificed health and life because of Christian love. No other motive could actuate nor power sustain them. They have wished to share the Father's bounty with his other children. They have succeeded by the winsomeness of invitation, not by the insolence of imposition. They have won by exemplifying the sympathetic spirit of the genial, kindly, serving, sharing Christ. Love is not only the greatest thing in the world, it is also the mightiest, as the softness of sunshine is mightier than the blast of the storm. Its garments are stolen or simulated by hate and might. The wolf knows effective disguise. War-makers dare not proclaim hatred as such, but they lead the unsuspecting to slaughter under the slogan of love—love for flag and country, for home and freedom, for peace and protection—"to make the world safe." Through love of life men are made killers; through love of liberty, slaves!

Christians are not servants who know not the plans, share not the confidences, enjoy not the companionship of their Master, but friends who are blessed with his fellowship, admitted to the intimacies of his counsel, and have disclosed to them all that he has "heard of the Father." There can be no higher honor than to be a friend of God. We are his friends if we love one another.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

By Billy Gannaway, Publicity Supt.

Hello everybody!

Here I am again with news about the Methodist young people's conference at Memphis,

From the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Ohio to the Rio Grande the youth of Southern Methodism will gather in Memphis, Tenn., December 27-31, 1935, for the most significant event in the history of the present generation of Methodist young people. The conference will be limited to 5,000 delegates. Quota limits have been established for each Annual Conference and these are being distributed to the districts and to the schools and colleges of our Church.

At this conference the Methodist young people will be responsible for outlining the program of "Christian Action for the Methodist Youth." The purpose or objective of the conference will be: "First—to guide youth to a personal relationship with Jesus as Savior and Lord; second—to arouse in youth a realization of the fact that Christ's way is the only salvation for the world; third—to launch among young people and the Church at large a progress of Christian action."

It will be the privilege of a life time to attend this conference. Speakers of world renown will present issues vital to youth today. Special group meetings will press to the heart of the Christian place and responsibility in the world as it now is. Young people from every section of the South, with Christ as the leader, will join in a determined and mighty effort to give direction to the thought and action of the youth of our land. From this great conference shall come a program of Christian action that will stir the young people of Southern Methodism from coast to coast.

Everything possible has been done to make the cost of the trip comparatively small. The railroads are giving us special rates. The Memphis hotels are making special rates. Many of the Memphis homes are to be open for us. The registration fee for the conference will be only $4.

The registration blanks are not yet available, but I will put a notice in this column as soon as they are. In the meantime let's everyone talk it up and see just how many we can send.

Even though the quota allows your district only a small number of voting delegates, you can send as many as want to go. Only those elected to represent you will be allowed to vote.

Until more news comes,

BILLY.

APPRECIATION OF REV. H. G. HAWKINS

At the fourth quarterly conference of the Nebo charge, Mississippi Conference, the following was read:

We, the members of the Nebo charge, do hereby express our appreciation and gratitude to you, Brother Hawkins, for your grateful service to us for the past four years as presiding elder. We have been more than pleased with the effectiveness of your leadership; you have truly been a good shepherd.

We would like to have you back, if it were possible; but, if not, we, as members of the Nebo charge, and our pastor who serves us, feel that we could recommend you anywhere as a true disciple of Jesus Christ to all you come in contact with.

We want to thank you for your untiring efforts in giving sacred history of Methodism in Mississippi, and wish that you would give to us a complete history of early Methodism in our beloved state.

The best of good wishes and sincere prayers abide with you.

Respectfully submitted,

MEMBERS OF THE NEBO CHARGE.

SUMMER TRAINING PROGRAM FOR INTERMEDIATES IN THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Attention is called to the fact that Methodist boys and girls in Louisiana were privileged to attend a Christian Adventure Camp or Assembly in every section of the state. The programs presented were in every case approved by Nashville for credit on the Christian Adventure course, and every one was pronounced very successful by the leaders, who so very ably directed them.

A total of 338 young people enjoyed these camps and almost every one earned a credit. The camps, director, section represented and enrollment are as follows.

1. Assembly-Camp at Centenary College, Shreveport, for Shreveport, Monroe and Ruston Districts. Rev. Alvin Smith, dean. Ninety-seven delegates registered.
2. Bluff Creek Camp for New Orleans District. Rev. Jolly Harper, dean. Thirty-four delegates registered.
3. Ki-Ro-Li Camp for Monroe and Ruston Districts. Miss Mildred Dennis, dean. Seventy-two delegates registered.

FOR SALE BY MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

1. Pamphlet, 12 pages, "Historic Sites of Mississippi Methodism," by Hawkins and Cain. In guide-booklet style, postpaid, 10c each, or two for 15c.
2. Photo, 8x10 inches, of chart giving names of the 97 members of 1845 Louisville Convention, which planned organization of M. E. Church, South, with pictures of Soule, Andrew, Capers, Paine, Pierce, Bascom, Winans, Smith. Postpaid, $1 each. There is only one original in existence.
3. Jones' "Mississippi Methodism," in 2 volumes. Valuable. Sold originally at $2 per volume. Postpaid, $1.50 per set. New but shelf-worn. Supply limited.
4. "History of Lorenzo Dow," by H. A. Baker, five-column newspaper page reprint, on enamel paper, with picture of Dow. Postpaid, 10c each, or two for 15c.

Address Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Vicksburg, Miss.

4. Windywood for Alexandria District. Miss Ruth Lowrey, dean. Thirty-four delegates registered.

5. Lake Arthur Camp for Lake Charles District. Mrs. G. W. Pomeroy, dean. Fifty-seven delegates registered.

6. Bluff Creek Camp for Baton Rouge District. Rev. Ira Flowers, dean. Forty-four delegates registered.

These camps were the five-day type, with program including morning devotions, classes in approved courses, committee work, recreation, handicraft, interest groups, vespers, and various features for the night programs, such as campfires, banquets, stunts, and the like. The intermediates not only participated in, but directed a great many parts of the program, under the counselship of an adult. A surprising amount of initiative was shown, and the spirit of every group was pronounced just about perfect.

Next Summer the workers with this age group hope to set up sectional camps which will run ten days instead of the usual five or six days.

Of the thirty or more reports of vacation schools held over the state, fifteen held classes for intermediates, using the excellent material suggested for these courses. Two Christian Adventure Institutes are reported, one in Homer and one in Shreveport. Others will be held in various districts in the spring.

Co-operation is asked of all Church leaders in order that a worthwhile program may be promoted throughout the Conference.

MRS. CHARLES N. WHITE, Conference Director of Intermediate work.

AFFINITIES

"We are all discerners of spirits," says Emerson. Yet we say that the deeper truths of God are mysteriously hidden, and rightly so, from a standpoint of those who have not the spirit of Christ incarnated in their hearts and lives.

Love always recognizes love, there is no mistake nor any thing hidden about this great truth. Innocence, Humility, and Holiness know each other, they are affinities that invariably and eternally "flock together."

It was my privilege a few years ago while living in Tennessee to know and to love and reverence a certain pastor the Conference sent us. Upon first acquaintance I, like a great many others of our church, felt sorry for him since he was one of the most homely, ungainly and awkward appearing men I had ever seen. In other words, it seemed as if we had him at a disadvantage.

But not for long, for he captured all our hearts, and we would not have had him look other than God had made him, he became a symbol of the unmistakable love that transcends all physical defects, his very ugliness stood for things so high above physical attractions until he was "good to behold."

He did not "take on" over little children neither did he put himself out to be attractive to them, but they of their own accord gravitated towards him, any place they saw him. There was nothing mysteriously hidden here, little innocent children whose love is pure and unspotted recognized their own, parents did not have to coax or persuade the children to stay to preaching when it was his day, they accepted it as a matter of fact.

We also had a school teacher who was supposed to be a devout Christian, she at least kept up that appearance, she was beautiful of face and form and graceful, yet, in some way or somehow, she repelled little children, regardless of the strained and pretended effort she made at trying to be congenial with them. We can draw our own conclusions here.

A great many of us become too busy fighting the devil from the pulpit as well as out of it, that we forget that most effective weapon, CHARITY. It is the only thing that can prove our faith by our work.

McLead, Miss.

J. A. TEAGUE.

The Methodist Home

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. H. Hunt

Ps. 119:59—I thought on my ways, and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.

"I don't see how he could do it. He didn't think," said a mother to me concerning her son.

Thoughtlessness is a fruitful cause of sin. Man has cravings and passions. At first they are inactive. They are under control. But when some object presents itself, they respond with desire. But everyone has a conscience. Everyone can therefore close the book, turn off the jazz, terminate the conversation, repress the craving. If we disobey conscience, we sin. If we harbor the evil thought, we sin. The craving grows until finally it attains such strength that men overstep the mark. In the beginning they would have revolted against crime. But sin grips them and draws them on to destruction. Well may we stress the admonition, "Come, let us reason together, saith the Lord," (Is. 1:18). Thinking is necessary to salvation. It is necessary to both repentance and faith.

Think. We are not afraid of the truth. Bishop Dobbs has said, "He that is nearest the truth is closest to God." The more we see of God's world, the more we marvel at His handiwork. "Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge." (Ps. 19:2). The early Christians were not afraid to think. It has been said of them that they OUT-THOUGHT the pagans. And they outlived the pagans and outdied the pagans of course.

Cardui Relieves Periodic Pains and Nervousness

Women who suffer severe pain and nervousness at monthly periods, due to poor nourishment as often shown by a run-down condition, may find Cardui as helpful as so many women have reported. Here is what Mrs. Carl Graf, of Georgetown, Fla., writes: "Cardui has been very beneficial to me—having used it as a young girl and since when in a run-down condition. I can testify to its relieving pain during menstruation periods and as a tonic for women." . . . Thousands of women testify Cardui benefitted them. If it does not benefit YOU, consult a physician.

"I thought ON MY WAYS." It is not enough to think. What are we thinking about? Thought was a means of grace to the Psalmist, because he meditated upon his ways. He considered his own personal behavior. A man can find props for his faith in thinking of other things, but he must think of his own ways if he is to see his need of God. "The eyes of a fool are in the end of the earth." (Prov. 17:24). Thought needs to become personal. Then we will understand why the Psalmist cried out:

"I TURNED MY FEET UNTO THY TESTIMONIES." He saw the fruits of sin. He saw the hideousness of evil. He saw his need of God. He realized God's thoughts were much higher than his thoughts, and that God's ways were much higher than our ways. So he "turned his feet unto the testimonies" of God. Thought crystallized into action. His personal heart-searching led him to God's law.

The Prodigal son in the parable of Jesus "came to himself" when he thought upon his ways. He realized he had sinned. He confessed his sin and turned his steps to the father's house.

PRAYER

Thou hast endowed us with rational powers. May we use them aright. May we hear Thy call to reason.

We would think upon our ways. How great is our need of Thee.

We would also think of Thy ways; of Thy loving kindness and tender mercy; of Thy dear Son who died to save us from sin. We would penitently turn to Thee and pray for Thy favor.

We would commit all our ways unto Thee. We would think of those things that are pure, lovely, of good report, that have virtue and praise in them.

We would never cease to urge men to think; to consider their ways; and to turn unto Thy testimonies. We offer our prayer in the name of Jesus. May He ever be our Way.

SACRED MEMENTOS

Dear Brother Duren: Have read each copy of the Advocate about "The Trail of the Circuit Rider" and enjoyed every number.

I have a diary of my grandfather, James Walton, a Methodist minister who died at Richland, Miss., January 18, 1861. In the diary is a slip containing a certificate when he was appointed an Exhorter in Oktibbeha County, October 2, 1838, signed by L. D. Langford, presiding elder of Louisville circuit.

Then on a sheep skin where he was made a deacon December 4, 1842, signed by Bishop James Osgood Andrew, at Jackson, Miss.

The next little sheep skin is when he was made elder at Port Gibson December 15, 1844, signed by Bishop Edward Stores Janes.

Some of the older children were born near Huntsville, Ala., but he was preaching at Mayhew, Miss., when my mother was born. This was a hundred years ago, she was born November 30, 1835, the same date Mark Twain was born. I have in my possession a thimble with this date on it which some of the church members gave to my grandmother. Well, it takes me a long time to tell you what I started out to tell, this minister, James Walton, after moving just a lot of times, decided he would locate. He had a big family and as it was not so convenient to move from place to place, he selected this little town of Richland, Holmes County, on account of its having a good girls' school and college for boys. He bought a farm and made cotton on the side with slave labor. He had a lot of them, and, as his children would marry off, he would give them some of the slaves to start out home-making. In 1859 he was sent to represent the county as a legislator; he was opposed to slavery and thought they should be freed, but that the government should pay us for them. It was brought up at the Legislature in Jackson, and he was one of seven who voted to free the slaves. Well, the paper published at Jackson called "Mississippian" sure roasted these seven—called them traitors and a lot of other things. He went back home heart sick but he felt that they would be freed. His older children were girls but he had a son at Oxford at school when war was declared and he went out with the University Grays. They were to graduate in June, but volunteered in March, so they gave them their diplomas and I have them. He was Captain James Walton, wounded at the Battle of Murphresboro, Tenn.; and his Negro servant who went to war with him, old Levi Walton, brought him home and he lived with us for years after the surrender. This preacher's oldest daughter, Mary, married a Methodist minister named Phillips, he preached in a lot of towns in Mississippi a long time ago, was at Black Hawk, Miss., then at Benton, from there he transferred to the Louisiana Conference and had charge of the Female School at Mansfield, La., and I think died there. One of the boys worked on the Advocate in New Orleans, have forgotten just when but it was a long time ago. Some of this Phillips family live in Montclair, N. J., and they have asked me so many times to find out something about him; and just two months before Dr. Steel died, I wrote him, but never got any reply, as he was sick then.

I. B. PICKENS.

Clarksdale, Miss.

GOOD MANNERS

By Beth Bailey McLean. Manual Arts Press, Peoria, Ill. Price, $1.00.

This little book of 128 pages is just what its name implies. Miss McLean, formerly associate professor of Household Science, Iowa State College, gives a less detailed and technical, but not less comprehensive treatment of the proprieties of social life than is found in more elaborate books on etiquette. The book is simple because it is prepared for young people whose problems, though not less important, are less exacting as to conventions than are those of older people. Miss McLean's book will do much more than answer particular questions as to proper behavior, it will do much to make proper behavior the order of life for your boy or girl. It will help young people to realize that their behavior on great occasions but shows their making in the simple and daily contacts of life.

IN MEMORIAM
MRS. M. E. COCHRAN

Whereas, it has pleased our Divine Father to remove from our midst our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. M. E. Cochran, who as a member and assistant Bible Class of Magee, Miss., leaves us an example of faithful service and humility in doing the Master's work; and,

Whereas, during the years that she lived among us the good that she did and life that she lived will linger in our memory; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that her memory be cherished and her example of service be an inspiration for stronger faith and greater effort; and be it further

Resolved, that this testimonial of deep appreciation of her loyal and faithful Christian service be spread upon our minutes to remain a guide to future generations; that a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that a copy be sent to the following children who survive her: Mr. Roy Cochran, Fort Myers, Florida; Mrs. C. ## MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA the fourth round of his fourth year, as presiding elder of the historic Vicksburg District, has recently mailed a letter to each of the 341 stewards of the district, thanking them all for their uniform, un-failing confidence and courtesy, and urging that during the few weeks remaining between now and the Annual Conference session at Laurel they make sacrificial effort to pay in full the amounts assumed for the support of the ministry and for General and Conference Work. John G. Jones, the historian of Mississippi Methodism, in recounting the appointments of about ninety years ago, referred to the Vicksburg District as "that difficult but important field." The characterization would still be true.

"Having to make additional room for students in Grenada College," says Rev. J. H. Felts. "Great opening. Dr. Butts, President of Mississippi University, delivered a splendid opening address. D. H. Hall, New Albany, made a typical talk. That means rare, racy, interesting, helpful. Grenada citizens filled the auditorium. Many visitors. The total enrollment will crowd 150. Dr. Copeland still carrying on at the Methodist Church. Some fifty additions to date."

Rev. T. B. Thrower writes that the final check for the payment of Central Church, Columbus, Miss., has been mailed, and that the adjustment of the paving debt is all that stands in the way of the dedication of the church. We extend sincere congratulations to Brother Thrower and his people.

At Rocky Springs, of the Hermanville, Miss., pastoral charge, of which Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson is preacher in charge, serving thus for the fourth year, on Friday, October 11, there will be a "Home-Coming Day," with a program of exercises beginning at 10:30 a.m. The Central Group of pastors of the Vicksburg District, Rev. T. J. O'Neil being chairman, will meet there at that time, and have talks and discussions centering about the theme of "Balancing Our Budget." Features of the day will be papers read: "Uncle (Rev.) Tommie Owens," by Rev. J. B. Cain, of Yazoo City; and "Methodism in Claiborne County," by H. H. Crisler, editor of The Port Gibson Reveille. As previously on such occasions at Rocky Springs, dinner will be served, and the quarterly conference of the charge will be held.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH, MONROE, LA.

Church Board of Christian Education has been constantly alert, setting up and maintaining an educational program that would touch the life of every individual in its large church and church school.

With such an extensive program to promote, the Board employs an Educational Director who gives her full time to the supervision of the church school and Christian Education. A Financial Secretary is also employed. These two persons, working with a pastor who is ever alert, strive to cultivate every interest of a progressive church.

Besides observing all of the Special Calendar Days as required by our Discipline we list some of our outstanding accomplishments of the past year:

1. Childhood and Youth Week. 2. Entertained 150 young people at a Christian Culture Institute for Monroe District. 3. Sponsored Centenary "College Kapers." 4. One week of pre-Easter vesper services for young people, with a dedication service with many joining the church. 5. A period of evangelism, closing on Easter Sunday. 6. Conducted the Japanese Unit for the Children's Division during March. 7. A study of the Doctrines of our Church. 8. A reception for mothers on Mother's Day by our young people, followed by a vesper and Candle Recognition service. 9. A Garden Party for the high school and college graduates. 10. Letters of congratulation to the graduates and welcome to the home-coming college students. 11. Daily Vacation Church School for the Children's Division. 12. Thirty-three delegates represented our church school at Conference Assemblies and District Camps. 13. A well rounded social program for the youth of our church. 14. The organization of a Methodist Men's Club that meets monthly. 15. A Garden Party by the Woman's Missionary Society on their 25th anniversary. 16. A Bible Conference on September 12-15.

Bishop Dobbs will speak in the First Methodist Church on October 6. Our Standard Training School, including the churches in this section of the district, will be October 20-25.

Our church has already raised about $1,300 on Benevolences. Our records show 82 accessions to the church since last Annual Conference.

The church tries to give of itself to Monroe District. In co-operation with the presiding elder our doors are always open to meetings of the district and promotional activities that make for a better district and a greater Conference.

Rienzi Methodist Church

THE METHODIST CHURCH of Rienzi, Miss., in the Corinth District, has had a long and splendid history. It was organized in 1848, with John Blythe, of the Memphis Conference, as its first pastor. It has been in two Annual Conferences and six presiding elders' districts. It has been served by 30 presiding elders and 55 pastors. Among those worthies we find the names of R. P. Neblett, 1860; J. W. Honnell, 1867; John Barcroft, first secretary of North Mississippi Conference, 1868-69; Thomas Cameron, 1873-74; M. H. Honnell, 1896-98; D. C. Foust, 1900-01. Rev. E. M. Sharp is the pastor at the present time, with Rev. J. D. Wroten presiding elder.

The Woman's work was organized in 1879 and has continued without interruption to this day. The Young People's work was begun in 1902 and has had continuous existence. A Sunday school has been maintained since the earliest days of the church. These three arms of the church have contributed greatly to the spiritual life of the church and the community.

The present house of worship was erected in 1896, and was remodeled to meet the requirements of the modern church program in March of this year at a cost of $750. The whole church entered wholeheartedly into this project and every member contributed work or money, or both, with the result that it was all paid for when finished. Five class rooms were arranged inside the original walls, with plenty of room to spare. New pews were added at a cost of $400. It has been like a revival to the members to work co-operatively in this project, and come out loving each other better for it.

All finances will be paid in full by Conference.

Wallet of the Week

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW is not our ideal of a Christian philosopher, but he rang the bell when he said, that a parent can hardly tell a child that if it copies him exactly, it will be all that could be desired. If our own achievements as parents are not safe guides for our children, we may have to go further and say that our standards and philosophies may not be either. If we cannot tell them to do as we do, we ought to hesitate a little about insisting that they do exactly what we tell them.

WORLD RELIGIOUS NEWS, is the caption which an exchange gives to a paragraph stating that, "One of the most unique services ever held in St. Paul's cathedral occurred recently when seven hundred deaf and dumb persons from fourteen nations prayed and sang without uttering a word. They were athletes attending the fourth international games for the deaf and mute. The service was conducted in the international sign language." If the unusual may be considered the true test of news, the caption is correct. It was particularly unusual in that every man heard not in his "own tongue," but the representatives of fourteen nations prayed and sang in a common tongue.

PROFESSOR FRANK REBENHAM, director of the School for Polar Research of Cambridge University, told the British Association for the Advancement of Science that there are rushing "air rivers" in the Antarctic regions, which, like the rushing waters of Niagara, might one day be harnessed by batteries of windmills, and the power thus generated be transmitted by wireless to the Southern hemisphere. We won't say that such may not happen, but we will wager that when it does there will be a lot of Yankees doing a thriving business selling insulating suits for the imperilled inhabitants.

A "STUFFER" for folding and arranging the sections of a newspaper is an interesting example of the inventiveness of our generation. It is also an example of the effect of scientific progress upon employment. In this instance, it is said that the labor of a considerable group of boys will be dispensed with. Those boys helped to support their families by stuffing the papers by hand. Some of them may be absorbed in other departments, but the machine is essentially a labor-saving device, and the displacement of the boys will help to increase unemployment. One of the great problems of our social and scientific progress is to find a righteous solution of the problem thus raised.

THE FAMOUS ETHIOPIAN OIL CONCESSION was cancelled in the interest of the peace of the world, and at the insistence of U. S. Secretary of State, Cordell Hull. But it is reported that forty Greek ships are engaged in carrying wheat, coal and petroleum from Soviet Russia to Italy for use in Ethiopia. After all, it seems that the Soviets are less sincere about the matter of human equality and social justice than some of the peoples who are the foes of such chimerical political veneer. To the Soviets, it seems that trade returns are more important than the brotherhood of man.

MAHATMA GANDI, the apostle of "civil disobedience," is back in the news. Some time ago, he withdrew from the spot light with the avowed purpose of exemplifying the doctrine, "Liberty must come from within, not without." With action suited to that fine philosophy, he has devoted himself to the building of Wardha, a village which he seeks to make economically and industrially self-supporting, and self-sufficient in all human relations. He breaks his silence with the statement that prayer is the only hope for a peaceful settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian controversy.

A WORLD CONFERENCE of non-Roman Churches will be held at Oxford, England, July 13-25, 1937. The items which will occupy the thought of the Conference will be: "The Church and the Community," "The Church and the State," and "The Church in International Relations." The body will be limited to three hundred delegates from the Churches, and one hundred additional members who are esteemed to be specialists in some world field. The non-Roman Churches of the American continent will be assigned eighty-five delegates. It is believed that this will be the most important gathering that the Church has convened in many years.

REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D.D., LL.D., who for almost half a century has been connected with Moody Bible Institute in Chicago, passed to his eternal reward on September 21, 1935. At the time of his death he was president emeritus of the Institute, and he remained active to the end, although in his eighty-fifth year. Dr. Gray was born in New York City, where his remains were interred. He leaves three sons and a host of spiritual children to mourn his going. In all probability, his "Synthetic Bible Studies" was the greatest contribution which he made to biblical literature.

PERSONAL RELIGION

The declaration of the Chicago laymen to the effect that religion is a personal matter, has been challenged as an inadequate definition of religion—a half-truth. We quite agree that theologically it is a defective definition, but we think that personal religion is the half of truth which is often too much neglected. The problems of social life are objectified daily before our eyes and in the privations and needs of people whom we know, and we become so concerned about the solution of their economic and social problems that we overlook and even discount the sources of spiritual power and perception through which social obligations are defined. We would not like to be bound to a religion so personal as to be without a social outlook and horizon, and neither would we be content with a religion that offers nothing and demands nothing individually. We believe in the social implications and purpose of Christianity, but we believe in that as the spontaneous outrush of the experience of redemption, and that experience is certainly personal and individual. As we see it, an over-emphasis of the social values of Christianity has a tendency to change religion from the impact of a passion to a mechanistic program of social and industrial relations. We do not believe that the hope of the world lies in the social concept of any generation, but in the personal reality of the soul's responsibility to both God and man. It is an easier matter to manipulate a social program than it is to maintain a faith that shall be a constant inspiration and urge to social righteousness. But the difficult way is the way of permanence and power, personally and socially. It might have been easier for Jesus to have accepted the role of a dispenser of bread, an arbiter of selfish disputes, and a healer of physical ills; but he chose the way of the cross, the redemptive passion instead. It is natural for the Methodist Church to have a class leaning, it originated in a ministry to the spiritually and the socially underprivileged; but we must not forget that it arose out of the ministry of a man with an experience of supernatural salvation which was overwhelmingly personal.

RETHINKING LIQUOR

— Among the latest "Releases" which have found their way to our desk, is a document which relates to an organization to combat "excessive drinking." The organization is domiciled in New York City, where countless other such schemes have been incubated. It is a plea for moderation in drinking, which is in effect a surrender of the principle which lies at the foundation of the whole crusade for Temperance. In typical fashion, the movement seeks to forestall opinion by an array of great names and an alliance with big business. The Advertising Agent, one of whom is connected with an Insurance Company, asks for editorial comment. We do not question the sincerity of that organization, but to the solicitation, the editor has but one thing to say: "The Advocate does not propose to make terms with liquor." That position may not be to the liking of the Councilors and those who give supporting opinion, but we do not propose to rethink our position on liquor. We classify it with a rattlesnake, with which we make no truce. We are against liquor, and that's that.

DEFIANCE OF AUTHORITY

The story of the West Virginia resettlement project, known as the Reedsville subsistence homesteads, carried in Washington press reports, is not very creditable to some persons connected with that enterprise, if the report is true. If those entrusted by national agencies spend sums of money without a proper Congressional authorization and in defiance of the ruling of the Comptroller-General, it is certainly not calculated to promote respect for law among the rank and file of the people; and we refuse to admit that such an act can be cured by an allocation of other funds for that purpose. That project appears to involve an initial outlay of more than half a million dollars. We believe that it is Utopian and chimerical in its conception, and we do not believe that any brand of political sophistry could justify diverting an appropriation for a plant for the manufacture of postoffice supplies to an assembly plant for vacuum cleaners. We hold, also, that such disregard of authority should be the occasion for penalizing those primarily responsible for the act. We do not know a person involved in this controversy, but we do know that the people have a right to feel that the moneys raised by taxation are not squandered or diverted.

A PRESENT

A generous friend of the Advocate has made it possible for us to offer a lovely Christmas gift to the first one thousand people who send either new or renewal subscriptions to the Advocate. The present is a Christmas box which is free of advertising matter, and it contains twelve beautiful Christmas cards, all religious subjects. If bought singly the cards would cost a dime each and they could not be bought for less than sixty cents per box. We have one thousand boxes which we are going to send as a gift to the first one thousand subscribers—new or renewals. The offer begins today, and REMEMBER that when our supply is exhausted we will not be able to secure any more. You do not have to ask for the present—just send your subscription and we will do the rest. Practically a thousand statements will go out during this month, in addition to subscriptions which come in voluntarily. DO NOT FORGET THAT PRESENTS WILL GO TO THE FIRST ONE THOUSAND ONLY.

OUR ORPHANAGES

An institution which lies closest to the hearts of the Methodists is the home for the care of its orphan children. The first Methodist institution established in America was not a church, it was an orphanage—George Whitefield's Orphans Home in Georgia. No work that the Church undertakes to do makes a more unselfish appeal to the emotions of our people, nor does any make a more universal appeal to all the people. If there is left a trace of tenderness in the heart, it can always be touched by an appeal in behalf of the great numbers of defenseless, homeless and dependent children whom misfortune has left to become the wards of the world. In recognition of their responsibility, the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana have established comfortable and commodious homes for the care of these children. The home at Ruston, La., is out of debt, but it has in its care 185 children—our children, and they must be cared for. The home at Jackson, Miss., has about an equal number of children. It has been struggling for many years under a load of debt which the Methodists of that State are liquidating, while it cares for the children who come to its threshold. The main dependence of these two Homes is a free will offering taken in the Methodist churches and Sunday schools of these two States. The Harvest Day offering is at hand, and our people should not forget their responsibility to those little ones in Ruston and Jackson, and they should respond unanimously and liberally to the appeal of those charged with administering the affairs of our orphanage, and they should not forget the cares and the burdens of those who are doing a truly sacrificial service in caring for the children of the Homes. Let no, individual or church, forget our orphans.

NOTICE, LOUISIANA

The Conference Board of Education is asking the privilege of making a special report to the Conference, and in order to make this possible I am asking the presiding elders to send promptly the facts to Mrs. R. E. Smith at Shreveport.

A REQUEST FOR PRAYER

Rev. C. M. Morris, pastor at Greensburg, La., is in great distress on account of the serious illness of his baby daughter, Mary Elizabeth, who is seriously ill in Shumpert Sanitarium, Shreveport. She has been ill since July 1, and last week the doctor told Brother Morris that the prospect for her recovery was not such as to give great hope. Brother Morris asks that intercession shall be made for the recovery of his daughter who, as a little child, consecrated her life to the mission field.

Jesuits in New Orleans—This active society of Romanists have suffered severe losses by the death of their most eminent men. Rev. Blackney, president of the Jesuit College on Baronne St., and a highly accomplished man and scholar, died of yellow fever last summer; his successor, Rev. J. Adams, died of the same malady August 23, in Baton Rouge, whither he went to address the students of St. Peter and St. Paul's College, and to admit Father Lave into the Society of Jesuits; but his attack with fever, almost immediately upon his arrival, prevented the performance of either. . . . ## SERMON OF BISHOP DOBBS AT THE OPENING OF CENTENARY COLLEGE

It is a mark of an intelligent personality to take a wise and prompt interest in one's surroundings. One of the wisest men in education and religion which the South has produced was in the habit of sitting, in the evenings before he said his prayers, in a moment's meditation. On being asked why, he responded that he was getting the points of the compass. I remember that the words 'orient' and 'orientation' mean to know where the East is. That is a very important matter.

"In the beginning, I wish to refer to the history of the commonwealth of Louisiana. It is really the mother of states, twenty-one having been carved out of the Louisiana Purchase. Jefferson, then President of the United States, succeeded in purchasing this tract of land from Napoleon Bonaparte in 1807, for $15,000,000. He said, in so doing, that he stretched his power until it cracked. Louisiana is now one of the twenty-one states carved out of that original grant. The extreme length is 280 miles, and the extreme width is 276 miles; its population is approximately 20,000,000. It covers an area of 48,502 square miles. It is one of the outstanding states of the southern group and has a history commending it to all students; it has a history worthy of what you can do in the future. In 1812, it was admitted into the Union and twelve years later Centenary College made its appearance; and 111 years from that date it is still going on. This, then, is the oldest institution of learning in the entire southwest, having an unbroken record of 112 years. It is the senior institution in the city in which you live.

"A word now, upon the text: A tourist, racing men, and athletes, go from a starting point. From that point all records are made. President Cline has indicated that point; we are at the starting point this morning. I want to say a word about its significance. This is the opening; you have a right to ask: 'What have you to say to us?' We have this to say: 'We bid you welcome and good cheer, on behalf of the board of trustees and faculty, into an institution that believes that truth is mighty and will prevail, and that a new degree of intellectual power is cheap at any price.' We have the opportunity to open new springs of power. He is no friend of youth who drives a line of cleavage between generations; we cannot separate generations. We are organic in our relations; a structure that has grown; integrally we have grown. Recently I visited the grave of my grandfather. I felt, as I paused before his modest tombstone, that I cannot consider myself detached from him. There is no line of cleavage between youth and maturity, and he who seeks to drive such a line is no friend of America.

"We should feel very grateful this morning. One million faculty members take their place in this 'great room,' one million college students are gathered there also. Placed in a line three feet apart, this great throng would stretch from New Orleans to Chicago. That is something of which to be proud. You are admitted into a fellowship with that great company.

"The possibilities of tomorrow will probably treble those of the past. To be sure some may be out of employment; but nobody on this campus should be out of work. We may be out of hire, but not out of work. When I appeared on the scene, there were very few opportunities for self-realization. Now there are seventy-six lines toward self-realization. Look what has happened in half a generation—new fields such as radio, airplanes, air-conditioning, and electricity offer innumerable opportunities not available even a generation ago. Now, the vocation chooses the individual.

"Again, I speak a word of good cheer. We believe we are justified in the conclusion that there are seven major industries in America; they have 17,000,000 employees. The American home this morning has 25,000,000 women, assisted by some 3,000,000 domestic operating and presiding over the American home. These industries have invested in them $117,000,000,000, and in the American home we have invested $121,000,000,000. These seven major industries expend $57,000,000,000. The homes expend $55,000,000,000. So we bid you to walk together. We congratulate you and do not speak words of despondency or depression. The great challenge is one to which you will respond; the path is before you. We believe you will open up new areas of endeavor and accomplishment.

"Let me now say a word concerning the three-fold aim of Centenary College. The first is scholarship. We are not here to substitute anything for that. A new degree of intellectual power is cheap at any price. A word about scholarship—that is a vast tract of our knowledge brought under the mastery of the human mind. The understanding of that knowledge is more important than the mastery of the facts. It was Leonardo da Vinci who said, 'The highest pleasure is to know the joy of understanding; the highest wisdom is to know the difference between right and wrong.'

"Another aim of Centenary is character. Character must be expressed in one's manners and morals. Here, you and I are under close observation. Many times we shall not be conscious of it. There is sort of a committee of plain-clothes police—an invisible citizenship who observe us in our manners and conduct, frequently awarding prizes and frequently withholding them from us.

"Manners mark the gentleman and lady. May I have the pleasure of conferring upon you the title of 'Centenary Gentlemen and Ladies.' Our manners distinguish us in a great many ways. The wise and the highly trained man or woman understands much at a glance. How do we come down stairs, shake hands, greet a companion?

"A certain duke gave the city of Geneva $100,000, because one of its policemen was courteous to him. A stenographer in one of our American cities was bequeathed $25,000, because she was courteous to an elderly lady. Concerning morals, remember this: say what language we will, we cannot say anything but what we are.

"Lastly, service. I have the pleasure, as your friend and neighbor, in citizen's clothes, and your servant, to say to you we are very happy that it is our privilege to invite you into this field. We have no doubt about the future; we are in the habit of thinking civilization is at its meridian, when, as Emerson said, 'It is at the cock-crowing hour of the dawn'."

SOME OBSERVATIONS

By Rev. W. R. Lott

We have all enjoyed being convulsed with a hearty laugh. Indeed there is a "Ministry of Laughter." I do not use the word "ministry" in the same light as it is used in religious circles but in a broader sense of doing good to human beings. If some churches could have a hearty laugh to become contagious among the members the Lord's work would increase. The same is true of many homes and other groups of people. Solomon said, "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine." The world has appreciated those who make it laugh more than those who make it think. The gift to see the humorous side of life has helped in many trying situations.

A MESSAGE FROM THE CONFERENCE LAY LEADER OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: The report of receipts for benevolences just received from the Conference Treasurer, F. Y. Whitfield, shows that up to September 25, the total for this year is $20,961.33. Last year the total for the same date was $9,600.93. The report for this year to September 25, by districts and charges, is as follows:

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

BY W. L. DUREN

Were not the petitions renewed in 1840? Nothing could have been more unwise than to include churches and charges in an organization whose restrictions would have been politically impossible of execution. It was undoubtedly the mind of the Church that there should be established a natural border which would fit the political conditions and relieve both sections of the Church of the disturbances which brought about the situation of 1844.

It would not be easy to maintain a charge of infraction of the Plan by the South, as to charges located in Virginia, but which were attached to the Baltimore or Philadelphia Conferences. The Westmoreland circuit had been fighting for a decade to be emancipated from the rule of the Baltimore Conference, and the same general reason would apply to Accomac and Northampton counties on the Eastern Shore, belonging to the Philadelphia Conference. Any effort to eliminate the causes of friction which had brought on the disorganization imminent at that time must have included such cases.

It does not seem to have been the purpose of the South to go beyond what it understood to be permissible under the stipulations of the Plan. At the first General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1846, after four consecutive efforts to free itself from the impractical connection with the Baltimore Conference, Westmoreland circuit was taken over by the Southern Church. A committee, whose report was signed by William M. Wightman, examined into all charges of infractions, and the report said that the charges were "entirely groundless" and that the administration "has been strictly conformed to the rule set forth by authority of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, in its legislation on this subject, in 1844."

The last major difficulty to be adjusted was the division of the properties held by the Church, particularly the properties held for the whole Church. Properties held by local congregations, except those of the border, passed to the Southern Church with practically no resistance. Along the border, where feeling was sharply divided, the control of the property became a seriously contested issue, and many suits at law were instituted. In the very nature of the case, the final adjudication of those suits would depend upon the ecclesiastical legitimacy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and that, in turn, involved the legality of the Plan of Separation, and to that phase of the problem, we now direct attention.

It would be unfair to charge the Methodist Episcopal Church with indifference to the property rights of the South. In 1848, the Methodists, North, had been brought, by a process of intemperate discussion and ill-considered Annual Conference resolution, to believe that the Plan of Separation was invalid and that the previous General Conference had exceeded its authority. It is true that large claims for the powers of that body had been made in the case of Bishop Andrew, but on the property matter there was specific restraint in the "sixth restrictive article" of the Discipline. The Annual Conference had refused to allow the modification of the rule, and to Methodist minds that seemed to settle the question, although a way around the very same obstruction had been found in the settlement of the Upper Canada Claims a few years before. It must be said to the credit of the General Conference of 1848, that, while it declared the Plan a "nullity," the question of property settlement had been left open by a rather hazy suggestion of arbitration.

Aside from the state of feeling existing throughout the country, and particularly in the Church, there was a conviction that the "restrictive articles" of the Discipline were a much more extended bar to Conference action than they proved to be. Under the circumstances, it was easy and even natural for the North to assign such values to these constitutional reservations, and without censure or a just implication of moral obtuseness. When the general excitement and the zone of contingency are taken into consideration, the vote on the change of the "restrictive articles," in the Conferences at the North, does great credit to the mind and heart of that section of the Church. Out of twenty-two hundred and thirty-one votes cast in Northern Conferences, there was a majority of ninety-seven votes in favor of the immediate division of the property. As a matter of fact, the vote on the very same proposition, touching the claims of Upper Canada, gave a much larger margin against the settlement. When the latter vote was taken in 1832 and 1833, there were no complications of bitterness and prejudice, and the South was a disproportionately large contributor to the adverse vote.

The test case on the validity of the Plan of Separation was the suit involving the local Methodist Church at Maysville, Kentucky. That congregation, being a border charge, acted under the provisions of the Plan of Separation and by a small margin decided to adhere South. Seven members of the official board were included in this majority and the remaining three voted with the minority. It appears that the larger property holders and the more influential part of the membership voted with the minority. After the vote to adhere South, suit for the property, on behalf of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was begun immediately in the name of a Mr. Armstrong, who claimed to have been one of the larger contributors to the building. In the local court, there was no decision—the use of the building being given on alternate Sundays to each of the two contending factions. The suit was then carried up to the Court of Appeals of Kentucky where the decision gave the Plan of Separation complete validation; it was held that every right of the original Church was renounced in the part alienated; and that no part of the original remaining, by whatever name called, could reassert in the name of the whole the power and rights of the whole. The facts in this suit have been given because of their bearing upon the major suits which were decided later.

The pivotal suits in the adjustment of property interests had to do with the connectional properties—the Book Concern in New York and Cincinnati, and the Chartered Fund in Philadelphia. A suit for the division of the Cincinnati properties was filed June 12, 1849, and it was decided adversely to the Church, South, in July, 1852, and the decision was reversed by the Supreme Court of the United States, in a decision handed down on April 25, 1854. The suit affecting the Book Concern in New York was filed July 13, 1849, argued May 19-29, 1851, and was decided in favor of the Church, South, November 11, 1851, and the matter was finally settled December 8, 1853.

Following the decision of the Property Case, some dissentients expressed opinions which were more positive than wise or prudent. But inasmuch as the decision was rendered by a full bench and was unanimous, it is scarcely necessary to take notice of adverse lay opinion. There were some almost comical uncertainties recorded in some of the decisions. As we have said of the Maysville, Kentucky, decision, the use of the church building was given to each of the litigants on alternate Sundays. At Harrisonburg, Virginia, the court declined the plea of the North and gave the property to the trustees named by the South, but with the significant qualification, "with other trustees to hold the property for whomsoever it may be entitled." Judge Leavitt, who presided in the Cincinnati case, said: "Although the conclusions to which I have arrived have been satisfactory to myself, I experience the highest gratification from the reflection that, if I have misconceived the points arising in the case, and have been led to wrong results, my errors will be corrected by that high tribunal to which the rights of these parties will, without doubt, be submitted for final adjudication." Where there was so much uncertainty in the minds of judges, we can afford to be charitable toward those who arrived at their conclusions without legal training.

The opinion of the Supreme Court may be summarized thus: The General Conference was entirely competent to effect the division, and the failure to change the restrictive article of the Discipline did not affect the validity of the Plan of Separation. Then, the Church having been divided by its own action, the property rights of the South could not be defeated by the refusal of the Annual Conference to permit the change of the restrictive article of the Discipline. The change of the restrictive article would have permitted the Church itself to make full and immediate adjustment of the property rights; but the power of a court of equity supersedes every ecclesiastical restriction in its right to render justice in property division.

Dr. D. A. Whedon, in an article in the Methodist Quarterly Review for April, 1870, expressed the opinion that if the property question should come to a test at that time, there would be a reversal of the opinion rendered in 1854. But four years after Dr. Whedon made this prediction, a decision was rendered in favor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the "Jonesboro Camp Ground and Parsonage Case." The case related to Brush Creek camp ground which contained some four acres of land with a parsonage on it, in the suburbs of Johnson City, Tennessee. The property had been deeded to the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1811, but had passed to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the Plan of Separation. In 1865, the trustees of the property went over to the Methodist Episcopal Church and undertook to carry the property with them. Suit was filed for its recovery and Chancellor Smith restored the property to the Southern Church, with an assessment for rentals and damages from the time of the filing of the suit. The facts were somewhat different and the decision was probably influenced by the earlier litigation, but the property was returned to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and there it remains.

In addition to the ecclesiastical phase of the contest, some incidents of the War Between the States added to the trouble. In these, the name of Secretary Stanton plays an important part. The biographer of Bishop Simpson says: "As our armies penetrated the slave states, many churches were abandoned and left wholly untenanted; but in still others disloyal ministers remained as rallying-points of disloyal opinion. Secretary Stanton, therefore, at the instance of Bishop Ames, issued an order, November 30, 1863, placing at his disposal 'all houses of worship belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which a loyal preacher appointed by a loyal bishop does not now officiate.' ## Mississippi and Louisiana

A few days ago we received greetings from a friend "from the banks of the Yazoo!" We do not know whether our friend was making a run on "the banks" or vice versa.

Rev. J. E. Lawhon, Nettleton, Miss., charge, has had a successful revival season and expects to report all finances in full at the Conference in Amory. Dr. Buhrman adds this to the list sent in a few days ago.

Rev. W. F. Baggett writes that he is hoping to make the best report this year that has been made by Kreole charge. All of his Conference claims have been paid in full for the year, and he and his people are pressing for the goal of "Everything in full."

Rev. Henry G. Hawkins says that at the fourth quarterly conference of Center-ville, Miss., charge, September 22, the assessment for benevolent work for the whole charge was paid in full. Rev. E. A. King is the preacher in charge and he conducted the effort personally.

Rev. H. L. Johns, the enterprising and aggressive presiding elder of Monroe, La., District, is out with an informing bulletin which has the caption: "Our Church Must Come to the Mark." The bulletin is signed by the presiding elder and the district lay leader, Hon. W. B. Clarke.

Rev. D. T. Ridgway of the Silver Creek charge, has just concluded a very successful revival campaign in which he was assisted by various brethren of the Mississippi Conference. There were thirty additions to the membership of the churches and finances are ahead of last year.

We have a letter from Rev. B. F. Jones, veteran member of the Mississippi Conference living at Brookhaven, who speaks enthusiastically of the energy and zeal of Dr. Winfield, dean of Whitworth College. He says that Whitworth is one of the best equipped junior colleges in the South.

Rev. M. W. Beadle, of the Lake Arthur, La., charge, has been holding revival meetings in Texas, according to a communication from Brother J. M. Grady.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Brother Grady is a steward at Cleveland, Texas, and he says that the ministry of Brother Beadle was very acceptable and helpful.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, pastor at Grand Cane, La., reports favorable conditions throughout his charge. He has had thirty-nine additions to date, twenty-two of them on profession of faith. At Keithville, and Stonewall he did his own preaching and Rev. A. J. Martin led the singing.

Rev. W. R. Lyons has been painfully but not seriously ill with a trouble caused by an infected tooth. Brother Lyons has received more money already than the charge paid last year, and he will probably have the best report on benevolences that Pearl River charge has ever made.

In a note to the office, Mrs. Mattie Irwin of Port Gibson, Miss., says that she is eighty-five years of age and has had the Advocate in her home since she was a little girl, except for a short time when it was suspended on account of war. We trust that it may continue to bring joy and strength to her heart.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs who was to have filled engagements at Rayne Memorial and at Parker Memorial churches, New Orleans, on October 13, will fill those engagements on October 27 instead. The change was by agreement and in order that the Bishop might meet a pressing demand of the Orphanage at Jackson, Miss.

We have received a letter from Mrs. C. L. Barmore, Mangham, La., enclosing some clippings which we are glad to have. She calls particular attention to the fine philosophy of Mrs. Christian Keener, to which we have referred already. Mrs. Keener's disposition of her estate was certainly a splendid exposition of her faith.

Rev. Ira W. Flowers, Covington, La., is pressing the campaign for a successful closing out of his year's work. He has just concluded a good revival at Fitzgerald, where he was assisted by Rev. J. C. Rousseaux. There were six additions to the church. Brother Flowers is well on the way to full payment on his benevolences.

Rev. F. N. Sweeny, superannuate of Franklinton, La., writes that Mr. W. W. Babington of that city has been a reader of the Christian Advocate for seventy-three years, and a subscriber for sixty years. He is eighty years old, an honorary member of the board of stewards, and is secretary of the Men's Bible Class of his church.

In an effort to decipher a news notice which came to the editor, we said that the house-mother of the freshmen at Millsaps College is the widow of the late T. B. Hollomon. But she is the wife of T. B. Holloman, M.D., of Itta Bena, Miss., who insists that he is very much alive.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Let me ask:

Have you ordered your envelopes for the Week of Prayer Offering? "Simple acts often count for the building of God's new order: a word, a gift, an act of kindness. All of us who try to follow the WAY seek for these opportunities. One such wide-open opportunity comes to each member of the Woman's Missionary Society during the Week of Prayer which falls this year on November 3-9. Our workers in many places are laboring under discouraging situations and in the midst of real hardships. Each year during this special season we try to relieve this tension at least at two points, one in the home field and one in the foreign, by making contributions usually for buildings which constitute practically our only building projects.

The largest Week of Prayer Offering in the history of our work was made in 1928 when it amounted to over $100,000. The following year over $90,000 was received. There has been a gradual decline during the years that have followed. Last year we contributed $47,089, which amounted to less than nineteen cents per member. Needless to say not all our membership have contributed at any one time; our greatest task is to arouse the entire constituency asking that each member give according to her ability."

* * *

By the time this reaches you your third quarter's report will have been sent. I hope that included in that report was an offering to your North Mississippi Scarritt Scholarship Fund. Today, September 24, Miss Elsie Hudson, your Scarritt Scholarship girl, is spending her first day in Scarritt as a student of that great school. You need not limit your offering to one dollar. Five more or less would be better.

* * *

Are you looking for something to do? There is the World Outlook Campaign. Do you make the World Outlook a vital necessity in your Missionary Society, Sunday school and church?

* * *

Is your Spiritual Life Group a power in your auxiliary, church and community? Is your quiet hour a preparation for your activities?

Your fourth quarter's zone program follows:

1. Devotional (stewardship).
2. Reports of auxiliaries.
3. Election of chairman and secretary.
4. Introduce World Outlook campaign.
5. Round table of activities on C. S. R. work for preceding quarters in auxiliaries (general presentation and discussion).
6. Check Efficiency Aim, urge each auxiliary to attain same.
7. Talk on value of Spiritual Life Groups.
8. Consecration service.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

COACHING DAY FOR SEASHORE DISTRICT

The coaching day for Seashore District was held at First Church, Gulfport, September 12, with Mrs. J. L. Power, district secretary, in the chair.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Miss Cunningham, the new deaconess at the Biloxi Wesley House. The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. P. M. Carraway. She used Romans 3:9-24 as the basis for her beautiful talk on our opportunities and responsibilities, not only in the home field, but also in foreign lands.

The author of the book, "That Other America" impersonated by Mrs. Glen Rutledge, was introduced. She spoke very interestingly of the life and work of Dr. MacKay.

Mrs. E. T. Rieman of Gulfport, was the principal speaker of the day. She gave a most interesting review of the book, "That Other America," illustrating her talk by use of maps of Central and South America.

A dramatization of the Pan-American

Union was given by twenty-two ladies of the Gulfport auxiliary. They were seated around a table each holding a flag of the country she represented. One by one they rose and gave a brief history of her country, and some important event connected with it—the last one to speak being the representative of the United States.

Mrs. R. E. Johnson was chosen as diction critic to assist in the definition and pronunciation of difficult phrases and words used in the book.

We were very fortunate to have with us one of our own deaconesses, a Mississippi Conference product, Miss Maude Fail, who spoke very entertainingly of her work in the mining settlements of the Oklahoma Conference.

At the noon hour the Gulfport ladies served a lovely lunch which was appreciated and enjoyed by all present.

Our new district secretary has entered upon her duties with an enthusiasm which she is able to impart to others, so we are expecting a good year on the Seashore District.

The meeting adjourned with prayer, and all left feeling that it was good to be there.

MRS. J. M. LEWIS.

FAILURE?

By Arthur Madison Shaw

Any day was like another:

Poverty and care and toil
Seemed the portion of our brother;
Tangled in misfortune's coil.

Barest need of goods possessing;
Naught of gold or silver store.
Love and sorrow, pain and blessing
Brought him patience—nothing more.

Often down—though nobly fighting—
Always whipped, but always brave;
All his dreams grim fate kept blighting,
From his cradle to his grave.

Yet, to Good his soul was loyal;
To the Best he gave his best.
Death to him was triumph royal,
And his memory is blest.

For he followed Right undaunted;
Turned his back when wrong enticed;
And when death his vision haunted,
Cried, "All hail! To live is Christ!"

EARLY RULES OF METHODISM

"Backbiting" was one of the cardinal sins condemned by the early Methodists, according to a document recently made public in a sale at Sotheby's auction rooms in London. Dr. James R. Joy, editor of the Christian Advocate, New York, draws attention to the six points of brotherhood which he recently discovered had been written by John Wesley, founder of Methodism and signed by John and Charles Wesley, John Nelson and E. Perronetz.

The six points of brotherhood were written and presented by John Wesley to the early Methodists and read as follows:

It is agreed by us whose names are underwritten:

1. That we will not listen, or willingly inquire after any ill concerning each other.
2. That if we do hear any ill of each other, we will not be forward to believe it.
3. That as soon as possible we will communicate what we hear, by speaking or writing to the person concerned.
4. That till we have done this, we will not write or speak a syllable of it to any other person whatsoever.
5. That neither will we mention it after we have done this, to any other person whatsoever.
6. That we will not make any exception of any of these rules, unless we think ourselves absolutely obliged in conscience so to do.

Signed: John Wesley, Charles Wesley, John Lambath, E. Perronetz, Jonathan Reeves, Joseph Connley, C. Perronet, Thomas Maxfield, I. Dorres, John Jones, John Nelson, William Shent, John Halme.

TEACHING GOD'S LOVE TO A CHILD

On the limb of an oak that stood by the road side near his home, a father located the nest of a pair of Cardinals, and on a beautiful Sunday morning beneath this bird home, he lifted into his arms his little four-year-old girl who was clothed in as much beauty and loveliness of human nature as God had put into the simple bird life and brilliant plumage of this pair of Cardinals. Mary had been often through the woods and fields with her father learning what he knew about many things and particularly birds. There was a pardonable pride each in the other and also an understanding between them that now was ushering in a moment of mutual joy.

He pointed out to her the nest on which hovered the mother bird robed in natural beauty; not a touch of anything superfluous or superficial. To avoid exciting either the mother bird or the mate that he knew was near, he spoke softly as a warning against a loud expression of Mary's intense interest and inquired if she could see the beautiful bird that rested so snugly in the nest.

"Yes," replied Mary in a whispered tone, obeying the injunction implied in her father's voice.

"That is the mother bird," continued he. "She has under her wings three tiny baby birds."

After a brief pause he continued: "Now, would you like to see the father bird, I hear him and you shall see him also. He is not the color of the mother bird, but is the prettiest, brightest red in all the world and is the neatest, handsomest little fellow you ever saw. He is very pretty, even prettier than the mother bird. He is not far away. I hear him. Ah! I see him. There he is; you will see him in a moment."

As the father stepped first one way and then another whole pointing into the tree top where the gay little fellow was perched, he could see the joyous anxiety in the child's face, and the moment she spied him, her little hands went together with a gentle clap. Her face beamed with joy as she gazed at this most gorgeously groomed, yet unpretentious, songster of the forest. She had never seen such a beautiful bird. Her father had talked much with her about birds, but this first happy privilege of pointing out to her the most beautiful of all birds had long been delayed because of their scarcity and shyness.

"Do you hear him," asked the father. "He doesn't want us to go near the mother bird and the little ones; he is urging us away. See how he watches us. But he should not fear. We are not going to harm them, are we? Isn't he good natured? He wants us to go away, but he doesn't scold us. He pleads very earnestly, but in a sweet and kindly voice."

"Now I'll tell you something else about him. He never goes far away, but when he knows his little home and the good mother bird and the little birdies are safe, he is very happy, so he goes high up in the tree tops and sings softly and very sweetly. He stays near the nest because he loves them and doesn't want any harm to come to them. Now, we will step back under the nest and see what he does. See, he's coming nearer and is begging us more earnestly not to disturb his mate and little ones. But we wouldn't harm them for anything, would we? we love them. They are good birds, and oh, so pretty."

"They built that little home themselves. It's for the baby birds they love so much. We'll come back in a few days to see the fuzzy little fellows and watch the mother and father bring food to them."

At this point, the inherent baby love sought expression as Mary unconsciously placed her arms about the father's neck; and as he continued the story, telling her how faithfully the parent birds would care for and protect the little ones while they put on coats of bright colored feathers, some yellow, some red; and that they would be such dear little ones for the mother and father to love, she closed her little arms tighter and tighter about his neck till the father lost the story about the birds and stood silently reflecting upon the very deep and touching effect this simple lesson in love had upon his little child. But, as he stood for a moment in silence and in deepest thought, he relaxed not the least in his support of the little one so dear to him who was also silent and lost in the maze of love, beauty, and simplicity of the little birds above her in the trees.

Fathers, have you known the sweetness and tenderness of a little child's love? If so, has it been the joy to you that it should? Is God offering you that privilege now? If so, you have much to reflect upon, and if you would be counted a success in the training of your children, make them your daily companions and "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." You will be laying up treasure in Heaven that will later in your life, when the little ones have grown into manhood and womanhood, yield an immense dividend in satisfaction and love.

Gray Hair

Best Remedy Is Made At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Bayer Aspirin

the race. It is not confined to religion, Jewish or Christian, but is of universal concern. Retributive suffering sometimes meets with approval if the connection between cause and effect is discerned, but suffering of itself is so distasteful to man that he seems always puzzled by voluntary or vicarious submission to pain. In our own generation, we are likely to envy those who are sound in health, comfortable in purse, and free from care or anxiety, but when we choose our heroes from the past, we ignore the unscarred. Pampered pets of fortune who never shouldered a burden, faced a trial, nor shared another's sorrow have no interest for us, while those who suffered to make the world better attract us as the magnet draws steel. What matter the harpies of pain if one may only know that he has brought a coal to the hearthstone of shivering humanity? Character is won through endurance of hardship for worthy ends; through putting tomorrow above today, preferring the permanent to the transitory, the spiritual to the material. Nobility develops among the self-sacrificing dwellers on the hard-favored hills of Mamre rather than in the ease-loving inhabitants of the lush plains of Sodom.

And is this attractive to men? Far from it! They prefer the soft raiment and imperial trappings of royalty. They love show, display, the gaudy, the spectacular. To them, a suffering servant is out of place where great things are being done—"a shoot out of dry ground." Men despise him, reject him, oppress him, afflict him. They believe his suffering to be punitive and well deserved, even that he is "stricken and smitten of God." So has the world received and rejected its "suffering servants."

The story is as timeless and deathless as that of the prodigal son. It is as fresh today as when penned by the prophet more than twenty centuries ago. Did he speak of himself, or of another? Of one or of a group? Probably of all, but pre-eminently of One, for the story so fits one Life as to appear biography rather than prophecy. So noble is vicarious suffering that it is esteemed worthy of God himself. It is God who stoops to lift and waits to serve. Out of humiliation at last comes exaltation, and the Sufferer receives his portion with the great. The transaction is not a purchase but a pardon. Numbered with transgressors, he was not of them but for them. At last the world was to see that above all others, he represented God, God's love, God's forbearance, God's forgiveness.

PASCAGOULA, MISS.

Dear Advocate: We began our revival meeting Sunday morning, assisted by Rev. T. O. Prewitt, of Hattiesburg. The outlook is very encouraging. We have had 60 additions to the church this year and have built a new parsonage. More than one-half of our benevolences are paid. Good reports were made to the fourth quarterly conference, which was held Sunday night, September 22.

Last Thursday night we had 27 men in attendance at a Fun and Fellowship meeting held in the basement of the church. The ladies of the church gave us a splendid lunch. We plan to make this a regular thing, meeting once a month.

We have some splendid people here and they are giving the present pastor every encouragement.

Yours,

E. S. LEWIS.

CARTHAGE METHODIST CHURCH

On Wednesday evening a large number of officials and members came together at the Methodist Church in response to a Workers' Questionnaire for a Business Social hour. A resume of the year's work was brought before the assembly in reports from the pastor, the representatives from the departments of the Church School, the League, the Woman's Missionary Society, the Board of Stewards, the prayer meeting and all the committees. A cheerful spirit prevailed as progress was noted in most all the departments of the church. Enthusiastic plans were discussed for the closing out of the year and great expectations were anticipated for the coming year. After the Woman's Missionary Society served refreshments the session closed with a short meeting of the local board of Christian Education, at which time the following officers were confirmed or elected; with Rev. Andrew J. Boyles, the pastor in the chair: Prof. W. D. Logan, general superintendent; Mrs. G. L. Orr, superintendent and teacher adult division; Prof. R. A. Glaze, superintendent of young people's division; Mrs. W. D. Logan, superintendent of children's division; Miss Ethel Edwards, president of young people; Mr. Geo. Lee Orr, teacher of men's Bible class; Prof. Jim C. Barnett, teacher of the professional class; Mrs. G. N. Guice, superintendent intermediate department; Mrs. E. R. Henderson, superintendent junior department; Mrs. Bonnie K. Elliott, superintendent primary department; Miss Fay Williams, superintendent beginners department; Mrs. A. J. ## TALLULAH, LA.

Brethren: Just a line from the only Methodist church in Madison Parish, and also a few words regarding the activities of late in this part of the state. In Tallulah we have just closed a fine meeting with Rev. Jimmie Harris doing the preaching. As a result of this meeting the church was greatly revived and without any doubt much good was accomplished. There were eight additions to the church. Brother Harris preached some fine sermons and the people attended and appreciated every message.

I shall begin a meeting for Rev. J. M. Alford at Fairbanks on Monday, September 30, to continue for ten days.

The situation here regarding our church is fine and we are looking forward to closing up a great year for the church.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

II. Cor. 5:1—"House not made with hands."

Raymond Moley declared in the issue of August 27, 1935, in the magazine "Today:" "Through the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Farm Credit Agencies the government has now lent nearly $5,400,000,00 against real estate. . . . It is larger than the sum of all state and local debts before the war, larger than all our industrial debts, or all city mortgages put together, twenty years ago."

In this era of building and reconditioning so many houses, we wonder how much thought is given to "the house not made with hands."

"In building a house, specifications are drawn up. The architect devises a plan. The carpenters diligently carry out the plan. How many lives are carefully planned? How many persons have a definite vision of the character they would build? How many build haphazardly without any plan?

What of the foundations of the spiritual house? The Lincoln Memorial at Washington is reputed to have cost $1,600,000. It is said that seven-eighths of that amount was spent on the foundation. Christian character demands the solid foundation of Jesus Christ. It cannot be built on wood, hay, or stubble, nor earthly materials. The seeping soils of the world demand that we give careful heed to the foundations.

What of the kitchen where much of the housekeeper's work is done? "The Father worketh hitherto, and I work," said Jesus.

What of our spiritual diet? The food must be wholesome and the dining room clean.

What of the living room? What of the parlor? The social life is a certain test of character.

What of the library? Do the children know more about Shirley Temple than they do of Moses and St. Paul?

What of the roof? Leaks from the world will stain the interior and such discolorations will spoil the beauty, the attractiveness, the winsomeness of the house.

Let us do all we can to keep the spiritual habitation unspotted from the world.

Mr. W. C. Trimble of Jackson, Miss., has written the following poem:

"The house you build, though of granite,
Will crumble and fall in decay,
But the life you build is eternal,
Though it be of plastic clay.

The mortar you mix is fragile,
Of sand and water and lime,
But the mortar of Master-builder,
Kind deeds that live through time.

So the secret of strength you are seeking
For the temple you build for aye,
You'll find hid deep in the mortar,
And not in the granite or clay."

PRAYER

Our Father, we realize that "unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it." May we carefully plan a life with Christ as our guide. May the whole structure be fitly framed together. May our treasure be "where moth and rust cannot corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal." Dwell Thou with us, we pray in Jesus' name.

FROM LONGTOWN CIRCUIT

Our summer meetings are past and the old adage, "A working church wins" is again proven.

In two of our meetings Rev. E. B. Sharp of Crenshaw, Miss., gave us some real soul-food messages, and we received into membership a fine girl.

In two meetings the pastor did all the pulpit work with a good hearing in each meeting.

At See's Chapel and Pleasant Grove Rev. A. P. Stephens of Koscusko, Miss., led the meetings. The opinion that a third successive leading of a meeting to be unwise is again defeated, for at See's Chapel is Brother Stephens third successive time; all seemed to feel that this was the best of the three.

As a result of this meeting two Baptist churches and four Methodist churches, touching as many charges, were benefited by those who came indicating their acceptance of Christ and a desire to unite with the church, a total of twenty-two, including some by transfer of membership.

Without an opposing vote See's Chapel is asking for Brother Stephens next year, which would be the fourth time in succession.

Our last meeting was at Pleasant Grove, with a small church membership, and somewhat handicapped. I had marks of success, but the community was just in readiness for a revival when the time came to close. Yet we received two on profession and one by letter. I feel sure Pleasant Grove would welcome Brother Stephens at some later date.

This makes six meetings Brother Stephens has assisted this pastor in, and it is a pleasure to say that I find him a congenial, faithful, and hard working servant.

Once during each of these last two meetings special prayer was requested for the sick. One time a small lad, and the closing night at Pleasant Grove for Mrs. Stephens (who was suffering with fever), and in each case the first report indicated much improvement. God hears and answers.

Psalms 37:3 is a safe guide. Best wishes for all.

Fraternally,

R. C. MAYO, Pastor.

THE TONGUE

By D. W. Heidelberg, Shubuta, Miss.

The tongue is one of the smallest and also one of the most useful members of the body. Our lives are largely dependent on it, for without it we could eat with great difficulty, and without eating we could not live. Many of our joys and also many of our sorrows are dependent on the method of its use. It is an instrument, both of blessing and of cursing. With it we praise the God who made us, and with it we also curse him. With it we bless our friends and curse our enemies. With it the saints of Heaven sing songs of praise to the Lamb who redeemed them and with it the devils of Hell curse the One who died to save them. With the tongue we win the affections of our sweethearts and prevail on them to become wives and husbands, and with it we alienate their affections and make of them our bitter enemies.

The tongue is the most difficult of instruments to control. The hands, the arms, the feet and the legs we are able to control, and after reasonable efforts they become completely subject to our will. James, one of the inspired writers, says that every kind of beasts and of birds and of serpents, and of things in the sea have been tamed by mankind. But the tongue can no man tame; it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison.

The tongue is the most potential of all instruments in the production of mischief. With it reputations are destroyed, and thereby one of our most valuable possessions is taken away from us. Fights, brawls and homicides follow in the wake of the unbridled tongue. Actions of slander and libels are often the result of the improper use of the tongue. "Who keepeth his mouth and his tongue keepeth his soul from trouble," says the wisest of all wise men. Equally true is the declaration that he that "has a perverse tongue falleth into mischief" and "a fool's lips enter into contention." A truly religious man will control his tongue, for we are told by James, the sacred writer, that if any man among you seemeth to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, this man's religion is vain.

Kind words, on the contrary, have the effect of assuaging anger and pacifying those to whom they are addressed. "A soft answer turneth away wrath;" and "words fitly spoken are like apples of gold and pictures of silver." By the use of unkind words enemies for life are sometimes made and friendships destroyed.

One of the greatest obstacles to the attainment of success in life is a failure to control the tongue. Few men have attained to greatness in life who have failed to do so. The president of one of the great railroads of the country attributed his success to his ability to refrain from speaking angrily when greatly tempted to do so. One of the most notable instances of those who have brought the tongue into subjection was Judge Samuel H. Terral, for many years one of the circuit judges of the state of Mississippi, and later one of the supreme judges of the state. It was the privilege of the writer, when Judge Terral occupied the office of circuit judge, to be often in his company, and on several occasions to spend the night at his home. I rarely ever heard him say anything uncomplimentary of any human being. He was a great, good man, a member of the Methodist Church, a consistent Christian gentleman, and Clarke County's most distinguished and most beloved citizen.

Ex-President Coolidge is another example of a man who brought his tongue into subjection. His immense popularity and the unusual success of his administration as President of the United States was due more to this trait of character than to anything else. In early life and soon after his marriage there was hung over his mantle in his dwelling a framed legend which read as follows:

"A wise old owl sat on an oak,
The more he saw the less he spoke;
The less he spoke the more he heard,
Why can't we be like this proud old bird."

Let us imitate Judge Terral and President Coolidge in these laudable traits of character.

IN MEMORIAM

JABUS MARSHAL GREER

Jabus Marshal Greer was born in Marshal County, July 12, 1855, the son of Jim and Martha Anna Greer.

He was married in young manhood to Miss Lavada McClure. To this union no children were born. She preceded him in death in 1910.

In 1913 Brother Greer was again married, this time to Miss Eugenia Carolyn Bibb, daughter of the late Joseph and Mrs. Julia Bibb of Winona, two of Marshal and Montgomery Counties' oldest families. To this union were born four children, Eunice, Elizabeth, Dorsey and Martha. All are at home with their mother.

Brother Greer was made a Mason at the age of twenty-one, and was always interested in the work of Freemasonry. He was converted to Christ at an early age, and united with the Methodist church at Cornersville, where he served officially for many years, later moving to Glenfield, where he was a church trustee until his death.

Brother Greer had gone home to be with the Lord, and we miss his warm friendliness and fellowship. There is a place in his church made conspicuous by his absence. Yes, he fought faithfully and well the battles of life, and won the immortal crown.

He leaves his faithful and devoted companion, and those four precious children; one brother, W. D. Greer of Cornersville; two sisters, Mrs. R. H. Gillum of Darden and Mrs. R. M. Overton of Rutherford, New Jersey. But he also leaves a host of devoted friends who miss him greatly.

We would say, peace to his ashes. Most likely the Lord has said, "Well done, good and faithful servant. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

L. M. JAMES.

REV. L. E. WICHT

Rev. L. E. Wicht, a highly respected and useful local preacher of Hattiesburg, passed to his reward last Sunday morning. Several years ago his health failed, since which time he has been a patient sufferer. Brother Wicht was educated at Centenary College. After leaving college he moved to New Orleans where he secured a position as reporter for the Times-Democrat of New Orleans. Feeling his call to the ministry, he united with the Mississippi Annual Conference, and served faithfully as an itinerant preacher for several years. At his own request he was granted an honorable location, since which time he has rendered efficient service as a local preacher in our church. Brother Wicht was loyal to his church, true to his Master, and faithful to his friends.

He leaves a wife and three sons to mourn his death. J. T. LEGGETT.

Susan L. Montgomery Memorial Methodist Church, Madison, Miss.

LOCATED near the Natchez trace on the Magee plantation some time prior to 1864, a building was erected and dedicated to Almighty God. People of all denominations worshipped here. With the coming of the railroad, the population shifted, and Madison became the center of social life.

In 1864 the Madison mission was formed, and at the Annual Conference meeting at Crystal Springs in November of 1864, Harvey Copeland was appointed to this mission, which was to be connected with the Livingston and Pearl River charge, of which Robert W. Lambuth was appointed pastor. At the Annual Conference meeting at Lexington in November 1865, the Madison mission reported eight white members and twenty colored members. This was evidently the year when the Madison Church was organized. For the next several years it was a part of surrounding charges; we do not know just which. At the Conference of 1869, a charge was formed with this church as the center and named the Madison charge, which name has never been changed from that time until this. It was left to be supplied, and at the end of the year the charge (not the church) had fifty-eight white members and three churches valued at $5,000.00 with a capacity to seat 600 people.

The Methodists acquired the church on the Magee place, and this building was dismantled and moved to Madison. The best of the material was salvaged and used in erecting Madison's first church. This building served the Methodists as a place of worship for sixty-five years. At the Annual Conference of 1929, Rev. P. H. Grice was

IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?

This question has often been raised by sensationalists, and we have no doubt felt that it was more of an appeal to curiosity and morbid tastes than an indication of a serious threat to our social life. But the changes which have developed in American regard for the sanctity of the marriage relation are causing serious concern for those interested in social progress and the stability of the American home. One does not have to be very old to be able to recall the time when divorce was looked upon as a scandal and divorcees were treated as social lepers. But within a single generation, our whole attitude has changed. The rich go to Reno for a few weeks, and others arrange a divorce upon an agreed statement of fact, and the community does not manifest the least evidence of moral shock. There can be no doubt that childlessness, social dissipation, economic pressure, and the opening of gainful employment for women as well as men have been factors in our social drift; but are these things alone sufficient to explain the complete reversal of the psychology and the emotions of the entire human race? The marriage relation has as one of its strongest bonds the sanction and the urge of religion. We believe that the more people become divorced from the altars of the Church, the more will marriage be regarded as one of the conveniences and one of the conventions of organized society; the less permanent will be the marriage tie; and the less secure and stable will be the home-life of the land. As devotion to the monogamous ideal and teaching of Divine truth fades out, the less secure will become the pillars of civilization. On account of this distressing trend of our social life, the Bernarr Macfadden Foundation is undertaking a nation-wide poll to determine the consensus of opinion as to ideal marriage, and with the hope that the poll may prove to be of sociological value. Whether one approves of the method or not, the subject and the existing conditions ought to enlist the sympathetic interest of all religious groups throughout the country.

A FAMILY PHOTOGRAPH

A certain sports fan came out with mud on his horns the day following the first game of the world series. He dubbed the Tigers "swelled heads," men of a "Narcissus complexion," and "Book learning" as "slow poison." He denounced the "Little Red School House," and the effect of it all was to plead for the culture of the jungle as the proper intellectual level for the success of sports. Well, that was what the Goths thought about education, but who can locate the Goths today? For ourselves, we believe that certain sports belong to the jungle, and we doubt if their refinements indicate that they have wandered far from their natural habitat; but even at that, it appears that they need not be seriously embarrassed in the presence of some of their critics. Such tirades of denunciation might be expected from one who had lost all his loose cash on a particular event, but why not take it out on the "bums" who failed to "get a hustle" on themselves, and not clutter up the prints with a silly jag. The "Little Red School House" and the "Church in the Wildwood" will remain, despite the desolating storms of a columnist's wrath. The wildwood may disappear and the denizens of the bush may suffer in the clearing, but when the smoke has lifted and the malodorous children of the jungle have scampered through the underbrush of their limited horizon, homes will appear and crops worth while will be growing.

DESPOTISM

The peril of the situation prevailing throughout the world today is not so much in the desperateness of an economic or a social situation as it is in the opportunity which such a condition offers to a designing and an inordinately ambitious man. Such a man first publicizes himself as a savior of his country, and then assumes the role of dictator in a realm more subjugated than redeemed. The wildest social scheme ever invented was the weapon of obscure men on the road to despotism. The line of demarcation between revolutionary social theories and despotic aims is often so indistinct as to seem unreal and imaginary. The most hateful word in any language is despot, and the most hurtful form of civil administration is a despotism. Like slavery, it is without a single redeeming quality. A despot is not restrained by constitutional safeguards, he does not honor his own commitments when they stand in the way of his ambitions, and the admonitions of history are as insults to his vanity. Even religion is made a tool for the despot and an excuse for his deeds. The difficult and trying circumstances, through which the world has passed since the close of the great War, has had a tendency to break the edge off of the sensitiveness to invasions of popular liberty, and the demagogue and the political opportunist makes haste to sow the seeds of a delusive philosophy of social salvation. If the storm centers of European politics have any message for America today, it is that we forsake not the "old paths," and that we "remove not the ancient landmarks" which our fathers established. The way to a despotism is easy and tempting, but the way out is tragic and terrible.

JESSE LEE AND BOSTON

The scene on Boston Common, September 29, 1935, commemorating the beginnings of Methodism in that New England center of culture and Calvinism was vastly different from that which greeted the sturdy Virginian one hundred and forty-five years before. No such stage was set for Jesse Lee and he heard neither welcome nor plaudit from the stragglers whose interest was more curious than devout. He was not the first of the Methodists to be heard in that city—he had had distinguished predecessors. In September, 1736, Charles Wesley had preached in King's Chapel. In 1740, George Whitefield's seraphic voice had gathered great throngs to his ministry. In 1771, Richard Boardman, missionary sent out by Mr. Wesley, had organized a Methodist society there. In 1784 or 1785, William Black, a Wesleyan preacher from Nova Scotia, passed that way. And in 1787, Freeborn Garretson gave his testimony in the inhospitable home of the Puritans. When Jesse Lee arrived on July 11, 1790, the only sanctuary that he found was a spreading elm on Boston Common; but nothing daunted, he sang a hymn and prayed and preached. He preached and toiled and waited for five years before the cornerstone of a Methodist Church was laid, but from the day that Jesse Lee bore his testimony on Boston Common to the present time the Methodist witness has not been hushed. At the recent celebration, five thousand Methodists gathered at the spot where stood the elm that offered hospitality to the lone missionary from the far South, and they paid their tributes of song and speech to the great evangelist, George Whitefield, and to the bold and intrepid pioneer of Stamford circuit whose heroism and spiritual daring lighted a mighty flame in the land of the Pilgrims.

A PUBLISHER SEES HARLEM

An Englishman, now on a visit to this country, recently gave an interesting description of a Sunday in Harlem. He describes it as a great Negro city within the great metropolis, where for twenty-five blocks every person is black. The section has offices, hostels, amusements, churches—every convenience and appointment of civilization wholly devoted to the Negro. The population is not made up of the shiftless type, but the sophisticated urban, slightly overdressed and a little self-conscious and vain. The Negro boy is well groomed and the girl plucks her eyebrows, enamels her fingernails and de-waves her hair. He describes the district as "a large-scale laboratory experiment in racial adaption," and a place where, "The Negro has been transplanted and in the process has been transformed." The article speculates as to the effect of the urban caldron upon race differentiations and social relations, but it is manifestly respectful and sympathetic. The gentleman represents a great philanthropic interest and he is touring the South in a study of Negro educational institutions.

"WHAT PRICE WAR?"

By Mrs. Tip H. Allen

Today, the paramount thought in the mind of every clear-thinking person in the world is peace—world peace! We talk much of peace. We write in great length concerning peace. We seem to think deeply about peace, and yet civilization, today, finds itself upon the very brink of another great war!

The nations of Europe have again assembled upon a gigantic keg of powder, each nervously awaiting the tosser of the match which will again plunge the world into a holocaust of blistering destruction. Apparently the ghastly mistakes of 1914 have been forgotten. Evidently the legalized slaughter of five million youths has been taken, by those who stand at the helm of government, as a matter of course. The survivors of the lost generation have now grown old. Horrible memories and experiences have become dim and vague. A new generation of young manhood has been ushered in and the dogs of war growl ominously for the kill. And the world pleads pitiously for peace, yet girds itself for war!

Can it be that we are to experience again the sickening horrors of 1914 and 1918? God forbid! Can it be that five million youths were slaughtered in vain? Can it be that the costly lessons we learned twenty years ago have been so easily forgotten? Can it be that we, as a civilized people, have again reached that terrible point along the Road of Life where the letting of blood will again be tolerated? God take from us this awful threat!

The world emerged from that terrible conflict in 1918 severely whipped, bleeding, sorely wounded, bankrupt, deathly nauseated with war, and in that trying hour looked pleadingly to America for leadership and guidance and strength of purpose. The man of the hour was Woodrow Wilson! His great soul had visualized an everlasting peace! He lay plans for a mighty council where nations of the earth might gather and settle their dispute peacefully and without the force of arms. He called upon America for approval of this great plan. He called upon you and upon me for support and loyalty, and to our undying shame, we as Americans, failed him and failed the world!

Then was the time to drive home the ties of everlasting peace! Then was the hour to cement bonds of international friendship! Then was the moment in which the world might have been changed into a better place in which to live! But we failed! And because of that failure the world again stands upon the verge of war!

During the closing days of 1918 America had five million men under arms. We had impressed upon these young, boyish soldiers that they were fighting for high ideals. We had drilled into them that this was a war to end war! We made it clear to them that they were bearing arms against lust and greed and selfishness. We stated emphatically that right by might should perish from the face of the earth. And those boys died in the mud of France, thousands of them, the flower of American manhood, believing staunchly in those things. Today, their restless spirits should haunt our very souls, for we ignominiously failed them! We lent ear to the silver-tongued politicians who spoke long and glowingly upon our "perfect isolation." We washed our hands of foreign affairs and stood silently by and let political party hatred defeat that God-given Plan of Woodrow Wilson! We unfeelingly watched his enemies break his great heart and bring him in sorrow to the grave. There will be more than one Pilate at the judgment bar of Almighty God!

America—this accusation be upon you today! If Europe stands upon the verge of war—you are largely responsible! For you failed when you could have wielded a dynamic, powerful influence for world peace! You were weighed in the balances and found pitifully wanting!

Another reason why Europe is on the verge of war today is the Treaty of Versailles. It was not a treaty of peace but a clear-cut declaration of the next war. It was not based upon justice or upon spiritual brotherhood, but was conceived in hatred and born in revenge.

You ask when wars will cease? They will cease when the youth of the entire world come to realize they are being duped. Wars will cease when the youth of the world come to realize that they, and they alone, are the heavy losers. Wars will cease when the citizenry of this great nation learn to think for themselves and no longer follow blindly the braying politicians of our land.

We strongly deplore war, and continue to paint armed conflict to our sons in glowing pictures of valiant achievements. We cry loudly for peace, and write martial songs about our conquering heroes. We stoutly condemn legalized slaughter, and proceed to fill our children's history books with the brave, noble deeds of General This, or Colonel That. And little is said of those countless thousands who fell and bled and died in the line of duty; experiencing horrors beyond description; suffering untold agonies; making the supreme sacrifice upon the altar of war in order that Senator Windbag might prove his point to Congressman Slick-tongue concerning some trivial matter. You say I jest! God forbid! This is no jesting time! The very life blood of a nation has been spilled for even less than that!

You mothers of America! You women of the Church! You members of Missionary Societies! Let us demand that the truth be told about war! We want no more glowing pictures of combat to sow into the souls of our young sons! We want no more thrilling narratives of the Sword! We want no more mighty tales of valor where the hero always survives and lives to a ripe old age! Let us demand that war be painted as it really is—a destroyer! A destroyer of bodies! A destroyer of souls! A destroyer of civilization! A horrible, clutching thing that wrecks and shatters and crushes! A gluttonous monster that preys upon youth—upon your son and upon every mothers' son in the world! Christian women! This be your task! Unmask war! Teach to the youth of our land War as it really is and not as it is pictured! Let us hold high the principles of peace which dominated the life of the great Jane Addams. She started in the slums of Chicago among the weak and down-trodden and her great peace movements grew out of her concern and life adventures in neighborliness. The first step must be at home. Train the child in the ways of peace! Talk peace. Live for peace. Pray for peace. Observe peace programs in our Missionary Societies. Co-operate with every peace movement in our town, city or community. Let us unite everywhere in a solid movement for peace and present an unbroken front to those who would feed our sons to the Flames of War! Let us inform ourselves as to our politicians' views on peace. Let us sound out our senators and our congressmen on this most vital subject and if they be for War—then vote them out of office! Let our watchword be, "Peace to the World."

You ask when wars will cease? Never! Never until the nations of the world decide to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ. Never until we come to kneel before His throne. Never until we learn to love our neighbor as we love ourselves. Never until we live the Golden Rule, as individuals and as nations. Then will brotherly love become a thing of reality. Then will selfishness and greed vanish away. Then will the lust for power sink into oblivion. The trumpet call will cease and the measured tread of marching men will be no more. God grant the dawning of that blessed day!

BROAD STREET CHURCH, HATTIESBURG

From a small handful of members and a small one-room frame building back in the year 1904, Broad Street Church has grown to occupy a commanding position in the Mississippi Conference today. It is recognized as one of Mississippi's leading Methodist Churches. It is setting the pace for Methodism this year in the Hattiesburg District. With a membership of 600 at the beginning of this year more than 115 new members have been added to the church roll on profession of faith and by certificate. At the District Conference in May of this year half of all the finances of the church had been paid in full, and for the past month the church has been in a tithe campaign to raise the sum of $1,200.00 which will pay out in full all our finances for the year. A notable fact about the tithe program is that it was pitched absolutely on a spiritual basis, and 155 of our liberal contributors agreed to tithe for the month of September. And they are doing it and are getting a blessing out of it. More than two-thirds of our goal has been contributed. We are confidently expecting the other $400.00 in the next two weeks. It means a great victory for our people. In our financial achievements for the year, there have been two payments of $500.00 each with $200.00 interest each paid on the church indebtedness to the General Board of Church Extension, Louisville, Kentucky.

There remains yet a very integral part of our year's program to be carried out, our "Revival Meeting" which begins on the second Sunday morning, October 13, and runs through October 20. We have carried out the whole program of the church, educational, social, and otherwise this year, and now we are climaxing the year's work with an effort for a mighty revival. And we have it. We are opening the revival with a "Home-coming Day" on October 13. On that day we will have many of Broad Street's former members, non-resident members, friends now and in days past, also our resident members. What a day of rejoicing and fellowship that will be. Many former pastors will be there. They will do the preaching. There will be three preaching services: 11 a. m., 2:30 p. m., and 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at 9:45 a. m.

A special feature of the day will be the dinner served at the church by the ladies of the church for everybody. Then each day following Sunday, except Monday and Saturday mornings, there will be services twice daily, morning and evening, the hours to be announced later. Reverend Morrelle Wells of Jackson will lead the singing during the meeting.

The pastor will do the preaching except on "Home-Coming Day." Some of the former preachers of Broad Street Church, expected to be present are: O. S. Lewis, J. L. Neill, W. A. Terry, M. M. Black, H. Mellard, J. E. Williams, H. T. Carley, A. J. Davis, J. W. Thompson and R. H. Clegg.

TO THE PASTORS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren:

As Conference Director of the Superannuate Endowment Fund I will represent the General Board at Conference to receive any money that you may have for this cause. If your charge has an adjusted quota balance please make an effort to report at least one-fourth of that amount. Where there is no adjusted quota balance it is suggested by the General Board that a free-will offering be taken for this worthy cause.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

BY W. L. DUREN

sidering that it is the usual fate of churches within the fields of operations of hostile armies to be turned to account as hospitals, storehouses, and what not, and considering, too, that the use of the abandoned churches by loyal ministers might be, and was, in many ways useful to the national cause, the order was well enough. It must be borne in mind that we were in the midst of war, and that its issue was still uncertain. To encourage the expression of loyalty in the partially conquered states, and to repress disloyalty, were the obvious duties of both civilians and soldiers. But the order was extreme in its terms and worked injustice. Mr. Lincoln, who, to use his phrase, had declined 'to run the churches,' was greatly dissatisfied with this measure of his war secretary. He wrote to Mr. Stanton, February 11, 1864, saying that he was embarrassed by having had brought to him what purported to be a formal order of the War Department for the delivery of these churches to the Northern Methodist bishops, etc."

Under the order of Secretary Stanton, Bishop Ames, the procurer of the order, took charge of the churches in the city of New Orleans, and Bishop Simpson was placed over the churches in Nashville, where Rev. M. J. Cramer, afterward American Minister to Denmark, was appointed to McKendree Church. The Church was renovated and refurnished, and was opened for service on June 12, 1864. Some of the reasoning of the foregoing quotation might be accepted, if the occupancy of the churches had ended with the restoration of peace, but in some cases the churches were held until long after the war was over. Of this fact, the biographer of Bishop Simpson said: "It would have been better if at the close of the war we had surrendered the churches occupied by us more promptly." Doctor Lucius C. Matlack, of abolitionist fame and who was presiding elder in New Orleans under the regime of Bishop Ames, commenting upon the occupancy of Southern churches said: "Our ministers stood in the attitude of conquerors. They differed little, in appearance, from the relation of invaders. . . . If our occupancy of the pulpits of the Church, South, had been only for the purpose of offering the preaching of the Word to deserted congregations, and, on the return of their pastors and the restoration of peace, had been yielded up gracefully, it would have been better for the peace of the Methodist family. But such was not the case. Claims were set up to the property on questionable grounds. Possession was retained until compelled to relinquish it by civil authority." The quotations given are not the words of the author of this book, and they are not from Southern sources. We leave them without comment.

A recent biographer of the great French statesman, Talleyrand, made a very penetrating observation in connection with his subject when he said: "It is the moment of victory that tests a statesman." It is a truth susceptible of a much wider and a more varied application than to statesmanship or even to individuals. We have already remarked upon the splendid manner in which the delegates to the Conference of 1844, in the moment of their complete triumph, rose to the delicate and responsible situation. Alas, that the Church as a whole was not able to display a poise and a Christian self-possession like unto that exhibited by the men who composed the leading faction in the General Conference. Two-thirds of those who had been delegates from the Northern Church to the General Conference in 1844 were not elected to the Conference of 1848. The referendum which had gone the round of the Conferences had involved much more than the modification of the "sixth restrictive article." The convictions and the ecclesiastical leadership of the North were also up for ratification by the Church, and at what appears to have been the weakest moment of its history. From the close of the General Conference of 1844 to the meeting of the Cape May Commission, the record of the Church was marked with the weaknesses of victory, and the values of a triumph which might have been the inspiration for a great constructive attitude, went to waste.

Dr. Daniel Curry, editor of the New York Christian Advocate, was particularly caustic and bitter toward the South, in editorial utterances of 1866 and 1867 and statements in the press of the Church, South, were not more temperate and conciliatory than were those of Dr. Curry. But editorial utterances upon the part of those so recently ejected from the pulpits of the Southern churches were unfortunate, to say the least. Bishop Soule, at the General Conference of 1844, uttered a great truth when he said: "Society, sir, whether civil or religious, has much more to fear from the passions of men—of its members—than it has to fear from calm investigation and sober inquiry." That statement was amply justified in the period through which a divided Methodism was undergoing readjustment. The Church which thinks in terms of prejudice and resentment can hope for nothing better than to move in cycles of disastrous revolutions—the backwash of its own worst thought and feeling. The Church triumphant must bring its mind and heart into union with the purpose and plan of Him who is Head over all, in succeeding eras of divinely quickened reason.

The humiliation of Bishop Andrew and the disruption of the Church did not cure the difficulties of the Northern section, as was vainly hoped. The victorious faction of 1844 carried the fight to the people on the floor of the Annual Conferences, and the press of the Church made its contribution of bitterness. Indeed, the real alienation of the two great bodies of American Methodism did not result directly from the action of 1844, but from the unhappy events and incriminations which followed as its aftermath. Probably an instance of a great cause wrecked by well-intentioned interpreters.

As the years wore on, there was naturally a softening of the judgment on both sides, even of those who had been most pronounced and intolerant in their opinions. Dr. James Porter, of New England, whom Dr. Buckley called "an uncompromising abolitionist," said: "In looking at this long-continued controversy, we find it everywhere marked by human infirmity, to say the least of it. We are not much disposed to sit in judgment on the parties involved. None of them can take great merit to themselves. If abolitionists had been brought up in the South they would probably have acted much as Southerners did, and vice versa."

Even Dr. Curry, to whose unfortunate editorials we have referred, came to a happier state of mind regarding the whole situation. In an editorial reprinted in the Southern Christian Advocate, April 21, 1875, he said: "The separation made thirty years ago was for valid and sufficient reasons; nor was the existence of slavery more than its remote cause; and the action of the General Conference of 1844, in the case of Bishop Andrew was only the occasion for the denouement, which was certain, aside from that case, to come at that time, or very soon afterward. The separation was not the result of accidents, nor of incidents, nor of any extrinsic agencies. The dividing forces in the Methodism of thirty years ago, like those that disrupted the nation nearly twenty years later, were from within, and their developments with the growth of the body made the division a necessity. Two nations lay together in the womb of early American Methodism, and while there, the children struggled together within her, and their separation was a prerequisite to their peace and increase. To separate is in some cases a high and sacred duty; and to do so without a breach of charity often calls for the highest of wisdom and real goodness. No nobler exhibition of his true greatness is given in the whole history of the patriarch Abraham than in the separation between himself and his kinsman and hitherto life-long associate, when in language worthy of himself, he said without the least trace of bitterness, 'Separate thyself, I pray thee, from me.' " Alas, that this wholesome truth might not have been learned by all parties to the struggle thirty years earlier; but such is too much to expect of our weak and combative natures.

The year 1876 marks a new era in the long disturbed relations of American Methodism. Doctors A. S. Hunt, Chas. H. Fowler, and General Clinton B. Fisk, fraternal messengers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, made great addresses before the General Conference of the Southern Church at Louisville, Kentucky; and the occasion was a long stride toward a time of better feeling. Following the addresses, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, passed the resolution which follows: "Resolved, That in order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity between the two Churches, our College of Bishops is authorized to appoint a Commission, consisting of three ministers and two laymen, to meet a similar Commission authorized by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and to adjust all existing difficulties." The Methodist Episcopal Church, in General Conference at Baltimore, May, 1876, adopted an identical resolution. The Commissioners for the Northern Church were: Morris D'C. Crawford, Enoch L. Fancher, Erasmus Q. Fuller, Clinton B. Fisk and John P. Newman. Those for the South were: Edward H. Myers, Robert K. Hargrove, Thomas M. Finney, David Clopton, and Robert B. Vance. The Joint Commission met at Cape May, New Jersey, Aug. 16-23, 1876. It settled a number of contested cases; cleared the way for formal fraternity between the Churches; provided regulations for the adjustment of all differences; and although there were representatives of the conservative and the extremist factions of both sides, the minutes show that not once was a negative vote recorded upon any material question. No Southern man could utter a word against the magnanimity of the men who represented the Methodist Episcopal Church on that Commission. That attitude was superb, unselfish and worthy of their Christian profession.

The Address sent to the ministers and members of the two Churches said:

"We adopted without dissentient voice the following DECLARATION AND BASIS OF FRATERNITY.

"As to the status of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and their co-ordinate relation as legitimate branches of Episcopal Methodism, each of said churches is a legitimate branch of Episcopal Methodism in the United States, having a common origin in the Methodist Episcopal Church organized in 1784; and, since the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was consummated in 1845 by the voluntary exercise of the right of the Southern Annual Conferences, ministers, and members, to adhere to that communion, it has been an evangelical church reared on Scriptural foundations, and her ministers and members, with those of the Methodist Episcopal Church, have constituted one Methodist family, though in distinct ecclesiastical connections."

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. Martin Hebert, West Monroe, La., paid the Advocate office a call last Saturday, and he gave an optimistic report of the outlook in Monroe District.

Mrs. F. L. Brownfield, of Athens, La., in renewing her subscription, encourages us by her words of appreciation of the Advocate which she has read for forty years.

Mrs. T. H. Morris writes us from Chicago, and, in addition to words of cheer for the Advocate, says that she will be at Mount Washington, Ky., for the next two months.

Mrs. Guy Norton, of McComb, Miss., expresses pleasure at the progress of the Advocate debt campaign, and the wish for a growth in the subscription list. That sounds good to us.

Rev. J. B. Williams has finished his work at Minden, La., and has gone back to his own home at Many, La. Dr. Serex has arrived from his vacation spent in his old home in Belgium.

The board of trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground have been called to meet in annual session, at Biloxi, 1 p. m., October 8, 1935, according to notice sent out by W. E. Kennedy, Mobile, secretary.

Rev. W. W. Perry, Baker, La., was in New Orleans a few days ago and paid the Advocate office an appreciated call. He spoke hopefully of his work, and of the report which he expected to make at the forthcoming Conference.

Rev. C. W. Lahey, pastor of Donaldsonville, La., writes that he has made sufficient progress on his benevolent collections to be able to guarantee payment of the amount accepted in full. He will also send a collection for the Memorial Mercy Home.

Rev. Geo. H. Jones writes that he expects to close his sixth year on Montrose charge, Miss., in a satisfactory manner. During the six years he has received 216 into the membership of the churches, more than half of them on profession of faith.

Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir, pastor at Grand Cane, La., corrects our statement as to the number he has received on profession of faith. He says that he has received 34 on profession of faith instead of 22, as we reported. We gladly make this correction.

Rev. Elmer C. Gunn spent a day in New Orleans last week arranging the details for the settlement of the bonded indebtedness against First Church, Lake Charles. When we saw him the work had not been finished, but he was very hopeful as to the outcome.

A subscriber from Haynesville, La., says that she enjoys the paper and she will be glad when the price can be reduced. We would be happy if it might be reduced, but our experience in trying to pay the debts and carry the paper along does not warrant us in hoping for such a thing.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, Florence, Miss., says that he has had a good year in some respects, and particularly in his revival campaigns. He had the assistance of Rev. Fred L. Applewhite, Rev. L. J. Snelgrove, Rev. Fleet J. Jones and Dr. B. E. Mitchell, and all of his churches were wonderfully blessed.

A personal letter from Rev. Ivan O. Donaldson informs us that he is to be transferred to the Central Texas Conference in exchange for Rev. G. A. Morgan who returned to Louisiana earlier in the year. Mrs. Donaldson who has been in a sanitarium is at home and is doing nicely, for which we are glad.

On September 27, Bishop Cannon, Jr. entered the Good Samaritan Hospital, Los Angeles, for a serious operation which had been for various reasons unduly delayed. The operation was successful and with proper quiet, rest and care no serious complications are now expected.

Alvin J. King, director of the Millsaps singers, a consolidation of the men's and the women's glee clubs, augmented the club roster by the addition of eighteen associate members recently. Brooks Haynes was chosen as pianist for the group. At the beginning of the second semester another voice try-out will be held.

Rev. C. W. Wesley writes enthusiastically of the ministry of Bishop Dobbs at the dedication of the church at Summit, Miss. Dr. C. W. Crisler and Dr. G. F. Winfield assisted in the dedicatory service; and Rev. W. T. Griffin of Jacksonville, Fla., and Rev. J. T. Abney, McComb, former pastors, were present for the service.

A subscriber writes us that she is surprised to see a proposition to provide hymn books by the insertion of advertisements of waffle shops, dress stores, etc. She then adds, "I suppose to keep the congregation's mind occupied! What are we coming to?" We have not seen a notice of such a proposition, but we do share her resentment of the suggestion.

Mrs. H. J. Norris, a daughter of Dr. Hope and the superintendent of the Church School at Oak Ridge, La., when the editor was presiding elder of the Monroe District, wonders if we remember those with whom we work at the many places where we have been. The recollection of people has been one of our greatest assets and our greatest joys in the ministry.

The New Orleans Standard Training School will hold its fifteenth session at Rayne Memorial Church, October 13 to 18. The courses offered include "The Financial Program of the Church," by Dr. W. E. Hogan, Nashville; "Intermediate Department Administration," by Miss Rowena Ferguson, Nashville; "Young People's Department Administration," by Mrs. L. C. Poindexter, Monroe, La.; and "Missionary Education of Children," by R. R. Branton of New Orleans.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Crawford Street, Vicksburg, writes that September 29, was a red letter day in the history of his Church School. An excellent program was rendered and the school out of debt for the first time in thirty-five years. Brother O'Neil has received 107 into the membership of his church this year, all departments of the work are moving

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The following are paragraphs taken from weekly reports of the Clarksdale Auxilliary study group. They are using the study book, "That Other America."

Mrs. F. E. Gilliland reviewed "The Phantom Empire," a story of the tragic results of the schemes and ambitions of Napoleon III., and the Emperor of Austria, as linked with the lands of these other Americans to the south. It is the intention to provide an accurate, though fictional, historic background for future studies.

Mrs. Stoddard gave, in her splendid way, the first chapter of the new study book, using a map to supplement her statements. She told of South American culture, ante-dating ours, and said that she had learned from an article in a recent issue of the Commercial Appeal that in the matter of the death of mothers in childbirth we were ahead of only two or three South American countries. The United States ranks nineteenth.

Our ideal is to establish a fellowship in Christ. The Pan-American Union, the Rockefeller Institute, sports, and Carnegie libraries all have helped and are helping to develop points of contact although in a natural way the influence of European civilization is still supreme.

Mrs. Henry Page discussed an article in a recent issue of Liberty. The subject was "Untold Secrets of the Religious Situation in Mexico."

Requests had been made for outside information. In response Mrs. H. D. Corley reported on an article discussing a plague of Locusts that is causing devastation in the region of the Parana river.

Mrs. Edwin Tomlinson discussed an article on the cotton belt of Brazil. Mrs. M. J. Luster reviewed an article in the September "Digest" written by a medical man telling of a community in Mexico where everybody, even every animal, is blind.

An interesting innovation of this particular group was the sharing of their lesson with another group who were studying the same book.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,

2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The Brookhaven District held a most interesting coaching day for Dr. John A. MacKay's "That Other America," at Brookhaven, with the district secretary, Mrs. A. S. Oliver, presiding.

Mrs. W. B. Carr, of Meridian, outlined the study and gave many valuable suggestions. A demonstration mission study class was a feature of the day's study. Mrs. Hume R. Steele, of Nashville, a member of the Council, suggested four topics for a four meeting class: 1. "Understanding Latin America;" 2. "The Struggle in Latin America;" 3. "The Work of Protestant Missions in Latin America;" 4. "The Evangelical Church and the Future of Latin America." She closed her talk with this question: "What contribution can Evangelical Christianity make to Latin America to satisfy intellectual quest and soul hunger?"

During the day Mrs. John Boone, of Brookhaven, on behalf of the Brookhaven District, presented Mrs. Oliver with a life membership in the W. M. S.

* * *

Preparatory to the study of "That Other America," the Woman's Society of East End Methodist church, in Meridian, entertained at a Pan-American party at the church which was enjoyed by a large number of members and guests.

The basement of the church in which the party was staged, was transformed into an attractive scene suited for the fiesta. Individual tables covered with bright cloths, centered with gay flowers, were arranged around the sunken pool banked with ferns, cacti, and water lilies.

The program opened with a prayer by Mrs. Willis Taylor, after which games in which the Pan-American union was emphasized were introduced. Spanish music was given by Mrs. E. M. Ford.

Later a Spanish menu of tamale pie, Mexican salad and black coffee was served.

* * *

A zone meeting was held at Sharon,

Jackson District, with Mrs. H. H. Casteel, presiding. The theme of the meeting was: "The Promotion of World Peace, or What Price War?" Mrs. Tip Allen was the feature speaker. Mrs. Eurie M. Weston, of Jackson, conference superintendent of Christian Social Relations, was present, and spoke on "Christian Citizenship." Mrs. L. E. Alford, of Clinton, told of the work of the W. M. S. during the past twenty-five years. Mrs. Norman Taylor, district secretary, stressed the rounding up of the year's work. The next meeting will be held in Canton, in December.

* * *

Coaching Day for the Vicksburg District was held at Vicksburg. A very representative group was on hand and all seemed eager for any assistance in helping to put a higher type of mission study in their respective groups.

Mrs. T. H. Fore, district secretary of the Vicksburg District, presided and was assisted by Mrs. W. T. Hegman, Holly Bluff, who discussed the subject, "Why Missionary Education?" Mrs. S. C. Newman, Germania, who told of the selection of the study books; Mrs. E. V. Perry, Rolling Fork, who impersonated Dr. MacKay, the author of "That Other America;" Mrs. G. P. McKeown, Woodville, who reviewed the book, "Lupita," a story of Mexico in revolution; and the following ladies who formed a Demonstration Class: Mrs. H. G. Hawkins, Vicksburg, and Mesdames W. M. Sullivan, Charles Ratcliff, A. L. Covington, Bonnie Tucker, all from Natchez.

The devotional was led by Mrs. A. B. Owens, Vicksburg, and an appropriate duet was sung by Mrs. Luckett and Mrs. Boulton of Vicksburg.

The assembly received much helpful instruction in Spanish pronunciation from Mrs. Helen Stanton who served as Diction Critic.

Crawford St. Auxilliary had on display a wonderful collection of articles which represented the arts of almost all the Latin American countries, also various pieces of money and literature, which served as a background for the study of the day.

Discussion of the fall mission study book, "That Other America," suggestions as to sources for materials helpful in the study and an outline plan of the study book filled the day's program to overflowing.

The Gibson Memorial auxiliary was hostess to the assembly for lunch and also rendered beautiful Spanish piano selections all through the lunch hour.

Thirteen auxiliaries were represented with a total attendance of seventy.

Mrs. Fore, presiding officer, was well pleased with the interest shown in Vicksburg District's first "Coaching Day."

BISHOP DOBBS AT GARLANDSVILLE CENTENNIAL

The Garlandville Methodist Church will celebrate its centennial on Tuesday, October 22, beginning at 10 a. m.

A full historical program is being planned by the program committee and the citizens of Garlandville and surrounding territory are eagerly looking forward to the occasion. Bishop Dobbs will be the principal speaker in the morning while former pastors and presiding elders will be presented in the afternoon, together with other speakers and the present presiding elder, V. G. Clifford.

Actually Garlandville Church is more than one hundred years old. Just when it was organized it is impossible to say. It was in existence at the time of the organization of the county in December, 1833, and probably goes back several years earlier than this. Garlandville was one of the leading villages of the Indians in its section of the State, and the woman who named Garlandville (after a rich half-breed Indian, named John Garland, who had given her some property, including a tavern) was a staunch Methodist.

Garlandville was a part of the old Leaf River Circuit which was organized in December, 1822, when there were only eight other charges within the bounds of the present Mississippi Conference. It is not known just when Garlandville became a part of this circuit, but Edward Harper, the itinerant in 1824, lived in Jasper territory not far from Garlandville. When the Leaf River Circuit was divided in December 1830, into the Raleigh and Paulding Circuits, Garlandville and Paulding were the principal churches on the Paulding Circuit and the itinerant, James G. Garstarphan, lived not far from Garlandville. Indications are that other early itinerants lived in this territory.

During the more than one hundred years of its history Garlandville has been in two Conferences, twelve Districts, and on twelve pastoral charges, besides being the headquarters of a charge of its own for a number of years. If Garlandville is as old as the Leaf River circuit, it seems that it has had 38 presiding elders and 81 pastors.

Today Garlandville forms a part of the Montrose charge in the Hattiesburg District, with V. G. Clifford the presiding elder and Geo. H. Jones now serving as pastor for the sixth year.

Garlandville has an active Sunday school, Epworth League, and Woman's Missionary Society.

Perhaps its most prominent local personality during the century was Judge John Watts, a local preacher and an eminent jurist, once a district attorney and later a circuit judge for more than twenty years.

Garlandville is located on Highway 15, between Montrose and Newton, being just inside Jasper County, and consequently drawing its membership both from Jasper and Newton counties.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, careful inquiry and investigation develop that all participants in the Standard Training School have been greatly helped by it, and

Whereas, the courses of instruction, under the capable leadership of experienced teachers, have been thought-provoking, giving every member of every class a clearer, better understanding of the problems the Christian worker faces today both in and out of the church, inspiring each to become a more efficient, effective instrument in the work of the Kingdom, and

Whereas, the deeply spiritual atmosphere of the school has led many into a more vital and satisfying worship experience with a deeper, keener sense of personal responsibility in the development of Christian character and the employment of Christian ideals and standards in every phase of living in the complex world of today; therefore be it

Resolved, That this means be employed to extend the sincere thanks of the entire student body to the board of managers for their efforts in providing the means and making the school possible, also, to our instructors. Dr. A. P. Hamilton of the Millsaps College faculty, Miss Moon of the General Board of Christian Education and Mrs. Burrow of Jackson, Miss., for the consecrated Christian life and talents they have brought to the task of leading us in our study of ways and means of promoting the program of the Christ and the church, and to all of those others who have worked so faithfully to make the school the vitalizing experience and inspiration it has been, and be it further Resolved, That plans be set under way now for another school next year, with the same faculty if it is possible to secure them.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, OCTOBER 13.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D.

THE STORY OF JEREMIAH

Jeremiah, easily one of the greatest of the Hebrew prophets, was commissioned of the Lord to speak to the nations, more especially to his own people when they were dickered, now with Assyria and Babylon on the east and now with Egypt on the west, for political favor and protection, utterly forgetful of Jehovah, whose grace had given them existence. He was a modest youth and plead his lack of years as a reason for being excused from the weighty commission tendered him as spokesman for Jehovah. His hesitancy was as commendable as it is understandable. Surely if "priests, prophets, princes and people were to be warned and reprimanded, some older servant of the Lord would have noted the need and have heeded the calls to the task. For a young man in his middle twenties to assay it would be to lay himself open at once to the charge of impertinence and make him the butt of ridicule and scorn. His reluctance was not refusal. He waited the assurance of divine credentials which came with the promise of a presence and the touch of a hand on his lips. The Lord gives strength to the hand of the youth to whose eyes he gives vision. Often older men do not see, much less feel, the ills and evils of their day, so long have they been accustomed to the national mores.

Jeremiah was fully accredited for his great program "to root out, pull down, destroy, and to plant and build." No constructive work was possible till the ground had been cleared of the rubbish accumulated during the reign of wicked Manasseh. With youthful hope and courage, with the ardor of a soldier and the passion of a prophet, he plunged into his mission. The embers of twenty-five centuries have not dimmed the glow nor chilled the warmth of his flaming evangel. His words are still as fresh as the dew of the morning flashing in the fire of the sun. A few gems from his sermons will give tang to the message of the fearful and defeated, cowed by the bravado with which the present generation rushes to impending doom. Of course his plain preaching was resented. The hearers could not deny its truth, so they denounced the preacher. Any man was worthy of death who could say aught but good of their sacred city.

The faithful prophet met their attack with the calm assertion that he had spoken altogether and only for God. He left himself in their hands for life or death. Even yet there was hope for city and people if they would but mend their ways and obey the voice of God. God's threats and promises are always conditioned by the conduct of men. Jerusalem, impenitent, is menaced by a threat; Jerusalem, penitent, is beckoned by a promise. God had the same attitude toward Nineveh, toward Sodom, and toward all cities of all time. Jeremiah was no disinterested critic, no cold denunciator. His weeping eyes betokened a bleeding heart. He was of kin with Moses who prayed that God would forgive Israel or blot him out of his book; with Paul who could wish himself accursed for the sake of his brethren; with Knox who said "Give me Scotland or I die;" with Wesley who said "the world is my parish;" with Jesus who said "I lay down my life for the sheep." The sermons of Jeremiah are still worth reading.

THE GRENADA REVIVAL

This great meeting closed Sunday night, September 29. Total number of additions to date eighty-two. Dr. Theodore Copeland, Dallas, Texas, did the preaching. The man and his messages cannot be separated. They are one. He is different. His work is different. No high pressure methods. No abusive language. No sensationalism. No money pressure. Overcoming evil with good expresses it to some extent. I am sure that something like ninety per cent of the membership was effectively reached. The church was a clearing house. Much, perhaps most, of the work was done outside the church. Great crowds attended the closing services. Other churches joined us in the work heartily. The Christian forces of Grenada are as nearly one as I have ever seen. The easiest meeting to finance I have known. I consider Dr. Copeland easily the best "Pastor-Evangelist" I know. He hurts no one. He helps many. He visits from house to house each morning. He works on the streets, in business houses, banks, shops. We used our local choir in the song service. They met every need faithfully and fully. Dr. Copeland is to be our guest preacher at Conference this fall. He will be received "with open arms." And he can preach. He knows men, loves men, serves men. I love him personally and for his work's sake. He is the pastor's friend in ways so unusual that he stands out. He has left, in Grenada, friendships unusual and love beyond ordinary. Forunate is the charge or place that secures his services.

JAMES H. FELTS Pastor.

BOOKS

Keeping Our Balance. By Mrs. Eva Cloud Taylor. Cokesbury Press, Nashville. Price 25c.

The author of this booklet on the effects of alcohol is a graduate of the Library School of the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh, and is a specialist in juvenile literature. The book itself is a book of temperance educational material, designed for teen-age youth. Ministers, Church School teachers and group leaders of older children will find in this little book much helpful material for pressing home the much-needed lessons in temperance and temperance responsibility. Mrs. Taylor gleans from a wide field and drives in the facts concerning alcohol in a convincing and effective manner.

World Friendship. By Gertrude E. N. King. Chapman and Grimes, Boston. Price, $1.00.

Mrs. King, a Mississippi woman, has done a splendid piece of work in the listing of the sources of educational material bearing upon world understanding. The listings include books, magazine articles, pamphlets and other publications. In addition to listing this vast and valuable material, Mrs. King differentiates it as to the age groups for which it is suited and gives also a brief interpretation, which is in the nature of a blueprinting of the materials as a guide in the selection of matter bearing upon any particular phase of World Friendship.

Church Growth in Korea. By Alfred W. Wasson. International Missionary Council, New York.

The initial publication of Occasional Papers, issued by the International Missionary Council, is by Dr. Alfred W. Wasson, General Work secretary of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The author says that it is not an appraisal of Christian missions in Korea, but is an effort to explain fluctuations in the growth of the mission which are but little understood. In seven chapters, the varying fortune of the Korean Mission is noted and the deflecting influences are carefully studied. A short concluding chapter is devoted to a summary of Korean missionary progress, and conclusions regarding the factors which have affected the course of the work. One does not have to make a thorough study of the book to become convinced that it is a very informing book, both as to the progress of the mission and as to the problems of the Far East.

The Furtherance of the Gospel. By William Owen Carver, Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, Nashville, Tenn. Price, 60c cloth, 40c paper.

In this little volume, Dr. Carver makes a scholarly and a painstaking study of the evangelistic aspect of the church and missionary program. It is vastly more than a study of the organization and the procedure of the missionary program. It lays bare the motives which underlie successful missionary service, and which inspire creative missionary support. The book was prepared as a Training Course textbook for Sunday school workers; but it is informing and thought-provoking and as such it will discover a clientele all its own.

Pilgrim Paul: The adventurous journeys of a wandering apostle with timely annotations. By Walther Eickmann. Published by Walther Eickmann. Price, $3.00.

This is not a biography of the great Apostle after the usual fashion. The author, Walther Eickmann, tells the life story of the Apostle Paul in rather romantic fashion, claiming that his account contains less imagination and fiction than any one of the hundreds of scientifically written Commentaries on the Acts of the Apostle and the Epistles of Paul or the eruditely written biographies of the Apostle.

Whether this claim is justified or not, we cannot say. The claim does include a vast field. This book is a very readable book. Apparently the scholarship and correctness of the book is not sacrificed to make the story interesting. What the writer does is to tell the story of Paul, adhering to the known facts in the life of Paul, while attempting to make the events of his life that are known the connecting points of an interesting story. In places the writer allows his imagination free rein but he seldom claims that to be a fact which is based on tradition. While a great deal of that which is traditional is included in the book along with other more authentic material, the writer claims no more for the traditions than they claim for themselves.

On the whole, this is a splendid book, beautifully written, and accurate in the description of the great Apostle.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

One of the most inspiring tributes to Christianity that we have ever read was written by J. E. Stephens. We quote from the close of his book on "Moses and the Prophets; Christ and the Apostles: Fathers and Martyrs:"

"Wherever Christianity has gone, she has carried civilization with her. She has rescued the people from a state of hopeless barbarism, and elevated them to refinement, intelligence and happiness.

"Literature has been baptized with her holy influence, and the turbid stream of fabled mythology, which once sent forth its deleterious waters, has become clearer and sweeter under the purifying process.

"The intellectual part of man has been enlarged and refreshed, and his mind has assumed something of its royal dignity. Every department of learning has been hallowed by men of sanctified genius. Numberless instances come to the support of principles; and a religion which can claim a Bacon, a Newton, a Boyle, a Clarke, a Pascal . . . may boast of being favorable to philosophy.

"Excellent institutions have risen up, upon which religion has stamped her own image, and consecrated them to her service; and thus we might go on, and portray its genial influence upon the institutions that uphold, the manners that improve, or the arts that adorn the state of civilized society; but, it is the practical effect of religion upon the spiritual part of being, its adaptation to our immortal nature that renders it a signal blessing to mankind in general.

"The spirit of man sinking under the weight of burdens, which accumulate so rapidly in this life, finds relief and encouragement from the powerful hopes and motives that culminate around the great central point of Christianity. Every emergency of life is fully met, and allment proportionate to the most intense craving is abundantly and freely offered.

"Nothing, even persecution in its most terrible forms, can hinder the effect of this glorious power. It has been said that 'never were such exalted virtues seen among Christians as in those ages, when, in order to worship the Lord of light and life, they were obliged to secrete themselves in the bosom of darkness and death to carry out their designs.'

"It has led multitudes to the stake and the rack, from whence they have ascended, as in triumphal chariots, to the fruition of the blessed.

"They went straight from the fires of earth to the full-orbed glories of the celestial city; leaving behind them a glorious testimony to the truth, power and beauty of that Christianity which goes down with man through the 'dark valley,' and plants his feet securely on the further shore of Jordan.

"Christianity has undergone a severe test; but, from the trial by which it has been purified, it will arise triumphant. It stands the test of reason; and, the more we examine it, the more we discover its grandeur.

"Its mysteries explain man and nature; its actions support its precepts; its charity in a thousand forms has succeeded the cruelty of the ancients. It has lost nothing of the pomp of antiquity, and its ceremonies give greater satisfaction to the imagination.

"We are indebted to it for everything; and, were we even to divest it of all its supernatural evidences, still it would have sufficient left, in the sublimity of its morality, in the immensity of its benefits, and in the beauty of its ceremonies, to prove it to be the most Divine and the purest religion that was ever practiced by men.

"Destroy Christianity, and the world is undone; cherish it and sustain it, and, like a wave of righteousness, it shall speed over the world with cleansing power, to regenerate and save an otherwise ruined race."

Heaven alone was adequate to produce Christianity and Heaven stands pledged to its continuance. It is to go on, conquering and to conquer.

PRAYER

Our Father, we face many trying situations in this world. But as we meditate upon the beneficent influences of our holy religion, we take courage. "It is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom." Help us to give Christ a chance in our lives, in our homes, in our communities, in our nation.

The proper treatment for a bilious child

THREE STEPS

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, destroy all hopes of restoring regularity.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use a liquid laxative. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative they generally use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

Sure Relief for Malaria!

Don't try homemade treatments or newfangled remedies! Take that good old Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Soon you will be yourself again, for Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic not only relieves the symptoms of Malaria, but destroys the infection itself.

The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic kills the Malarial infection in the blood while the iron it contains builds up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and fortify against further attack. The twofold effect is absolutely necessary to the overcoming of Malaria. Besides being a dependable remedy for Malaria, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is also an excellent tonic of general use. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle today at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

By Billy Gannaway, Publicity Supt.

I have just had the pleasure and privilege of attending my first meeting of the conference officers at Alexandria. I have always heard of the good times had at these meetings and the many things accomplished, and now I, too, can tell of this pleasure.

The meeting was held on September 28-29, and all districts were represented. It is impossible for me to describe to you the enthusiasm and interest of our conference in the work and program for the coming year. The meeting enjoyed having both Rev. A. K. McLellan, the Conference Executive Secretary and Rev. G. W. Dameron, the dean of the 1936 assembly at Centenary. We opened the meeting with an informal discussion of the assembly, the camps, the young people's conference at Memphis and other problems and activities. After the discussion the officers and district directors were introduced and they gave their reports. Some very fine reports were given. We exchanged ideas and are now prepared to really go to work in our local churches. After these reports had been approved, we then voted on certain other topics which had been turning over in our minds since the first informal discussion. We made plans about the assembly, the camps and the young people's conference in Memphis. All and all I am glad to report to you that we had a good time and really accomplished something toward a better year.

IN MEMORIAM

RESOLUTIONS TOUCHING THE DEATH OF MISS FELDER

Whereas, it has pleased God to remove from our midst our beloved friend and Christian co-worker, Miss Ollie Elizabeth Felder, age 74 years, 10 months, who from early childhood joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was always faithful and loyal to her church. A very reserved, kind and gentlehearted woman. A sister and three brothers, as well as a host of friends, mourn her passing.

Resolved, that we, the members of Denham Springs Methodist Church and friends, extend to the family our sincere sympathy, and though she is now laboring under fairer skies we cherish her memory here.

J. P. BONNECARRERE,
MRS. C. L. JACKSON.

MRS. H. W. MAY

Mrs. H. W. May, faithful wife of the Rev. H. W. May, of the Louisiana Conference, passed away rather suddenly at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. L. Hausey, near Ethel, La. Mrs. May had fallen from the steps of a neighbor during our recent revival meeting and injured her shoulder. The trouble did not easily go away, so she went to Baton Rouge on the Saturday preceding her death to have her hurt X-rayed. While in Baton Rouge she was stricken with illness, but returned to Zachary over Sunday. My son, J. C., stayed in the home at night with her, as she has been living alone several doors from the parsonage. She was ill Sunday, and Mr. Bond, the local mayor and druggist, went to get Mrs. Hausey. On Monday morning Mrs. Hausey took her mother to her home near Ethel. As she was going up the side steps she said, "I feel like I am going to die." She was so ill they let her lie down on a cot, and Mr. Hausey went for the doctor, but before he got back Mrs. May had died. I think she must have had some idea of her going before this, because she had written a note disposing to the children many of her things; though only a week before her death she talked to me about plans for repairing her home.

Mrs. May had done some good work in getting people to our revival meeting.

Her funeral was conducted from the Jackson church on Wednesday, September 18. Thus she ended her life in the same way almost as Brother May, and was buried from the same church. Interment was in Plains' cemetery by the side of her husband.

The following ministers were present and assisted me as her pastor: Dr. K. W. Dodson, W. W. Perry, J. A. Alford, F. J. M. McCoy, J. B. Shearer, J. Cude Rousseaux.

We regret to learn of the tragic death of First Lieutenant Hoyt D. Williams, while landing his plane at Randolph Field, Texas. Lieutenant Williams was a brother of Mrs. W. H. Giles, of Bastrop, La. He had just completed two years air service in the Canal Zone, and had been appointed instructor in flying at Ran-

Rev. J. G. Snelling, superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home, New Orleans, has sent out a detailed report of contributions received from the charges of the three Conferences, up to Sept. 17. The statement shows contributions by Conferences as follows: Louisiana, $1,783.96; Mississippi, $634.32; North Mississippi, $529.89. Total for the three Conferences $2,948.17. The statement shows progress, but it is far from the measure of support which the work merits.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

Annual Standard Training School for city of Hattiesburg and surrounding territory opened Sunday afternoon, September 15, 1935, at 3 o'clock. Sessions were held each evening through Friday, September 20, from 7:15 to 9:15. Eighty-seven were enrolled with fifty-six receiving credit. Six churches were represented, namely: Broad St. Main St. Court St. of Hattiesburg; Petal, Sumrall and Bonhomie Churches.

Rev. I. H. Sells, Conference Executive Extension Secretary of the Board of Education was present the first two sessions. Rev. V. G. Clifford, P. E., of the Hattiesburg District, was dean of the school; Rev. C. A. Schultz, pastor of Court St. Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, was chairman of the board of managers.

Dr. A. P. Hamilton of the Millsaps College faculty, Jackson, Miss., taught the class "The World Mission of the Christian Religion" and eleven received credit. Mrs. J. C. Burrow of Jackson, Miss., taught "Missionary Education in the Children's Division" and thirty-two received credit. Miss Alleen Moon, representative of the General Board of Education of Nashville, Tenn., taught "Building the Program for Senior Young People" and thirteen received credit.

appointed to the Madison charge. When Brother Grice arrived, he soon realized that the church building was not adequate for carrying out the church's program of Christian education. He began to look around for ways and means with which he might erect an edifice commensurate with the membership. Brother Grice discovered that among the worshippers of the early church was a widowed mother, Mrs. Susan L. Montgomery, whose custom it was on each Lord's day to go with her fatherless children to the house of the Lord for worship. A son, Arthur Montgomery of Atlanta, Ga., has never lost interest in the community of his youth. He has retained membership in the Madison church throughout the years. Brother Grice contacted Mr. Montgomery and found that he was very anxious to erect a fitting memorial to the memory of his Christian mother in the place of his nativity. The present beautiful edifice, which was dedicated on July 13, 1930, is the result of the coming together of this earnest preacher and faithful layman, with a Christian membership co-operating in the giving of their time and means to the service of God.

Among the descendants of these early pioneers who hold membership in the present church are the Montgomery's, Bennett's, and Miss Helen Stewart, a daughter of Rev. Andrew B. Stewart. Beginning with 1865, the pastors who have served the Madison church have been: Harvey Copeland, H. H. Montgomery, J. M. Pugh, Andrew B. Stewart, Warren C. Black, Beverly Carradine, Daniel C. Langford, Pinkney A. Johnson, Inman W. Cooper, J. L. Forsythe, James A. Newsom, Daniel Ellis, George H. Thompson, Henry L. Norton, J. Wilson Brown, John D. Crymes, John D. Ellis, Henry G. ## First Methodist Church, Homer, La.

THE HOMER METHODIST CHURCH was organized in 1849 or 1850 in a log house. Later a house of worship was erected near the present location and stood until the "Big Snow" of 1876, which crushed in the roof and caused each of the four walls to fall outward in the direction of the four points of the compass.

The present church building is the third to stand on the present lot. The first was a frame structure which was removed in 1907 for the erection of a brick building during the pastorate of Rev. W. H. Bowman. This building was demolished in 1922 and the present structure erected at a cost of $85,000 during the pastorate of Rev. R. W. Tucker. A debt of approximately $20,000 on this building was raised in 1934 during the pastorate of Rev. Louis Hoffpauir and the church was dedicated by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs on October 21, 1934.

Four sessions of the Louisiana Annual Conference have been entertained by the Homer Methodist Church. The eighteenth session of the Louisiana Conference was held here in 1863, under the presidency of Jno. C. Keener, three years before he was elected a Bishop. The forty-eighth session was held in Homer in 1893, with Bishop Joseph S. Key presiding. The sixty-fifth session was also held here in 1910 under the presidency of Bishop W. B. Murrah, and the eighty-first session was held in the present building in 1926, with Bishop W. A. Candler presiding.

The present membership on roll is exactly six hundred. This church is well organized and doing a splendid work for Methodism in Homer. The Church School, the Missionary Society and the Bible Class for men are outstanding features of the church. A splendid choir leads the music for the services. The paying of the debt

ST. NICHOLAS COLLEGIATE CHURCH, in Fifth Avenue, New York, is said to be the oldest organized Christian church with a continuous ministry in the United States. It is the Dutch Reformed Church where Theodore Roosevelt worshipped. It has a bronze tablet on one of the pews, which reads, "Here Theodore Roosevelt heard the gospel preached and here he joined the Christian Church." A tribute alike to the ministry of that little church and to the man whom it helped and who in turn honored his church.

SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN tells a story of a naval officer who was being put forward for a Good Service pension. His record from Naval College on was excellent except for one telltale examination paper. He was asked to describe a Daniels cell—a type of electric battery. The sub-lieutenant's answer was: "Not much is known about Daniel's cell. It was probably about thirty feet long by twelve feet wide and full of lions. But the lions are dead and so is Daniel. Sic transit gloria mundi." That was about as accurate as some of the stabs made at Greek which we heard when we were in college.

THE GALAPAGOS ISLANDS off Ecuador, South America, is said to be the home of living dragons, or giant lizards and huge tortoises. Many of the species are found nowhere else outside of these islands, but the introduction of rats and cats and dogs brought to the Islands by visitors, is now a very serious menace to those strange native creatures and they are about to become extinct. It is now proposed to establish a sanctuary in the Islands for the protection and perpetuation of the species of reptile life peculiar to the region.

MOHAMMEDANISM IS NOT AN AMERICAN type of religion, and yet there are quite a few located here and there throughout our country. Detroit heads the list with 10,000 Moslems, Greater New York has 5,000, Cleveland 3,000, Pittsburg 2,000, and there are 2,000 in Massachusetts. There are about 3,000 more outside these centers. The only real Mosque is in Brooklyn, and the only Moslem newspaper is El Bayan, published in New York. The paper has a circulation of 2,000, and that means that practically half of the Moslem homes in America read their religious paper.

ON TETTENHALL GREEN, Wolverhampton, England, there is a clock built in a handsome stone tower. It has four faces and the four sides of the tower bear four inscriptions. The first reads, "I labor here with all my might to tell the hours by day and night." A second, "For every hour that passes there is a record." A third, "For every hour that strikes there is a joy." The fourth, "For every hour that comes there is a hope." It is a stately messenger of great truths.

AMERICAN MORMONISM is said to be the largest, wealthiest, best located, best organized, and most aggressive of all the false religions in America. Its real strength is not commonly known. Starting with six members in 1830, it now has over 700,000 members, and with its numerous branches and missions, it now has nearly 2,000 church organizations. It is far from being just a little fanatical sect confined to Utah, and with its only shrine in Salt Lake City. False as its pretensions are, it is fast becoming a factor in national religious thinking.

The Chinese students now being educated in England number fifty-nine, and it is planned to keep the number up to about sixty by making twenty awards each year. In addition to the education of Chinese students in England, the Boxer indemnity fund last year paid more than five thousand dollars to various Chinese schools and colleges.

THE PRESBYTERY OF MORRIS AND ORANGE, in New Jersey, introduced a novel experiment at its session in June. A "Farmers' Hearing" was held for the purpose of acquainting the Presbytery with the problems of the farmer and for a study of the possibilities of the rural church. The peculiar feature of the experiment was the fact that the farm situation was not interpreted by specialists with musty figures, but five farmers with varied experiences, dirt farmers, brought a message direct from the field. The experiment proved to be so successful and informing that it has been strongly commended to other groups.

WORDS OF SOBERNESS AND TRUTH

Not long ago a distinguished and popular writer and speaker of England was taken to task rather severely for gross inaccuracies and misleading statements. It was boldly asserted that he had been indifferent to historical fact and common justice, and that the logic of his talk was that, to be a Christian one must abandon reason and justice and "fact." The person in question was charged with misleading the public upon some serious and even grave matters at a time of political crisis. We regret to say that such is a fault not confined to one speaker or one country. The willingness to inflame the public mind with statements not supported by facts is all too common among those who occupy places of social and moral leadership. No one is surprised when a conscienceless demagogue makes rash and unsupported utterances, but when Christian leaders speak without due regard for fact, it is cause for sincere and painful regret. It is one thing to express an opinion, but to state something for fact when it is otherwise is a very different matter. Such an utterance involves both the judgment and the moral character of its author. Every Christian man, minister or layman, should have such a jealous concern for truth that he would scorn to lend the prestige of his high spiritual calling to any intemperate or misleading statement. And the greater the pressure in that direction, the more manifest should be our adherence to truth and soberness of expression. The very position of the Christian in his community should bring to his speech a studied accuracy of detail, and the delicate responsibility of the ministerial office should make such doubly careful lest subservient minds be turned into unrighteous and hurtful channels of thought and action. There is wholesome and practical philosophy in the words of St. Paul to the Ephesians, admonishing them to speak the truth in love. And, at a time when the temper of the whole world is on edge, it certainly behooves lovers of peace and truth to exercise all diligence that they do not fall into blameworthy speech.

NEO-PAGANISM

Neo-Paganism is not all that the name might be taken to mean, it is only the ancient hostility to Christianity with new clothes. It is the unchanged and the unchanging spirit of Antichrist camouflaged in order to deceive the unthinking and the careless, and to accomplish the defeat of the kingdom of Christ. Pagan altars, a sensuous worship and the gross immoralities of pagan religion have yielded to the decencies of civilization, but pagan attitudes are unchanged and unconquered. The tests of a paganism whose practices violated the moral instincts of men and whose teachings offended his tastes could not be maintained, and the enemy of virtue, refinement and Christian faith found it necessary to respect conventional refinements and to observe the trends of culture. Today the new paganism is presented in the dress of nationalism—a specious and even glamorous patriotism, but supported by assumptions which eliminate God from the picture. The ikons of Russia, sacred corners to Lenin, have utterly displaced the altar of the Church, not only the Greek Orthodox Church, but of every religion that offers an interpretation of God. A defiant infidelity has turned the historic church buildings into national museums. The transition, effected under cover of the confusion and turmoil of war, was shockingly revolutionary in its suddenness. Pagan aggression, however, is ordinarily more cautious and astute than the Russian apostacy might imply. Its approach is usually through encroachments upon associated customs and conventions and the citadel of faith is reserved for the last struggle. The "totalitarian state" has a glorious and an euphemistic sound for unsuspecting ears, it is followed by the substitution of Hitler's biography, "My Struggle," for the handsome edition of the Bible which has been for long years the award for outstanding pupils in the Bavarian school of forestry, and the home of the Reformation is well on the way to becoming a new center of neo-paganism. But that end will not be achieved without a contest and the ascendant star of paganism is awakening the sleeping Church, and it is tending to consolidate all Christendom against the common foe.

REV. LEE M. LIPSCOMB

We note with sorrow the passing of our friend and brother, Rev. Lee M. Lipscomb. He was an honored member of the Publishing Committee for some eight years, succeeding the late Rev. Thomas H. Lipscomb. His faithfulness and efficiency made him a valuable counselor and a trustworthy representative of his Conference and Church. Alive to all the interests of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, co-operating to the fullest extent with the Committee during our months of stress and trial, we sorely miss him as the dawn of a new day appears. As individuals and as a whole, we desire to offer our tribute of respect and love for our departed brother. The memory of his cheery optimism, sympathetic attitude and constant endeavor to represent his Lord and Church abides.

ALABAMA'S NEW EDITOR

Dr. A. K. Gamble, presiding elder of the Roanoke District, North Alabama Conference, has been elected editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, according to a letter from Rev. B. F. Marshall, of Greensborough, Ala. He will succeed Dr. M. E. Lazenby who, after fourteen years of service, declined to stand for re-election. Dr. Gamble is a scholar and man of wide experience. Dr. John A. Kern is reported to have said of him that he was the most perfect student that he had known; he was very effective as a missionary in Korea; and he has been no less successful in the administration of a large district in his home Conference. We join with others in extending cordial and sincere welcome to Dr. Gamble in the new and great field to which he has been called.

LIMITED RENEWAL OFFER

Christmas is just around the corner, and in appreciation of the loyalty of our subscribers, we are offering to the first 1,000 renewal or new subscriptions received in our office beginning October 3, a beautiful box of one dozen assorted, lithographed Christmas cards absolutely free, postage and all. Send your renewal immediately and secure one of these gifts which retail for 10c each or 75c per box. Remember, this offer expires when our supply of 1,000 boxes has been exhausted, and therefore, a delay in mailing your renewal remittance may cause you to be too late to receive one of these beautiful gifts.

At the end of the first week following the announcement, 80 boxes of the Advocate Christmas cards are being sent out. That is nearly one-tenth of our supply. If you wish to be remembered, do not wait too long—act now.

"WHERE THERE IS NO VISION THE PEOPLE PERISH"

By Garner M. Lester

Vision—the ability to see—to look ahead—an inspired revelation—is a very helpful and guiding faculty. Too frequently we have heard it said: "If I could do over again." The inference is that the speaker would do differently because experience had shown him the future. Far better would it have been if he had been guided by a sound, thoughtful, reasoning vision at first. Sometimes our people are too ready to join forces with the demagogues in some new theory—untried and untrue—but perhaps at the moment popular. Sometimes they join happily in denouncing some group of their fellowman because a few of this group had been poor examples. Later, perhaps they find the denunciation unjustified, but the damage is already done—or the experiment fails, but the price has been paid. Whether it be religion or not—let us "think it over." "Be not the first to take up the new nor the last to lay down the old" is still good, sound counsel. The mad rush in the past few years for change—for experiment—should be changed to a thoughtful, earnest, steady walk toward improvement—not characterized by cruel denunciations either of principle or person. Those who have struggled and led for decades, and that with some degree of success, should not be condemned or abandoned for ideals, ideas, principles and experiments without trying first to get the "Vision." Only by thoughtful, prayerful reasoning—only by careful, consistent study—can we get the vision needed to make the right decision. There is no room here for prejudice—hatred—excitement—force—these are invariably followed by regret. May our sane reasoning—our calm emotions—our experiences of the past give us such a vision that we choose carefully, deliberately and wisely. Then, and then only, will we not perish.

EDUCATION IN WORLD FRIENDSHIP

By Gertrude E. N. King

A fundamental cry of modern civilization is what program of education and of action may be a possible solution for world problem? Because of ignorance, misunderstanding and prejudice, difficulties arise between races and nations as between individuals. Friendship exists among all people who understand and need one another. Traditional education has not advanced methods of reason and intelligence over methods of force and suppression. The experiences of children are made up of sense impressions and emotional attitudes. Conditions which make for a reaction to peace develop in a child's conduct at home, in school, on the playground, or with his relations to the community.

Why does the modern school recognize the development of wholesome personality as more important than the learning of facts? Why is it concerned with behavior in the yard and on the sandlot? Why is it interested in removing unthinking prejudices and unfounded discriminations against unfamiliar races, nations or religious creeds? Because it recognizes that a spirit of friendship and of appreciation for others can be established in youth. As in all experiences of life, first contacts with members of a different race set emotional reactions which are modified by following contacts with that race. Unpleasant experiences with an individual may cause an unfair and biased judgment of a whole nation. The gracious art of living together in sympathetic human relationships with those whose traditions and inheritance are different may be acquired by children with less difficulty than by adults. In adjustment to members of one's own family, to playmates, to superiors or inferiors, and to individuals of another race, color or creed comes understanding of life. The biased child is handicapped. Milk for his breakfast, wool for his coat, soap for his bath may come from nearby sources. But he must be taught about the endless series of workers who furnish rubber for his tires, ink to fill his pen and variety in his food. To produce clothing, shelter, food, tools and a degree of culture for these workers, a great group of people have been necessary. Perhaps the whole world has been drawn upon for ultimate sources to supply the necessities of his life. He needs what these people of the world have for him. How can he understand them best? Their children need food, houses to live in, clothing, books to read, fires to warm them, schools to inspire, and friends to love them. Those children also play and celebrate holidays. They have problems of religion and of government. Their customs are beloved. Laws are made to guard their health and regulate their employment. "They" are much as "we."

Then why is war an accepted fact? What obligations and possibilities has the newer education to bring about understanding? Some world peaceways have been suggested. Study war not as an expected social inheritance, but as an unusual and horrible event. Accustom the child's mind to associate the idea of war with mental or moral delinquency, not with a cause linked to glorious human qualities. Build the thought "my country," a group which contributes to the advancement of mankind, rather than a place to defend. Anticipate the arbitration of a dispute instead of a resort to arms, even at the child's level. Guarantee to the playground leader reasoning and intelligence in supervision. Banish dictatorial methods and the use of force. Seize the unexcelled opportunities to teach better ways. Organize for the growth of the peace spirit.

International attitudes like character are caught, not taught. The war spirit is a subtle interaction of experience . . . which pervades all life, reaches out its roots into all activities and expresses itself in various degrees during war and peace." All influences working for the welfare of childhood need to co-operate in world friendliness. Common aims, associations and memories in which all peoples share are helpful. A child's attitudes very easily are confused. He studies contributions to culture from a group different in race, creed, or color from his own. Soon he hears a disparaging remark about that group, a remark made by someone whom he trusts. He sees a motion picture which misrepresents that race. He can not know what is authentic.

Recent investigations seem to prove what long has been supposed as to the possibilities and the probabilities of education through the motion picture. The positive influence of its multiplied sense impressions may be as powerful an aid to help outlaw war as the negative influence may have been to create propaganda for war. A promising experiment along this line is the placing upon the screen of the picture "No Greater Glory." Adapted by the Columbia Pictures Corporation from Ferenc Molnar's novel, "The Paul Street Boys," it has in it all the elements of an international war. Two sets of boys battle for a playground. There is no secondary theme, only the thesis that war is unprofitable, futile.

Recognizing possibilities and responsibilities in education, great world organizations have been formed to promote peace. Definite aims of service characterize some of these organizations. Others produce the highly desirable result of making people think. Some international plans function in purposeful research. Others aim to bring about world friendship through education. A World Federation of Education Associations, organized in 1923 at San Francisco, indicates that hopes for international understanding and the cause of universal peace are in the hands of those who influence children and youth.

Another organization for continued practical service is the Committee on World Friendship Among Children instituted in New York in 1925, it consists of some seventy-five specialists in child education. This committee and the advisory council are non-sectarian, Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and Negro members are listed. The guiding principle of this organization is "we who desire peace must write it in the hearts of children." Its activities include the exchange of messages, toys, and supplies on a vast scale reaching many children of the world. Educational varieties of peace producing units develop on the level of all school ages. Parents and kindergarten teachers working on a negative basis may outlaw guns, swords, knives, sharp sticks, bows and arrows. Youthful public opinion may be guided away from hostility, tattling, interrupting and the use of adverse racial terms such as "chink," "dago," "nigger," and "sheenie." On a positive basis these adults may foster whatever good will is at hand, discover good sportsmanship, notice acts of courtesy and unselfishness, recognize sympathy for all forms of life and secure the regard of children for their own property and that of others. The unadjusted child of whatever age or nationality, needs help to emotional stability and the happiness of mental health. A teacher who understands may free a little child from a fear of a prejudice which otherwise might be lifelong. In all grades world friendship may be promoted by stressing likenesses between nations. Authentic information removes wrong impressions. The Olympic games revealed that all peoples have ideas of fair play. Foreign born children bring valuable contributions to a class room, music, dances, games, dolls and interesting social customs. Any ability to speak a foreign language is a distinct advantage. Closely related to the adult war spirit is the gang spirit among boys and cliquishness among girls. A conflict on a playground is an opportunity of new education for real peace.

Science and mathematics have brought near neighbors. As geographical limitations disappear moral limitations offer a field for exploration to the secondary school. People have not learned how to live together. History taught comparatively becomes a record of human progress. World conflicts destroy faith in human nature but man is capable of perpetual modification. The first step to universal reconstruction is the abolition of war and of the needless destruction of human life. What compensating interests can be given to children to save them from the ideal of physical strife as the only way out of international situations?

Modern education claims not wishes for peace but a purpose to create peace. Newer ideals of heroism function in a universal determination to abolish war, poverty and disease. Wants and requirements of society are becoming one vast, highly organized interdependent whole. The greatest ideas for deliverance from war have been: Abolish war by conference, outlaw war as crime, deal with a situation once relegated to war as a moral process, overcome evil with good and hate with love.

The ideas of this paper claim no individual origin. They have been gathered from many sources. Some author-teacher may recognize his own idea, claim it and rejoice in the educational advance toward international appreciation.

A PEACE PROGRAM FOR ARMISTICE DAY

By John Q. Schisler

The newspapers seek to attract your attention by great headlines announcing war. Fear grips the heart of multitudes of our brothers in other lands. Uncertainty lurks around the corner as to our own country's future.

In the light of recent disclosures regarding the manipulation of those who sought to bring our country into war prior to 1917, it behooves us now to do whatever we can in America to develop sentiment against war and to educate our people as to its utter futility and its enormous waste. When the Government decides to enter war our efforts are then too late.

To this end the department of the local church of the General Board of Christian Education has prepared a program for use in churches on Armistice Day (or at other times). This program is prepared for use at the 11 o'clock service. It may, however, be adapted and used at other services. This program is free to pastors.

In addition to this program for the 11 o'clock service, a leaflet has also been prepared for the pastor to distribute to his people. A copy of this leaflet will be sent free to pastors desiring it and may be secured in quantities for distribution to his people for the actual cost of printing and postage, which is as follows: 10c per dozen; 60c per hundred; $5.00 per thousand. Order from the Service Department, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

This leaflet contains a statement on the cost of war under the title, "What Price Glory;" suggestions for posters, which may be made by young people; excerpts from the pronouncement on war by the College of Bishops of our Church; excerpts from the chapter on war in "The Basic Beliefs of Jesus," by Bishop Kern; a "Declaration of Conviction and Purpose" for distribution to the people by the pastor; suggestion of source materials for the study of war.

The preparation of this program and leaflet is a part of the service which is being rendered by the General Board of Christian Education in the field of social problems.

In this connection may we call attention to radio broadcasts on Peace each Thursday evening, continuing through October, at 8:30 Central Standard Time. Also we suggest the making of posters on peace for display in churches. This might be a desirable activity for a group of young people. Striking posters can be secured at prices ranging from 5c to 25c.

NOTICE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI

The people of Amory are looking forward with great pleasure to the Annual Conference to be held here October 30-November 3, and all indications are that we are to have a most inspiring session with record-breaking attendance. In view of the fact that so many requests for entertainment have come in from persons not duly qualified as members of the Conference, we are forced to ask that you please place some notice in your next edition to the effect that we will be able to care only for those who are qualified. The people of our town have been extremely good in offering their hospitality, and we had hoped that it would not be necessary to issue such a notice, but the entertainment facilities of a town the size of Amory are necessarily limited. As much as we would like to, it will be impossible for us to entertain the alternates who cannot be seated because of the attendance of the regular delegates, the members of our ministers' families, and the others who would like to visit with us for the duration of the Conference but who are not duly qualified to do so.

E. J. GILMORE,
Chairman Entertainment Committee.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

BY W. L. DUREN

The Commission then addressed itself to the adjustment of property controversies. Before them were cases from Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Tennessee, Louisiana, North Carolina, and South Carolina. Two principles of settlement were adopted: 1. As to the legal ownership of properties in controversy. 2. As to the wisdom and desirability of dispossessing a society, using a church to which title had been lost by transfer from one Church to another. Under these principles, four rules were laid down:

I. In cases not adjudicated by the Commission itself, the society in possession to retain title, unless those claiming title should constitute a larger group than the occupying society.

II. 1. In cases decided by the courts, or by agreements already made, such decisions or agreements were to be carried out. 2. Adverse claimants to make amicable adjustment, irrespective of title, and to submit to three arbitrators in case of disagreement. 3. Where only one society exists, property to vest in it under Rule I.

III. Where necessary to fulfill conditions of Rules I and II, the title to property to be transferred.

IV. These rules of settlement to become operative immediately.

The Address recommended that weak societies unite with strong societies, and that the ministers recognize each other as possessed with equal right, dignity, and validity. The Commission then admonished the churches in the words of Bishop McKendree and the Wesleyan Missionary Committee, addressed to missionaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Wesleyan Connection in the Canadas in 1820:

"Feel that you are one with your brethren, embarked in the same great cause and eminently of the same religious family, and if any warm spirits rise up and trouble you, remember that you are to act on the principles now sanctioned and avowed by the two connections, and not upon local prejudices."

More than ten years before, the War Between the States had ended; and now the way was clear for a better understanding and for Christian fraternity between the two great branches of Episcopal Methodism; but we dare to say that the hill was longer than any at that time imagined it would be.

CHAPTER X

THE IRREPRESSIBLE CONFLICT

The years between the division of the Church in 1844 and the beginning of the Civil War were for the most part occupied with the controversies which grew out of the separation. We have discussed the main features of the struggle already, but there are certain facts and incidents which have not been presented and we return for a fuller and a more connected presentation of the history of the Church following the division. We have intentionally left out much of the bitterness and the invective which characterized the discussions of that unhappy era, but enough has been said to justify the observation of a recent writer who said that this period might "well be termed the tragic era in the history of American Methodism." It was an era dominated by one issue and all other incidents and events were overshadowed by it. The history of Methodism in the United States for that period was fixed and determined by that irresistible factor. Calamitous as were the effects of the struggle on the fortune and progress of the Church, no discriminating student can afford to treat the events of the period as incidental or secondary, and belief in the providence of God in human affairs compels us to give them the place which they came to have in church history. Therefore let us, with a shudder of fateful recollection and a devout prayer of faith and hope, trust that such an issue may never again arise to impede the progress of the kingdom of God or to bring upon our land a scourge of fratricidal strife. We should think of the unhappy incidents of the first quarter of a century of our disunion as things to be remembered, that such things might not be repeated in either our history or our attitudes.

The Louisville Convention of 1845 did little more than decide the issue of division according to the Plan of Separation adopted the year before by the General Conference at its session in New York; and the twelve months following the Convention were occupied with the proceedings of ratification by the Annual Conferences of the step taken at Louisville. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had distinct ecclesiastical being but no body or church law until the General Conference which met at Petersburg, Virginia, May 1, 1846, set up the machinery which completed the action of the Convention and established the processes through which the Church might function. In the two years between the General Conference of 1844 and the first General Conference of the Southern Church in 1846, the slaveholding Conferences occupied a rather anomalous position. Up to the Convention they were legally under the authority of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but by the action of the Convention, their relation with that body was dissolved, and there followed a hiatus in administration which was met through Methodist loyalty rather than by church law. The Louisville Convention invited Bishops Soule and Andrew to unite with and become constitutional Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Bishop Andrew, whom the Bishops had left without assignment under the Finley Resolution of 1844, signified his acceptance at once; but Bishop Soule felt himself under obligation to carry out the plan of work in the Conferences to which he was assigned, until such time as those Conferences might be organized into a new General Conference and he should be free to adhere to the Church, South.

The first General Conference of the Southern Church was cautious and conservative in its action. It was scrupulously careful to maintain the form and the integrity of Methodist administration, and it practically adopted the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, with only such changes as were made necessary by the action of the Louisville Convention. The Conference met on May 1, and was called to order by Dr. William Winans, of Mississippi. Dr. John Early, of Virginia, was chosen president pro tem—Bishop Andrew not having arrived, and Bishop Soule not yet having adhered to the Church, South. On the second day, Bishop Andrew was present and took the chair, and Bishop Soule formally cast in his lot with the South. With this completion of the organization, the General Conference settled down to grapple with its problems.

The General Conference met its responsibility in a manner worthy of the men who composed it and of the Church which they represented. There was no retreat from any vital interest of Methodism. The Committee on Missions presented a report urging the establishment of a mission to China, and a resolution was adopted recommending that the Board of Missions institute a mission to Africa, "as soon as any providential opening shall appear." Such an opening did not appear, however, until 1914, when a mission was opened in the Belgian Congo. The Constitution of the Missionary Society of the Church was adopted, and the new unit of Methodism gave itself in earnest to missionary conquest. In educational matters, there was equally marked interest also. Morrison College, the academic department of Transylvania University, at Lexington, Kentucky, was offered to the Church, South, and was accepted. In the Pastoral Address, the Bishops said that there were "various seminaries and schools under our care and patronage—some forty in number." Those, in addition to La Grange College, in Alabama; Randolph-Macon College, in Virginia; Emory College, of Georgia; Emory and Henry, of Western Virginia; Centenary College of Louisiana; St. Charles, of Missouri; Wesleyan and Rutgersville Colleges, of Texas; and the Literary Department of Transylvania University, the oldest academic foundation in the great Ohio and Mississippi basin. At the second General Conference, it was found that the administration of Morrison College by the General Conference had not been satisfactory and it was turned over to the Kentucky and the Louisville Conferences to be administered as an Annual Conference interest.

The Episcopacy, composed of Bishops Andrew and Soule, was strengthened by the election and consecration of Dr. William Capers and Dr. Robert Paine. The adherence of Westmoreland circuit of the Baltimore Conference was accepted and it was made a part of the Virginia Conference. A commission was raised to publish a revised edition of the Hymn Book, and Richmond, Charleston, and Louisville were designated as book depositories. Dr. Lovick Pierce of Georgia was chosen fraternal messenger to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Pittsburg in 1848. An interesting side light upon the temper of the time is furnished by a resolution which failed to pass. It was a resolution to discourage the continuance of controversy by the church press, and that Southern Editors, "Be requested to allude to the subject as seldom as possible, and strictly to avoid all personalities, and to promote as much as possible, peace between the two connections." That Resolution was signed by B. M. Drake and Fountain E. Pitts. The General Conference adjourned on May 23, 1846.

The year following the first General Conference of the Southern Church, a Chinese Mission of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Foo Chow was established by J. D. Collins, Moses C. White, and Robert S. Maclay. The Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, set itself to execute the order of the General Conference with reference to China, and Bishop Capers was charged with the responsibility of finding suitable persons for the enterprise. An appeal for volunteers was published in the Southern Christian Advocate, and Charles W. Taylor and Benjamin Jenkins were chosen. Taylor had been a school teacher in South Carolina, he was the son of a Presbyterian minister, and he was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Bedford Street Church, New York. Jenkins was the foreman of the press room of the Southern Christian Advocate, and he is said to have taken a medical degree in Philadelphia as a preparation for his work. Taylor and Jenkins, with their wives, sailed for Hong Kong in 1848. Taylor went immediately to Shanghai which had been chosen as the center of missionary operations, but Jenkins tarried in Hong Kong on account of the illness of his wife, and he joined the mission in Shanghai later. In the years which followed, W. G. E. Cunyngham, D. C. Kelly, J. W. Lambuth, J. W. Belton, Young J. Allen, and M. L. Wood were sent as re-enforcements; but when the war came on the trying climate of China had brought to an end, either through sickness or death, the missionary careers of all but J. W. Lambuth, Young

The weekly Morbidity Report sent out by the Bureau of Epidemiology of Louisiana shows an unusually large number of cases of malaria this year. Contagious and infectious diseases are few and widely scattered.

Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., opened recently with the largest enrollment in its history. Over 1,300 students were registered, and thirty-one of the new men were registered in Candler School of Theology, which now has sixty-four in attendance.

The Advocate Publishing Committee was in session last Thursday. Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. V. C. Curtis, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. Otto Porter, Rev. Adrian M. Serex and Rev. H. L. Johns were present. A report by the secretary will appear at an early date.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, Brooksville, Miss., writes that the front page article last week was in error as to the initials of his father. It should have been Rev. R. A. Neblett. The editor made one correction, but in that case he was uncertain and so followed copy.

A note from Miss Helen Chappell of Tupelo, Miss., says that every interest, general and local, is well in hand at First Church. Dr. Henry F. Brooks, the pastor, has already added 150 names to the membership rolls this year, and he still has thirty days to go.

Promotion Day at First Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., was a great occasion. The American Press of that city devoted a column and a half to an account of the event. Mr. A. M. Mayo enters upon his forty-fourth year as Church

In the death of Mr. C. W. Turpin, there passed one of the oldest employees of the Publishing House at Nashville, he having been connected with it for more than half a century. Brother Turpin was a recognized authority of religious and current literature. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maud Mooney Turpin, and two children.

Mrs. J. W. Booth, wife of our pastor at Houma, La., will have the sincere sympathy of many friends throughout Louisiana and Mississippi on account of the death of her sister, Mrs. M. H. Bailey, of New Orleans, which was very unexpected and a great shock.

Rev. L. J. Power, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, writes us that the parsonage of the Brooklyn and Bond charge was destroyed by fire last Wednesday. Brother Power had no particulars either as to the cause of the fire or the extent of the loss. Rev. D. E. Vickers, the pastor, called at the Advocate office a few days ago.

The Advocate appreciates the assurances of interest and good will sent us by Mrs. W. E. Bradshaw, of Benton, Miss. The kind words of our friends help to lighten a very heavy load.

The Summit Sentinel carried extensive excerpts from a stenographic report of the sermon of Bishop Dobbs at the recent dedication of the Methodist Church at that place. We have already carried an account of the service so we do not carry the account of the Sentinel.

Dr. M. E. Lazenby, who has served with great acceptability as editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate for fourteen years, is again asking to be permitted to return to the pastorate. As an outsider but not an indifferent observer, we regret to lose Dr. Lazenby from the tripod of that excellent paper. It is not every willing person who can make a success of the management of a church periodical, and it is just as difficult to popularize its message. Dr. Lazenby has done both.

Mr. Henry H. Ray, of Carroll County, Miss., celebrated his 83rd birthday on October 6, according to the Carrollton Conservative. The editor has known Brother Ray as long as he has known anyone, and he does not know any man who has carried his years better, or who has maintained a more consistent devotion to things that are pure and good. We join his many friends in wishing for him many more years of health and happiness.

A good list of subscriptions has been received from Port Gibson, Miss., where Rev. S. F. Harkey is pastor.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The following clippings deal with entirely different phases of our work. I am sure you will enjoy each, and, I hope, profit by their plans.

Mrs. J. N. Dunn was hostess to members of the Alligator Methodist Missionary Society Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock when she entertained with a beautifully appointed Silver Anniversary Luncheon which was a combined social event and study period.

For this event, the living and dining rooms and sun porch were attractively decorated with a profusion of pink radianse roses and in the dining room the picture table from which the delicious menu was served in buffet fashion, was draped with a handsome lace cloth and centered with a bowl filled with specimen pink roses.

Mrs. M. J. Luster, president of the Clarksdale Missionary Society, a guest of honor, and Mrs. C. G. Callicott presided at the luncheon table. Mrs. P. W. Smith also assisted in serving.

After having been bountifully served to the delicious viands included on the menu, the guests repaired to the sun porch where the luncheon was enjoyed as congenial subjects were discussed.

After lunch Mrs. Dunn, president, presided over the business session and presented Mrs. R. B. Matthews, study leader, who conducted a most instructive study of the first chapter of the book "That Other America" which has been adopted for the year's study. Mrs. Luster made an inspirational talk on the Silver Anniversary, pointing out the splendid work having been accomplished during that period of years by tireless workers. On the porch Mr. Dunn had on display posters describing the various activities of missionaries.

Mrs. Luster concluded her talk with an invitation to the Alligator Society to meet with the Clarksdale Missionary Society on next Monday afternoon for the second chapter of the adopted study book.

The meeting was closed with prayer offered by Mrs. P. W. Smith.

Monday afternoon at three o'clock the Woman's Missionary Society of Batesville, Miss., met with Mrs. Dave Vance in her lovely new home on Panola Ave. The Spiritual Life group committee with Mrs. W. W. Hartsfield, chairman, had charge of the study program. This group has taken up the study of "Hymnology" as part of their work for this quarter. Two beautiful old hymns were presented at this meeting. One, "Rock of Ages," by Mrs. Hartsfield, was much enjoyed by all. Then with Mrs. Vance presiding at the piano all joined in singing that beautiful old hymn, "Just As I Am Without One Plea." Mrs. Will Marshall gave a lengthy description of the hymn, its author, Miss Charlotte Elliott, and some of the instances in which this song had been of so much comfort and spiritual value to the sick and afflicted and those who had not found Jesus as their Savior. It is hoped that through the study of these hymns, as we familiarize ourselves with the author, the times and condition under which they were written and the wonderful results obtained therefrom, that we will learn to value and appreciate them more than ever before.

The president, Mrs. M. E. Jarrett, conducted a short business session. Mrs. Bufkin, superintendent of local work, suggested that some time soon there would be "A White Elephant" sale for the benefit of the repair fund for the church organ. Mrs. Haltom, study leader, announced that the society would take up the study of the book "Toward a Christian America" for their next work.

A social hour followed in which the hostess served delicious refreshments and the meeting was dismissed with prayer by Mrs. T. T. O'Bryant.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

An inspirational meeting of the Hattiesburg Zone No. 1 was held in the Petal Methodist Church on Monday, September 30. The members were greeted at the door by a welcoming committee. This church had just recently been brick veneered and renovated, and the zone appreciates very much the opportunity to hold their meeting in this church.

The devotional was led by the pastor of the church, Rev. E. E. McKeithen. During the business meeting reports were heard from sunshine boxes that had been sent. Mrs. W. H. Weathersby reported on the Circulating Library and all societies were urged to study the mission study book, "That Other America," and to study it according to council requirements so the societies would receive certificates. A nominating committee was appointed with Mrs. Asa Bryant as chairman. The next meeting will be held at the Court Street Methodist Church in Hattiesburg, December 2. There were 133 in attendance.

The program consisted of a "Round the World Tour" picturing the mission enterprises and the heroism of the missionary.

Representatives of the auxiliaries in the northern Brookhaven District who attended the zone meeting at the Methodist Church in Gallman, Monday afternoon, September 30, enjoyed an interesting program.

Mrs. H. R. Clegg, zone chairman, presided and Mrs. John Moore served as secretary. Rev. J. L. Carter, Crystal Springs, led the devotional services; Christian leadership was discussed by Mrs. Walter Enoch, of the Bethesda auxiliary; Mrs. J. L. Carter, Crystal Springs, made an interesting address on "Our Responsibility to Youth;" Mrs. P. D. Sigler talked of the Anti-Lynching movement as endorsed by leaders of the Church; Mrs. C. C. Anding, Jr., Gallman, rendered a beautiful violin solo.

The next meeting will be an all-day meeting in January, the time and place to be decided by the executive committee.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Zone chairman, Miss Celia Ida Mortimer, Crystal Springs; Vice zone chairman, Mrs. R. H. Clegg, Hazlehurst; Secretary, Mrs. Earl Alford, Crystal Springs.

The following auxiliaries answered roll call: Bethesda, with 7; Crystal Springs, with 20; Gallman, with 10; Hazlehurst, with 15.

Zone No. 2 of the Hattiesburg District held its last meeting of the year at Mize, Tuesday, October 1. It was one of the most inspirational and helpful meetings of the year.

Mrs. H. M. Reynolds, vice chairman, of Taylorsville, was in charge of the program. The meeting was opened by singing and Rev. J. L. Sells, of Mount Olive, conducted the devotional exercises.

The business session was devoted to the election of officers for the coming year, which resulted in the following: Mrs. H. H. Danson, Mize, president; Mrs. Bob Graham, Collins, vice-president; Mrs. D. C. Grissom, Taylorsville, secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. H. G. Castle, secretary and treasurer for the present year, reported that $10 had been paid by the zone to four superannuate preachers for this year. The offering for this meeting is to be used as a Christmas gift to these preachers.

A very interesting and instructive talk on the Week of Prayer, to be observed November 3-9, was given by Mrs. Smith, of Taylorsville, urging that we all begin now, praying, saving and looking forward to this privilege that we will soon have. Miss Bess Barlow, music teacher at Mize, rendered a violin solo.

The main objectives for the fourth quarter in our missionary work were discussed by Mrs. E. A. Loftin, district secretary.

Prayers were offered for a rededication of themselves to the work of another year.

held a most interesting and unusual meeting at Alden Bridge recently. Mrs. H. J. Rivers is the zone leader and Mrs. W. C. Ivey, secretary. It was an unusual meeting in that three baby life memberships were presented at the meeting. Included in this zone is Benton auxiliary, which has a splendid record. It has been organized seven years and has six life members. The Brice Circle of Mangham Memorial Church, Shreveport, which is also a part of this zone, has been organized eight months and has one adult life member and two baby life members. This is indeed a rare attainment.

And speaking of life memberships, have you heard that Mrs. G. F. Poole, of Bogalusa, the capable president of that auxiliary, was recently given a life membership, and she in turn has planned to give five baby life memberships. Isn't that a real precedent Mrs. Poole is setting?

In compiling a brief history of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference for the past twenty-five years, it was found that we have no records or minutes of the annual sessions from 1913 to 1917. Surely some of the good women of this state can help locate some of these lost records. Who can supply us the names of the presidents that served the Conference during these years? Any information concerning the work of the Woman's Missionary Society during this period of time will be greatly appreciated.

The mid-year executive meeting of the Louisiana Conference will be held in Crowley October 22 and 23. All Conference officers and district secretaries are expected to be there and bring reports of their work to date. Plans will be made for the completion of the year's work and arrangements for the annual meeting to be held in Alexandria next March will be considered.

FROM TUPELO, MISS.

Dear Dr. Duran: The following was adopted by the board of stewards and the fourth quarterly conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Tupelo, Miss.:

Dr. W. P. Buhrman,
Aberdeen, Miss.

Dear Sir:

We wish to express to you what we believe to be the unanimous wish of the Tupelo Methodist Church for the return of Dr. H. F. Brooks as our pastor for another year.

Our church has gone forward under his leadership. He has been patient with us in our failures—constant in his interest in us—tender in his reproof—so great in his love for us that it has begotten a greater love in us for him.

His leadership has been wise and enthusiastic—but his fidelity to ideals in his home life and the fine co-operation of his splendid wife and children, has made of our parsonage a home which is an example of a Christian home to all the community.

Yours very truly,

A. K. REED, President,
A. J. EUBANK, Secretary,
A. E. BERKLEY, Treasurer,

Quick Relief for Chills and Fever

and Other Effects of Malaria!

Don't put up with the suffering of Malaria—the teeth-chattering chills and the burning fever. Get rid of Malaria by getting the infection out of your system. That's what Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic does—destroys and drives out the infection. At the same time, it builds up your system against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic contains tasteless quinine which kills the infection in the blood. It also contains iron which builds up the blood and helps it overcome the effects of Malaria as well as fortify against re-infection. These are the effects you want for COMPLETE relief. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and absolutely safe, even for children. No bitter taste of quinine. Get a bottle today and be forearmed against Malaria. For sale at all drug stores. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

Christian Education

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, OCTOBER 20.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D.

THE MESSAGE OF JEREMIAH

Judah stood in imminent danger of defeat and exile, but her chief danger was moral, not physical. Already alienated from God, it was inevitable that they should lose all that his covenant had promised. This warning was the burden of the message of Jeremiah, a warning met with defiant appeal to the temple standing in their midst as evidence and guarantee of their acceptance with God, just as a later generation resented the preaching of Jesus because they could call Abraham "father." They had divorced religion and morals, rites and righteousness, and profaned the temple they professed to revere. No place is holy when trodden by unholy feet or used for unholy purposes. No crime is so hideous as that done in the name of religion. Sins of presumption are worse than sins of passion, and it is high presumption for one to suppose himself such a favorite with God that his sins will be overlooked. Judah had made the house of God a refuge of robbers, a rendezvous of evildoers.

Under these conditions Jeremiah cried "Amend your ways!" He connected conduct and character and made well-being contingent on well-doing. One cannot claim the rewards of a covenant and shirk its responsibilities. It is a crude theology that links piety with prosperity and impiety with adversity in such a way that daily accounts may be cast up with God, showing the balance now on this side of the ledger, now on that, but even such a theology is preferable to one that denies all connection between conduct and destiny, as ignorance is preferable to idiocy. A creative God must favor those who live creatively, as a world of law must favor those who keep the law. Who thinks otherwise, "trusts lying words"—deceives himself by false promises.

The faithful old prophet denounces a group of fearful sins and crimes. Called by their right names, as he called them, they are crass and repulsive to our sensitive ears and refined feelings. However, we, too, know a temple of refuge and a means of escape. We find refuge from theft in smart trade; from murder with daggers in cut-throat competition; from indictment for adultery in six weeks' change of residence. Church and creed, ritual and sacrament, may be but fetishes for us, charms by which we would escape the penalty of our misdeeds.

Burnt offerings may become an abomination to God. The noblest sacrifice is to yield self-will in loving obedience. Unless supported by right living, the part of the offerings that was burned might as well have been eaten with the rest. Obedience is God's first command. For this there can be no substitute. It is well with that people who walk in the ways of Jehovah. "The meek shall inherit the earth."

RUSTON DISTRICT NOTES

Another Conference year is about to come to a close. A little report from the Ruston District might be of interest to those who are trying to bring the year's work to a successful close.

This has been a busy year for the preachers of the Ruston District. Our presiding elder has set us a fine example by being on the go all the time. In season and out of season he has been busy looking after the interests of the church in the Ruston District. Since September 1st he has had the responsibility of looking after the pastoral duties of the First Methodist Church of Ruston at the same time caring for the needs of his district. We believe that this fine example has helped, for reports come to the scribe that the preachers have kept busy all the year with the result that the whole district will make a fine report to Conference.

We are in the midst of a fine Standard Training School at Homer just now. The attendance is fine and quite a large number of churches are represented in the school. If the majority of those enrolled take credit, this will be the largest school of its kind held in the Ruston District in some years. As far as we have the information, the Ruston District has led the Conference in the number of Daily Vacation Church Schools held. Some twenty-four or twenty-five such schools were held in the Ruston District this year. In early September a splendid Bible Conference was held in Arcadia. Dean Smith did some fine work in this Conference.

If the present condition is any indication, there will be quite a number of churches in the Ruston District this year which will be able to make a full report to the Annual Conference. We have made gratifying progress all the year. The Ruston District will not be ashamed at Conference time.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

By Billy Gannaway, Publicity Supt.

Hello, Young People:

Let's get Memphis-minded! If you are as enthusiastic about the Methodist Young People's Conference to be held in Memphis on December 27-31 as the Conference officers proved to be at our last meeting, then we'll all be there with one accord. But, before we get there we have the selection of delegates to promote. Each district has received its quota allowed by the Conference and it is up to the district directors and presiding elders to plan for the selection of these delegates. The General chairman of the Conference is Rev. G. W. Dameron of Crowley. He challenges us to be the first Conference to send in our quota. Can we do it? If we work together we can meet his challenge. Possibly you, as a young person, are the one in your district that desires most to go. Talk it over with your pastor or district director and plans can be made for you to be one of the delegates.

The Live-Wire Union of Lake Charles District has edited its third edition of the Electric Spark and sends the publicity superintendent a copy. We note from its contents that Miss Marjorie Haggart, district director for four years is now a student at Scarritt College for Christian Workers. We are proud of Marjorie's decision to further her training in Christian service. Our prayers are with her in her new field of study. Claudius Mayo of Lake Charles has just been appointed as her successor. Those who know Claudius know that he will keep Lake Charles District on the map.

Miss Edith Childress has been re-elected president of Lambuth Union. Edith is a fine leader and we are proud of her re-election.

Certain Pains Relieved

By the Use of Cardui

Cardui, for women, is composed of the extracts of some of Nature's most useful plants. Medical authorities acknowledge their great value in the treatment of conditions which Cardui is intended to benefit. Where there has been functional monthly pains, from the early 'teens, through the years of mature womanhood and into the late forties, Cardui has helped to make women more comfortable. Because Cardui helps to strengthen the entire system, there is less tendency to severe recurring attacks. Women who need Cardui should get a bottle at the drug store and take it as directed. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit you, consult a physician.

The Service Union of Monroe District met in Starlington on October 10. We hear that there are two new unions in Lake Charles District, but don't yet know their names.

See you in Memphis.

REV. JEROME CAIN APPRECIATED

Whereas, Rev. Jerome Cain has so diligently served us as pastor for the past three years and has so endeared himself to us by his tireless efforts and unfailing sympathy in the problems that have arisen in the erection of our new church auditorium and because we feel that we so greatly need his leadership in the completion of it; be it

Resolved, That we, the board of stewards of the Claiborne Methodist Episcopal Church, South, petition Bishop Dobbs and Dr. Geo. Sexton to return him to us for another year if, in their estimation in the granting of this prayer, they do not deem it too great a sacrifice for him personally; also be it Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to Bishop Dobbs and Dr. George Sexton, also one sent to the Christian Advocate and a copy entered in our minutes.

A POEM

By Rev. S. J. Davies, D. D.

So beside the silent sea
I wait the muffled oar
No harm can come to me from Him

On ocean or on shore.

—Whittier.

For sea and shore are in His hand;
He holds them for His own,
All for their good secure shall stand
Till time and tide be flown.

So faith in Him a guiding star
Shall lead me through the years;
May no dark cloud then dim or mar,
With doubting or, with fears.

Sure o'er it all His power extends
More boundless than the sea,
His promise sure no harm portends
He holds it safe for you and me.

Then give us faith that reaches far
O'er earth and sea and sky;
Lord God of all, be thou our star,
Our light on earth and aye.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Joshua 11:15—He left nothing undone of all that the Lord commanded Moses.

This remarkable tribute is paid to Joshua. It is all the more striking because the Lord's commands were given through Moses. The commands were given to Joshua indirectly. But Joshua conscientiously carried on the faithful work of Moses. Had Joshua been disobedient, he would have impaired the work of his predecessor.

Joshua made no distinction between the pleasant and the unpleasant work. To fight the enemies of Israel was dangerous. It is so easy to be obedient to God when our plans are the same as God's plans. It is altogether different when God's plans call for sacrificial living. But obedience is not a matter of whims and fancies. Wisely did Mr. Wesley include in the rules of the Methodist societies that Christians will "trample under foot that enthusiastic doctrine that we are not to do good unless our hearts be free to it." This is a much needed lesson for our day. Obedience must be constant.

Joshua was free from the sins of omission. "He left nothing undone of all that the Lord commanded." A workman does not intend to fall off the building, but the fall is just as dangerous as if he had planned it. A chauffeur does not intend to slide into the ditch, but the results are just as disastrous.

In Christ's discourse on the judgment, He told of the steward who "hid his Lord's money." Jesus spoke of him as a "wicked and slothful servant." Sins of omission are grievous in God's sight.

Sins of omission are often caused by thoughtlessness. Sometimes they are caused by false emphases when trifles are magnified and true values ignored. But sins of omission can be avoided as well as sins of commission by placing God first and seeking His guidance. Joshua gave himself to the Lord. He chose to serve God. As a result "he left nothing undone of all that the Lord commanded Moses."

Joshua was patient. This war lasted for nearly seven years. Patience does not reap less because it reaps slowly. The water in the brook finds its way into the creek, thence into the river, the gulf, the ocean. Even so the fruits of fidelity are gathered with patience. Many exceeding and precious promises are given to the faithful. Therefore "be not weary in well doing, for in due season ye shall reap, if ye faint not." God sees every labor of love. No labor is lost in the Lord. There is a crown of life laid up for the faithful. The faithful shall live in the paradise of God.

PRAYER

Our gracious Heavenly Father, may Thy spirit illumine our minds and spiritualize all our affections that we may love Thee with all of our hearts, all of our minds, all of our strength; that we may love our neighbors as ourselves. May we be faithful. May we leave nothing undone of all the Lord commands. May our service be joyous and wholehearted, that we may live in the radiance of Thy love. In the Savior's name we ask it.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

As there have been several changes in the report blanks to be used by the preachers in making their statistical reports to the Annual Conference, it will be absolutely necessary that each pastor make his report on the new forms which can be had from the Publishing House at 15c.

In entering the amount apportioned to the charge for General and Conference work, the amount accepted by the charge is the proper amount to enter, as the new blank calls for the amount "assumed" and not the amount apportioned by the district stewards.

It will also be of great assistance to the statistical secretaries if the preachers will get their Tables 1 and 2 to me at least a week or ten days before the meeting of the Annual Conference. Should any corrections be necessary in Tables 1 and 2, after sending them in, these can be pinned to Table 3 when handed in at Conference.

ROBERT W. VAUGHAN,
Statistical Secretary, Louisiana
Annual Conference.

DOES YOUR HUSBAND CALL YOU GROUCHY?

He's truthful if not tactful. Man-like, he is bewildered by your offishness and irritability. He can't understand what you have to be blue about. He wishes that you'd snap out of it. He'd do anything he could to help you. If he knew how good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was, he'd go straight to the nearest drug store and buy you a bottle.

"My husband says I am my old self again," says Mrs. Barbara Spears, 799 Elma Street, Akron, Ohio. "I was tired and all in with no appetite. Had no pep and was in poor spirits. Your Vegetable Compound eliminated that awful tired feeling."

Don't try your husband's patience too far. Get a bottle from your druggist NOW. It probably will help you, because nearly a million American women know from personal experience that it helps them.

FLORENCE EUGENIA FLOWERS

Florence Eugenia Flowers, daughter of Ephraim Washington Flowers and Mary M. Flowers, was born August 2, 1869, at the ancestral home near Auburn, Miss. This home was settled by her pioneer forebears, Henry Flowers and Nancy Adams, 1812, who were co-founders of Adams church and camp ground, a spot that has had large and honorable place in the history of Methodism in Mississippi.

Miss Florence joined the Methodist Church in early girlhood and thus publicly began a life of consecration and devotion that continued and expanded till the day of her much lamented death. She was loyal to the doctrines and discipline of Methodism although her sympathies were as broad as Christendom. Under the ministry of Rev. J. L. Morrill she entered upon the fuller life, the reality and sincerity of which were attested by forty years during which her life and service adorned the doctrine.

She elected teaching as her task and to it gave her fullest commitment. This work continues to bear fruit in the lives of the men and women whom she touched as boys and girls in the school, all of whom would do her reverence.

The funeral, attended by many friends who travelled great distances to pay her tribute, was from the Baldwin Funeral Home, Jackson, Miss. The service was conducted by Rev. J. A. Wells, accompanied by the following pastors: Dr. J. L. Decell, Galloway Memorial, Jackson; Rev. F. L. Applewhite, Wesson; Revs. Linus A. Anders and J. W. Leggett, Jr., McComb; and Rev. L. T. Nelson, present pastor of the Adams charge.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF MRS. E. G. TAYLOR

On September 14, 1935, in Como, Miss., God in His infinite wisdom called to her heavenly home the intrepid spirit of this beloved wife and mother, Mrs. Mimie Yarbrough Taylor. It was not meant that this dear friend of ours who loved all things beautiful should perish with the flowers.

By heredity, environment and natural ability, Mrs. Taylor was a born leader. His personal magnetism and fine judgment made it easy for her to gain the confidence and co-operation of others in any undertaking, be it social or religious. Her life was an inspiration to those with whom she was associated. To commit any project to her capable leadership meant success, for she literally did "whatsoever her hands found to do with all her might."

The Methodist Church has lost not only a valuable member, but the most efficient and faithful organist that it ever had. This splendid choir Mrs. Taylor directed in the years gone by, before her health failed, was indeed an asset to the church and a joy to her friends. She has gone on to join other members of that choir "loved long since and lost awhile," who are now singing the new songs of Zion in the "choir invisible."

The Woman's Missionary Society has lost one of its most generous and faithful members.

Hence, it is not only fit and proper, but it becomes the sad privilege of the organization to give expression of its deep appreciation of the life and work of this remarkable woman. Therefore be it,

Resolved, That in her death the Woman's Missionary Society has sustained a great loss; but while she is gone her influence still abides. Truly we can say, "She has done what she could;" be it further,

Resolved, That the Woman's Missionary Society extend to the bereaved husband and daughters our heart-felt sympathy in this sad hour. We commend to them the God of love, "Who doeth all things well;" and be it further

Resolved, That on the pages of our minutes be spread these resolutions in memory of our dear friend and co-worker; that a copy be sent to her sorrowing family and also one sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

MRS. F. O. DAVIS,

For Bad Cough, Mix This Better Remedy, at Home

Needs No Cooking! Big Saving!

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this home mixture and try it for a distressing cough. It's no trouble to mix, and costs but a trifle, yet it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water for a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, put it into a pint bottle, and fill up with your sugar syrup. The pint thus made gives you four times as much cough remedy for your money, yet it is far more effective than ready-made medicine. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

This splendid remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It soothes the irritated membranes, loosens the phlegm, and helps clear air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous for its effect in stopping coughs quickly. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

The following are some of the pastors who have served the Homer Methodist Church: Jno. Pipes, 1855-1856; Jas. L. Wright, 1858; T. H. McClendon, 1861. The preacher appointed to serve during 1862 died during the year. His name is unknown. Others who have served the church at Homer are as follows: Jno. A. Miller (appointed to finish out 1862), served 1863; Reynolds S. Trippett, 1864-1865; T. J. Upton, 1870; Jas. A. Parker, 1877-1880; Joseph H. Stone, 1881-1882; J. W. Medlock, 1883-1886; T. B. White, 1887-1888; J. L. P. Sheppard, 1889-1890; Robt. Randle, 1891; Jas. A. Parker, 1892-1893; J. D. Harper, 1894; V. D. Skipper, 1895; P. A. Johnston, 1896-1897; H. W. May, 1898; W. F. Henderson, 1899-1902; R. H. Wynn, 1903 to Oct. 4; Rev. Mr. Finley, 1903, Oct. to Dec.; H. W. Bowman, 1904-1907; W. H. Coleman, 1908-1910; A. S. Lutz, 1911-1912; T. J. Warlick, 1913-1914; J. G. Snelling, 1915-1916; W. L. Doss, Jr., 1917-1920; R. W. Tucker, 1921-1924; Ellis Smith, 1925-1926; J. W. Lee, 1927-1928; W. C. Childress, 1929-1933; Louis Hoffpauir, 1934; W. L. Doss, Jr., 1935. It will be seen that one of these served the church five years, W. C. Childress. Two others served the church twice, Jas. A. Parker and the present pastor, W. L. Doss, Jr.

THANKS TO ALL

Our Publishing Agents and Radio Station WSM have been swamped with responses to the first program of the Chapel Choir on the air Sunday, October 6. It is impossible for the Publishing Agents to answer each one of the responses individually at this time, but they do want every one to know that they appreciate most sincerely the many fine cards and letters of congratulation and commendation that have been received. It appears that the program of sacred music by the Chapel Choir each Sunday is going to meet a long-felt need and will place Methodism before the world in a modern and effectual way.

THE GATE BEYOND

Will my candle of faith guide me to the gate beyond,

This dark night of sin and fear?

Will I hear the sweet voices of angels respond

To His—as I wait out here?

Will He bid me welcome and smile on me
And forgive—as He forgave on Calvary?

Will He take my hand and lead me on Until I rest securely within the gates beyond?

ELOISE GODWIN WARD.

COURAGE

Courage to die for your country—yes.

But why not courage to live?

Is it courage to answer a selfish call

With naught but a body to give?

It's a living life that your country needs,

A Christ-like, prayerful life,

And strength to say "No" to the powers that be

And will end the desire for strife.

A few crowned heads, a well laid plot,

A mob with a hue and a cry—

A beating drum, a flying flag,

And our men go out, to die.

For our country at war, we would give our all.

But for peace, have we nothing to give?

So wasted is courage, just to die.

O God, give us courage to live!

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—and see that you get what you want.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

Amory Methodist Church

Where the Sessions of the North Mississippi Conference will be held October 30 - November 3

THE TOWN OF AMORY, MISSISSIPPI, began its existence in the late eighties and, almost simultaneously with its life, it began to live as a church town. A minister by the name of Whitehurst was the first Methodist preacher to hold services in Amory. Those services were held in a frame storehouse. In 1889 a church was organized and a frame building was erected on Church Street. The lot was donated by the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham Railroad, now known as the "Frisco." There was a membership of about forty persons. What they lacked in numbers was more than compensated in determination. With Christian fortitude such as characterized this little band of noble men and women, the church was built and paid for when first entered for services. Thus began Amory Church as a part of the Smithville Circuit, forty-six years ago.

F. A. Whitson became pastor in 1893, succeeded by W. W. Woollard. It was during his pastorate that the parsonage was built. In succession came J. B. Buck, D. L. Cogdell, K. M. Harrison, H. T. Cunningham, S. L. Pope, O. L. Savage, W. S. Shipman, R. O. Brown, W. M. Young, during whose pastorate, in 1914, a handsome new brick building was erected to take the place of the old frame building. Next came J. E. Thomas and E. R. Smoot. The church was made a station in 1921 and

A NEW THEORY OF GLOOM has been added to the lore of scientific explorations of the human mind. A psychologist, says an exchange, has discovered that it is human nature to be happy and self-satisfied after doing a good job. From that mental characteristic, he concludes that the failure to do a good job accounts for much of the misery that belongs to this vale of tears. And the goblins will get you if you don't watch out!

THE EDICT OF NANTES was revoked by Louis XIV, of France, on October 18, 250 years ago. By this act of Revocation, more than a quarter of a million Huguenots became exiles for conscience' sake. They left their native land rather than forswear their faith. These fugitives established themselves in almost every country of Europe and the West, and wherever they pitched their tents new industries sprang up and established methods of manufacture were improved. And, best of all, they made the principles for which the Huguenots battled the imperishable possession of the western world. No nobler blood-stream was ever introduced into the life of any country.

A NEW MASSACHUSETTS statute requires every student in the schools to salute the flag at least once in every five days, and students and teachers must sing "America" once in the school week, or pay a fine of five dollars for each failure. For our part, such a law reminds us of a Patriarchal dream in which the sheaves of the brothers did obeisance to the sheaf of Joseph. A boy eight years old in Lynn is said to have refused to salute the flag and the school board were in a quandary as to whether the law requiring the salute takes precedence over the law requiring every child to attend school. We believe in patriotism, not puppetism.

THE TOTEM-POLE OF THE AMERICAN INDIAN is a crude and grotesque shaft whose carving portrays his idea of his origin, social relation and destiny. To our refined and cultured minds, it is an example of an intellectual and spiritual density which almost defies analysis. But many of our Christian monuments employ exactly the same principle and have a common purpose as those hideously carved symbols of savage genealogy. For instance, near Sherborne, England, is an architectural sculpture, a shaft which embodies the Tabernacle, the Cross, the Good Shepherd, the Resurrection and other symbolical representations of early Christian history and belief.

THE BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY added 14 new versions to its list last year. Nine of these new versions are for Africa, and one of them for about 30,000 people living in three of the provinces of Ethiopia. The Gospel of Mark may now be read by these people in their own tongue. No one can say, says an exchange, that we didn't send the Gospel to Abyssinia!

Aside from Paderewski's ability as a musician, no one is better qualified than he to interpret the scores of his fellow countryman and his brother artist. MUSTAPHA KEMAL, the ruler of Turkey, has ordered that the church of St. Sophia in Constantinople be closed, and that the building shall be maintained as a museum of culture for the whole world. No building in the entire world has a more interesting history. The Roman emperors robbed the shrines of the whole Empire for its adornments of marble, alabaster, jasper and gold; a vast army of masons were five years in its construction; it was a great Christian church of the early centuries; and since 1453 it has been a Mohammedan mosque. There is a tradition that one day Christ will descend to its dome of gold and from that day onward the world will be Christian.

THE CLOCK TOWER OF BERNE is a landmark of the Swiss Capital. It dates back to the 15th century, and the clockwork constructed in the 16th century is still in use. At the striking of the hours a troop of little bears go round in a circle and a cock crows three times before and once after the chiming. A man sitting with a staff in one hand and an hour-glass in the other counts the strokes by opening his mouth and smiting with his stick at every stroke of the clock. Another wooden manikin rings two bells when the hour is about to strike, and a figure of the founder of the city in armor, stands beside the bells in the top of the tower and announces the hour by striking the bells with a hammer.

RIDING A GLACIER

Mark Twain once suggested something about saving the trouble and exertion of climbing down from a great mountain peak by seating himself on a glacier and riding it to the valley below. The humorist was casting one of the wonder stories of nature into a form of irresistible interest and charm. No one who has seen those great ice masses on the lofty peaks of the Swiss Alps and has meditated upon the downward movement in which the very stones are shaped for their trundling can possibly miss the meaning of such a remark. But instead of laughing with Mark Twain at the ridiculousness of the ride which he imagined, there seem to be some who, in all seriousness, sit down for the ride. They do not realize that the mass of the ice is the chief factor in the figure which expresses the movement of the glacier, and that its velocity measured in distance and time is both negligible and imperceptible. A progressiveness of thought or action calculated by multiplying the mass of a man by the speed of the glacier would not get a very complimentary result. The gait of the terrapin would be a run away compared with it, but it might help some people to understand that Mark Twain meant to produce a laugh rather than to commend the ride. The Kingdom of God as related to the greatness and the eternity of Jehovah is a concept to which immediacy is nothing. Its impact is determined by the cumulative energies of unmeasured years and a wisdom which has no horizon of time; but man has a pre-determined horizon and a mass which is molecular by comparison, and speed is an indispensable factor of his impact. The words of Jesus addressed to his betrayer, "That thou doest, do quickly," are worthy of nobler application, and his command to his friends, "Rise, let us be going," is ever an insistent urge to life. The virtue and the merit of an individual life are largely determined by its spirit and by the energy recorded in its velocity. One thing is certain: No man can ride a glacier to fame.

OUR INTELLECTUAL OBSESSION

The omnipotence of mind appears to be an unconquerable obsession of the human race. Adam and Eve undertook to resolve their doubts, but they discovered their own nakedness and lost their primal estate instead. The Children of Israel believed more firmly in the virtues of the golden calf than in the goodness and power of the God, who for forty years guided their feet through desert wastes and whose eternal resources furnished a commissary for the marching thousands. Paganism deified the energies of sun and moon and filled the world with magnificent monuments of its devotion. Following the same path and guided by the same intellectual obsession, men today are assigning to political authority and to social and economic schemes a redemptive power and a measure of wisdom and finality which can no more be realized now than when Adam and Eve met disaster, or when pagan fellow-craftsmen built the gorgeous temples of sun-worship—manuments whose ruins tell the story of a magnificent obsession which spoiled the happiest and the holiest relation of the human race. The technocracy, which is destined to set human affairs to rights, is not primarily intellectual, it is not social and it is not economic—it is fundamentally spiritual. Some men may be made powerful by an educational technique, but such a technique can never be redemptive except as it shall incarnate and convey to men the intelligence and the love of God. There is a human problem too great to be solved by mere intelligence and a need too great to be met by any mechanical planning. Such schemes are not more than spiritual sedatives which deaden the sensibilities, but cannot remove the sting of death, nor take away the cause of human undoing. There is a creative force and efficacy in God which is necessary to the rebuilding of our broken lives, and is no less necessary for the redemption of the sterile and war-torn days upon which we are come. The prophets of God need to cry with an uncompromising insistence: "Remove not the ancient landmark, which thy fathers have set."

"ASSUMED" ASKINGS

We have received recently a number of letters and statements to the effect that amounts assumed for benevolences by quarterly conferences might not be paid. Of course, there may be good reason for failure in any individual instance, but we believe that it should be a real reason. It ought not to be merely a reflection of the habit that has prevailed so largely in recent years. The Church needs to remember that the policy of voluntary giving, for which it has clamored so long, is on trial. It should remember, also, that vital enterprises which have been cramped and embarrassed for many years will experience a further reduction of their inadequate income, if we fail to fulfill our contract. Any considerable failure of the churches in the initial instance of the voluntary policy will show that not all the failure of the past was due to a resentment at being levied upon, but some of it, at least, must be charged to conditions which are more individual and personal—a lack of individual and church loyalty to the enterprises for which appeal is made. It is manifest already that the failure upon the part of the churches to react to the new financial plan is going to result in discouragement and keen disappointment for the stronger churches which are standing heroically up to the fullest measure of responsibility in order that the experiment might be made. The real tragedy of failure will be recorded in the acceptances of another year. Let every church, great and small, leave nothing undone that will help to make this first year of voluntary giving a perfect response. The whole benevolent program of the Church is the issue and may become the pawn of this important period in our history.

PRAYER FAULTS

A friend writes us making complaint of the careless and confusing use of terms for addressing the Deity, which spoils the prayers of some otherwise good ministers. We do not know anything of the particular case complained of, but we do feel that there is often too much dependence upon a sepulchral tone and classic forms of prayer, and too little studied regard for the clarity and definiteness which give force to prayer. A number of years ago, a distinguished layman said of a very capable pastor that his prayers were so dominated by commonplaces in both verbiage and thought as to rob them of interest. No wise pastor will permit himself to lose sight of the fact that public prayers are more than personal—they are equally forms for leading the devotions of every communicant who with bowed head follows the thought of his pastor. Of course, no prayer should be dominated by a literary aim, but there must be a happy medium where mind and spirit blend.

MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate met in annual session in its office at 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, October 10, 1935.

In the absence of a regular chairman, Dr. J. T. Leggett, vice chairman, presided. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs honored the committee with his presence and valuable suggestions.

The editor and business manager made their reports which showed that unusual progress had been made the past year both in a financial way and in the prestige of the Advocate. If some of the lay organizations, and a few of the churches which put certain amounts into their budgets for the Advocate, will make their pledges good, the entire debt which has been hanging over the paper like a nightmare for many years will be wiped off the books. Then we can start the new year with a clean balance sheet. The subscription list is larger than it has been for a number of years. Both the editor and business manager were commended in the highest terms for making this report possible.

Dr. W. L. Duren was re-elected editor for a term of three years with a very modest salary and an allowance for house rent. Mr. C. Milton Chalmers was re-elected business manager at the same salary.

Dr. H. T. Carley, former editor, was elected associate editor without salary.

After the meeting of the Louisiana Conference Dr. Duren will devote his entire time to the Advocate which assures us that we will have a paper that is even better than it is now. The price of subscription remains the same, $1.50 per year, and we urge every pastor to become an active agent for its support.

The following officers for the committee were elected at the close of the meeting:

Mr. J. W. Reily, New Orleans, chairman; Rev. J. T. Leggett, Mississippi Conference, vice chairman; Rev. V. C. Curtis, North Mississippi Conference, secretary.

Those appointed to represent the Advocate before their respective Conferences are as follows: Rev. A. M. Serex, Louisiana Conference; Rev. Otto Porter, Mississippi Conference; Rev. J. H. Felts, North Mississippi Conference.

With the prospects that the ensuing year will be the most successful we have had in a number of years the committee adjourned one of the most pleasant sessions it has been this writer's privilege to attend.

V. C. CURTIS, Secretary.

SIGNS OF HOPE

By Rev. T. F. King

The article in the Advocate of October 10, entitled, "What Price War?" was both timely and courageous. I was particularly gratified to note that the writer, Mrs. Allen, condemned the isolation policy which has been adopted by our government. We have sought to avoid trouble, only to realize that troubles have accumulated to such an extent that now, mountains of them must be faced.

I am afraid, however, that Mrs. Allen is unduly pessimistic. I am not nearly so blue about the whole matter as she appears to be. Probably there is some queer kink in my nature which makes it difficult for me to value aright the destructive forces of the world. Be that as it may, I must confess that in some perverse and contradictory manner I feel more hopeful now, concerning internationalism and world peace, than I have felt in many years.

I would like to explain why I feel as I do, and at the same time point out one or two hopeful signs in the present world situation.

1. As we scan the international horizon, the first hopeful sign is, that the present crisis has galvanized the League of Nations into new life. A few months ago the League was slowly dying; but today it is a power to be reckoned with in world affairs. The simple reason is that the League is standing for, and upholding the principles for which it was called into being. Note what has happened. Not only has Italy been condemned, branded if you like, by an international tribunal; but the League by taking up the cause of the oppressed nation has ventured out into almost unknown territory, that is, into the realm of international right dealing and justice amongst nations. The whole situation is unprecedented. Never before in the history of the world has anything like it happened, and it means this: that from now on, if national pride and honor count for anything at all, it will become increasingly difficult for any nation to wage a deliberate war of aggression. In the future a nation in becoming the aggressor, must face not only the nation invaded, but also the joint action of the League of Nations. But there is something else to be considered in this situation. If the League is thus going to be a guarantee of security and peace, then obviously it is going to pay to be a member of that body, even if only for the purely selfish reason of security. Personally I am strongly of the opinion that a new power has arisen in the international world, it is the power of the League. I rejoice in its stamina, and pray for it a yet greater future.

2. A second matter which provides some reason for hope lies in the realm of sanctions. As this article is being written, some fifty-odd nations have decided to impose penalties upon Italy. It is assumed that these sanctions, or penalties, will be mild, that is, not of a military nature; for as I have mentioned the League is moving along a chartless course, and probably the European powers are also hoping that if Mussolini is given plenty of rope he will hang himself. However, what I wish to point out is this simple fact, that sanctions, mild or otherwise, are going to cost something in actual trade and money. Here again in this present crisis, we are confronted with the unusual. Nations are finally realizing that if we would have peace in the world it is necessary to sacrifice something for the sake of peace. Note this fact. It is something for which to give thanks. A majority of the nations of the world, including of course our own nation, have come to the conclusion that it is better to lose a certain amount of trade, than pay the awful cost of war.

3. The third and last hopeful sign is somewhat more intangible, but probably the most real and vital factor to be reckoned with. During the last few years there has been forming what we might call a world conscience concerning war. This conscience has been more or less inarticulate in the past, but during this present crisis it has discovered something of its own strength and power. I am not trying to state that we have reached the point where swords can be beaten into plowshares, what I do affirm is that this world conscience must be taken into consideration, for it has found expression and discovered its power. If this new world conscience continues to develop we shall find it to be the most powerful agency for peace there is in the world today. At last I believe we are moving forward along right lines. We have a long way to go, but if we can hold the gains, we shall climb to greater heights.

These then are the reasons why, in spite of the gloom of the present, I feel hopeful. Possibly I am trying to grasp at shadows, but then, shadows of things to come are all we can grasp at, and they do have a way of materializing. I realize, too, that Great Britain in taking her stand for the League, also has her eyes on the British Empire, but my argument is simply that the events of the last few days have established an international precedent, from which world opinion, and the world conscience cannot withdraw. We must move forward.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

BY W. L. DUREN

J. Allen, and M. L. Wood and their families. Mrs. Wood died, and J. W. Lambuth came home in 1861, and the other two remained on the field alone and without support from home.

Another missionary interest which enlisted the attention and interest of the Church during the first quadrennium, was California. The western country came into sudden importance due to the discovery of gold, and the gold rush of the "forty-niners" drew the attention of the Church to the missionary need and opportunity of that field. In February, 1850, Jesse Boring and two assistants went out from Georgia, Mr. D. W. Pollock, of St. Louis, went out also, and in 1852 A. M. Wynn of Georgia was added to the force. The missionaries on the field found great hospitality and there was a rapid growth of the Church, and the Pacific Conference was organized in 1852.

The Second General Conference of the Church, South, met in Centenary Church, St. Louis, May 1, 1850. It remained in session only two weeks on account of a scourge of cholera which was prevalent in the city. Rev. Issac Boring, a delegate from Georgia, died of the plague, and from that time to the adjournment, a shadow rested upon the Conference. Very little new or important legislation was undertaken at this session. Those who were charged with looking after the property claims reported that suits had been instituted for equities in the properties of New York, Philadelphia, and Cincinnati. Dr. Lovick Pierce reported the failure of his fraternal mission to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and his final and personal message to the General Conference of that Church was made a part of the records of the Southern Church. Dr. W. A. Smith and Dr. Thomas Crowder, both of Virginia, championed a change in the constitution of the General Conference which was rather novel. It was proposed to introduce an "Upper House" to be chosen by laymen and whose functions were to be judicial. It was a clumsy and cumbersome form of the Judicial Council recently adopted by the Church, South. Dr. Henry B. Bascom was elected Bishop, but on September 8, following his ordination, he died, having held only the St. Louis Conference.

The era of peace, for which both sides vainly hoped when the Church was divided, did not become a permanent reality, and the slavery issue was soon to the fore again. At the General Conference of 1850, an effort was made to expunge the rule on slavery, but it failed of success. After the defeat of the move, J. Hamilton introduced and secured the passage of a Resolution of explanation which compromised and defeated what had been done. The issue was pressed, particularly by South Carolina whose delegation voted solidly for the motion. Their dissatisfaction was very pronounced and probably remembering that on the motion of Asbury in 1808 a special Discipline had been authorized for use in the South Carolina Conference, with the rule on slavery deleted from it, the same Conference now, without authorization of the General Conference, ordered the publication of an edition of the Discipline with the rule on slavery left out. Editorial notice was given in the Southern Christian Advocate, May 16, 1851, of the issuance of the Discipline ordered by the South Carolina Conference. The editorial described it as: "A fac simile of that bearing the imprimatur of John Early, identical in all respects with the connectional edition, with the exception of the necessary alteration of the title-page, and the omission of the second part—that on slavery." The reason given for this act of insubordination was that it had been the, "Fruitful source of trouble to the Methodist Church, a doctrine to which none in South Carolina ever subscribed, and has long since become inoperative and ceased by common consent to set forth a practical rule or principle." The last clause was the exact language of the Resolution of explanation which the General Conference had ordered inserted in the Discipline of 1850. This incident was followed in 1854 by action to remove the rule from the Discipline, but the change was not properly acted upon in the Pacific and the Kansas Mission Conferences and it was re-submitted in 1858 by a vote of 140 to 8. Before the assembling of another General Conference of the Southern Church, the war had made unnecessary a report from the Annual Conferences.

The same question agitated the Methodist Episcopal Church in its session of 1856 at Indianapolis. Motion was made to change the rule on slavery. At that time, Rev. John A. Collins, who had been the counsel for the Baltimore Conference against Francis A. Harding in 1844, said that in 1848, "The Plan of Separation was repudiated to enable us to go to our brethren in the border work, and they received us expressly on the ground of the Discipline as it is, and because they were opposed to the policy of the M. E. Church, South, on the subject of slavery. And it does not seem to us expedient, or indeed just, now to enforce upon them other measures which, in their judgment, will seriously cripple, if not extinguish the work among them." In 1860, the General Conference meeting in Buffalo, New York, adopted a new chapter on the subject of slavery which made slaveholding a term of communion. The Methodist, which began publication soon after the adjournment of the General Conference, had Rev. Geo. R. Crooks, D.D., and Rev. John McClintock for editor and assistant, respectively. It was an independent paper which had for its purpose the defense of the new legislation on slavery. On September 14, 1860, the preachers of the Baltimore Conference met in Wesley Chapel to consider the new legislation, and that meeting was followed on December 5, 6, by a meeting of laymen of the Baltimore Conference. The meeting included representatives from a majority of the circuits and stations of the Conference, and four resolutions were adopted, the first of which said: "Resolved, That the Baltimore Annual Conference should at its next session declare that, by its recent unconstitutional and violent action, the Buffalo General Conference has sundered the ecclesiastical connection which has hitherto held us together as one Church, and that the Baltimore Conference does not and cannot longer remain under its jurisdiction or submit to its authority, or those representing that authority." The resolution was adopted by a vote of 91 to 32, and the intensity of feeling on this subject was further evidenced by the fact that when the war ended, a considerable part of the Baltimore Conference, having maintained an independent status during the progress of the war, went in a body to the Southern Church, an incident which will receive fuller consideration later.

But the ferment and agitation on account of slavery was not confined to Episcopal Methodism. In a convention of the Methodist Protestant Church, held at Springfield, Ohio, in November, 1858, the Northern and Western Conferences withdrew on account of the slavery issue, and they sought union with the Wesleyan Connection which had been organized by Orange Scott and others in 1843, a Church which embodied the doctrinal and administrative features of the Methodist Protestant Church. From 1844 forward slavery was a national issue which neither church nor state could avoid.

Another question which had been in abeyance since the formation of the Methodist Protestant Church, in 1830, became a subject of renewed interest at this time. It was the demand for the introduction of lay representation into the administration of the Church. Echoes continued to be heard from time to time, and the demand grew in its insistence, but there was no adoption of lay representation by either branch of Episcopal Methodism until after the war. It was consistently put forward in the General Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, from 1850 until it was finally incorporated in its Discipline. The financial plan adopted in 1850, provided for the optional use of a form of lay co-operation "on all questions relating to the financial and secular interests of the Church," and the same plan was given even a stronger emphasis in 1858. This limited participation of the laymen in the administration of the Church soon revealed the value of lay counsel, and it gave to the laymen themselves a deeper and a more personal interest in the affairs of the Church.

On March 3, 1852, following the introduction of lay co-operation into the councils of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a convention was held in Philadelphia to consider the propriety of petitioning the General Conference, soon to convene in Boston, on the subject of the introduction of lay representation. The convention assembled in Nazareth M. E. Church, and it was presided over by William H. Allen, President of Girard College. Only 30 of the 170 delegates appointed were in actual attendance. The convention petitioned for the amendment of the constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church so as to permit the introduction of lay representation into the General and Annual Conferences, in a manner not to conflict with the rights of the clergy in their appropriate ministerial and pastoral duties. The convention cited the progress of the Southern Church under the action of 1850, and it broke into cheers when the statement was made that division of the Church would not have occurred, had there been lay representation in 1844. This sanguine prophecy was not borne out, as we have seen, by the action of the Methodist Protestant Church, in which there was lay representation from its organization. The Advocate and Journal, New York, declined to publish the proceedings, some other papers called the convention a body of "Mutual Rights Agitators," but Zion's Herald took a more liberal attitude toward it. In 1858, the Oregon Annual Conference assumed a more modest attitude and requested the general Conference to provide for lay representation in financial, educational, and benevolent matters—the lay co-operation which had been adopted by the Southern Church.

Such were the preliminary steps of the preparation for lay representation North and South. In 1866, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, passed a measure, sponsored by Dr. Holland N. McTyeire, for the introduction of lay representation, and it was subsequently ratified by the constitutional majority in the Annual Conferences. In 1868, the Methodist Episcopal Church took similar action, which was also approved by the Annual Conferences. Thus ended a long era of the divine right of ministerial control in the councils of American Episcopal Methodism. The periodical literature of the day shows a timidity of the leadership of Methodism touching the great reforms which were being sought. While the General Conference was seeking to lay a solid theological and ethical foundation for its course, it was at the same time carefully exploring the minds and emotions of the people.

Three new Conference organs appeared in 1851, and another in 1854. They were the New Orleans, the Nashville and Louisville, the St. Louis and the Texas

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. W. M. Sullivan writes that his announcement, which appeared in our issue of last week, applies to the Vicksburg District only.

A letter from Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, of Tutwiler, Miss., brings generous words of appreciation as well as evidence of substantial support.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, pastor at Choudrant, La., is closing out his fourth year on the charge, and he believes that it will be the best of the four.

Millsaps College will dedicate the new gymnasium, hold a home coming day and play a football game with Spring Hill College on November 8.

Rev. G. C. Gregory, who is finishing his fourth year at Verona, Miss., says that both salary and benevolences will be paid in full, and that is a message that really helps.

Mr. B. I. Wiley states that over ninety-five per cent of the students at State Teachers College, Hattiesburg, are members of some church, and that church attendance is markedly high.

Rev. D. E. Vickers, of Brooklyn, Miss., says that his charge has already paid four times as much as the average reported for the last four years. We noted in our last issue the loss of his parsonage by fire.

Rev. G. P. McKeown, Woodville, Miss., writes that he hopes to round out the Conference year in good shape, but that on October 13, the Church suffered a great loss in the death of Brother James M. Sessions.

From a letter of Mr. W. C. Tatum, of Hattiesburg, Miss., we learn of the illness of his son, William. We trust, however, that his illness may be temporary and that he may be well on the way to recovery before this time.

On October 13, Rev. A. M. Shaw, of Belcher, La., celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his receiving license to preach, with a specially arranged program. We will carry a detailed account of the occasion in a later issue.

A letter from Dr. W. B. Lewis, under date of June 20, gives an interesting account of the return trip to his post in the Belgian Congo. They are happy to be back on the mission field, but all of the family were suffering from malaria.

DR. THEODORE COPELAND, Conference Preacher

Mrs. Pauline McCoy, of Ethel, La., is in her eighty-second year and has been a subscriber to the Advocate for sixty-five years. She says she hopes to have it the remainder of her life. We hope that she may have yet many happy years.

Our long time friend, Brother F. A. Howell, of Durant, Miss., in sending a renewal subscription, adds: "We like the paper and wish it success." We appreciate this word of commendation. No Conference has a finer layman than F. A. Howell.

Dr. W. P. Buhrman, presiding elder of the Aberdeen, Miss., District, writes that he dedicated the church at Bruce on October 13, the debt having been paid this year, and that Brother R. E. Wasson, the pastor, expects to secure the amount assumed for benevolences.

We have a much appreciated letter from which we take this paragraph: "I will say that this year Whitworth College has just about as many girls from Louisiana as from the Mississippi Conference, and I feel sure that our advertising in your paper the past years has contributed much to that happy situation. Accept, please, our very best regards."

The death of Mr. W. E. Huger, on October 17, brought sorrow to Rayne Memorial Church of this city. Mr. Huger was a member of the Episcopal Church and was a good man and a worthy citizen. Mrs. Huger was a daughter of the late Philip Werlein, a family long associated with Rayne Memorial Church, of which she is a faithful and widely beloved member.

Dr. C. M. Chapman writes: "It will delight the brethren to know that the Pontotoc church will settle a $30,000 church debt and pay the salary, $2,400, in full for the year." That is a splendid achievement. (Since writing the above, we have received the following telegram: "Burned thirty thousand bonded debt. Received twenty-five members yesterday.—C. M. Chapman.")

The New Orleans Standard Training School, an established event in the Methodist year of that city, closed last week. The faculty was made up of Miss Ferguson and Dr. Hogan from the Board of Education offices in Nashville, Mrs. Poindexter, of Monroe, La., and Mrs. R. R. Branton of New Orleans. The attendance was not so large as some other schools have been, but there was a good attendance and some substantial work was done. The number of credits given was 43.

Judge H. Dent Minor, an attorney of Memphis, Tenn., is to erect a new church building at Poplar Corner, Miss. The building will cost $12,500, and will be Judge Minor's gift to the congregation of which he is a member and the Church School superintendent. The Judge is a son of the late Dr. Henry A. Minor of Macon, Miss., whose name and memory will long abide in that section of Mississippi. It is expected that the new church will be ready for occupancy early in February.

Methodist Women

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Under the capable leadership of Mrs. Lee Cox, the women of the Methodist churches of the county held a very instructive and pleasant zone meeting last Thursday at Brownfield. Several women talked on some of the most important phases of the work; the outstanding messages being brought by Mrs. Lockman of Corinth, superintendent of Mission and Bible study in the Conference, and Miss Myrta Davis of Tichimingo, rural worker of the North Mississippi Conference. Mrs. Lockman gave an introduction and brief outline of the text book for mission study, "That Other America" by John Mackay. Her talk was most interesting, creating quite a bit of enthusiasm over this new book about our neighbors to the south, and offering helpful suggestions to the study leaders present. Miss Davis had already won a place in the hearts of these, her co-workers, and the deep spirituality of her talk on "Stewardship of Our Brains," will truly be an inspiration for more abundant fruit in the churches represented. It is indeed unfortunate that all the Methodist women of this zone are not organized for definite missionary work that their churches might get the benefit of these quarterly meetings for, not only, is it through united efforts of the Christians that the greatest work will be done in His cause, but they miss the abiding influence of the sweet fellowship.

The W. M. S. of Brownfield served a most enjoyable lunch to their visitors; and since these good women are given to hospitality, one to another they, too, were blessed.

The third zone meeting for the year was held at Valden Methodist Church on Tuesday, September 24. The opening song was, "Saviour Like a Shepherd Lead Us," followed by a prayer led by Mrs. Harry Flowers of Kilmichael.

Mrs. Taylor Everette of Columblana led the devotional using a part of the fourth chapter of First Peter. She also read the basis of Stewardship.

Mrs. McKee of Valden led in prayer. "Lead Me, Saviour," was sung by Mesdames McKee and Stuckey of Valden, accompanied by Mrs. David Fullilove.

"Missionary Catechism" was presented by Mesdames Murf and Wilson of Kilmichael. Miss Kathleen read what we should do to attain the "Efficiency Aim" of the present year.

Mrs. Mounger of Winona gave an interesting and instructive talk on "Stewardship of the Mind."

Mesdames Forrest and Box, accompanied by Mrs. Fuller, sang "Under the Old Olive Tree."

A play "Forget Me not Magic" was put on by five Valden League members.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The number present were: Winona, 4; Columbia, 5; Carrollton, 2; Kilmichael, 8, together with the pastor and five League members and Rev. and Mrs. Burns of Poplar Creek.

Each leader made a splendid report and several pastors made short talks.

The next meeting will be held in Winona. After a hymn, Rev. McKee closed with prayer.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth Street, Meridian, Miss.

To the Superintendents of Mission and Bible Study:

The approved 1935-36 list of study books was sent to each Conference officer, district secretary and auxiliary superintendent of study during the month of July,

It should not be necessary to send these lists more than once a year, as the materials listed are to be used within the year, from October to October. So, we are asking each superintendent to preserve her list for reference.

A leaflet on Bible Study was sent with each of the study lists. This is an important leaflet for the files of the officers, so should be taken care of also.

We are very anxious for all Conference officers and district secretaries to become thoroughly familiar with this information in order to co-operate in promoting this important part of our missionary program.

You will note in the Bible Study leaflet that two stewardship studies are suggested, indicating that a study on stewardship is within the program for the auxiliary superintendent of study and and not now to be in charge of the corresponding secretary of the auxiliary. A society may take a stewardship study as Bible study or any of the other suggested courses. Urge the societies to do their Bible study as seriously as Mission study.

The question has arisen as to whether certificates in Mission Study will be given to those classes meeting the present requirements. There has been nothing said to the contrary. Do not get this confused with the elimination of points on the "Efficiency Aim." Mission Study goes forward as usual, and, if any changes are to be made they will not be made before next council.

I hope that wide use will be made of the reading lists and supplementary materials and that you will encourage the formation of libraries for permanent reference. The book, "The Jew and World Ferment," is a very stimulating one for our times.

In looking over this quarter's applications for council certificates, I found it necessary to return some to you for further information.

Some applications are not properly filled out, and if I send them on to Nashville they are returned to me for further information. Please complete each single item.

Other applications give information in a confused way. We cannot pass on applications without definite details.

Please try to have the Nature of out of class work given in such a way that we can know what it was.

The teachers who have taken courses in training schools should tell what courses were taken. They should be courses in Missions, or in principles and methods of teaching, or in Bible, to be of great value in teaching woman's missionary societies.

Some applications state that each chapter was assigned to a different member and a report made. This does not meet the requirements. One person must be in charge of the class and the discussion method must be used. Any society who has not completed its 1934-35 study and wishes to do so is permitted to meet that point on the Efficiency Aim, but no council class will be recognized if they do not use the current 1935-36 book. This fall the council class must use "That Other America," and the reference material accompanying it. I shall be glad to send your new application blank now, upon request, so that you may become more familiar with the requirements before you begin your study class.

We want to preserve the spring particularly for our home mission study, "Toward a Christian America," because our council program will emphasize home missions and our Week of Prayer will also, on account of our Home Mission Jubilee Celebration.

Distribution of the study program, with spring and fall mission study classes and the Bible study some time during the year is better than to crowd the classes too close together, but local situations may determine their plans according to the best results achieved.

I wish to thank each one, and especially Mrs. Dan McIntosh, Jr., Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, and the district secretaries for carrying on during my absence this summer.

I am glad to be back home, in the Mississippi Conference, and even though I am not physically able to resume my place in the local activities I find happiness in carrying on the correspondence for this particular Conference office.

Wishing for you the very best year in our study program and with appreciation of your fine co-operation,

Sincerely,

MRS. W. F. MAHAFFEY,

Conference Superintendent

Conf. Supt. of Study.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard
1574 Jefferson Avenue, New Orleans

Early in October Zone No. 1 of the Ruston District held an interesting meeting at Alabama Church. Mrs. H. A. Smith, of Haynesville, is leader of this zone. Mrs. W. A. Whitaker, of Farmerville, was in charge of the program. The following program on Spiritual Life was given:

Meditation.

Hymn—"A Charge to Keep I Have," congregation.

Talk—"So Wide is my Love," Mrs. Myra Griffin, Bernice.

Group Discussion.

Talk—"The Radiant Life," Mrs. W. A. Gray, Summerfield.

Group Discussion.

Meditation.

Duet—"Send the Light," Miss Ruby Owen and Mrs. A. A. Collins, Bernice.

Communion Service, conducted by the Rev. A. A. Collins.

Benediction.

Following a delightful lunch, served on tables spread under the trees, the group gathered again in the church where reading materials were found. After a period of quiet worship, the afternoon program was opened with prayer.

Talk—"The Open Door," Mr. Clark Whitaker, Farmerville.

Hymn—"Let the Lower Lights be Burning," congregation.

Talk—"The Spreading Flame," Miss Shiela Nuttall.

The meeting closed with an effective candle light service and prayer of consecration.

Preparations are under way in every city, town and rural church where there is a missionary society for the Week of Prayer, which is from November 3 to 9. This is a week to which all missionary societies look forward. An all-day retreat is planned for each auxiliary of the local church. The pamphlet for this, which comes in the Week of Prayer literature, was prepared by Dr. Thomas, of Emory University, who so successfully participated in a church-wide retreat that was held some months ago at Scarritt College. It is hoped that no auxiliary president will fail to see that this day will be observed in her church. The Week of Prayer offering this year is to be used for (1) Social Evangelistic Center, Seoul, Korea; (2), Laura Haygood Normal, Soochow, China; (3), Community House, Ensley, Alabama; (4), An Emergency Fund for Current Expenses. To meet these demands, eighty thousand dollars is needed. We are asked, if possible, to find a way to double our offerings this year.

Women, we all love bargains, do we not? What better bargain can we get than this? Where else can you get so much for your money? A missionary dollar accomplishes more than any other dollar in all the world!

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, OCTOBER 7.

By J. R. Countiss, D.D.

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST

The Bible and history alike testify that no great human movement is divorced from morals. The eye of God is upon every man, whether he be an exile in a dungeon or a prince on the throne. That "the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men" was a truth well known to Belshazzar, but ignored in his conduct in spite of the fearful example of his predecessor on the throne. Drunk with power, drunk with pride, drunk with passion, drunk with wine, his revelry comes to a climax and his career to a crisis in this wild night with his nobility and their companions. Having exhausted all other means for getting a "kick" out of the occasion, he ordered the sacred vessels, taken by Nebuchadnezzar from the temple at Jerusalem, to be brought that the boisterous company might drink from them. Then the handwriting appears on the wall and consternation seizes the king and his escort. Of warnings there had been plenty already; nothing now remains but to hear words of doom from a prophet who cannot be bribed with the gift of empires—"numbered, weighed, divided." And so, the end!

As the father of lies, alcohol is Satan's only rival. It has never kept a promise nor obeyed a law. It comes to youth with a promise to make him wise, witty, valorous, strong; it leaves him foolish, weak, helpless, an object of scorn except as nobility gives pity instead. It promises a group to be "the life of the party," but gives instead wounds, babblings, debauchery, wreckage of property and person, followed by heartaches that never heal. It pledges the State revenue for every expense, yet never pays enough to cover the cost of courts and prisons made necessary by its sale. It promises that the evils of the old saloon shall never again be permitted, then proceeds to open its doors to women and children as well as to men, and debauches the entire family at a stroke. Alcohol is the lying traitor that carries the keys to every gate by which the city of Man-soul may be entered and character destroyed.

Its method of approach to the government betrays its real nature. Garbed in robes of charity and service, it almost moves one to tears as it pleads for a humble place in the civic and commercial life of the nation. It promises to be just too good. It says: "Regulate me, tax me, guard me, do not let women, children nor habitual customers come near me; do not permit me to be sold on election days, nor near a school or church, nor in any but the most safeguarded places." And this from a "legitimate business!"

Alcohol is the great destroyer. It begins at the top and first destroys the noblest elements of character, the fine edge of modesty, the delicate sense of propriety, of reverence, of honor, of judgment, of chastity. In society, as in the individual, its wreckage begins at the top. Its first victims are not the coarse, brutish men who sweat at menial tasks, but rather those in professional life whose responsibility and skill make constant tax on mind and nerve. For these the descent is swift. How tragic the story of brilliant professional men, victims of the great destroyer, in practically every community. Like death, alcohol loves a shining mark, but like death it is no respecter of persons. It destroys the individual, soul and body; it destroys the home, severing life's most sacred ties and literally shredding the heart-strings of affection; in the end, it will destroy the nation unless it is itself destroyed. Meantime, every social and economic advance increases the danger of its use.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

December 27-31—an interesting date for Methodist young people.

At the Conference Officers' meeting in Alexandria the District Directors received general information leaflets concerning the Methodist Young People's Conference to be held in Memphis on December 27-31.

The assignment of quotas has been given each district. We must now get to work and arrange for the selection of the persons allotted in each district.

When your district has selected its allotted quota, fill out the application blanks for registration and send them at once to Rev. G. W. Dameron, Crowley, La., General Chairman of the Methodist Young People's Conference for our Conference.

Wouldn't it be fine if our Conference could be the first to complete its quota of delegates?

We are asking the District Directors and presiding elders of each district to get together at once and organize your district. If we can give you further information, write us for it.

Remember—we are on to Memphis now!

Enthusiastically,

BILLY GANNAWAY,

Publicity Superintendent.

I FEEL FINE

Mothers read this:

A CONSTIPATED child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. And today, there are fully a million families that will have no other kind in the house.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore.

Cardui is a medicine which increases the appetite and assists digestion, helping women to get more strength from the food they eat. As nourishment is improved, strength is built up; certain functional pains go away, and women praise Cardui for helping them back to good health. A booklet about Cardui, containing many helpful facts about women's health, may be obtained on request from Dept. A, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. Meanwhile, if you need a medicine for functional periodic pains, get a bottle of Cardui at the drug store and try it.

A HAPPY OCCASION AT ROCKY SPRINGS, MISS.

The central group meeting of the pastors and laymen of the Vicksburg District was held in the Methodist Church at Rocky Springs, Claiborne County, Miss., Friday, October 11, all the pastors of the group being present except one. While not many laymen were present, a goodly number of elect women were on hand, and it proved to be a very profitable and happy occasion. In the absence of Rev. H. G. Hawkins, the presiding elder, who is just recovering from serious illness, the meeting was presided over by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, pastor of the Crawford St. Church, Vicksburg. The general theme for the morning discussion was: "Balancing the Financial Budget of the Church."

Rev. H. L. Daniels, of Edwards, Miss., who conducted the devotional exercises, made a very impressive talk on faith and humility. Rev. M. M. Black, pastor of Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, brought a message on Christian Stewardship, and emphasized the importance of diligent, systematic effort in raising the finances of the Church. He called attention to the fact that no matter how hard the times, most people find money for the things they are interested in, for amusements and even luxuries of various kinds. Mr. R. E. Selby, district lay leader, gave a very helpful address on the obligation of the individual layman in the matter of supporting the work of the Church and of the kingdom.

A Laxative for Children

SYRUP OF BLACK-DRAUGHT is a purely vegetable laxative that is acceptable to children because it is pleasant-tasting. Many mothers have found that when their children are bilious, or have sour stomach, colic due to gas, sick headache, coated tongue, sallow complexion, or seem sluggish so they do not romp or play as usual, a dose or two of Syrup of Black-Draught relieves constipation and thereby assists in prompt recovery. Sold in 5-ounce, 50-cent bottles.

everybody forgot that there has been a depression.

The first portion of the afternoon was devoted to an historical program, at which time two excellent papers were read on the early history of Methodism in Mississippi. The first paper, "Methodism in Claiborne County," which was read by Mr. R. E. Selby, was prepared by the gifted editor of the Port Gibson Reveille, Mr. H. H. Crisler, and was replete with interesting data. The second paper, which had been prepared by Mrs. W. A. Clarke, of Carlisle, Miss., was entitled, "The Early History of the Natchez Trace Through Claiborne County." This paper gave a great deal of valuable information regarding the early settlement of Mississippi, the habits and customs of the Indians, and concerning the establishment and progress of the Church in various localities.

Attention was called to the fact that the Rocky Springs Church, which is still in good condition, was built in 1837, ninety-eight years ago, and that Claiborne County is rich in historical associations. A pilgrimage was made by a number of those present to the grave of the sainted Rev. Thos. Owen, who was pastor at Rocky Springs when the church was built. His body sleeps in a beautiful grove where there is a suitable monument perhaps a quarter of a mile from the ruins of his home, which was located a few hundred yards from the church building.

Not far from Rocky Springs is the old "Lorenzo Dow spring," where once stood an old beech tree upon which the name, "Lorenzo Dow—1803," was carved. General Grant visited the spot during the Civil War, and carved his name on that same tree, with the date, "U. S. Grant—1863." In 1904, the old beech was struck by lightning. The owner of the farm, the late Joseph A. Reagan, had the tree cut down, and sawed out the section containing the names of the two illustrious characters. This block was then sent to Millsaps College at Jackson.

At the conclusion of the historical program, the fourth quarterly conference of the Hermanville charge was held. The pastor, Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, and the presiding elder, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, are each finishing a quadrennium of service, and resolutions of appreciation and commendation were unanimously adopted by the quarterly conference. Thus closed a day full to the brim with inspiring and helpful exercises.

M. M. BLACK, Secretary.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Mat. 22:21—Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's.

Evil men today sometimes seek to entrap the followers of Jesus. We find in the Gospels that clever traps were laid for Jesus. The Pharisees even joined with the Herodians in conspiring against Jesus. Artfully they flattered Jesus, "Teacher, we know that Thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, and carest not for anyone, for Thou regardest not the person of men;" then they asked, "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar or not?" What a trap! How easy to alienate the Jews if Jesus answered in the affirmative. How easy to embroil Him with the Roman government if He gave a negative answer. But Jesus could read the thoughts and intents of their hearts. He saw their hypocrisy. Wisely, He asked for the tribute money, they gave unto Him a penny. "Whose image and superscription is this?" "Caesar's." "Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." No wonder they "marvelled and went away." They expected a political answer. He gave a religious answer.

This answer of Jesus teaches common honesty. We are to provide things honest in the sight of all men." Romans 12:17. Honesty with the government demands that we pay our taxes; observe the laws; vote our convictions; serve on juries; be public-spirited and fulfill all the obligations of citizenship in advancing the interests of the commonwealth.

This principle of honesty needs unceasing emphasis. Dishonesty has contributed much to our distress. It has contributed to the depression. It has undermined public confidence. Dishonesty is a problem in many a school room. It is a problem of business men. It has forced them to release many an employee. On the other hand, dishonesty of some employers has strained the relations with employees. Theft, lying, deceit, are contemptible sins.

But Jesus carried this matter of honesty into our relations with God.

Honesty with God requires that we be honest with ourselves. There are elemental needs of food, raiment, and shelter. But man also has a higher nature created of God. "God breathed into man the breath of life and he became a living soul." The things we taste and see and feel everybody accepts as true. Yet there are those for whom all the hopes, the fine longings, the upward thrust of the soul, the whispering voice of conscience, the insight of noble souls; for some all these things are naught and reject their implications. They accept as true the things of the flesh. If one part of our nature is true, the other is also. No man is honest with God who ignores his spiritual nature. God gave life. That man is an embezzler of life who uses it for selfish ends.

Honesty with God demands honesty with other people. God made others also. A man must be honest with his wife, parents, brothers, sisters, children, neighbors. We are our brother's keeper. How far-reaching are the implications of honest relationships. No man can be honest with God and be dishonest with others.

Honesty with God requires honesty with the past. God is eternal. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever Thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from "everlasting to everlasting. Thou art God." God "hath spoken through holy men of old." God has revealed Himself through the prophets; through His only Begotten Son; through the apostles; through the martyrs; through the reformers; through not only the pioneers, but through the Christian witnesses that have preceded us. To be honest with God requires that we keep faith with those who have been channels of God's power.

Honesty with God also means that the honest man must be honest with the future. This eternal God is the God also of the future. No man truly loves God who creates problems for youth and lowers the moral standards. No man is honest with God who lives inconsistently and is a stumbling block to others. "Whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the midst of the sea." Mat. 18:6. Thus spake Jesus.

PRAYER

Our gracious Heavenly Father, how considerate Thou hast been of us. Honesty requires that we show thee the same consideration we ask of Thee. We have sought for mercy and compassion. May we cheerfully give our best to Thee. As we see Thy sacrifice, as we witness the lavish outpouring of the life of Jesus; as we witness His blood shed for us, we freely give our all to Thee. We commit ourselves to Thee in the holy name of Jesus.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night, and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

RAILROAD SERVICE "BEST IN HISTORY"

The railroads are now offering the best service in their history, Ollie B. Webb, Dallas, assistant to the president of the Texas and Pacific Railway Company, said in an address Tuesday at a meeting of Lions Club at the Roosevelt Hotel. New services have been installed in the last ten years in the face of a fifty per cent revenue drop, he said.

For some time the passenger revenues of the Texas and Pacific have increased over the corresponding weeks of a year ago, Mr. Webb said.

Declaring that the railroads would always be the backbone of the country's transportation, Mr. Webb attacked Federal and State subsidy of water and highway carriers. He characterized as falacious the belief that the government had given subsidies originally to the railroads.

(The editor has great pleasure in quoting the above from a recent address of Mr. Ollie B. Webb. We quote it because he is our friend and because we know that it is true.)

COLUMBIA, LA.

Dear Dr. Duren: We have closed a very successful and helpful revival here at Columbia, La. Brother J. J. Rasmussen brought soul-stirring and thought-provoking messages to splendid congregations every night. The excellent messages of Brother Rasmussen, the brotherly co-operation of our Baptist brethren, the fine loyalty of our own people, coupled with unusually favorable weather conditions provided an ideal medium through which the Holy Spirit was abundantly evident.

Eleven additions as a result of the meeting brings the total members received at Columbia this year to seventy-

IN MEMORIAM

JAMES M. SESSIONS

James M. Sessions, aged nearly 77 years, for thirty years superintendent of the Sunday school at Woodville, Miss., a life-long member of the Methodist Church, liberal in his support of the church, a true friend to the pastor, a wise counselor in affairs of church and community, died October 13 and was buried October 13, at 3:30, from the church to which he had given a lifetime of service.

Not only the church but the community suffers in the translation of this Christian prince. His last months on earth were full of suffering, but his going was triumphant.

We pray that each of the four stalwart and worthy sons may wear the mantle of their ascended father.

RESOLUTIONS BY THE HOME DEMONSTRATION CLUB, LANGSDALE, MISS.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call from our midst Mrs. McRaney, a beloved member and co-worker, and

Whereas, we have faith in God that He doeth all things for good to them who love Him; therefore, be it

Resolved, that we accept this loss as His will, and extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved. We grieve with them. To know Mrs. McRaney was to love her, and her aim in life seemed to be to help all with whom she came in contact. Her civic pride came close to the work of her church and home. Canning, sewing, home beautification and the general improving of our community received her loyal support. She was an energetic and active club member and we mourn because we shall miss her hearty co-operation and helpful presence at each meeting. We pray for her loved ones and that some day we may meet her in that land of endless day. Therefore, be it Resolved, that we send a copy of these resolutions to the parents of Mrs. McRaney, Rev. McRaney, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and retain a copy for the minutes of our club.

Respectfully submitted, in Louisiana and Mississippi will be grieved to know of her sorrow in the loss of her only brother, Mr. Allen B. Kling, of Auburn, Ala. His death occurred in St. Margaret's Hospital, Montgomery, Ala., October 9, following an operation a week earlier. He had been an active official of the Methodist Church for many years, a delegate to district and Annual Conferences, and at the time of his death, he was the teacher of the Woman's Bible Class at Auburn, Ala. Funeral and interment were at Yazoo City, Miss., Dr. Carley now lives at Sartia, the childhood home of Mrs. Carley.

POETICAL THOUGHTS

By Mrs. George S. Brown

"Come and lay Thy hands on her and she shall live." Mark 5:23.

The Touch of the Master's Hand
'Twas battered and scarred and the auctioneer

Thought it scarcely worth his while
To waste much time on the old violin,
But he held it up with a smile.

"Three dollars once, three dollars twice, Going for three"—but no—
From the room far back a grey-haired man

Came forward and picked up the bow,

Then wiping the dust from his old violin

And tightening the loosened strings,
He played a melody pure and sweet
As a caroling angel sings.

The music ceased, and the auctioneer
With a voice that was quiet and low
Said, "What am I bid for the old violin?"
And he held it up with the bow.

"A thousand dollars—and who'll make it two?

Two thousand—and who'll make it three?
Three thousand once, three thousand twice,
And going and gone," said he.

The people cheered, but some of them cried,

"We do not quite understand What changed its worth." Swift came the reply,

"The touch of the Master's hand."

There seems to be a kind of fascination about auctions. Crowds gather whether they have any intention of buying things or not. Some times we see articles of great value go for almost nothing and again we see things we would deem of little worth sold for goodly sums. Just so in human lives we find we are not judges at all. Often we find people that we appraise highly but when we know them better we find they are not at all what they seemed. Oftener still we see those whom we consider of no value whatever become bulwarks of strength. What is the difference? Most likely it is just as it was with the old violin that we deemed of so little worth. To those who knew not how to play it, it was merely a worn out old musical instrument ready for the ash heap but when one with the stroke of a master hand drew upon its strings it emitted the sweetest of music and became priceless. None of us are worth very much of ourselves but when our Lord and Master places His hand upon us, when we yield ourselves to Him and to His guidance, our lives become well worth while. It is the touch of the Master's hand in our lives that changes us, that cleanses us from all unrighteousness, that covers all the scars and bruises, that brings forth in our lives the brightest, the sweetest, the best, that really transforms us so that we are no more the same. What marvels the touch of the Master's hand can bring about! We may think that souls are past all redemption, that some are fallen so low, there is no hope for them but if they but yield their lives to Christ they become new beings. O that each of us would take the broken, empty vessels of our lives with all our frailties and shortcomings and pray the great Redeemer to place upon us His hands that were stretched upon the cross for us, so that we, too, might bring forth such music in our lives as to inspire hungry heart-sick souls and help to make this old world fit for the coming of our King!

Iuka Methodist Church

IN JUNE, 1934, the members of the Iuka Methodist Church, Iuka, Miss., began the erection of a two-story educational building and the remodeling of the old church building. The value of the church property before the building program was launched was $3,500. Today the value is $15,000. Cash has been paid for all construction. In addition to paying cash for the building enterprise, all finances of the church are being met in full. The salary of the pastor was raised this year. The quarterly confer-

The educational building has three assembly rooms, eight class rooms, two lavatories, pastor's study and a kitchen. The kitchen is equipped with an electric range, running water, etc. This building is so erected and joined to the old building that not a single one of the memorial windows of the old building is molested.

The old building, which was a frame structure, erected before the Civil War, and in a good state of preservation, has been brick-veneered. The two large front windows, which were the only windows of plain glass in the building, have been replaced with cathedral glass. New doors and transoms have been added, the transoms of cathedral

Johnson, the drunkard, is dying today,
With marks of despair on his face.
He's missed at the club, the bar, and the play;
Wanted—a boy to take his place.

Boys from the fireside, boys from the farm,
Boys from the home and the school,
Come quell your fears, there's surely no harm,
Where "drink and be merry's the rule."

Wanted boys to replace the victims of wine,
And boys to live without grace;
Yes, boys to die without pardon divine—
Say, have you a boy for the place?

FOUR REASONS FOR THE RELIGIOUS PAPER, according to The Gospel Advocate, are:

1. It is a developer of interest in spiritual things.
2. It is an absolute essential for the family that wants to keep intelligent about church matters.
3. It will impart spiritual character and quality to your home.
4. The church paper is a testimony to your own interest in the church of Christ, your children's welfare, and the general work of trying to save the lost. Its very presence in your home silently proclaims to your visitors that you have an interest in divine things.

A PLEA FOR MODESTY. An exchange says that, in looking over a metropolitan daily, a church announcement was observed over the name of its pastor to the effect that it is "the church that preaches the whole Bible," and that it has "the best music and singing in the city." The editor comments. "Maybe it's all true, though we have our doubts about it, and fear that if the pastor is as reckless in his preaching of the 'whole Bible' as he is in his announcements, we might be excused if we prefer to attend a church where the grace of modesty is a bit more in evidence."

HAWAII'S POPULATION, according to the Christian Advocate, Northwestern, is 368,336. Fifty thousand eight hundred and sixty are Hawaiians or part Hawaiians, 139,631 are Japanese, 63,052 are Filipinos, 27,179 are Chinese, 27,588 Portugese, 6,671 are Puerto-Ricans, and 6,461 are Koreans. Considerably more than half of these are American born and either citizens or are eligible for citizenship. The Caucasians number 46,329, and there are 563 Negroes. One does not have to be told that a race problem in Hawaii would have plenty of angles to it.

WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY, of Middletown, Connecticut, has recently received two bequests of $25,000 each, according to Zion's Herald. Both bequests were made by Governor Frank B. Weeks of Connecticut, who died on October 2. Governor Weeks was a trustee of Wesleyan. One bequest was for the establishment of scholarships, and the other to establish the Frank B. Weeks visiting professorship fund. Wesleyan is the oldest university of American Methodism.

BISHOP ISAAC LANE, of Jackson, Tennessee, was elected a Bishop of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in 1873 and retired in 1914 after forty-one years service in his episcopal office. He is now in his one hundred and second year and is said to be the oldest Methodist Bishop of any branch of the Church. At the end of his first year of episcopal service he had received $260.15 for salary and was in debt $200 for traveling expenses. He cut and sold wood to the citizens of Jackson, Tennessee, to pay his debts.

THE NATION'S ACCIDENT BILL for 1934, according to the Scottish Rite News Bureau, amounted to $3,500,000,000, resulting from 101,000 deaths, 370,000 permanent injuries and 9,821,000 disabling injuries. The automobile took more than one-third of the total accidents. Occupational accidents accounted for 25 per cent, and so-called home accidents, an equal amount. We shudder when some tragic accident hapens at our doors, but the enormity of the death and accident toll on the highways is revealed in these startling figures. But what is the cause of this frightful increase and what are we going to do about it?

BETA ISRAEL is the name of a strange people numbering fifty thousand who are distributed among the five million inhabitants of Ethiopia. The name means "House of Israel," and they are said to have brought with them out of a distant past a form of Judaism which antedates Herod's temple. As is well known, Haile Selassie claims to be descended from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba—a claim more romantic than creditable. The members of Beta Israel have the marks of Jewish connection, and they are called by the other people "Falashas," a name signifying exiled emigrants. They worship in synagogues patterned after the tabernacle, they keep the Sabbath and they observe a number of the Jewish festivals.

EDITORIAL

THE MEMPHIS CONFERENCE

This issue of the Christian Advocate is a "special" number in which we feature the publicity material of the Memphis Young People's Conference. As will be seen, the Church is sparing nothing in its effort to make this the greatest and the most far-reaching in its scope of any effort it has made in behalf of its young people. We cheerfully devote our space because we believe that the pressing need of the hour has not been misjudged. In this day of disordered democracy and an unconstructive and almost leaderless social life, there is need for a fixing of the ideals of our young men and women, that they may approach the desperate social and economic problems, whose ultimate solution will depend largely upon them, with faith in God and with clear convictions as to the righteousness of their course. From time to time, we expect to publish material relating to the Conference, and we sincerely hope that the effort of our Church may bear a glorious harvest for the Methodism of the South and for the peace and security of the entire nation. The time has come when we must confess our own sins and in penitence set our house to rights if we are going to occupy a worthy place in the complex civilization of our day. We join the young people in saying, "On to Memphis!"

CONFERENCES REPORT PROGRESS

A report on Benevolences, for the nine Conferences which had been held up to that time, has been sent out from the office of G. L. Morelock, General Secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities. The Conferences are: Florida, Illinois, Kentucky, West Virginia, Louisville, Southwest Missouri, Missouri, Holston and Baltimore. The report shows a consistent gain over the figures of the previous year. The net gain was $26,352.31. Seven of the Conferences paid a sum greater than the combined payments for General and Conference work and Kingdom Extension. The Louisville and Baltimore each paid more than was paid on General and Conference work in 1934, but slightly less than for that and Kingdom Extension. The total result thus far encourages us to believe that the experiment of substituting the voluntary principle may prove to be a great success.

METHODIST DEBTS

The frequent and unjust charges selfishly made concerning the bankruptcy and its implications as to the integrity of Methodist people is something that inflames us to the very depths of our being. We take great delight in telling our smug business critics of closing financial institutions, of the prolonged liquidation of some that were closed nearly three years ago, of the segregation of homesteads into approved and unapproved, and the flaming colors of the auction flag over the wreckage of institutions in which many people lost all their earnings. But we have far greater joy in reporting the steady liquidation of church obligations in spite of the desperate losses which our people have sustained. The dedication of churches which have been long encumbered with oppressive debts, and the burning of multiplied thousands of dollars worth of cancelled bonds are achievements to which we point with undisguised pride. We confidently assert that the sacrificial spirit of the Methodists is showing the business world the way out. We have no regard on earth for long time borrowing from the government as a means of solving our economic problems. It is nothing more than a postponement and a passing on to our children our load of debt, and a bequeathing to them the odium of a financial crash and incompetence for which they were not responsible. It is heroism and self-sacrifice that we need, not a long loan and easy terms.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH, POPLAR CORNER, MISS.

BISHOP DOBBS IN NEW ORLEANS

Last week we made mention in a "personal" of the beautiful little church building which will soon grace the little town of Poplar Corner, Miss., just outside of Memphis. The building will be the gift of Judge H. Dent Minor to the Methodists of the little town, and through the courtesy of the Press-Scimitar, we are able to present herewith cuts of the new structure and its donor. The church will be cathedral type in design and, though comparatively small, it will be adequate in size and appointments for the community which it is designed to serve. Judge Minor is a son of the late Dr. Henry A. Minor of Macon, Miss., who was once the family physician and to the end of his life, the friend of the editor of the Advocate. To this hour, the memory of him symbolizes for us the highest ideal of citizenship and the holiest type of Christian manhood. We have, therefore, a personal interest and pride in this generosity of his distinguished son. Our pleasure is enhanced by the fact that Judge Minor is more than the giver of a beautiful structure in which the Methodists of Poplar Corner may worship. As superintendent of the Church School and otherwise, he gives of his time and talent for the promotion of the ideal and the experience which the building is to symbolize and for which Methodism stands. We congratulate the congregation on the winning of such a friend and we trust that the Christian loyalty of those who shall gather to worship may ever be such as to make glad his heart. It is expected that the building will be finished and ready for dedication about February of next year, and it is the plan to have Bishop Dobbs render that service.

THE CHURCH TO BE ERECTED AT POPLAR CORNER, MISS.

The visit of Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs on last Sunday was a great occasion for the congregations and friends of Rayne and Parker Memorial churches. At the morning hour, Bishop Dobbs preached with great effectiveness to a congregation which filled the auditorium of Rayne Memorial Church. The theme of his sermon, "The Church," was masterly in its conception, logical in its arrangement, sound in its teaching and uplifting in its appeal. Many were the expressions of pleasure and profit because of the contact with the Bishop and because of his clear and forceful message. The evening hour was spent at Parker Memorial Church at which time the rain interfered somewhat with the service, but there was, nevertheless, a good audience of eager listeners. The subject of the sermon was "The Mind of Christ." It was totally different from the morning discourse, but no less effective in power, nor less felicitous in its presentation. He sent the congregation away with a more exalted conception of what it means to be Christian. After a busy day, both in the services and outside, the Bishop left on an early train Monday morning for Amory, Miss., where he is to preside over the sixty-sixth session of the North Mississippi Conference. In the course of his episcopal career, Bishop Dobbs has filled a number of engagements in New Orleans, and his coming always adds to the esteem in which he is held by the Methodists of the city. The Mississippi Conference follows the North Mississippi two weeks later, and on November 20, Bishop Dobbs will be back in New Orleans for the sessions of the Louisiana Conference, to be held at First Church.

SOUTHERN METHODIST YOUTH GATHER

Not since 1925 have the young people of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had the opportunity of a gathering such as that planned in Memphis, December 27-31, 1935. It is a conference that is held especially for the youth of the church to enable them to assemble under one roof and discuss together problems ranging from local church difficulties to the greater conflicts that are raging throughout the world.

This conference is for the whole territory of the Southern Methodist Church. It is to be composed of 5,000 delegates. Eighty per cent are to be young people 16 to 23 years of age inclusive; 10 per cent are to be pastors; and 10 per cent open to other interested and worthy persons.

Perhaps many of the younger members of the church community, in their home towns, lack interest in the work of the church; no one, however, can fail to get into the spirit of the Conference with thousands of associates of their own ages thinking alongside them. Good fellowship will be a keynote of the meeting.

It will be the privilege of a lifetime to attend this conference. The critical events of the times present problems that are up to young people to solve. They should be faced squarely with a real quest for the mind of Christ if the future leaders of the country are to be able to formulate paths on which to direct subsequent solutions.

The high purpose that has called this gathering needs an equally high response in the form of attendance and sincere interest. Noble resolutions are wasted unless they are followed by lofty endeavor. The knowledge that the Christian solution is the only true way to meet the difficulties that surround us is the beginning point of the meeting. Resounding from this great conference will come a mighty Christian appeal that should stir the motives of young Christians throughout the nation.

The Christmas season will just be over. A watch is going to be kept for the New Year by the whole conference. What better could one do than to seek the true Christian way in sensible and intelligent discussion of important subjects with fellow Christians?

The discussion groups will be guided by men of experience in the problems confronted. They will not dictate but will freely discuss the subjects that arise. The past knowledge and experience of these leaders should be invaluable to the delegates.

It is a meeting that will reveal the truth without the usual colorings that we find in the newspapers and on the political platforms. The morning and evening sessions are given over to speakers who are leading authorities on world problems. They are coming to Memphis to give the Methodist young people a clear and unbiased glimpse of the why and wherefore of national and international events.

The platform speakers will speak directly to the delegates. To the generous capacity of the Convention Auditorium visitors will be welcomed. (A small fee daily, or for each session, will admit visitors to the General Sessions.) Only accredited delegates will be permitted to take the floor in the discussion groups. It is imperative that applications for registration be submitted early. Each Annual Conference and each college of the Church has been allotted its portion of the 5,000 delegates. On November 15, there will be a re-allotment of the delegates and each Conference that has filled its quota will be given a chance to fill the incomplete quotas of the other Conferences, with more delegates. For registration write either to Rev. A. K. McLellan, Alexandria, La., or Rev. Walter Towner, chairman of the Directing Committee, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

The young people will find an excellent group of world authorities at their conference. Also the youth of our Church seldom have a chance to get together in this manner. There are numerous Annual Conferences but they are not for the youth of the Church. Here is an opportunity for the youthful members of Southern Methodism to enjoy the most enlightening event of a decade—the Church-wide Methodist Young People's Conference in Memphis!

WHO'S WHO IN THE MEMPHIS CONFERENCE. KAGAWA AND OTHERS

The Methodist Young People's Conference in Memphis is going to be filled with men of international reputation. Toyohiko Kagawa is an excellent example of the type of men that will speak.

It has been said of Kagawa: "He represents, perhaps, the most wholehearted acceptance of the teachings of Jesus and their most dynamic expression as a way of life, that the Christian world today affords."

That he lived his youthful college days and a number of years immediately afterwards in the worst slums of Japan we all know. It is also well known that in these pitiful conditions he has labored tirelessly, contracting trachoma as a result of which he lost the sight of one eye. At the same time he has constantly been under the suspicion of the government for his supposed Communistic leanings. In time his country has come to appreciate the efforts of this evangelist to the poor and has given him many chances to accept highly paid government positions. Kagawa, however, has been too busy spreading the gospel of the Man he follows to accept them.

With the respect of the entire world this man of humility goes his way always giving and receiving in return the satisfaction of a life similar to that of Jesus Christ. Who better equipped could be chosen to talk to the young people of the Southern Methodist Church?

Besides Kagawa there are lots more men who will speak from the platform at the conference. From our own Methodist Church there are: Dr. Wm. F. Quillian, General Secretary of the General Board of Christian Education; Dr. W. A. Smart, professor in the School of Theology, Emory University; Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon; Bishop John M. Moore; Bishop Paul B. Kern; Dr. Paul W. Quillian, pastor of St. Luke's Methodist Church, Oklahoma City; Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; Dr. G. Ray Jordan, prominent pastor in Winston-Salem, N. C.; Dr. Umphrey Lee, pastor in Highland Park Methodist Church, Dallas, Texas. Other outstanding speakers are: Dr. E. McNeil Poteal, pastor in Pullen Memorial Baptist Church, Raleigh, N. C.; Dr. Chas. W. Gilkey, dean of the chapel of the University of Chicago; Dr. Allan Knight Chalmers, servant to a big city's needs; Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Northern Methodist Church; Mrs. Induk Pak, of Korea; Dr. Y. C. Yang, president of Soochow University, Soochow, China; Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate's Investigation of Munitions; Dr. Kirby Page, author and student of world problems; Dr. Willis Sutton, past president of the National Education Association; Dr. Regina Westcott Wieman, of Chicago, and Dr. Mordicar Johnson, president of Howard University, Washington, D. C.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The time has again arrived for us to remind you of the great importance of having your reports to the Annual Conference in the hands of the auditing committee the first day of the Conference.

The short session of the Conference and the work of the Statistical Secretaries in tabulating the reports require this.

Please place your report, accompanied with either receipt from the Conference Treasurer or check to correspond with reported figures, in envelop, placing your Charge and District on the outside. Note on the check for which claim the check is intended.

Put no money in with your report. Use latest report forms. You can get them from our Publishing House at Nashville.

See Page 9 of the Mississippi Conference Journal of 1934 for names of Auditing Committee.

T. B. COTTRELL, Secretary for the Committee.

NOTICE

All members of the Mississippi Conference Auxiliary to the Methodist Benevolent Association are called to meet, in a place provided by the Conference host, at 2 o'clock p. m., Friday, November 15, at the seat of the Conference at Laurel.

T. B. COTTRELL, Secretary for the Auxiliary.

NOTICE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

A letter from Dr. Luther E. Todd, General Secretary of the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo., calls attention to the importance of collecting all that we can at the coming sessions of the Annual Conferences on the Adjusted Balances of the Superannuate Endowment Quota allotted to each church.

I would urge every pastor whose churches or church have not paid their quota in full to collect all you can and turn over to me at the session of the Conference in Laurel, that I may remit the same to the Board of Finance in St. Louis, Mo.

L. E. ALFORD, Conference Representative.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT

Because of the lack of dining room facilities in the Church we have arranged to take care of all of the delegates for meals in the homes. There will be no lunch served in the church. However, we will provide tables in our small dining room and the gas range in the kitchen for the use of visitors who desire to come over for the day and bring lunch. There will be a place to prepare your coffee, cook your meats and a table to spread it.

Many of the preachers know where they are to be entertained but we are asking that you please come by the church and get your assignment so that we may know you are here, that we may not assign some one else to that place.

Conference will begin Wednesday night, November 13, and we will be looking for you.

The Pinehurst Hotel is in the same block of the church and they are making special rates to visitors of the Conference. If you desire reservations you may write the hotel or the pastor.

Christian Advocates. In addition to these the North Carolina Christian Advocate was established in 1856. During this quadrennium, Methodism sustained a great loss in the death of two eminent leaders. Stephen Olin, who died on August 16, 1851, was tender and sympathetic and widely beloved in all sections of the Church. Bishop Elijah Hedding, who died on April 9, 1852, was a man of heroic mould and was truly an ecclesiastical statesman. The virtues of the two men were of different order, but each made a great contribution to the Church in the most difficult period of its history.

Other items of interest in the quadrennium which ended with the General Conference of 1854, are few, but some of them were of real significance to Methodist history. Such was the resignation of Bishop Hamline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in 1852. His health failed and, true to his own low church theory of the Episcopacy, he insisted upon being permitted to resign. Some in the General Conference were disposed to resist his resignation, but the inimitable Peter Cartwright insisted upon accepting the resignation, saying: "It was Hamline's doctrine and their doctrine, and that he had been looking for a case to set themselves right before the world. The resignation of Bishop Hamline was accepted and he retired to Mount Pleasant, Iowa, where, after an illness extending over many years, he died on February 22, 1865. He will long be remembered as a man of great heart, as being true to his convictions, no matter what the cost to himself.

At this period, both North and South, the question of "pewed churches" and "family sitting" became an issue. From the beginning of the societies in America, it had been a regulation of the Discipline in both Churches that "the men and women sit apart." Very naturally there were those who were disposed to read into that regulation the will and revelation of God, and who would resist in all sincerity all innovations or encroachments upon the time-honored rule. It is difficult for us to understand the feeling which this proposed change developed. In a letter to Rev. J. Lane and Rev. Levi Pearce of Vicksburg, Mississippi, in 1849, Bishop Soule said that the rule had been "enacted and perpetuated by the proper authorities of the Church," and that it was not "advisory." He held, therefore, that a departure from that regulation of our places of worship was an innovation on the established order of the church, and "not the exercise of an authorized discretion." Bishop Soule expressed his regret on account of the invasion of the "primitive simplicity," which he strongly intimated would be followed by the decay of the spiritual life of Methodism.

In the Church, North, the controversy over "pewed churches" became acute, particularly in the Ohio Conference where Rev. John S. Inskip introduced "family sittings" in the churches at Dayton and Springfield. The Ohio Conference, in order to curb the innovation, undertook to supplement the Discipline by adding some rather threatening resolutions of its own. But Rev. Mr. Inskip was not deterred by the warning. He continued the practice of "family sittings" and he wrote a book, Methodism Explained and Defended, in which he took the position that the rule was "advisory" and, therefore, subject to such interpretation and application as "private judgment" might dictate. On complaint of Rev. G. Moody, Inskip was brought to trial before the Ohio Annual Conference on charges of violating his pledge to the Conference, and contumacious treatment of the Conference by the publication of obnoxious matter contained in the book which he had published. He was convicted by the Conference, but on appeal to the General Conference of 1852, the case was reversed by a vote of 87 to 64. Whereupon, the General Conference gave official interpretation of the Disciplinary rule, saying that it was "advisory" and not mandatory.

In 1853 and more or less from year to year, the coast cities of the country were visited by disastrous scourges of yellow fever. This was particularly true of the South. In some years the desolating plague extended from New York to Galveston. In New Orleans, at the peak of the epidemic, deaths reached 400 per day and there were approximately 5,000 deaths in a single epidemic. But despite controversy and scourges of fever, Episcopal Methodism, North and South, registered a substantial growth in membership throughout the years from 1850 to 1854. The statistics of British Methodism for 1852, however, revealed serious losses. There was a good gain on the mission fields, but Methodism in Britain showed a loss of 20,946 members, and the net loss for the connection totaled 18,494. All in all, it was a period of growth and substantial achievement for world Methodism.

The General Conference of 1854 met in Columbus, Georgia, on May 1, and its session was taken up largely with questions relating to the location and the re-location of the connectional enterprises that were to serve the Church. The report of the Secretary of Missions, Dr. E. W. Sehon, showed an encouraging progress. The collections for missions advanced from sixty-eight thousand dollars in 1846 to one hundred and eighty-six thousand dollars in 1853. This may be taken to indicate in general the growth and progress of the Church.

One of the principal issues which came before the Conference was the establishment and location of a Publishing House. On the third day of the session, a resolution for the establishment of a Book Concern was introduced by Rev. T. N. Ralston of Kentucky. The proposition was debated for exactly one week and the Resolution was adopted on May 10. Then the contest turned to the question of location. Nashville, Louisville, Memphis, St. Louis, Prattville, Ala., Atlanta and Columbus, Georgia, were put forward for the honor. Finally all had been eliminated except Nashville and Louisville, and the final vote stood Nashville 60, Louisville 57. From that day to the present time, Nashville has been the publishing center of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Another question which came up was the proposition to re-locate the domicile of the Board of Missions. Originally it had been located in Louisville, and a motion was made to move it to Nashville. This move was opposed by the nomination of New Orleans. Nashville was chosen by a vote of 59 to 43.

At this Conference, Methodist education received most careful consideration. Dr. David S. Doggett, on behalf of the Committee on Education, reported to the General Conference the names and locations of 81 schools of all grades. Twenty-five of them were called colleges, sixteen of which were for the education of women exclusively. Fifty-six were High Schools, Institutes, Seminaries and Academies. The school enrollment was listed as 8,000 pupils, including 1,000 in the colleges. The total endowment of the educational enterprises of the Southern Church was given at $182,000, and of that amount Randolph-Macon and Wofford College had each $60,000, La Grange College, Tennessee, had $25,000, Cokesbury College, South Carolina, had $15,000, Emory College, Georgia, had $12,000, Centenary College in Louisiana had $10,000. Nineteen of the colleges appear to have had no endowment whatever. But notwithstanding the poverty of the institutions for higher education, at least eleven of them have survived to the present time, either directly or through mergers with other institutions. Not less important than the listing of the colleges and their assets, was a Resolution offered by Dr. LeRoy M. Lee, of Virginia, which sought better preparation for the candidates for the Methodist ministry. With the adoption of the Resolution, the General Conference placed the ministry of the Methodists on the highroad to a more wholesome and helpful ministry and a more effective leadership for the Methodist hosts. George F. Pierce of Georgia, John Early of Virginia, and H. H. Kavanaugh of Kentucky were elected to the episcopacy.

The years immediately following 1854 were anything but propitious for the promotion of the moral and religious progress of the people, and ominous shadows of war were gathering in the path of the nation. The period was filled with incidents of minor and routine nature, and there was no event of outstanding importance to Methodist history. The collections for missions were steadily increasing; but despite the advancing collections for missions, those who were charged with the administration of that interest were not able to keep the budget balanced. Dr. Schon, the Secretary of the Board, was a thoroughly good man, but a poor financier. The report for 1856 showed a deficit of $40,000, and when the war was over the total indebtedness of the Board was double that amount—a more alarming condition then than it might be considered to be today.

The educational report which was made to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Indianapolis in 1856, showed 19 universities and colleges, with 100 professors and 2,000 students; and 98 seminaries, with 300 teachers and 14,500 pupils. College property was reported at $500,000, and endowment at $1,500,000. And two theological seminaries were reported as belonging to the Church—Concord and Evanston. The membership of the Church had increased more than 70,000 during the previous quadrennium, and while there had been a recession in the volume of contributions for missions it was not due to a diminution of interest or missionary zeal on the part of the Church. Bishop Beverly Waugh, senior Bishop of the Church, died at Baltimore, February 9, 1858.

The General Conference of 1858 met in the Hall of the House of Representatives in Nashville, on May 1. It was not an aggressive Conference—it appears to have been rather reactionary. It was occupied largely with questions of Conference division and expansion, with a proposed mission to the west coast of Africa, missions to the slaves, a mission to Central America, and the establishment of the Rio Grande Conference. The city of Portsmouth, Virginia, petitioned the Conference for the "obliteration" of the presiding eldership, or its "discontinuance in the older Conferences," and an effort was made to remove the "New Orleans exception" to the time limit of the pastorate, but both failed of adoption. Dr. Holland N. McTyeire, who had been the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate since 1851, was elected editor of the General Organ at Nashville.

A lively contest arose over the organization and management of the affairs of the Publishing House which had been established at the preceding General Conference. The colporteur method of book distribution had not proved either profitable or satisfactory; and the drafts of the Advocates for their deficiencies greatly embarrassed the business. The obligations of

A note from Mrs. S. R. Morgan, Route 1, Greenburg, La., is much appreciated, and particularly her expression of devotion to the Advocate.

Mrs. E. L. Williams of McComb, Miss., finds in her Christmas cards a real interpretation of the meaning of Christmas, and a medium for reminding her friends of the supreme gift.

Mrs. S. H. Ball, Jackson, Miss., in a business note to the office says that she loves the Advocate, and we are expressing our appreciation of her interest with a box of Christmas cards.

We have received many appreciative acknowledgments of the boxes of Christmas cards—too many to notice individually. To all we say, "Thank you, and a blessed Christmas!"

Rev. L. L. Cowen has made a phenomenal record at Noel Memorial Church. He has received into the membership of that church 348 people this year, and every claim will be paid in full.

Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, pastor at Florence, Miss., has our thanks for a friendly and encouraging word. We are glad to be assured that our efforts are helpful and appreciated.

The editor makes personal acknowledgment of a letter from Mrs. L. E. Barrentine, Little Rock. She is a friend of other years who still remembers this editor and his wife, as they remember her.

Miss Ella Fitzgerald, of Okalona, Miss., writes a note of appreciation for her box of Christmas cards, and she adds that she has been a subscriber to the Advocate for thirty years. We sincerely appreciate her loyalty to the paper.

When this notice gets into print more than 200 boxes of our gift Christmas cards will be gone. REMEMBER we can not supply more after we have exhausted our present stock of 1000 boxes. Get yours now.

Mrs. L. S. West, Sardis, Miss., informs us that her pastor, Rev. C. L. Rogers, has been in a hospital and is still sick. We regret to know of Brother Rogers' illness and hope that his affliction may not be of a serious nature.

JUDGE H. DENT MINOR,
Donor of the Methodist Church at Poplar Corner, Miss.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, lay leader of the Mississippi Conference, has sent $105 on the Advocate debt and is pressing on for the completion of the task. We greatly appreciate the faithfulness and loyalty of Dr. Sullivan.

The editor makes grateful acknowledgment of the cordial words of Brother R. A. Clark, a loyal layman of Mize, Miss. We are glad to feel that the Christian Advocate is more than just an organ of the Church.

Brother J. A. Love, of Haynesville, La., says that "Brother Royal is holding our feet to the fire." And then he adds: "But we are happy to have a man who desires to take care of the entire program of our church." That is a word well spoken.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, one of the best friends the Advocate has, sends in a list from Picayune, Miss., and says, "do not suspend any on my list until I have had time to contact them." He is not less successful in finding new friends for the paper.

Rev. L. J. Power, presiding elder of Seashore, Miss., District, puts iron into our blood by his brotherly and encouraging word. We know that we will have his faithful and efficient help, and we will do all in our power to help him in his work.

Rev. Byron F. Roberts sends us notice of the death of Rev. E. D. Fayard, a local elder who lived with his daughter near Springfield, La. Brother Fayard was in his eighty-fifth year, and was once the pastor at Springfield. His death occurred on October 1.

Mrs. W. D. Fulton, of Philadelphia, Miss., is in deep sorrow on account of the death of her little nephew, a sister's child, whom she had kept for six and a half years. She asks that she be remembered in prayer in her hour of sorrow and distress.

Rev. J. J. Baird, Tchula, Miss., in the midst of closing out the year's work does not forget the Advocate, nor even to speak gracious words concerning the editor and the publisher. Thank you, and we both expect to meet you at Amory.

Brother R. A. Rees, Booneville, Miss., speaks tenderly of his father who went away in the early part of this year, and of the joy which they had in reading the Advocate together. We trust that he may find it a source of comfort and strength, now when he must read it alone.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes, Centerville, La., writes that they are beginning to know and like their pastor, Rev. W. F. Roberts, very much. Brother Roberts went to that charge under very difficult circumstances, but he has met the responsibilities in a manner worthy of the man and his Church.

Rev. R. F. Harrell, pastor at Pineville, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call last week. He says that the work of his charge has been exceedingly difficult on account of the debt situation and the demands at the Veteran's Hospital which he serves in connection with the church at Pineville.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans.

Zone No. 3 of the Ruston District of which Mrs. O. E. Woodard is leader, held a most interesting meeting in Ringgold recently. The theme for the meeting was "The Christian Home." This zone was most fortunate in having for their guest speaker Mrs. R. E. Smith, Spiritual Life Leader of the Conference.

Mrs. Smith conducted the quiet hour and used for her subject, "How to Have a Christian Home."

Others having parts on this splendid program were: Mrs. Rhodes of Gibsland, Mrs. Gillon of Ringgold and Mrs. Lloyd Stewart of Arcadia. Mrs. William Webster of Minden very sweetly sang, "Home Sweet Home."

A surprise number on the program was the presentation of a Life Membership to Mrs. Gillon, given by her sister, Mrs. W. A. Givens, of Shreveport.

MALARIA

Speedy Relief of Chills and Fever

Don't let Malaria tear you apart with its racking chills and burning fever. Trust to no home-made or mere makeshift remedies. Take the medicine prepared especially for Malaria—Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic gives real relief from Malaria because it's a scientific combination of tasteless quinine and tonic iron. The quinine kills the Malarial infection in the blood. The iron builds up the system and helps fortify against further attack. At the first sign of any attack of Malaria take Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Better still take it regularly during the Malaria season to ward off the disease. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is absolutely harmless and tastes good.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic now comes in two sizes, 50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money. Get bottle today at any drugstore.

Mrs. Ed. Conger of Arcadia presented the children's work and Mrs. Hugh Taylor of Homer conducted the Mission Study for study leaders.

At a recent meeting of the Standing Committee on Rural Work of the Conference, which was held in Shreveport, it was decided that Deaconess Sheila Nuttall, Conference Rural worker, should be placed on the Bernice charge of the Ruston District. She has just completed a splendid year's work at Choudrant and outlying territory.

Mrs. W. E. Fine is the chairman of this committee.

We regret to report that Mr. C. C. Carver, husband of our own Mrs. C. C. Carver, Conference treasurer, continues ill at his home in Rayne. Mr. Carver has been confined to his bed since early in the summer. Prayers of the Missionary women all over the state are ascending to the Father in his behalf.

* * *

Mr. K. C. East, superintendent of Sue Bennett College, London, Ky., reports decided progress made during the school year of 1934-35. The junior college has shown rapid and continuous growth with 329 students enrolled for the year. The library has been moved to a more convenient location and has been increased by 700 volumes. Some of the most interesting chapel programs for the year were furnished by the children from the model school, assisted by the practice teacher.

This is one of the many home mission schools established and carried on by the missionary women of Southern Methodism. We delight in its progress.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

A meeting of Zone Three of the Sardis Grenada District was held at the Belen Church with the auxiliaries from Lambert, Crowder and Marks in attendance. The devotional was conducted by the chairman, Mrs. Gordon Cooper, of Lambert, and the conference planned program followed.

The regular reports received from the different auxiliaries. Most of them stressed their World Outlook subscriptions and the publicity they were giving the Week of Prayer by poster and envelope and personal word.

Mrs. Jim McVey of Lambert discussed Christian Social Relations in a thoughtful way. Mrs. Pettyjohn gave a comprehensive view of Stewardship from the tithe to taxes. Mrs. G. C. Jones gave some reminiscences of "The Spiritual Life Retreat" held at Grenada in September. "Beautiful Garden of Prayer," a solo, was sung by Mrs. Roger Morgan accompanied by Mrs. C. C. Miller. Mrs. W. L. Robinson, of Lambert, led the zone consecration service with scripture reading from St. John.

The Zone Life Membership was presented to Mrs. G. C. Jones by the chairman.

Mrs. E. C. Black led the program which was given by the Marks society.

There were about forty-five members present together with the visitors.

The following are paragraphs from the usual fall letter sent auxiliaries by Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Neblett at the direction of the Executive Committee. I am taking this liberty because many who read this Advocate page may read for themselves better than they listen in auxiliary meetings.

"This year's work of the Woman's Missionary Society is rapidly drawing to a close, but for us to have a successful culmination of our plans we shall have to redouble our energies these closing weeks.

"Our beloved and efficient president, Mrs. B. P. Brooks, has had temperature for fourteen weeks and is under the care of two physicians. They not only request, but demand that she have relief from all work and worry. For this reason she has tendered her resignation to take effect immediately. We are deeply grieved because of her illness which necessitates her resignation, but since her health is involved we shall have to accept it. The greatest tribute we can pay her at this time will be to finish the year's work in a manner which will be pleasing to her and to our Lord. Will you do your part to make her plans come true?

"Our capable vice-president, Mrs. H. L. Talbert of Clarksdale, will serve as our leader until the annual meeting of Conference in April.

"Three quarters of the year have gone. Only $11,371.89 has been paid on our $20,000 pledge made at Council in St. Louis, last March. This leaves a balance of $8,628.11 to be raised this quarter. We are honor bound to meet this obligation. May this letter serve as an S. O. S. appeal that we be loyal and that we meet this obligation. It means that every society will have to increase its giving 20 per cent over that of last year. You can meet your pro rata share of this deficit with Life Memberships, special gifts, Fourth Sunday offerings, or in any way you see fit, just so you DO IT and DO IT NOW.

"Read II Timothy 2:15 and pray much for the work and the workers.

"We are counting on your LOYALTY and know that you will not fail us."

MAGEE, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: Geographically speaking, Magee charge is one of the border line charges of the Hattiesburg District. It is the Indian Station in the Mississippi Conference, and will celebrate its second birthday soon. I am not quite willing to say the station is a child of the depression, after being the only charge in the Hattiesburg District to pay in full at the Annual Conference in 1934. I am not sure but what it led the Mississippi Conference in the amount raised per member.

It looked like an impossible task assigned; when the charge formerly had several churches and a membership of five hundred, and was assessed only $1,400 for the pastor, and proportionate amounts for other claims, to be cut down to two hundred and seventy-two members and about fifty of these belonging to a mission church, reached one Sunday afternoon a month. With this a parsonage to be repaired or rebuilt.

A courageous, loyal congregation faced the fact. The Board of Stewards met, made the assessment for pastor $1,800, and proportionate amounts for other claims were assessed. The end of the year found all of us rejoicing over a report that seemed impossible in the beginning. The credit, the praise go to the faithful, energetic congregation.

The report in 1935 promises to be equal or above that of last year. The congregation is happy over the construction of a modern home for the present and which consisted of: "The history of the Methodist Church in Magee," J. W. Burnham, a charter member; "Influential men, laymen and ministers who have gone out from the church; names of pastors," Dr. T. J. Burnham; "Words of commendation to charter members and others who have made the church what it is today," A. P. Russell; "The (Magee) Methodist Church of tomorrow," S. M. Furlow.

Monday night following, the ladies of the church gave the annual banquet, bringing together the members and their friends. The school band, under the direction of Mr. Wood, furnished the music while the people ate oysters, and chicken, and renewed the ancient covenant of friendship. It was a happy occasion for all.

While the pastor and congregation at Magee are ready to rejoice in the great success, and the unusual achievements of the pastor and congregation at Broad Street, Hattiesburg, we are ready to say, "The Lord has been good to us at Magee, and there are other charges in the district making unusual strides."

Mr. Editor, we have a wide awake presiding elder over the district. His good judgment, godly counsel and inspiring messages have meant much to the pastors and congregations.

HUGH C. CASTLE.

REVIVAL AT BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Recently there was held in Brookhaven Methodist Church a most helpful series of evangelistic services, conducted by President W. C. Newman, of Grenada College.

Whitworth College co-operated with the local Methodist Church, and its students and faculty received a great spiritual uplift from these worship services. Brother Newman is always a welcome visitor to Brookhaven and to Whitworth College. His sincere messages are deeply spiritual and breathe the principles of the Cross of Christ in human experience.

The pastor of Brookhaven Methodist Church, Rev. O. S. Lewis and his official board join in this appreciation of Brother Newman's ministry among us. Unusually large congregations from the town and local church, as well as from Whitworth College, attended all the services.

J. O. LEATH,

Vice-president and Professor of Religion, Whitworth College.

THE DOCTORS ARE RIGHT

Women should take only liquid laxatives

Many believe any laxative they might take only makes constipation worse. And that isn't true.

Do what doctors do to relieve this condition. Doctors use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why your laxative should be in liquid form. A liquid dose can be regulated to the drop.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that form no habit even with children. Syrup Pepsin is the nicest tasting, nicest acting laxative you ever tried.

future pastors. About $800 in money and skilled work expended on the parsonage. With a generous response to practically every appeal made by the church, for a special offering. To date, less than one hundred dollars will pay all claims of the budget, outside the salaries, for the Conference year. And we are expecting the remaining sum Sunday.

Twenty-five have been added to the church this year. Dr. B. L. Sutherland, the eloquent gospel preacher, led the congregation in the revival effort, which was very successful. If this congregation and pastor could, they would make him Bishop now.

Sunday, October 6, was homecoming day in the church. The old bell, which has been silent for several years, was heard in the town. The members came, and an unusual service was experienced

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, NOVEMBER 3.

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D. D.

JUDAH TAKEN CAPTIVE

The captivity of Judah seems a small incident in the annals of humanity, but its meaning and implications involve the history of empires and the destiny of nations. A petty monarch had sought to strengthen his kingdom by trading with powerful political neighbors rather than by developing the resources of his country and promoting the welfare of his people. It may seem inevitable that the smaller country should have been crushed by the larger, and that the king was guilty of no more than an error in judgment, but the point of the lesson is that his error of judgment traced back to moral perversity. Final results flow from deepest causes, and the moral sense lies deepest in human nature. It is the well-spring of human activity and the arbiter of destiny. Nations may be hampered by political waves, but they are destroyed by immorality and infidelity. Probably no great nation has been overthrown till it was morally bankrupt. Judah had broken faith with God before Zedekiah broke his pledge to Chaldea. When the heart is corrupt thinking will be muddy and motives unworthy. Character is a unit and when one seeks a bad end, or even a good end by unworthy methods, he may expect to flounder in judgment and be trapped in his own snare. There can be neither sense of security nor certainty of progress except in a universe controlled by moral ideals. No people can be exalted except by righteousness.

The people of Jerusalem displayed heroic valor under the Chaldean siege. They showed their love of home, country, children. Even after the lapse of twenty-five centuries we admire their courage and fortitude, but they had forsaken right for might and the sword took its fearful toll. Ample warnings had been given. Prophets had spoken and minor disasters had fallen without heed. "The morning after" had been followed by another night of revelry. Now the tragic end was upon them. Chief responsibility for their plight rested upon their rulers and leaders, and upon them fell the heaviest blow. They were taken into exile leaving only a peasant class of common laborers to till a land "flowing with milk and honey."

The "crude and cruel days" of human history afford no more shocking parable of punishment than befell Zedekiah. Demons could devise nothing more diabolical than to slaughter his sons in his presence and then stab out his eyes so that the horrible scene might be forever fresh in his memory. It is ever thus. The sinner does not die alone, but finds his dearest and best crushed by the fall of the house he built upon sand.

No doubt good came of the exile. It wrecked formality and ended sham. Worship by the rivers of Babylon was difficult, but genuine and sincere. God was found in human hearts and brotherly deeds, not in splendid temples and sacred stones; not in rites and rituals, but in justice and mercy. Out of the sufferings of God's people were wrung their sweetest psalms and noblest prophecies; out of the depths of material poverty and defeat came their loftiest visions of spiritual affluence and victory. Depressions and disasters are not totally bad if they serve to bring people to their knees before God.

LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

Hello Young People!

I am back again; with more news about the Methodist Young People's Conference at Memphis. The Monroe District has had an "On to Memphis Committee" meeting and is now getting ready to select and finance our delegates. I hope that the other districts are doing this along with us. If your district is not working on this, please try to interest them and get things going. If there is a doubt about any detail of the conference at Memphis just write to Rev. G. W. Dameron, Crowley, La., or write to me at 707 Jackson St., Monroe, La. Complete information will be sent to you immediately.

I have received another fine report of the Live Wire Union. The Service Union in Monroe District conducted an interesting meeting October 10. Being in the form of a radio program, it proved to be very successful, and well attended under the existing circumstances. I would like to get reports from all the unions so that I might keep up with the work throughout the state. All the letters that I receive shall be promptly answered. I promise you. Let me hear from you soon about your district and union work.

By the way, I finally heard from the Shreveport District. Bill Fleming, district director, wrote me a fine letter telling me all about the marriage of Miss Lenina Mae Lester and Mr. C. B. Cooper. Both are very active workers in Noel Memorial Church in Shreveport. Luck and happiness to Mr. and Mrs. Cooper.

Let's keep Memphis first in our minds for the next few weeks, and see just how many delegates we can send from our state.

See you in Memphis.

BILLY.

Remember These Facts About Black-Draught

Some of the common causes of constipation are unsuitable diet, lack of exercise and recreation, and a run-down condition in which the nervous system is below par from excessive work and worry. Of course, you will want to correct the cause, if possible. Prompt relief of cases of constipation may be obtained by taking purely vegetable Black-Draught. It does not make constipation "repeat." Men and women who seemed to have a tendency to constipation have found Black-Draught very helpful because the dose can be reduced so conveniently, and because its tonic laxative effect helps to restore normal, regular elimination.

Sold in 25-cent packages.

End Bad Cough Quickly, at One Fourth the Cost

Home-Mixed! No Cooking! Easy!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a much more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs only one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up distressing coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, helping clear the air passages, and soothing away the irritation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its soothing effect on throat membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

CHURCH LEADERS, YOUNG PEOPLE MEET IN DISCUSSION

One of the highlights of the Memphis Conference is the meeting between the delegates and outstanding leaders. Many men of ability that will not appear on the platform will be in these groups to guide the discussion of important subjects. Also many of the principle speakers will answer questions in the discussion groups.

It is in these meetings that the youth will have an excellent opportunity to express opinions and talk with inspiring personalities. Make plans now as to which topics will have the most interest for you so that you will be able to get into those groups when you come to the Conference.

The discussion groups subjects, with a few samples of the questions that may be considered are given below.

Discussion Group Topics

THE CHURCH: What is its function in society? Is it discharging that function? What is youth's place in the work and operation of the church? Etc.

MISSIONS: What ideals are entertained by intelligent Christians regarding missions? Is there need for continuing the missionary enterprise? Etc.

ECONOMICS—INDUSTRY. What is the Christian approach to the economic situation? Is the competitive order basically Christian? Etc.

WAR—PEACE: Can a Christian engage in war? What should be the attitude of the Church? Etc.

RACE RELATIONSHIPS: what principles should govern the Christian in his relationships with persons of another race? Etc.

MARRIAGE AND THE CHRISTIAN FAMILY from the standpoint of youth, what is to be done to maintain the Christian family? Etc.

BUILDING A CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY: What are the duties of a Christian in the matter of citizenship? Etc.

YOUTH AND BEVERAGE ALCOHOL: Why is drinking to be condemned? Etc.

CHRISTIAN USE OF LEISURE: What should be the guidance of the Christian church in the constructive use of leisure time?

Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

blows. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." Jesus warned him against his besetting sin. In the garden of Gethsemane, He said, "Watch and pray." In the upper room Peter was very sure of his loyalty; "Although all should be offended in Thee, yet will not I." His Lord answered, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, this night before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice." Peter vehemently cried, "Though I die with Thee, yet will I not deny Thee." That very night Jesus was apprehended and carried to the judgment hall. Peter followed afar off. That was dangerous. He warmed his hands at the enemy's fire. That was perilous. He flinched before the pointed finger of the servant maid, "Thou art also one of Jesus' disciples." He answered, "I am not." One of the bystanders said, "This man was also with Jesus." Peter overheard and denied it. An hour later another said, "Of truth thou art one of his disciples, thy speech betrayeth thee." He protested with an oath, "I know not the man." And the cock crew.

So Peter fell. He was down and out. But when the cock crew, Peter remembered the words of Jesus. The prisoner looked at him. Peter went out and wept bitterly. He had denied his Lord three times.

Judas betrayed his Lord and went out and hanged himself, but Peter recovered and was restored to favor. Let us see why Peter came back.

Peter really believed in Christ. At Caesarea Philippi, Peter had made the great confession, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." This conviction was a great help in restoring Peter. But more than faith is needed.

Peter loved Jesus. A few days after the three denials, Jesus tried him out with a threefold question and three times Peter insisted, "Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee." Thus was he restored to the apostolate and recommissioned to feed the lambs and the sheep.

Peter repented. "He went out and wept." Peter was not the kind to cry without sorrow. He not only wept, but he wept BITTERLY. Why this bitterness? Why this broken heart? Why this deep contrition? He had denied His Lord. He was full of shame and self-contempt. His pride was pitilessly laid bare. Peter was humbled. Jesus did not make light of Peter's sins. He looked at him. Three times He forced re-affirmation of his loyalty.

We have studied Peter's heart. There was another side. When a man seeks to do the right, God will help.

Jesus loved Peter. "Having loved them, He loved them to the end." John 13:1. He loved the disciples in spite of their shortcomings. Love for sinners was back of His redemptive mission.

Jesus prayed for Peter. In verse 31, 32 of Luke 22 (the same chapter in which Peter's denials are recorded), we read, "And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: But I have prayed for you, that thy faith fail not." Jesus "ever liveth to make intercession for us." What a source of power.

Jesus suffered for Peter. How much suffering there was in that look of Jesus. How He grieved over Peter's fall. Jesus went to the cross for sinners. The concern of Jesus for Peter was shown in seeking him out after the resurrection and testing him.

How much Peter's recovery meant. Peter was the very man to preach on the day of Pentecost. He boldly witnessed so that others "took knowledge that he had been with Jesus." He could but speak the things he had seen and heard. This same apostle became a rock. He later admonished, "Grow in grace." He later could write, "Add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity; for if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Peter later sealed his faith in his blood.

PRAYER

O Father, help us to see that we cannot speak a good word for Thee when following afar off. Help us to stay close to Thee; to live for Thee and with Thee. We thank Thee for Thy abounding grace that brings the penitent back into the Father's House." May we ever be conscious of Thy love. We ask in Jesus' name.

THE YOUNG KAGAWA

Today it is "the Great Kagawa," "The Saviour of Japan's Lower Classes," "The Student of World Problems," and many other equally magnificent titles. What was this remarkable man of today like before he gained the renown of the world and was beginning his work of salvation in the worst slums of Japan? What were his thoughts? Was he ever as strong as he is now?

He answers all these questions with a group of sensitively, beautiful poems that he calls, "Songs from the Slums." (A translation by Lois Erickson, to be published by the Cokesbury Press, November 29, 1935). They show the young man that has not yet completely conquered himself, struggling with his more unfortunate brothers who wallow in the slime of the gutter and its kindred vices.

THE MOON LOOKS DOWN

By Toyohiko Kagawa

A Drunken man
Was going through a soldier's drill
Outside my door.

"About face! Forward march!"
He called.
The alley echoed
To his fierce commands
And trembled to his tread.

Suddenly
I sprang before him,
Mimicking his words,
"About face! Forward march!
Repent, and turn to good!"

But I was frightened
At my own loud voice,
And as I lit my lamp,
My knees began to shake
Because I thought,
"What if he comes
To stab me with a knife?"

But no;
He entered, saying,
"Yes; your words are good.
Yet as for me
The God of Heaven
Has cast me off.
And now shall I believe
That he will save?
But say
That you will save me.
For I know
That you are in the slum
To save the poor that come."

Troubled
There I sat

Upon my pallet.
What to say to him
To move his heart?
At last came words of love.

Silent he sat and listened.
After me,
My helper-friend,
Haskajima,
Word by word
Slow word by word,
Showed him our Lord.

Then
The drunken man
Burst into weeping
As he told his tale.

When he was two weeks old
His mother cast him

YOUNG KAGAWA

Out on the sea beach,
There to die—
He cursed her for a harlot, Bitterly.
When he was grown
To fifteen years
He drew a sword
Upon a man,
Demanding money;
And to hide a theft,
Burned down a house.
Nine years he was in jail
He shook with sobbing,
As he told his tale—
A vagabond,
The sad slum's masterpiece.

And as we heard his sins,
We wept with him;
Wildly he wrung his hands,
And rent his clothes
In grief,
As he implored
Forgiveness.

Softly,
We soothed his fears,
Knowing we find
The Christ
Through tears.

I prayed;
Then Tora said,
"Tonight I sleep with you!"
I threw my door ajar,
And looked Up at the Winter moon—
And, even there, in that clear cloudless sky,
I could not see the beauty passing by,
The moon itself seemed drunken, weeping Lost . . . .

Hasukajima
Knelt with me
Down in the dust
To pray.

The clocks strike mid-night.
Far away,
The moon looks down
Upon the slums,
Touching the little homes,
One by one,
One by one.

Still sobbing,
Tora comes,
Naked,
And runs

To turn
A strong, cold stream
Of water
On his body,
Sobering himself
From sake.

The moon peeps through the tattered door,
Silvering the filthy walls,
Watching us sleeping on the broken floor.

RESOLUTION CONCERNING DR. V. C. CURTIS

Whereas, our presiding elder, Dr. V. C. Curtis, of the Columbus District, has proven himself capable and efficient as a presiding elder and has won the confidence and affections of all of our people by his splendid preaching ability and Christian spirit; and,

Whereas, we have always found him to be wise in counsel, safe and sane in judgment, strong in his convictions, fair and just in all of his official dealings, tireless in his efforts, unfailing in his sympathy, faithful to every trust, and deeply consecrated to the Master's cause; and

Whereas, we know that we will have to lose him at our approaching Annual Conference on account of the laws of our great Church. Therefore be it

Resolved, that we, of the Louisville M.

E. Church, South, the entire membership of the official Board of Stewards, the Board of Christian Education, do resolve that we greatly regret the necessity of his removal, and wish to convey to him our deep and sincere appreciation for his wise and efficient leadership of the affairs of our District, for his loyalty to the whole program of our great Church, and for the wonderful progress which our district has made during his tenure of office.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Board of Stewards, a copy sent to Dr. V. C. Curtis, a copy be sent our beloved and efficient bishop, and dying of both the Southern and Northern armies.

In the early eighties, while the Rev. J. H. Mitchell was pastor, the church was remodeled. The tall spire was added to the belfry, the colonial porch was changed to a vestibule, the slave gallery was removed and the old box pulpit and mourners' bench were replaced by a smaller stand and a chancel rail.

In 1897, while the Rev. J. H. Shoemaker was pastor, the church was again remodeled. The ceiling was arched, the floors inclined, new seats replaced the hand made benches and the founders of the church, remembered with memorial windows. In the spring of 1898, nearly forty years later, the church was dedicated with Bishop Hoss presiding. In 1906, directed by the pastor, the Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, an apse was added to the church, in the rear of which was placed an art glass window picturing the Good Shepherd, and presented to the beloved G. P. Hammerly, who had served as superintendent of the Sunday school since the close of the War Between the States, and who continued to serve until his death, in 1918.

Many of the bishops, the great preachers and evangelists of Southern Methodism, have spoken from the sacred desk of this old church. In 1900, when the body of our beloved ex-Governor, John M. Stone, rested in the sacred chancel, Bishop Charles B. Galloway delivered the funeral oration.

Space would fail in writing of all the pastors and presiding elders who have served this church so faithfully and who are lovingly remembered. The old bell, which was a present to the founders of the church from the merchants of the city of Louisville, Ky., will soon ring a home-coming to these veterans of the cross, and a glad welcome awaits all who may come to rejoice with us over our old church that is again made new. On this home-coming day Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs has promised to be with us, and the whole church is looking forward to his coming.

IN THE DEATH OF HON. ARTHUR HENDERSON, the world loses a worthy leader and one of the romantic figures of this generation. He was a statesman, a friend of World Peace and an implacable foe of war. He began life as an iron moulder, became Minister of Foreign Affairs in the British Cabinet, won the Nobel peace prize for 1934, and was one of the best loved public figures in English life. He was a Christian without ostentation, a devoted Methodist and for forty years he was a local preacher in his Church.

THE ADHERENTS OF CHRISTIANITY are said to number more than any other single religion. That statement, however, means less than we are apt to think. It is simply a comparison of the combined units of Christianity with other fractions of the human race. The fact is that two-thirds of the human race are still without a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ, not to mention the recent losses in lands where Christianity has had a long era of triumphant conquest. The completion of our conquest is still in the future.

A BRITISH ARMY OFFICER was detailed to carry a company of soldiers to church, says a writer in The Methodist Recorder. When they reached the place of worship only about half of them could be seated in the little church. The officer gave order for those to "fall out" who did not want to go to church, and about half the company promptly dropped out. He then lined up the disinclined and marched them into church, and dismissed the others saying, "these need it more than you do." And we sometimes hear that the British are without a sense of humor.

THE NAVAJO INDIANS number about fifty thousand and they live on a reservation of sixteen million acres of land. They appear to be typically Indian in their attitudes toward the schemes of the white men; and the New Deal seems to have invoked wooden measure for solving the economic problems of the Red men. The result is widespread distrust and a condition bordering upon chaos. A twenty per cent cut of the herds of sheep and goats was ordered without taking into account the fact that hundreds owned scarcely enough for a bare subsistence. The six Navajo jurisdictions were combined under one central agency; a totally inadequate school system was revolutionized to the hurt of the educational prospect of the Indians; and an army of political spellbinders and institute holders are adding confusion to the distrust and resentment that already exists.

THE LEONARD WOOD MEMORIAL FOUNDATION is said to be mobilizing the medical forces of the world for an attack upon leprosy, the oldest and the most stubborn disease of the human race. There are said to be three million lepers in the world today and less than fifty thousand of them are receiving medical care. During the last half century, much has been done to alleviate the condition of this vast army of world exiles, but little real progress has been made toward the conquering of a disease whose pestilential march has been almost unimpeded for thousands of years.

AMONG THE SIGNERS of the manifesto entitled "The Brewers' Attack Upon Youth," are one thousand English doctors. Many of them are said to be eminent in their profession. The manifesto declares that the success of the campaign to promote beer-drinking among the young would be a step backward and detrimental to the best interests of individual and national welfare. But against this attitude of the profession which best understands the physical consequences of drink, the political barons of the United States are proclaiming the huge returns in revenue for which the souls and bodies of the young people have been sold.

DIogenES AND HIS LANTERN have long been familiar to even the smallest school boy and school girl, but it begins to appear that the cynic had psychic reactions which have been overlooked. According to a certain periodical, he was a successful advertiser, he lived in a barrel that he might advertise himself, and he walked the streets of Athens with his lantern at the hour of noon as an advertisement of the dishonesty of the Athenian merchants who were renowned cheaters and clever hagglers. To the tourist, however, he will probably continue to be esteemed as a cynic philosopher more than for his achievements as a business reformer.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE, according to the students of Boston University School of Theology, must be intelligent; beautiful of character; must have personality which will make her live winsomely, femininely, capably and understandingly; must have a common interest in her husband's work; must dedicate her life to the cause of Christian endeavor; and must have a permanent, inspiring character. One may sympathize with the ideology of those ministerial neophytes, but will wonder if they have not been strangely influenced by the ecclesiastical Matriarch of that New England city. They might find it necessary to revise their blueprint since the world has never had a bumper crop of angels.

EDITORIAL

SOURCES OF AUTHORITY

Dr. William E. Snyder, editor of The Religious Telescope, said recently, "When finances run low in our churches we do not need to examine men's pocket-books or bank accounts. It is more likely a case of spiritual poverty." This statement was made as an interpretation of the missionary appeal of the Christian Church, but it is equally applicable to every interest of the kingdom of God. When the program of the Church shall cease to be inspired by a conscious experience of redemption all of its enterprises will be found stranded in the shallows of a selfish formalism. It is proper that the Church should insist upon the execution of its entire schedule of activity, but such insistence should never result in making that program central in its life and thinking. There may be communions whose anchorage is such as to secure a measure of perpetuity through forms and formularies, but the history and the genius of Methodism are such as to cause our dependence to lie on the side of an inner propulsion—the urge of personal experience and spiritual enlistment. A number of books have come from the Methodist press in recent months, which deal with the history and progress of the Church. Most of those studies deal with phases of our history which are the direct projections of the Wesleyan revival. Dr. Maldwyn Edwards, in a book just published, even goes so far as to indicate that Methodist history is a graph of its spiritual life. In this contention, he lays great emphasis upon the disruptions which occurred in the middle of the nineteenth century. In England a spirit of Toryism supplanted the soul and fervor of Wesley; and with us, humanitarian and social considerations, perfectly proper in themselves, outran and in a measure supplanted the holier objectives of Methodist faith and practice. It seems that we have now reached another period in our social progress when we would do well to make sure of our spiritual anchorage, lest we be swept away by the alluring suggestion of "social security" and a mere temporary social policy cause our people to lose their appreciation of that definite and personal Christian experience which has ever been the source and inspiration of Methodist power, and which alone can guarantee our spiritual health and our ecclesiastical survival.

THE SIGNS OF RECOVERY

Many and loud have been the proclamations of economic recovery in America, and all such assurances have been received into hearts filled with a burning hope, but hearts which have not been able to find tangible evidence of its reality. The payment of certain classes of debts, church debts in particular, have been cited as indications of progress. The payment of church debts, however, has been influenced by two widely different factors. Currency inflation, regardless of assertions to the contrary, has had something to do with the achievement; but by far the most important factor has been the determination of church people to vindicate their honor at whatever cost to themselves. In many cases debt payments have been reflected in the collections for current support. In some instances which have come under our observation, ministers have made the progress possible, either through an agreed reduction of their own compensation, or in the less voluntary unpaid and uncollectible balances on salaries. This position has been made more believable by the fact that some good churches are even now feeling under the necessity of resorting to drastic reductions in the entire support budget for another year. We do not think that such a policy of retrenchment is wise—it may prove to be almost ruinous. But it is not of that phase that we are thinking. As we see it, the churches, which represent a cross-section of the economic life of the nation, are by no means certain that national recovery has been sufficient to justify pledges even at the figures of the past few years. The fight is not over and the captious suggestion as to a comparison of the condition of the individual today with that of a few months or years ago is unconvincing banter and little less than a mockery of the hopes of thousands.

Proceedings of the North Mississippi Conference

Reported by Rev. H. P. Lewis

The sixty-sixth session of the North Mississippi Conference commenced at Amory, Miss., October 30, 1935, at 7 p. m., Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs of Shreveport, La., in the chair. "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," was sung and Bishop Dobbs led the Conference in prayer. Following an anthem by the choir the Bishop read a lesson from Phil. first and second chapters and Hymn No. 411, led by Dr. Thompson of Vanderbilt University, was sung. The Bishop made impressive remarks on the meaning of Christ's death on the Cross after which the congregation sang Hymn No. 525.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, the Bishop being assisted by the presiding elders.

Rev. C. T. Floyd, pastor-host, spoke words of welcome in behalf of the city of Amory. Further words of greeting were given by Mayor J. R. Buckhannon of Amory; Linwood Dixon, in the name of the Young Business Men's Club; Dr. C. B. Baker, of the Kiwanis Club; Dr. Wingfield, pastor of the Christian Church, in the name of the Churches of the city. The Bishop made a happy response to all these greetings in behalf of the Conference.

On motion of W. C. Beasley, the Conference requested the address of welcome, given by Dr. Wingfield, be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The motion carried. Dr. J. R. Countiss, secretary of the last session of the Conference, called the roll.

Dr. Countiss was nominated to succeed himself but declined the honor. He has served since 1903, and holds one of the longest records of continuous service in the history of the Church. W. R. Lott was unanimously elected secretary and J. M. Guinn was elected statistical secretary.

The hours for meeting and adjourning were set and the bar of the Conference fixed. Question 21 was called, and the names of the presiding elders were called, their characters passed and each elder announced that the names of the preachers in his district had been called one by one, and that there was nothing against them.

Changes in the personnel of the Quadrennial Boards were made as follows: Missions T. H. Dorsey vice L. M. Lipscomb, deceased, and Mrs. H. L. Talbert vice Mrs. B. P. Brooks, resigned.

Bible—E. F. Tucker vice Melville Johnson.

Finance—E. N. Broyles vice A. T. McIlwain, a presiding elder.

Second Year Committee—J. T. Lockhart vice W. P. Buhrman, a presiding elder.

Fourth Year Committee—P. F. Luter vice J. D. Wroten, a presiding elder.

Announcements were made, visitors and notables were introduced. Hymn No. 416 was sung and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Theodore Copeland of Texas.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY, OCTOBER 31.

Conference opened at 9 a. m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair, singing Hymn No. 3, and reading in unison the first selection for the Eighteenth Sunday in the New Hymnal.

Dr. W. E. Hogan, of Nashville, Tenn., led the Conference in prayer.

Dr. Fagan Thompson led the Conference in the singing of Hymn No. 267.

Bishop Dobbs gave a devotional talk on the subject, "Our Father."

Hymn No. 378 was sung. The minutes of the first session were read and approved.

On motion offered by W. L. Robinson, a standing vote of appreciation was given Dr. J. R. Countiss, for his long and efficient service as secretary of the Conference.

N. D. Guerri and W. J. Cunningham were chosen assistant secretaries, and E. L. Jernigan, L. M. James, W. L. Henley, R. A. Grisham, J. O. Dowdle, and M. E. Armstrong were added to the Statistical Secretarial Staff.

The names of the absentees were called and further calling of the roll was dispensed with.

A report from the Publishing House was read to the Conference, and Dr. A. F. Smith of the Publishing House addressed the Conference.

Hymn No. 209, "Amazing Grace," was sung.

J. H. Johnson, Conference Treasurer, made announcements.

Secretary Lott read the report of the Methodist Hospital. Question 13, "Who are transferred to the Conference?"

W. L. Atkins, an elder, to the Memphis Conference. Question 9, "Who are received by transfer from other Conferences?"

T. W. Lewis, an elder of the Memphis Conference.

Dr. T. W. Lewis addressed the Conference in behalf of the Methodist Hospital.

Mrs. E. D. Gilmore and Mrs. H. L. Talbert were presented to the Conference. Secretary Lott read communication from the American Bible Society, relative to its Four Hundredth Anniversary. R. P. Neblett read resolution concerning the observation of this anniversary by our Conference, which was adopted.

Question 23, "Who are superannuated?" was called, and the names of our superannuates were called, thirty in number, and the nine persons came forward and were greeted by the Conference. Hymn No. 269 was sung and J. J. Brooks, who for sixty-six years has been a member of the Conference, led in prayer. Messages of greeting from R. G. A. Carlisle, J. W. Raper, B. P. Jace, and W. W. Mitchell, absent brethren, were read to the Conference.

E. S. Lewis, a transfer to the Mississippi Conference, sent greetings, citing I Cor. 15:58.

Questions 5, 12, and 11, were called and to each was given the answer, "No one."

The roll was completed by the seating of several alternate delegates.

Dr. R. R. Scott, of the North Alabama Conference, was presented.

J. G. Houston, Conference lay leader, made announcements and offered a motion that a message of sympathy be sent the family of Dr. J. E. Crawford, recently deceased, in their bereavement.

Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College, addressed the Conference.

Bishop Dobbs exhorted the Conference in behalf of Religious Education.

Dr. W. E. Hogan, treasurer of the General Board of Education was presented.

C. T. Floyd, pastor-host, made announcements, various announcements were made, the Doxology was sung, and Dr. Copeland closed the session with prayer.

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 1.

Conference convened at 9 a. m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair, by singing Hymn No. 23. Dr. W. L. Duren led in prayer.

The first reading for the Eleventh Sunday was ready responsively. The Conference sang Hymn No. 14, and the Bishop spoke a few words on the subject of Religion, based on Jas. 1:27.

Hymn No. 147 was sung, following which the minutes of the second day were read and approved.

Mrs. H. L. Talbert, acting president of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society, addressed the Conference.

The following were presented to the Conference: Miss Myrtle Davis, rural worker of the Woman's Missionary Society; Mrs. D. H. Hall, treasurer of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society; Dr. W. L. Duren; Dr. H. H. Harris, of Emory University; Rev. Earl H. Sells, of the Mississippi Conference; Dr. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans; Dr. H. M. Bullock, of Millsaps College and Rev. and Mrs. Carroll Varner, of the Memphis Conference.

M. A. Burns, who has been on the superannuate list, was placed back on the effective list.

G. C. Schwartz was given the supernumerary relation.

An offering was given to care for the insurance premium of one of our superannuates, J. G. Johnson.

Question 14, "What preachers have died during the year?" was called, and while the Conference stood in silence it was announced that Chaplain J. M. Moose and Rev. L. M. Lipscomb had answered the "last roll call." Following this, Dr. Countiss led the Conference in prayer.

The name of A. S. Raper was referred for the superannuate relation.

A message of sympathy was sent Mrs. B. P. Brooks, president of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society, who for many months has been sick.

S. V. Wall read the report of the Board of Lay Activities, which carried with its adoption the election of J. G. Houston as Conference Lay Leader.

Brother Houston made his report as lay leader and addressed the Conference relative to lay activities.

H. P. Lewis read the report of the Board of Christian Literature, which carried with it the nomination of V. C. Curtis, J. H. Felts and E. Nash Broyles as Publishing Committee. Pending its adoption Dr. Duren and J. H. Felts addressed the Conference relative to our Conference organ.

Dr. Hugh H. Harris of Emory University was given a hearing.

Milam Reeves of the Mississippi Conference, C. C. Coulter of the Anti-Saloon League, and E. J. Gilmore, chairman of the local entertainment committee, were presented.

J. H. Holder read the report of the Memorial Mercy Home, and Dr. J. G. Snelling and R. G. Moore gave messages concerning the work of the Home. The second Sunday in February, which is the 9th, was designated as Memorial Mercy Home Day, when a free-will offering is to be taken for the maintenance of the Home.

J. H. Felts represented the Methodist Benevolent Association and W. R. Lott the Conference Brotherhood.

J. E. Stephens read Report No. 1 of the Board of Christian Education which carried the nominations of R. G. Lord as Executive Extension Secretary, W. L. Robinson as director of Adult Work, and W. C. Newman as director of Young People's Work. Dr. Bullock of Millsaps, and R. G. Lord addressed the Conference.

S. A. Brown read report of the Orphan Home Board, which carried the nomination of V. C. Curtis, J. B. Streater and A. C. Northington as trustees.

Brothers Sherard and Fred McDonnell spoke in behalf of the Home.

Announcements were made, Hymn No. 142 was sung and W. W. Woollard pronounced the benediction.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3

At 9 a.m., Bishop Dobbs called the Conference to order. "Sweet Hour of Prayer" was sung, the second lesson for the 39th Sunday was read responsively and L. P. Wasson led the Conference in prayer.

The Conference sang hymn 8, after which the minutes of the previous session were read and approved.

Announcements for Sunday's services were made as follows:

Love Feast, conducted by W. W. Woollard.

Preaching at 11 o'clock at Methodist church by Bishop Dobbs, followed by the ordination of deacons.

Baptist church, W. G. Newman; Presbyterian church, E. Nash Broyles; Christian church, M. Johnson; St. James M. E. Church, T. B. Thrower; Aberdeen Christian Church, W. L. Pearson; Pontotoc Methodist Church, C. M. Chapman.

The Conference ordered a memorial service at 3 p.m. Sunday.

An afternoon session was ordered to meet at 2:30 o'clock.

The questions on Probationers, Conference membership and Orders were called, and William Swinton McIlilly was admitted on trial.

H. C. Lewis and M. H. Twitchell were advanced to the class of the second year. H. B. Varner, a student at Emory, was retained in the first year class.

W. D. Smith and K. I. Tucker were advanced to the class of the third year, elected to deacon's orders and received into full connection. J. N. Henson, a college student, was retained in the class of the second year, and O. L. Elliot was elected to local deacon's orders. K. I. Tucker also completed the third and fourth year courses of study, and it was so announced to the Conference.

M. E. Armstrong, G. W. Curtis, J. W. Holliday and T. G. Lowrey were all advanced to the class of the fourth year.

The class of the fourth year, W. F. Howell, T. F. Sartain, E. M. Sharp, E. F. Tucker and R. E. Wasson, having completed the course of study, were all elected to elder's orders.

The Bishop announced that the candidates for the office of elder would be ordained at the close of the evening service, Sunday.

On motion of V. C. Curtis, the Bishop appointed a committee on Entertainment, composed of E. Nash Broyles, J. M. Bradley and J. W. Ward.

Dr. R. M. Allen, of the Board of Church Extension, was presented.

Judge Hugh Clayton read the report of the Board of Lay Activities on Temperance and Social Service, and also a joint report with the Board of Christian Education on Temperance. Pending their adoption, the Conference heard C. C. Coulter, of the Anti-Saloon League.

J. H. Johnson, Conference Treasurer, made his report, which showed a gain of about $5,000 over what was paid to the Conference Treasurer last year.

J. H. Holder read report No. 3 of the Board of Missions. Pending its adoption the Conference heard J. F. Rawls, treasurer of the General Board of Missions.

The presiding elders were called upon to report the condition of the Cause in their fields, and all were optimistic. Every district had made gains financially and numerically. Their reports showed 2,120 additions on profession of faith, that ministerial support was paid almost 100 per cent, and the benevolences averaged between 80 and 100 per cent paid.

After a few words of commendation and exhortation by the Bishop, the Conference voted to make an increase in its pledges for the coming year.

After announcements, the Conference sang Hymn 234 and Brother W. M. McIntosh pronounced the benediction.

Afternoon Session

Conference convened at 2:30 p.m., with singing Hymn 61. H. F. Brooks led in prayer and Hymn 238 was sung.

The reading of minutes was postponed to final session.

W. R. Lott, our Conference Secretary, announced that the increase in Conference collections this year over last was 25 per cent.

A joint paper of the Budget Commission, with the Boards of Missions, Christian Education, Church Extension, and others, was read by A. Y. Brown, which recommended a plan for liquidating the debt on Grenada College, a debt of $7,500 on the Orphans' Home and plans for raising needed funds for Millsaps College. Judge J. G. McGowan and others spoke to the paper. It was adopted as a whole.

Upon his request, Judge McGowan was granted leave of absence for the remaining time of the Conference.

J. J. Baird, for the Board of Church Extension, read a resolution concerning the church enterprise at Oxford, Miss. Dean Malcomb Guest, of "Ole Miss," and Judge McIlroy, of the Circuit Court, spoke to the resolution. It was adopted by a rising vote.

W. L. Robinson read the general report of the Board of Christian Education, which carried the recommendation of R. G. Lord as Executive Extension Secretary, and W. C. Newman as dean of Grenada College. He also read a resolution on correlating the Church colleges in the State. Both papers were adopted.

A. R. Beasley read the report of the Board of Missions, which carried the nominations of R. G. Moore as Missionary Secretary, A. P. Stevens and J. T. Gullet as Conference evangelists.

W. C. Newman, in behalf of 31 admiring young preachers, presented to Dr. J. R. Countiss a handsome bag with Bible and Hymn Book in token of appreciation of his 32 years of service as Conference Secretary.

All other Boards and Committees made their reports.

J. H. Holder offered a resolution that our Conference sessions not begin till after November 1 in the future. It was adopted, and the Bishop promised, so far as he could to conform to the request.

After J. V. Stewart read the report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance, Dr. Countiss offered a resolution that in the future the closing hours of Conference be on Monday, and that Sunday be given only to worship. The resolution carried.

Matters of the Conference Brotherhood and Group Insurance were presented. Officers of the Brotherhood are T. H. Dorsey, President; W. R. Lott Vice President, and J. H. Holder, Secretary-Treasurer.

The Doxology was sung and W. L. Robinson pronounced the Benediction.

FIFTH DAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 3.

Love Feast.—The Conference Love Feast was held at 9:30 a.m., Brother W. W. Woollard presiding. An hour was spent in the exchange of experiences and testimonies interspersed with songs of praise and devotion.

Preaching Hour.—At 11 a.m. a vast congregation was gathered to hear Bishop Dobbs, who preached from Eph. 4th chapter on "The Church, the Body of Christ." Following, the candidates for deacons were ordained.

Memorial Session.—At 3 p.m., the appointed hour, the Conference convened in memorial session. Question 14 was called, "What preachers have died during the year?" Answer, Chaplain J. M. Moose, whose memoir was given by J. M. Bradley, and L. M. Lipscomb, whose memoir was read by W. N. Duncan.

Following the memorial session, Dr. Theodore Copeland preached.

Evening Session.—Conference convened at 7 p.m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. Hymn 252 was sung and E. H. Cunningham led in prayer. The minutes of Saturday's sessions and the memorial session were read and approved. J. E. Stephens made announcements concerning the Church wide Young People's Conference, to be held in Memphis in December. The statistical secretary made his report. L. P. Wasson read the report of the Committee on Courtesies. The class for elders' orders was called to the chancel, and Bishop Dobbs, assisted by the presiding elders, ordained them to the office of elders. They are, W. W. Howell, T. F. Sartain, E. M. Sharp, E. F. Tucker and R. E. Wasson. The selection for the place of meeting for the next session of our Conference was left to the committee on entertainment, namely, E. Nash Broyles, J. M. Bradley and J. W. Ward. The minutes of the evening session were read and approved. J. R. Countiss read the changes in boundaries of charges.

Hymn 315, "How Firm a Foundation," was sung, question 48, "Where are the preachers stationed this year?" was called, and Bishop Dobbs read the appointments, after which the Doxology was sung, and the Benediction was pronounced by Dr. Theodore Copeland, and the Conference stood adjourned, sine die.

CONFERENCE NOTES AND PERSONALS

Pastor-host, C. T. Floyd, and his efficient committees did all that could be desired for the comfort and convenience of the Conference. Amory's hospitality was unbounding and delightful.

One attractive feature was the beautiful floral decoration of the Conference room, provided by the committee on flowers.

The Historical Society held its anniversary on Thursday at 3 p.m. Two historical papers were given, one prepared and read by Mrs. W. L. Underwood, on "Amory Methodism," and the other, a life sketch of E. D. Gilmore, by C. M. Harrison.

Through the generosity and provisions made by Mr. E. D. Gilmore (deceased) and his wife, Amory Methodism maintains two missionaries, Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis, in Africa, supports a Sunday school field worker in Monroe and Itawamba Counties, and helps to finance revivals in the rural sections surrounding Amory.

During the service of the anniversary of the Board of Missions, it was announced that S. V. Wall, a layman of Cleveland, Miss., would serve as treasurer of the W. B. Lewis Hospital Fund, being raised as a special in our Conference.

Fourteen years ago the Conference was held here in Amory, and that was the first session of the North Mississippi Conference that your correspondent reported to the Advocate. He was then new in this Conference, having served only two years, coming from the Mississippi Conference in 1919. It was his pleasure that year to be entertained in the home of Dr. I. P. Burdine. At this session it was our pleasure to be entertained in the same home.

H. P. Lewis claims the largest representation of his family as members of this Conference. His wife and daughter, Mrs. S. E. Ashmore, are lay delegates, and his son, Huntley, and son-in-law, S. E. Ashmore, are members. Another son, Donald, is a member of the Louisville Conference.

The Amory Methodist Choir rendered efficient and appreciative service throughout the session of the Conference. The organist, Mrs. Everett Price, was on hand at every session and service.

The Wasson family is well represented in the ministry. L. P. and J. C. Wasson, brothers, are members of this Conference; another brother, D. R. Wasson, is a member of the St. Louis Conference; a sister, Miss Julia Wasson, is a missionary to China, and a nephew, R. E. Wasson, is a member of this Conference.

We missed the presence of Mrs. R. P. Neblett, who for years has attended the sessions of the Conference; but this year was prevented from coming because of injuries sustained in an auto accident.

Owing to continued illness, Mrs. B. P. Brooks, of Belzoni, the president of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society, was unable to attend. The prayers of the Conference are that she may soon be restored to health.

Brothers in the Conference are: S. E. and S. P. Ashmore, A. W. and W. P. Bailey, G. A. and W. B. Baker, J. B. and M. A. Burns, G. C. and T. E. Gregory, W. M. and W. W. Jones, J. E. and L. C. Lawhon, L. P. and J. C. Wasson. Fathers and sons are: S. A. and A. Y. Brown, E. H. and J. W. Cunningham, W. C. Galceran, Sr., and Jr., H. P. and H. C. Lewis, and J. W. and A. S. Raper.

A vast congregation assembled Sunday morning to hear Bishop Dobbs preach. Fully 1,000 crowded into the auditorium, while others in an adjoining room were able to hear the message over a loud speaker connected to a microphone.

Two of our older brethren, B. P. Fullilove and W. W. Woollard, have been members of the Conference for 49 years. Brother Woollard is the oldest in service on the effective list.

Brethren who have been members over 50 years are: J. J. Brooks, 66 years; J. W. Bell, 62 years; James Porter, 58 years; W. S. Shipman, 55 years; N. G. Augustus, 52 years, and E. H. Rook, 50 years.

REV. A. J. COBURN DIES

Dear Dr. Duren: Rev. A. J. Coburn, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, died here on Wednesday, October 30. You have probably seen an account of his death in the Times-Picayune. I am preparing a brief memoir for the Advocate.

His funeral occurred last Friday morning at 10 o'clock from the church in Ponchatoula. Assisting me in the funeral were A. S. Lutz, L. L. Pickett, Byron Roberts, J. W. Harper, and two Baptist preachers, B. F. Bookter and Hammond Sylvest. I will mail the memoir as soon as I can catch time to prepare it.

H. N. BROWN.

NOTICE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

As the Conference approaches we are seeking the best possible entertainment for the delegates to the Conference. Many have written asking for particular kind of entertainment, and we will be happy to comply with every request as far as it lies in our power. It will be impossible for us to provide entertainment for any other than delegates. We cannot provide hotel accommodations for the delegates, but we will provide nice homes and meals for our delegates. If you are planning to make your own arrangements as to entertainment with relatives or friends, we would appreciate it if you would let the committee know this, that we may make duplicate plans for your entertainment.

Rev. R. V. Fulton, Choudrant, La., serving his fourth year at that place, writes us a good letter of appreciation and encouragement which we value very much.

Mrs. V. C. Taylor, a new subscriber for the Advocate says that she has had several copies of the paper and enjoys it very much. We appreciate this encouraging word from a new friend.

Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Crawford Street, Vicksburg, has received 168 new members into his church this year, and he and his people are out for an equally impressive report on the financial obligations of the year.

Mrs. Robert E. Rogers, Whitfield, Miss., says that she has enjoyed the Advocate very much this year, and that the members of Millsaps Memorial have had a good year under the leadership of Rev. M. L. McCormack, the pastor.

Mrs. E. L. Hadley, Bastrop, La., writes that they are very much pleased with their pastor, Rev. W. H. Giles. She says that he is receiving the co-operation of the entire membership and that they will soon have a church plant free of debt.

The stewards of Ponchatoula Church did a very beautiful and thoughtful thing recently when they had the Advocate sent to a list of people who were not able to subscribe for themselves. The list included an honored superannuate preacher and a preacher's widow.

The editor makes acknowledgment of a much appreciated letter from Rev. George H. Jones of Montrose, Miss., who has been consistently sympathetic and helpful in his attitude throughout the year, and we appreciate the more, therefore, his reassuring words.

Our good friend, Mrs. M. E. Joyce, Jackson, Miss., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for more than fifty years. She says: "I can't get along without it and I hope that it is not discontinued while I live." Such appreciation makes even a hard task pleasant.

The editor and business manager of the Advocate are greatly indebted to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Fraser, of Amory, Miss., for the many kindnesses showered upon them while being entertained in their lovely home during the sessions of the North Mississippi Conference.

Hon. Thomas L. Bailey, of the Mississippi House of Representatives, will be

REV. VICTOR G. CLIFFORD,
Presiding Elder-Host, Mississippi Conference

the toastmaster for the Home Coming banquet at Millsaps College, November 8. Mr. Bailey is an alumnus of the College and the special feature of the day is the gridiron game with Spring Hill College.

The meeting of the Memorial Mercy Home Board, last week, was a most enjoyable occasion. The Home is well out of the shadows of the debt which has been hanging over it, and it was never doing a better work than now. Dr. Snelling will have a splendid report of the work done.

Mr. W. R. McCormack, lay leader of the Corinth, Miss., District has our thanks for a check for $100 on the Advocate debt. The Corinth and the Jackson Districts have paid the amounts assumed in full, and we confidently expect that every obligation will be lifted by the close of the Annual Conference sessions.

Mrs. Vic E. Lampton, Gulfport, Miss., in expressing her delight with the Advocate "gift" says that she has been a reader of the Advocate for many years. Through the years, the Advocate has been made possible by friends who did not leave it, and we appreciate their faithfulness.

Mrs. Olin Ray and children, now living at New Albany, Miss., give the editor an invitation to visit them when it may be possible for him to do so. Mrs. Ray and her husband were at Macon, Miss., when the editor was presiding elder of the Columbus District, and it is very kind of her to remember him in such a gracious manner.

Married—Mr. Thomas McDonnell and Miss Alice Vaughan Weems, October 19, 1935. The groom is a son of Mr. Fred McDonnell of the Orphanage, Jackson, Miss. The bride a daughter of Mr. R. C. Weems, Shubuta, Miss., Dr. D. B. Raulins was the officiating minister. The Advocate extends its good wishes.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, reports that up to October 31, the following 19 congregations in the district had paid their district work assessment in full: Liberty, Fletcher's Chapel, Edwards, Learned, Reeves, Gloster, Union, Pattison, Rocky Springs, Fittler, Grace, Bradley, Greendale, Mt. Olivet, Wesley Chapel, Kingston, Mars Hill, Washington, Natchez Mission, Satartia.

Miss Elizabeth Langford, the efficient educational director of First Church, Monroe, sends us a report of the Standard Training School held recently in that church. Fifty-nine credits were given, with three office credits to follow. In the list of credits received, Columbia led with 19, First Church was second with 18, and Mangham was third with 11. Rev. Virgil D. Morris, W. C. Scott, and W. C. Poole are the pastors respectively.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, NOVEMBER 10

By Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D.

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

The true prophet is set as a watchman to warn and to persuade. It is not in his province to compel or to berate. His responsibility ends with prompt and faithful delivery of the message of God. It is assumed that the wicked persist in their way and perish in their ignorance unless warned by others. It is the duty of the righteous to propagate and disseminate righteousness. If they fail either through indifference or cowardice, the blood of the wicked is on their hands. Warning having been given, each hearer becomes responsible for his own life and destiny. God is no respecter of persons. His attitudes are as unchanging as his attributes—toward man, always love; toward sin, always hatred; toward penitence, always forgiveness. Man's attitude faces always a similar attitude of God—rejection meets rejection, return receives welcome.

Man is not saved by his achievement, but by his attitude toward a saving God.

question is not "Where have you been?" but, "Which way are you going?" Man is as free to change his course after regeneration as before. Destiny is not determined by divine decree but by man's voluntary attitude toward the goodness and mercy of God.

Israel as a nation had been regulated by the law of Moses, while individual life had been neglected. The exile that destroyed the nation but emphasized personal responsibility. Corporate church life is intended to promote, not to supplant personal character and conduct. Effort and exercise produce growth, and the inconvenience and hardships of exile accelerated a proper estimate of individual worth and responsibility in the sight of God. There is no better gospel for our times than that the prophet should faithfully warn and the hearers earnestly heed. "Every one of us shall give an account of himself to God."

Getting throat's moisture glands to work "soothes" coughs away

THE usual cause of a cough is the drying or clogging of moisture glands in your throat and windpipe. When this happens, heavy phlegm collects, irritates. Then you cough. The quick and safe way to relief is by letting Pertussin stimulate those glands to pour out their natural moisture. Sticky phlegm loosens, is easily raised. You have relief!

Over 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in one year, according to Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by American Pharmaceutical Assn.

REV. J. F. CAMPBELL,
Pastor-Host to the Mississippi Conference.

The thief on the cross could not do more than approve in his heart the goodness he saw in Jesus whose mercy he craved and whose companionship he desired. He could do no good thing. He could yearn and pray to be good. That was enough. The gates of Paradise swung wide with opportunity for fulfillment of his aspirations. There is no need to pine away under the guilt of sin and the burden of penalty. God has no pleasure in death or vengeance. Let the dead past bury its dead. "Turn and live" is the message of the prophets, the evangelists, and the Christ.

Both condemnation and salvation are in the present tense. One is not lost by a deficit nor saved by a surplus from yesterday. Neither the righteousness nor the wickedness of the past is remembered in God's accounting of today. The

Syrup of Black-Draught

Easy to Give to Children

Thousands of mothers have found that fretful, ailing youngsters really like to be given Syrup of Black-Draught—and that they can rely on it to relieve children's constipation. It contains an extract of the same dependable, approved medicinal plant that gives the popular, old, well-known powdered Black-Draught its laxative action. The SYRUP, in this form so convenient to give children, helps to straighten out many little upsets due to faulty elimination. Sold in bottles containing five fluid ounces, price 50 cents.

Get Rid of Malaria!

Banish Chills and Fever!

To conquer Malaria, you must do two things. (1) Destroy the infection in the blood. (2) Build up the blood to overcome the effects and to fortify against further attack. There is one medicine that does these two things and that is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic! The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic destroys the malarial infection in the blood while the iron builds up the blood. Thousands of people have conquered Malaria with the aid of Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. In addition to being a noted remedy for Malaria, it is also an excellent tonic of general use. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Even children like it and they can take it safely. For sale by all drug stores. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Mississippi Conference Historical Society has had one of the most notable years in its history. Much has been accomplished in the way of anniversary occasions of individual churches, the placing of marble markers at historical spots, the gathering of biographical information of the ministers of the Conference, the recording of historical events and facts of the years gone by, and the actual writing by Rev. J. B. Cain of the history for several years of the Mississippi Conference, for publication in book form.

The anniversary service held on Saturday night during our last Annual Conference, with feature address by Dr. J. L. Decell on "The Justification of Methodism," was a notable occasion. The anniversary service planned for the approaching session of our Annual Conference should prove to be just as vital,

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

with the feature address to be delivered by an aged minister of another Conference on the ministers of Mississippi Methodism that he has known.

The Historical Society has no funds upon which to operate, except those that it is able to gather from interested persons. At the last Annual Conference a roll of contributing members was inaugurated. This roll is to be continued. One's name is placed upon this roll by the contribution of fifty cents at the anniversary service during the Annual Conference session. These names were placed on this roll on November 18, 1934: Revs. M. M. Black, A. J. Boyles, J. L. Decell, E. E. Emmerich, F. J. Jones, G. H. Jones, O. S. Lewis, W. H. Lewis, J. F. McClellan, L. L. Roberts, W. H. Saunders, J. L. Sells, J. A. Smith, J. T. Weems, J. A. Wells, H. S. Westbrook, D. F. Yeager and H. B. Gilmore (local deacon); and also these of the laity: J. T. Abter, I. O. Brown, J. W. Dement, W. S. Ford, I. O. Brown, J. W. J. K. Sessions, Willis M. Taylor, W. S. F. Tatum and Mrs. W. S. F. Tatum.

It is hoped that at least one hundred names will be added to this roll on Saturday night, November 16, 1935.

GEO. H. JONES, Secretary.

APPRECIATES CHRISTMAS CARDS

I want to say to the readers of the Advocate to be sure and renew your subscription to the paper while you can get the box of Christmas cards.

They so beautifully express the Supreme Gift. I am trusting God that I will always have change enough to keep my Advocate. MRS. W. D. FULTON.

Please accept my thanks for the lovely gift cards.

For the past eighteen years I have been a subscriber to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, sending it as a birthday gift to my mother, Mrs. Ella Durkee. She has always enjoyed it, and now that she is blind my sister reads it to her—from cover to cover—and it means so much to her.

MEMOIR—L. M. LIPSCOMB

Lee McDonald Lipscomb, the son of James Monroe and Jeannette Thompson Lipscomb, was born near Spartanburg, South Carolina, on March 18, 1864, and died in the Baptist Hospital at Jackson, Mississippi, on August 9, 1935. He was buried beside the body of his wife in the beautiful Lakewood Memorial Park cemetery of Jackson, Miss., in which city four of his sons now reside.

In 1872, when the subject of this sketch was eight years of age, his parents moved from South Carolina to Winston County, Miss., and established a home near Noxapater. He had four sisters and four brothers. One of the brothers bore the name of John Wesley Lipscomb.

For three years Lee M. Lipscomb attended Cooper's Institute near Meridian, Miss. After completing the work there, he went to Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., where he took an elective course which included all the English required for the master's degree. In these institutions of learning financial aid was given to him in recognition of the wholesome influence which he exerted over other students. This honor, which was voluntarily and graciously bestowed, bears striking testimony to the excellent character of this good man.

At Rocky Hill Church near Noxapater, Miss., when sixteen years of age, Lee Lipscomb was genuinely converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Then and there he made complete surrender of himself to God. In August of 1885, at old Salem Camp Ground near Ackerman, Miss., he was granted license to preach. He was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference at Macon in 1891, and at this Conference he was ordained local deacon by Bishop E. R. Hendrix. At Columbus in 1893 he was admitted into full connection and was ordained elder by Bishop R. K. Hargrove.

In December, 1893, Lee M. Lipscomb was married to Miss Nannie DuBois of Greensboro, Ala. Seven children blessed this union, all of whom are living today. They are Julian L. Lipscomb of New Orleans, La.; Reid B., Hubert S., Joseph D. and Dr. Lee M. Lipscomb, Jr., all of Jackson, Miss.; W. L. Lipscomb of Greenville, Miss. and Mrs. E. P. Tomlinson of Clarksdale, Miss.

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb served the following appointments: Australia, 1892; Sidon, 1893; Vaiden, 1894-95; Carrollton, 1896-97; Courtland, 1898; Belzoni, 1899; Coldwater, 1900-1901; Senatobia, 1902-03-04; Durant, 1905; Columbus District, 1906-07-08-09; New Albany, 1910-11-12-13; Sardis, 1914; Booneville, 1915; Winona District, 1916-17-18-19; Oxford, 1920-21-22-23; Water Valley, 1924-25-26; Greenville District, 1927-28-29-30; Grenada, 1931-32; Louisville, 1933; Como, 1934-35. At the time of his death he was trustee of Emory University, trustee of the Methodist Orphanage at Jackson, and a member of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He was a delegate from this Conference to the General Conference of 1926 which met in Memphis, Tenn. In every position he rendered the Church faithful service. He won for the Cause and for himself devoted friends.

From the day he was admitted into the Conference, Lee Lipscomb sought the best equipment for his life's work. He read trustworthy book reviews and from these he selected his library. It was not his ambition to own a multitude of books, but to know the books of greatest merit. The principal events of history, the best productions of literature, the fundamental elements of moral philosophy and the essential doctrines of Christianity were familiar to him. It was his custom to hear the famous men of Church and State. When favorably impressed by these men, he would purchase their books

PAIN

It takes more than "just a salve" to draw them out. It takes a "counter-irritant"! And that's what good old Musterole is—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in drawing out the local congestion and pain when rubbed on the sore, aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly to this treatment, and with continued application, relief usually follows.

Even better results than the old-fashioned mustard plaster. Used by millions for 25 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. All druggists. In three strengths: Regular Strength, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. Tested and approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau, No. 4867.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

John 11:42—I knew that Thou hearest me always.

God hears. He is a rewarder of them that believe. We may cast our cares upon the Lord. He careth for us. We may therefore come boldly to a throne of grace.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy
You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor.
Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's
Well-Being to Unknown
Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Bayer Aspirin

How different from the pagan Dieties. God is a Heavenly Father. He hears.

He hears ALWAYS. What a source of strength to know His ear is always attentive to our cry. He never sleeps. He is dependable.

In John 12, we read: "Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour; but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father, glorify Thy name. Then came there a voice from Heaven, saying: 'I have both glorified it and I will glorify it again.'" How quick the answer came. But God hears always. He is not governed by whims and fancies.

Note the certainty of Jesus. "I KNEW that Thou hearest me always." The fact that Christ knew this is a great help to every thoughtful Christian.

Immediately after this statement, Jesus cried out, "Lazarus, come forth." What amazing authority!

Luther, when pressed with work, said: "I have so much to do that I cannot get along without three hours a day praying."

Prayer is the link that connects Heaven with earth. A great part of our time should be spent in maintaining this vital relationship.

D. L. Moody in "Prevailing Prayer" quotes Dr. Guthrie, "The first true sign of spiritual life, prayer, is also the means of maintaining it. Man can as well live physically without breathing, as spiritually without praying. There is a class of animals—the cetaceous, neither fish nor sea-fowl—that inhabits the deep. It is their home. They never leave it for the shore; yet, though swimming beneath the waves and sounding its darkest depths, they have ever and anon to rise to the surface that they may breathe the air. Without that, these monarchs of the deep could not exist in the dense element in which they live, and move, and have their being. And something like what is imposed on them by a physical necessity, the Christian has to do by a spiritual one. It is by ever and anon ascending up to God, by rising through prayer into a loftier, purer region for supplies of Divine grace, that he maintains his spiritual life. Prevent these animals from rising to the surface, and they die for want of breath; prevent the Christian from rising to God, and he dies for want of prayer. "Let me breathe," says a man gasping, "or else I die." "Let me pray," says the Christian, "or else I die."

PRAYER

"As the heart panteth after the water-brooks, so our souls pant after Thee, O God."

We thank Thee Thou dost satisfy our thirst. We thank Thee for the fountains of living waters.

We thank Thee that Thou dost hear Thy children always. In the light of this assurance, we may live victoriously and overcome the world. Yea, we can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth us.

We would live each day in Thy strength. We dare not face life without Thee. We go forth in the sure confidence because of our faith in the goodness of God.

In the name of Christ we commit our all to Thee.

The Chapel Choir

A chorus of sixteen well-trained professional voices, under the direction of John Lewis, well-known baritone, will broadcast hymns from the New Methodist Hymnal each Sunday evening at 5:30, Central Standard Time, over Radio Station WSM, Nashville, Tenn., 650 kilocycles. This program is presented in a very interesting way and one you will appreciate.

We earnestly request our preachers to inform their congregations about this broadcast each Sunday morning.

The first program went on the air Sunday, October 6, and comments from all sections of our Church indicate that it was well received and highly enjoyed.

BISHOP DOBBS VISITS HATTIESBURG DISTRICT

The Hattiesburg District has recently been honored and greatly helped by Bishop Dobbs, who traveled the entire length of the district by automobile and filled three engagements en route.

On Sunday, October 20, at 7 p. m., Bishop Dobbs preached and dedicated the new church at McLain. On Monday, Oct. 21, at 10:45, the Bishop preached and dedicated the church at Petal, which has just been brick-veneered and remodeled. On Tuesday, October 22, at 11 a. m., the Bishop preached at a centennial celebration at Garlandville church.

At each of the above places, the Bishop preached a great sermon to a congregation that packed the church to capacity. Preachers and people from all over the district attended these services and all of us who heard him were challenged and encouraged by his great preaching, gracious manner, and optimistic spirit.

On Monday, following the services at Petal, we had a luncheon at the Forrest Hotel in honor of Bishop Dobbs. This was a very happy occasion and we all enjoyed the fellowship it gave us. There were twenty-one preachers present and at the close of the luncheon, Bishop Dobbs gave us a very inspiring message in which he appealed to us to "Live the life, preach the Word, follow the leadership of the Church, and leave the results to God."

We will never forget Bishop Dobbs' visit among us and hope that we may be privileged to have him again.

Don't Fool Around with a COLD!

A cold is an Internal Infection and Requires Internal Treatment

Every Four Minutes Some One Dies from Pneumonia, Traceable to the "Common Cold!"

DON'T "kid" yourself about a cold. It's nothing to be taken lightly or treated trivially. A cold is an internal infection and unless treated promptly and seriously, it may turn into something worse. According to published reports there is a death every four minutes from pneumonia traceable to the so-called "common cold."

Definite Treatment

A reliable treatment for colds is afforded in Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It is no mere palliative or surface treatment. It gets at a cold in the right way, from the inside!

Working internally, Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine does four things of vital importance in overcoming a cold: First, it opens the bowels. Second, it combats the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Be Sure — Be Safe!

All drug stores sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine in two sizes—35c and 50c. Get a package at the first sign of a cold and be secure in the knowledge that you have taken a dependable treatment.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is the largest selling cold tablet in the world, a fact that attests to its efficacy as well as harmlessness. Let no one tell you he "has something better."

HORNBECK CHARGE

Dear Advocate: May I speak just a word from our charge before the Conference year closes? We have had a good revival in each of the three churches, having as our helpers Brother Pomeroy, Brother Gray and Brother Rogers, our presiding elder. We shall have a goodly number of additions to the church to report. Not many of our members are wealthy, but a few of them have been tithing, and our financial outlook is very good. One of our churches has undergone repairs and received fresh paint, and another is in the process of being fitted with new pews. Attendance at prayer meeting has been unusually good, and the Church schools are alive and functioning according to the Discipline. We went over the top in the quota asked for the Advocate, and we paid our district work in full at the beginning of the year. One very interesting occasion was the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the old historical church at Holly Grove. We are expecting to say at Conference, "A good year, Bishop."

and acquaint himself with their thoughts and methods of achievement. By the time he had reached the prime of life he was the equal of any man among us in the breadth and richness of his knowledge. As an earnest preacher of the Gospel and as a sympathetic pastor he excelled. He did not rely upon human organizations and human appliances for results. Elaborate programs made but little appeal to him. He learned and at the service of his friends.

The home life of this friend was particularly beautiful. It was filled with good cheer, sparkling wit, kindly attentions and numerous deeds of love. His solicitude for his children and his provision for their education were most remarkable. In lofty ideals, Christian example and sacrificial service he has left them a blessed heritage.

The funeral service of Lee M. Lipscomb was held from Galloway Memorial Church in Jackson, Miss., on August 10, 1935. It was conducted by Rev. E. S. Lewis, assisted by Rev. J. W. Ward, Rev. V. C. Curtis, and Rev. R. G. Moore. The beautiful floral offerings and the evident interest of sorrowing friends added impressiveness to this final tribute of love and esteem.

Lee M. Lipscomb has entered into rest, rich in experience, rich in honors, rich in service, and rich in respect and love of his brethren. "No truer soul ever broke the lance in a holy Cause."

loved men, and appealed to them directly and personally. He trusted the power of the Gospel, and convinced others of its effectiveness. He knew the spirit of the Master and he was confident that Jesus would win.

It is especially true that Lee Lipscomb possessed an extraordinary capacity for friendship. Those who were admitted into this inner circle discovered a pure, gentle, constant, affectionate and great heart. It was far from him to abuse a trust or to fail a friend in need. His hand, his heart and his life were wide open to those who loved him. There was no littleness in his nature. His clean life, his rich mind and his pure love were

Gray Hair

Best Remedy is Made
At Home

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy by following this simple recipe: To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, making it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

THE WANT-ADS in New York seem to indicate that times are on the mend in that section. There appeared in one of the dailies recently a want-ad for the purchase of a church. Investigation revealed the fact that it was a bona fide inquiry. A few years ago it was common to see in that section beautiful churches that had been given up, and with great "For Sale" signs on them—a want-ad was superfluous. It appears now that the signs must be down, and they must be discovered through the lure of a want-ad.

THE HUMANITY OF THE MISSIONARY is disclosed in an article which appeared in the Honan Quarterly some time ago. The writer called attention to the fact that last year friends of the missionaries sent fifteen copies of "In the Steps of the Master" as Christmas gifts, and at a previous Christmas the missionaries received many copies of "For Sinners Only." No complaint is made against the books named, but a hunger for something a little more human as well is manifest—a novel, a detective story, anything to break the monotony of the routine thinking which is a part of the missionary's life. Why not?

THE TOTAL OF JEWISH IMMIGRATION to Palestine in 1932 was about nine thousand, but in 1933 it was practically trebled owing to persecutions in Germany. More than eleven thousand Jews entered Palestine in the first six months of 1933 and the stream has continued with increasing volume since. It is said that when Hitler took office, knowing his extreme anti-Semitic policy, the Jews began at once to send their money and their families to Palestine. This is another chapter in the tragic story of a great race and its desperate struggle against disintegration and destruction.

SIR WILFRED GRENFELL, for many years a missionary surgeon and physician in Labrador, is credited with a statement which is full of hope and optimism. He says that there is less of dogma and intellectual religion today, but more of heart religion. He asserted that spiritual things were not spoken of in scientific circles fifty years ago, but now if one wishes to hear the Gospel spoken, the Royal Academy of Science offers such a privilege and opportunity. It would be difficult to say how far this may be true, but it is at least encouraging that such a great man should proclaim it.

IN MALAYA, it is said that the output of crude rubber during the depression was so much in excess of the market demands that vast stores of it were left on the hands of the producers. In this situation, the inventive Malayan turned his surplus to account as material for surfacing roads. Thus the uneducated peoples of this byway of the world seem likely to become the leaders in a new line of scientific and social progress. What we would like to know is, Who invented the rubber bank check?

THE WESLEYAN CONNECTION of Great Britain has an insurance organization of its own which underwrites the fire and accident risks of the Methodists of that body. We do not know the details of the plan, but the indication of the success which it has attained is seen in the fact that the earnings of last year made possible the distribution of $100,000 in dividends to church funds. One-half of the earnings thus returned went to retired ex-Wesleyan ministers.

THE CITY OF DENVER, according to the Religious Telescope, is probably the only city in the United States which employs a full-time chaplain. The chaplain works in connection with the police department, and renders service to the various groups and individuals with whom the city deals in a variety of ways. Whether or not such office might be of real value would depend largely upon the personality and the consecration of the minister who might be designated for the post. A political functionary would be worse than nothing. Priestly functions, though necessary, are by no means all of a Christian ministry.

AMERICAN INDIAN DAY, sponsored by the Indian Council Fire, was celebrated recently in the city of Chicago. It was an occasion as unique as it was spectacular. The celebration was staged in Olson Memorial Rock Garden and the pageant and ceremonies were witnessed by twenty-five thousand people. The representatives of thirteen tribes in full regalia participated and there was a realistic re-enactment of the dances and the peculiar customs of the days when their savage forefathers struck terror to the hearts of defenseless bands upon whom they descended with war whoop and tomahawk. Dr. Henry Roe Cloud, of Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kansas, was the guest of honor.

EDITORIAL

BILLY SUNDAY

Reverend William A. Sunday is dead. For the last forty years he has been the most colorful, spectacular and effective evangelist in America. He has had many imitators, but he will have no successor. In style and personality he was unique, and his phenomenal success in the evangelistic field will probably cause his name to be recorded with that of Moody, Finney, and others of that line. Billy Sunday may not have coined the expression, "The sawdust trail," but he made it a classic in evangelistic terminology. His entire career was not less interesting and spectacular than was his evangelism. His first bid for fame was as an outfielder in the teams of the National League in baseball. As an evangelist, we heard him call the roll of the Chicago Club with which he played last, and in dramatic fashion tell the tragic story of their careers one by one. After his conversion he was an assistant "Y" secretary for five years. Then he was for seven years a lay evangelist. He was ordained a minister in the Presbyterian Church in 1903, but continued in the evangelistic field to the end of his life. His life and work will occupy an important place in the evangelism of the past half century.

A DISILLUSIONED ELDER

"I am having my first taste of trying to get every preacher a better place and every place a better preacher. How that is to be done I do not as yet know. Somehow the better preachers and better places do not come out just right. Then, too, I don't get the same report from preacher and places. When you listen to the preachers, they are all too big for their present job and would be in better places had they not been discriminated against. But when you hear from the home folks, you get an entirely different story. I wish every preacher could see himself as the congregation sees him and every congregation could realize how they look through the preacher's eyes. It would be painful to both for awhile, but in the long run would do much good. I have been thinking of Paul's statement when he said, 'When I became a man, I put away childish things.' Not everyone has done that. Many still think and act like little children. The fact is, I have been playing the roll of pacifier to so many people this year that I feel like a nurse maid."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The recent session of the North Mississippi Conference was marked by an unusual optimism and good feeling, and in every way presented an encouraging outlook. A new confidence in the outlook of the Church in that section was evident. The payments for benevolences were well in advance of what they have been for a number of years—twenty-five per cent according to a statement made on the floor of the Conference. Very naturally the improved financial situation was reflected in the attitude of the preachers and people toward the problems and enterprises of the Church in that important area. The list of appointments shows that there was no wide-spread dissatisfaction on the part of preachers and people, for the number of changes seem to have reached almost a minimum. So far as we have heard there was pretty general satisfaction with the assignments and with the episcopal administration of Bishop Dobbs. We trust that the good feeling now manifest may be the prophecy of a really great year for every pastor and pastorate of the Conference.

CHRISTMAS

This beautiful booklet has for its sub-title, "An American Annual of Christmas Literature and Art," is edited by Randolph E. Hangan, and is published by Augsburg Publishing House, Minneapolis. We have never seen a more tastefully arranged and beautifully illustrated Christmas booklet. The Christmas story and a wide selection of Christmas literature are included in a seventy-page volume about 12x14 inches. It is impossible to describe the richness of color-tone in the illustrations, or the beauty of the arrangement and execution. It must be seen to be appreciated.

THE LEGION OF THE LOST

That brilliant essayist and Australian preacher, Dr. F. W. Boreham, whose books are well known throughout the English-speaking world, tells the story of how he chanced to hear the song, "The Legion of the Lost," over the radio one night when he was getting ready to retire. He went to bed to be haunted by thoughts of the wider spiritual problem which it suggested, and with his power of imagination and his no less amazing felicity of speech he translated his thought and emotions for his world-wide forum of friends in the following paragraphs which appeared in the Australian Christian World:

"But almost as soon as I fell asleep, I beheld that spectral host again! Their ghostly ranks went marching through my dreams. But, in my dreams, I thought I saw their progress arrested. A thorn-crowned Figure appeared before them, with outstretched arms, barring their advance.

"We're the Legion of the Lost," they shouted.

"The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost!" he proclaimed. And, taking His place at the head of the Legion, He became their Leader and their Lord!

"I should love to preach a sermon on this string of monosyllables and to have it broadcast. Yet I know that, if I did, I should feel hampered by the pitiful limitations of the wavelength. I should want a wavelength that would bring India, China and Africa within my reach, a wavelength that would enable me to fling my words back to the men of the Ice Age and the Iron Age and the Stone Age. I should require a wavelength that would permit me to address the subjects of the Pharaohs and the Ptolemys and the Caesars; I should be dissatisfied with any wavelength that excluded from my audience the people of the thirtieth century and the fortieth and fiftieth; I should feel cribbed and cabined and confined unless I could hurl my message to the whole boundless constituency of the boundless Savior. I should like them all to know what the Child of the Continents has to say to the children of the continents, what the Son of the Ages has to say to the sons of the ages; what the Son of Man has to say to man. I should want to tell all the world and all the ages that the Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost."

RUSSIAN COMMUNISM

In the October issue of The Army Chaplain is a statement of conditions for which the Soviet government of Russia appears to be responsible. The statistics quoted were gathered by Henri Bero, a French socialist, and they appear to have been first published in World Dominion, London, for January, 1935. Bero's figures of the known dead are as follows: "28 bishops and higher clergy; 6,778 priests; 6,585 school teachers; 8,000 doctors; 51,850 army officers; 200,850 policemen and other officials; and 11,488,520 peasants and artisans. These make the staggering total of 11,726,746. Nearly two million more dead than the total killed in the World War." It is alleged that the social system which is responsible for this unparalleled chapter of political murder and rapacious cruelty, is being propagated through the educational system of this country. We do not know to what extent this charge may be true and we do not wish to be a party to casting suspicion upon any worthy institution or profession; but, if a tithe of what is alleged against Communism in Russia be true, it is certainly sufficient to arouse the citizenship of America to the peril of such an insidious and wretched doctrine. The American people are too prone to fall for terms which appear to compliment their intelligence, such as "broadminded," "liberal" and "stimulating;" but no good citizen can afford to be deceived by the specious phrases of such a dangerous political philosophy as Communism is reputed to be. Neither can any parent afford to be indifferent to the social ideals and the political philosophy that may be taught his boy or girl in the college to which he or she may be sent. The atmosphere of social thinking at the present time is calculated to promote even the most dangerous political heresy and the wildest and most fanatical social program. It is, therefore, a time which demands sober, calculating, and Christian thinking and attitudes toward government, social policy and educational ideals.

TO OUR CONTRIBUTORS

To those who have contributed material for publication, the editor wishes to say that it is his purpose to use all that he can possibly find space for at the earliest possible moment. At this season there are many things that cannot wait and many others are of such a nature as that they must have preference. We have some matter in type which has been crowded out of the last two issues and we have enough material on hand for two issues of the paper. The next two issues will be taken up with Conference proceedings and announcements. So please be lenient with us. All memoirs and obituaries will be published ultimately, and we are doing our best to handle the material in hand to the best advantage and with fairness to all.

ANCIENT VICES AND ANTIQUATED VIRTUES

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

Moral law is as ancient and unchangeable as the Moral Ruler of the universe from whom it issued.

We cannot think of a God older than law; for that would be a lawless Deity. Nor can we think of a law older than God; for that would mean a God less than eternal.

Since the moral law is old and unalterable, we may look back as far as human eye can see without discovering any vice or any virtue which is not known now. Ancient vices and the old virtues are quite at home in our own times; and their features are very like all that has gone before.

St. John enumerates as the sources of sin in the earth "the lust of the flesh" the lust of the eye, and the pride of life." And all these sources of evil are manifested in the original sin of Adam and Eve in Paradise. The temptation to that sin sprang when the woman saw that the fruit of the forbidden tree was good for food, pleasant to the eye, and to be desired to make one wise.

As the centuries have unfolded after the sin of our first parents, the same elements of good and evil have been manifested.

Human nature is unchanged although its manifestations are varied. When Lot parted with the precious companionship of Abraham and chose the cities of the plains, he was attracted by the same overestimate of the things of the flesh and underestimate of the things of the spirit. That ancient crime of the nephew of Abraham culminated in the deepest distress and most horrible destruction; for then as now, "the wages of sin is death."

The most deceitful of all sins is covetousness; for it seems to appeal to every element in human nature which responds to evil.

Achan brought disgrace and death to himself as well as defeat to Israel by this sin. Confessing it, he said that he saw the spoils he took unlawfully, then coveted them and took them. In like manner the primitive church met its first defeat when Ananias and Sapphira were guilty of greed which was followed by falsehood and death.

These ancient sins are prevalent in our day, especially the sin of covetousness. The immense resources of the American people are a constant allurements to greed and selfishness.

But in so far as we observe these ancient evils, we discover here and there virtues of the olden times which are repeated in our day. There is a fearful prevalence of greed; but there is also an abundance of goodness. If most of our people grasp at wealth there are not a few who rejoice in using their means for the achievement of good. There is no parallel in the history of the world of the immense volume of American philanthropy. Such a manifestation of goodness ought to inspire even greater measures of benevolence; and doubtless such will be the case.

And so the ancient evils and antiquated virtues will grow side by side as long as the earth continues. So the Master taught by the Parable of the Tares, when he said of the fruit of the good seed and the fruit of the tares: "Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn." (Mat. 13:30).

There is a fond vision that eventually the whole world will be filled with good only; but this view finds no justification in either reason or revelation.

The ancient virtues will be tried always by the conditions of the mixed world, and they can only be maintained by resolute opposition to evil. Wherefore the Scriptures exhort us that we "Live not with the multitude to do evil."

And we are told also that when iniquity abounds, the love of many will wax cold. (Mat. 24:12.)

Modern virtues, just as was the case with ancient virtues, must struggle against the evil with which it co-exists.

Some people imagine that if they had better surroundings their lives would be better; but this is a delusion and a snare. Among the worst surroundings of Babylon, Israel and the Hebrews culminated faithful even unto death; and amidst the blessings of Paradise, Adam and Eve fell into sin. Neither virtue nor vice arise from outside circumstances but from inward tendencies to evil or good.

One of the fatal dangers of our time is the assumption that if we can create a good social order, we shall make men good. Whereas the only way to bring to pass a good social order is the conversion of individual souls and the leading of individual hearts.

Jesus whispered social disorder the better end of His little company of followers. "Ye are the salt of the earth," He said and "Ye are the light of the world." That little company did operate as leaven salt and did shine with heavenly light and by consequence quence their bad surroundings were vastly improved, and the leaven of their lives affected for good the whole lump of the Roman empire in the first century.

We need to emulate the example and confidence of these early Christians. Not for one instant did they think the bulky and well entrenched evils around them were unconquerable. By the existence of purity of their lives affecting it, eventually they turned the world upside down, which had been before their coming wrong-side up.

In like manner, Martin Luther led the Reformation and drew to him a group of men who were able to change the face of Europe in their day.

After the same manner John Knox purged Scotland of many evils and planted, in the age of Queen Mary, virtues that have been multiplied and continued to the present time.

In no past age have the good people supposed that they might postpone their goodness until surrounding conditions were more friendly to virtue. They felt that they were soldiers of the Kingdom of Heaven, and were not to be intimidated by the hosts of evil with which they had to contend.

What our times call for is a revival of the antiquated and courageous virtues of the past. As those virtues conquered ancient vices similar goodness will be invincible in our day.

Emerson wisely tells us that virtue is born into a state of war and that the good man must be a heroic soldier. He continues, saying: "I see not any road of perfect peace, which a man can walk but to take counsel of his own bosom. Let him quit too much association, let him go home much, and establish himself in those courses he approves. The unremitting retention of simple and high sentiments in obscure duties, is hardening the character to that temper which will work with honor, if need be, in the tumult, or on the scaffold. Whatever outrages have happened to men, may befall a man again: and very easily in a republic, if there appear any signs of a decay in religion."

NOTICE, LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE

Rev. Jas. B. Grambling, chairman, has worked out a greatly reduced round trip rate on the Missouri Pacific provided that a party of seventy-five can be secured from the state. The rate will be $7.90 round trip from any point from New Orleans to the Arkansas line. The Lake Charles delegation can join the party at Alexandria paying a small holiday rate to and from Alexandria to Lake Charles which will still be a saving of about $3.50. The Shreveport delegation can join the party at Monroe with a similar holiday rate to Monroe. Three reclining chair cars for private use of the Louisiana delegation will be provided. To secure this rate seventy-five fares must be paid in by December 15, to Rev. Mr. Grambling. The Chisca Hotel will be Louisiana headquarters, and the various district directors will send their reservations for rooms direct to the manager, Mr. J. W. Scott, marking them Louisiana Delegation. Instruction sheets will be mailed to the district directors within the next few days.

CHANGES IN NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE APPOINTMENTS

Dear Advocate: Since Conference it became necessary to make the following changes in appointments: Take S. M. Butts from Guntown and place him at Belmont; take E. M. Shaw from Belmont and place him at Houlika; take J. V. Stewart from Houlika and place him at Guntown. A wire from Bishop Dobbs confirms this readjustment.

NOTICE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

Class of the First Year.

The class of the first year is called to meet the committee at First Church, New Orleans, La., Wednesday, November 20, 1935, at 3 p.m.

L. W. CAIN, Chairman.

the House appear to have been approximately fifty thousand dollars in excess of the liquid assets, and that fact greatly disturbed the minds of the delegates. The Conference severed the connection with various Advocates and turned them over to become Conference enterprises, both as respects their service and support. It also launched upon a scheme of depositories for the sale of the books and the literature of the Church, and these depositories were to be promoted and supervised by a financial agent who would travel from Conference to Conference in that interest.

A controversy arose over the question of the method for raising the money for the support of the Bishops. Various methods were proposed and voted down. As a final solution of the problem, it was voted to place seventy per cent of the levy on the Conferences and the remaining thirty per cent on the Board of Missions. The total amount apportioned to the Conferences was $6,775, of which $700, the largest apportionment, was placed upon the Alabama Conference, and Louisiana was apportioned only $250 of that amount. This means that the sum of $9,678.57 annually was levied for the travel and keep of the six active bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

A matter of painful interest at this Conference, was the complaints which were lodged against the official administration of Bishop John Early, by seven annual Conferences of the connection. He was charged with being abrupt, discourteous, impatient and sometimes seemingly overbearing. His age and long service to the Church were factors in his favor, but he was finally required to give assurance of amendment before his character was passed. It developed afterward that his faults were not so easily cured as was hoped. In 1860 he raised a furor in the North Carolina Conference, the staunchest friends of the man and his administration, over the appointment of a presiding elder pro tem for Dr. C. F. Deems who went abroad for a short while. By a vote of 65 to 59, New Orleans was selected for the General Conference of 1862—a Conference destined never to convene, for Farragut's fleet having run the gauntlet of the Confederate batteries, New Orleans was in the hands of the enemy.

The Church, South, began the new quadrennium with more than five hundred thousand white members and probationers, including the ministers, and with two hundred thousand colored members and probationers. According to the report of the Missionary Society of the Alabama Conference for 1859, 33 of the 51 missions maintained were for colored people, and the same interest in missions to the slaves prevailed throughout the great slaveholding section of the South. These facts show the aggressiveness of the Methodism of the South, and they reveal its fidelity to the task which was peculiarly its own. The iniquities of slavery, as an institution, did not destroy the conscience of the Southern Methodist Church, neither did the bitter controversies between the sections cause a reaction against the spiritual development of the Negro race.

During the first two years following the General Conference of 1858, there was a gain of approximately forty thousand in the membership of the Church, and the missionary and benevolent interests were well supported. But the continued anti-slavery agitation produced a feeling of economic and social insecurity, and there was an atmosphere of political uncertainty throughout the nation, which militated against every form of religious activity. The year 1860, witnessed the most heated political campaign in the history of American presidential elections. Slavery and abolition were discussed until the whole country was in a commotion; and when Abraham Lincoln was elected to the Presidency over Stephen A. Douglass, John C. Breckinridge and John Bell, it created an excitement at the South unparalleled in its history. The Southern people felt certain that slavery was doomed and with its destruction would go the doctrine of "states rights." This situation resulted in the holding of mass meetings all over the South, an attitude and spirit of resistance, and the long and bloody struggle from 1861 to 1865.

The fall of Fort Donaldson early in 1862, opened a gateway for the invasion of the central South, the dismemberment of the territory of Southern Methodism, and the introduction of chaos and confusion into the program and work of the Church. The exhaustion of the resources of the South in the maintenance of the defending armies strained every support of its economic life, and the ruthless burning and sacking by Sherman's invading army produced a condition of economic collapse in which every institution, civic, social and religious, shared. The Annual Conferences met under great difficulty and in many instances the Bishops were not able to get to the seat of the Conferences and a presiding officer had to be chosen from the body. In that way the organization was kept intact, but progress was altogether out of the question. In addition to all these things, there must be added the disrupting influence of war upon the social and religious life of the people. The preachers found plenty to keep them busy in the homes where war had brought sorrow and suffering, and many of them gave themselves to ministering to the army in the field. They preached and taught the soldiers in the camps and they ministered to those who filled the crude and hastily arranged field hospitals.

In all probability, the least disturbed section of the Church was around Richmond, Virginia. It was the capital of the Confederacy and was the objective of the enemy armies, and was, therefore, the center of the main theater of war; but every resource of the South was used for its defence; for the capital must be maintained. It suffered the distractions incident to war, but there were no distractions incident to capitulations and capture until the end of the war was in sight. The records show that while the Church as a whole lost one-fifth of its membership during the struggle, the city of Richmond maintained a reduced but steady increase. For the decade in which the war occurred, Methodism in the city of Richmond gained 29.93 per cent, against less than one-half of one per cent for the entire Church. Such was the catastrophe which befell American Methodism in the middle of the years, and such the tragic story of the expunging of the practice and political sanction of American slavery. The nation, North and South, lost the flower of its young manhood—the hope and sinew of its tomorrow, always the pawn of war. More lamentable still, was the loss of that spirit of unity and fraternity in which the nation was born. Estranged brothers of a common blood, the ecclesiastical descendants of the Wesleys, purchased possessions of the Son of God, after three-quarters of a century of formal peace, we nurse our scars, we cherish our reservations, and we refuse to put away the badges of our disunion.

CHAPTER XI

AFTER APPOMATTOX

Following the surrender of the Southern armies in April, 1865, there was a period of confusion and depression due to the return of the worn and beaten troops who had been paroled, a more disheartening effort to reorganize the social and industrial life of the ruined South, and with it all a program of political reconstruction as short-sighted and selfish as it was vindictive and ruthless. The enfranchisement of the Negro and the misguided zeal of the victors who sought to humiliate the South by placing the slave over his former master, and the publicity given to the political addresses, called prayers, of Senator Hiram Revels of Mississippi, who was styled "Bishop of the Senate," created racial antagonisms in the South which the Negro has not even yet been able to live down, and the forces of righteousness among the white people have not been sufficient to conquer, nor always to hold in check. In the city of New Orleans, the Picayune of August 28, 1867, reported that under the regime of Sheridan, eight of the new Board of Education in the city were colored. Throughout the South, the Negro, for no fault of his, was thrust into places for which he had no qualification whatever and which, in the very nature of the case, he would be forced to relinquish. It is not necessary to go further into the harrowing chapter of a political tyranny which no church could hope to cope with or control.

There was a phase, however, for which the Church was more directly responsible. We refer to the continued occupation of the churches and pulpits of the South under a military order of the Secretary of War. An interesting side light upon the feeling which developed in New Orleans, is furnished by the fact that Dr. John C. Keener, afterward Bishop, as president of the Louisiana Legal Conference, was compelled to sign a release, by which both the Government and the Methodist Episcopal Church were to be held harmless as to rentals and the abuse of the properties taken over by Bishop Ames under the order of Secretary Stanton. The correspondence was signed by Wickham Hoffman, by order of General E. R. S. Canby, of the Federal army, and by John C. Keener on behalf of the Louisiana Conference; the four documents bear dates of November 15, 18, and the last two November 20, 1865; and they name specifically the Government and the Methodist Episcopal Church. As will be seen, this correspondence occurred less than five months before the assembling of the General Conference of the disorganized, but unconquered forces of Southern Methodism. These are not pleasant facts to recall, but they are matters of history and that is a sufficient apology for their introduction here.

In the summer of 1865, several months after the disbanding of the Confederate armies, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met at Columbus, Georgia, issued an address to the Church, and summoned the General Conference to meet at New Orleans in April, 1866. During the progress of the war, the white membership of the Southern Church suffered a loss of 113,000, and as a result of the war, the colored membership was rapidly disintegrating. The contributions for missions increased sixty per cent from 1860 to 1864, but the money of the South was valueless, and an impoverished Church was left to wrestle with a stupendous missionary debt. The same story was true of the Publishing House which had been wrecked by army use and abuse. On March 8, 1871, Dr. A. H. Redford, the Publishing Agent, reported to the Baltimore Conference at Salem, Virginia, that at the close of the war, he had gone to New York and Philadelphia and had found the creditors of the House willing to settle for twenty-five cents on the dollar, but that the Publishing House had refused to compromise and had paid its obligations in full. These things may be taken as fair examples of the condition which prevailed throughout the Church, South; and they indicate the task to which the delegates must address themselves when they should gather at New Orleans.

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. Alvin P. Smith, Simsboro, La., reports that his work is in good shape and that he hopes to report everything in full at Conference, but that much remains to be done along that line.

Miss Florence Phillips, Opelousas, La., has our thanks for gracious assurances as to the Advocate. We hope to make the paper more worth while to every reader and friend, both new and old.

Chaplain W. N. Thomas of the U. S. Navy and a member of the Mississippi Conference, says: "Being so far away, . . . the Advocate is doubly welcomed." He is stationed at Annapolis, Maryland.

Rev. J. B. Cain places us in his debt through his fidelity to our cause in his charge. He sends us a half-years subscriptions in order that the expiration dates may be changed from fall to spring.

The report of the Treasurer of the North Mississippi Conference shows a total of $43,443.79 for Conference and General work, $237.30 for Golden Cross, and $380.50 for entertainment." Grand total $44,061.59.

Prof. E. H. Rolston, Director of the Music Department of Centenary College, is announced as the new choir director of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, and Mr. Morris Thompson continues as organist of the church.

Rev. G. A. Morgan, recently transferred back to the Louisiana Conference, writes that Jonesboro will report "in full" on its finances, and that the church property has been cleared of every dollar of indebtedness against it. There have been fifty additions to the church this year.

We have an appreciated letter from Mrs. W. J. Dpty, Goodman, Miss., to whose father we sent a box of Christmas cards. She tells us that her father went to Heaven last May and that they decided to continue the paper he so much loved in his name—a tender tribute to a sainted father.

Rev. Alonzo Early sends us the report of the marriage of Miss Edith McLennan and Mr. Lloyd Williams, which happy event was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage in Elizabeth, La., October 24, Rev. Alonzo Early officiating. The bride and groom are at home in Overton, Tex., since November 1.

Mrs. Alice W. Hearn, Meridian, Miss., has our thanks for a copy of the poem, "Reading the Appointments." We regret that it is too long for insertion in our columns. We returned the poem, and the person interested in finding it can reach Mrs. Hearn at Box 403, Meridian, Miss.

Miss Fannie Burney, Ebenezer, Miss., says that the Advocate has been coming to her home for more than forty years, and that since her father and mother have gone to Heaven, it seems to be doubly dear to her. We appreciate her encouraging words as to the value of the paper.

Noel Memorial Church, under the aggressive leadership of Dr. L. L. Cowen, is already projecting the work for another year. A letter containing a statement of the budget for the year and a pledge card have been sent out as a preparation for the pledge period which begins December 1.

The editor makes acknowledgment of an appreciated note from Mrs. Josie Johnson of Jackson, Miss., whom we met at her sister's home in Atlanta, Ga., some years ago. She has not been strong for a long while and we pray that the blessings of the divine presence may rest upon her in a manner suited to her need.

Rev. Floyd C. Lewis reports benevolences in full on Mayersville, Miss., charge. Congratulations.

Rev. Geo. Fox, who is reported to be in great favor at Bonita, La., writes us an encouraging word touching the future of the Advocate. Thank you.

SHUBUTA, MISS.

Dear Dr. Duren: (We had a good day at our church Sunday. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Weems who live in Shubuta gave to our church 125 copies of the New Methodist Hymnal in the music edition in memory of their parents who were so faithful and loyal to the church. These books were dedicated at our morning worship service.

In every way we have had a good year's work here. We have had a substantial increase in the membership of the church, the program of the church has been carried out, a wonderful spirit prevails, and we shall report "everything paid in full."

I sincerely trust you are encouraged with the outlook for the Advocate.

Respectfully yours,

CLYDE H. GUNN.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, LA.

Dear Dr. Duren: We have just closed a most successful revival in our Lake Providence, La. church. Rev. Ralph E. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson of Nashville, Tenn., were with us for two weeks. They had charge of the children's and young people's work and the music. It goes without saying that this part of the work was well taken care of. I have never had a man who put himself more wholeheartedly into his work than did Brother Johnson. He captured the children and young people from the start and held them till he left in his car this Tuesday morning. His music was of the highest type and the presentation of our (new) hymnal was so complete.

Our average attendance of children in the afternoon meetings was about 130 and the young people for their 6.30 p. m. service each evening averaged about 60 and these meetings ran for two weeks. Think of holding this number for so long a time and they were all sorry when we closed.

I will receive perhaps about twenty-five members into the church this Sunday. Our congregation is lifted up and we have all received a blessing.

The climax was reached Monday night around the banquet table with sixty young people and twelve adult workers with them.

Will see you at Conference on November 20.

D. B. BODDIE, Pastor.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

Mrs. R. E. Smith, Conference director of Spiritual Life sends the following practical suggestions for use of Spiritual Life groups in the local auxiliaries:

"The work of our Spiritual Life groups must not be overlooked in the rush of the closing year. At this season, there are so many 'high occasions,' when it will be easy to guide the thinking of our auxiliary members as well as that of the women of the entire church.

"First, there is the Week of Prayer in which a definite effort should be made to get every woman to participate, and a time given to meditation on the meaning of prayer. It is hoped that the beautiful program prepared will be carried out as far as possible.

"Armistice Day offers an opportunity for special prayer for world peace. Thanksgiving and its 'harvest home' makes its own appeal and should be made a day of high spiritual significance. Christmas may be rescued from the commercial interests and be made a season of rich and beautiful symbolism. Especially should the home endeavor to create a holy and joyous atmosphere.

"The Upper Room,' which has become so well known and so helpful this year, will be a natural and easy thing to promote. It sells for five cents and can be ordered from the Publishing House. The last edition went into the hundreds of thousands.

"Perhaps the Spiritual Life groups could do better than endeavor to create a more worshipful atmosphere in the church services. A neat placard might be placed in the entrance of the church, bearing the word, 'Silence' or 'A Worship Service is Going On,' or 'Silence—Let Us Make Our Father's House a House of Prayer,' or something similar. The members might agree to set a good example. Remember, 'What you are speaks so loud I can not hear what you say.'

"A bulletin board, containing the name of a fine devotional book, might attract attention and do good. The church literature might also be given some publicity on this board, and a careful reading of it urged. The committee might ask the preacher to use some splendid new hymn for a whole month or until the congregation learned it.

"This fall, the 400th anniversary of the English Bible, will be celebrated everywhere, and it would be fitting for the committee to encourage at this time the study of the Bible and its history. Interesting material may be ordered from The American Bible Society, Dallas, Texas. A card of inquiry will bring a complete list of all available materials.

"Write to your Spiritual Life leader for further help, if necessary. The sky is full of clouds and it behooves our Church to tighten its grasp upon spiritual things, through study, meditation and prayer, and to practice the principles of Christ in our daily living.

"A new leaflet, 'Spiritual Life and Message Movement,' containing suggestions for the spiritual life groups, may be had by writing to Department of Education and Promotion, Woman's Section, Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn. The price is ten cents."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The following letter, written to our Conference president, contains timely information for all of us:

Nashville, Tenn.
P. O. Box 510,
October 25, 1935.

My dear Mrs. Cottrell:

This letter attempts to catch up some loose ends that the summer's work omitted and to add a few suggestions that reports and letters have brought to our attention.

Please bear in mind that presenting Christian Stewardship is not all that is expected in order for a society to be efficient; but a stewardship study is required, and it is a part of the Bible study program. Two books are found in Group

1, and on pages 22 and 28 of the handbook directions are given for this part of the work. Conference and district officers will need to do a great deal of cultivation and exercise patience to re-habituate the auxiliary women. Some of the Bible study books previously listed and which societies have never used, such as Standard Training School texts, are acceptable when thoroughly done by an auxiliary. A few have asked if they may study Sledd's "Life of Christ." Of course, if they study it. The difficulty has been that the leader has a book and lectures; so we have tried to provide in the Christian Living Series cheap books so all can have one. I am hoping that Dr. Harrell will be able to give us the first of the new Devotional studies soon; but ask societies to bear with us and announcement will be made when one is ready.

"New Days In Latin America" is out of print. I am sorry, but please advise substituting "Latin American Backgrounds" by Hulbert in its place. That is an excellent book for reference with Council classes, and if the "Quest for Gold and God" is used with it and all requirements are met, that may be the text for a Council class, though Mackay's book is better for adults. Please remind the classes that "Women Under the Southern Cross" is not for a Council class. Will you urge those societies who are applying for Special Council Recognition to make out reports carefully and neatly and preferably with pen? Some I find trouble in deciphering. Please do not request special favors for societies. That is but one way of evading the standard. There is moral and ethical, as well as educational, value in training a group not to desire favors in order to receive Special Council Recognition, when they realize they have not fully measured up to the standard. This does not mean that we shall not recognize the spirit of the law even at the expense of the letter; but I am hoping conference superintendents can gradually succeed in giving instruction so that societies will grow in an intelligent understanding of all requirements. We are sorry report blanks failed to reach the conference superintendents of study last quarter. Remember to add the names of books being used, including Bible study when they are reported to you.

Large popular classes with small numbers from several societies may not be the best way to promote mission study in those several societies unless the six (which should become 25%), have a class for the other members of the society after they have received such help. A regular normal class made up of study leaders is an excellent way to make the Council classes more effective. Watch these city-wide classes to see that they are not interfering with a class in each of the societies represented and be urging larger representation than six from larger societies.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church, Tupelo, Miss., chose as its book on Missions for 1935, "That Other America," by Dr. MacKay. For some time the Society has not shown sufficient interest in Missions, so this year it was decided a new plan would be offered in an attempt to create enthusiasm for this phase of the work. Instead of taking up the study in separate circles as in the past, the entire organization was to come together for an all day program at the church. Early in the summer books were ordered and reading was begun. Women were urged to collect all pictures and interesting information from any possible source. September 23, was set as the date for the meeting. A month before the meeting, in order to create interest, every woman was asked to draw and color a map of Latin America, study and be prepared at her circle meeting to give a brief report on one of the twenty Latin American republics and make a 3x5 inch flag of that particular country. Each circle was asked to come to the conference as one of the Latin American countries and sit in a group under the standard and colors of that particular country. This worked wonders. Every circle reported one of the very best meetings of the year. On every side enthusiasm was being manifested, so that when the time arrived for the all day program, the women were on tip toe for the meeting.

Advance committees had everything in readiness for the morning of Monday, September 23. As the delegates entered the vestibules of the church they caught the first breath of Latin American atmosphere. On the walls were the beautiful colored maps of Latin America and the brilliant flags of its twenty republics, made by the ladies of the auxiliary. By the doors sat Indian women to register each guest.

As the delegates entered the church the atmosphere deepened. The auditorium was aglow with brilliant color—red, white and blue decorations, flags, banners in lovely Spanish costume. There could not have been a more beautiful setting.

At 10 o'clock the program opened with a song, "Come Thou Almighty King," followed by prayer. An ex-missionary to Mexico, in lovely Spanish costume, gave the sixth chapter of Isaiah as a devotion-al, showing very clearly that if the Church is to save the world, it must catch the vision Isaiah had. A lad in Mexican costume re-emphasized this inspiring message in song.

A resume of Dr. Mackay's life and the introduction to the book was most entertainingly and interestingly given through an impersonation of Dr. MacKay.

Chapter I, "This America and That Other," was given as a lecture—a graphic word picture being given of the likenesses and differences of the two Americas. A most beautiful and colorful tableau closed this chapter when, as the conference stood and sang, "America the Beautiful," the two Americans, carrying large flags of their nations, met at the altar, the Church, in spotless white and carrying the Christian flag, joined them, bidding them move forward under the banner of Christ—one in spirit, one in fellowship, one in love. As the three stood united, the conference softly sang "O Love That Will Not Let Us Go."

Chapter II, "Latin American Peaks and Caverns," was presented as a lecture giving an appreciation of the beauties of the physical peaks and revealing the finest and best in the character of Latin American peoples as well as unveiling the dark and dangerous caverns, symbolic of the evils in the land and showing the great need of Christianity.

SHUBUTA, MISS.

On November 7, 1935 Shubuta Church had paid the benevolences in full. With one more collection yet to be taken at the present writing, November 7, we have only $75.00 yet to be raised, all of which will be paid by November 10. This is much in excess of the amount paid last year, and is due to the effort of our new pastor, Rev. Clyde Goss, our board of stewards and the method adopted for securing the collections. The envelope system has been adopted, weekly collections are taken at the church, and many of the members of the church like and as high as twenty-five per cent a paid. Shubuta Church is poorer than ever before, and yet pays more in proportion to church membership. We are expecting to meet you at the opening of the Conference at Laurel.

For Bad Winter Coughs, Mix This Remedy Yourself

Saves Good Money! No Cooking!

If you want the best cough remedy that money can buy, mix it at home. It costs very little, yet it's the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of distressing coughs, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup, to make a full pint. To make syrup, use 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, and stir a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money—a real family supply. Keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, helps clear the air passages, and thus cures a bad cough in a hurry.

Pinex is a compound of Norway Pine, in concentrated form, famous for its effect in stopping coughs quickly. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, NOVEMBER 17.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY

Judah had been conquered and her people made captive by Babylon. Babylon had become subject to Persia, whose far-seeing king, Cyrus, sought to cement his empire and to placate any possible enemies within his borders. Naturally, his appeal to the Jew was through religion. He had heard the prophets declare their hope of return to Judah and the restoration of the temple. Such eventuality would provide a buffer province of friends between Babylon and Egypt, as well as please the Jews who chose to remain with their business and possessions in exile. He lost no time in proclaiming freedom for those who desired to return, and supported the movement by restoring the sacred vessels confiscated by Nebuchadnezzar, as well as by calling on those who remained and on their gentile neighbors to assist with gifts for building and means for transportation. It is not necessary to believe that he was a saint, or that he sought first the kingdom of God. He was intent on the security of his own kingdom and on increased revenues to accrue from peace and prosperity. To secure this end, he was genuinely willing, even anxious, that the Jews should return to Jerusalem and rebuild their shrine. God, too, had plans. Those who see His hand in all things are more nearly right than those who see it in nothing. "The King of all Kings forever is He."

Deeply had Judah suffered. Exile had continued till the homeland was but a memory and the temple a tradition. There had been time for repentance and for tears, and both had come in goodly measure. Men had choked what time they attempted to sing the Lord's songs by the rivers of Babylon, remembering that the Holy Place was in hateful hands. That repentance had done its perfect work is evidenced by their regard for the word of the prophets, for the Law, and their utter and final break with idolatry, as well as by the devotion manifest in those who returned to Palestine and those who assisted the work with their gifts.

Jehovah was better to them than they dared hope. It was all as a dream. Pagans noted the great blessings the Lord gave his people. They, themselves, acknowledged the gift of great things and rejoiced. With tears they had sown; with joy they reaped. It is ever thus. Not even God can come in till man opens the door, and often pain and sorrow must keep their mournful vigil till he is willing to welcome the nobler Guest.

Is this story of exile a bit of ancient history or a current event? Does America of the depression not know that it left the uplands of Zion for the jungles of Babylon? Does it not sit in doubt and long for confidence? Tremble with weakness and yearn for strength? Sob in uncertainty and defeatism and crave the return of the days of high adventure and glorious victory? May its people hear the prophets who call them back to the ideals of spirituality and true nobility, and hasten to separate themselves from the trivialities and sensualities which have marked the days of their humiliation. It is high time to return and to rebuild!

SHUQUALAK, MISS.

Dear Dr. Duren: We are now in our new church building and have adequate equipment for Sunday school and young people's work.

On the first Sunday in October our revival began with Rev. A. P. Stephens, of Kosciusko, Miss., conducting same. It has been a long time since the church and town has had such a spiritual uplift. In the preliminary services Brother Stephens uses his talent in art and music in a most helpful way. His method of presenting the truth through the eye gate is very impressive. These lessons are in line with the sermon to follow. To a congregation already attentive and interested he delivers his message with zeal and earnestness. We had several accessions to the church. Brother Stephens is in sympathy with the work of a pastor and so co-operates with him that the interest will continue when the revival is over. We appreciate his work and recommend him to the preachers. He is an earnest, efficient, consecrated worker.

REV. H. G. HAWKINS APPRECIATED

We, the members of the adjourned session of the fourth quarterly conference of the Edwards charge, wish to offer the following resolution:

Whereas, our beloved presiding elder, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, is now closing out his fourth year on the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, and the law of our Church will not permit him to remain another year; therefore be it Resolved, that we, the officials of the Edwards charge, express to him our appreciation of his faithful services during the four years. He has in a most efficient manner worked untiringly to promote all the interests of the church.

There has been no interest of the church that has gone lacking, and we feel that not only our charge but the entire district has made progress under his most efficient leadership.

Therefore we wish him Godspeed in whatever field the Conference may see fit to send him, and our prayers and good wishes shall follow him and his good wife.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN BUSH,

Charge Lay Leader.

Back of a hearty appetite

A Clean System

A hearty appetite is something to be proud of, because it usually indicates that the digestive system is in a healthy condition. Without a real desire for good, wholesome food, the body cannot be properly nourished.

Biliousness and sluggishness dull the appetite and tend to make men and women finicky about what they eat.

Slowing up of the work of the digestive system (ordinary constipation) sometimes is attended by such disagreeable symptoms as bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, sensation of fullness after meals, distension of the abdomen, eructations of gas, sick headache, dizziness, spots before the eyes, and a dull, tired feeling.

Black-Draught revives activity of the lower part of the digestive system, relieving constipation. It is purely vegetable in composition—a reliable, natural remedy for sluggish elimination. Sold in 25-cent packages.

REPORT OF THE LAYMAN'S WORK IN THE SEASHORE DISTRICT

By L. T. Fickling, Lay Leader

First I wish, through this medium, to express to our presiding elder, the pastors and each lay worker who have so kindly assisted me in putting on the lay services over the district my sincere appreciation. They have been kind and patient with us, and the pastors with whom I have been privileged to mingle with in some of the services have inspired me with their co-operation and our fellowship has been sweet. They have opened the way and made it possible for these services to be held. I would have so much loved to have been at each laymen's service in the whole district, but this could not be; I had the pleasure and profit of participating in a few of these meetings, namely: Coalville, North Biloxi, Beulah, Nugent, McNeill, Lumberton, Brooklyn, Salem, Howison and Sautier. Up to this writing only three of our pastors have failed to report one or more services on their work and we are yet expecting them to make good before Conference and that will make us one hundred per cent in the district, which is our very faithful and efficient Conference lay leader's goal. It has been our aim through these services to bring before the lay membership of our churches their very great privilege, as well as responsibility of furthering the cause of Christ in the earth; if we can arouse ourselves to appreciate what we can do as helpers of our pastors then we will see our churches take on new life, our pastors new hope and the kingdom of God prosper in our hands. It has been said that once a celebrated Englishman was being shown the great Niagara Falls; as he stood looking in awe at the mighty waters as they swept over the cataract, he exclaimed: "Here is the greatest unused power in the world," his guide quickly replied, "No! you are mistaken, the greatest unused power in the world is the power of the Holy Spirit." I wonder if we would not be safe in saying that the greatest unused agencies for transmitting that power are the laymen of the church of Christ.

It is said that when Mr. Beecher was pastor of Park Street Church, Boston, someone asked him the secret of his success, and his answer was: "I preach on Sunday, but I have four hundred and fifty laymen who take up my message on Monday and preach it wherever they go." Manifestly successful is that pastor who has a band of consecrated laymen through whom he can preach every day in the week.

This Conference year is nearly gone, our successes and failures will soon be history; may our failures be under the Blood and our successes, if any, be the means of spurring us on to a greater determination to be, and to do our best for the Master.

METHODIST CHURCH, HAZLEHURST, MISS.

The first memory of a Methodist Church in Hazlehurst, was a hewn log house that was in use in 1857, and seems to have been used about ten years.

Up to the civil war the strength of the Church in that section centered in its active country churches. The Hazlehurst church grew out of the drift of the population to the railroad. In 1860 a site was bought on Georgetown Street and a small frame building erected. In 1869, desiring a more central location, the present site was bought. The church building was moved to the new site. It was drawn down the middle of the road by mule power; a slow process, requiring a month for the task. Services were held each Sunday during that month of removal. This house was used until 1927.

In 1927, under the leadership of Rev. C. W. Crisler, D.D., the old building was demolished and the present building erected. There was a small indebtedness left, which the membership has been gradually paying off.

Some of the pastors who served this congregation are: Revs. Corydon Chamberlain, J. M. Weems, Thomas S. West, W. H. Leith, H. D. Howell, W. E. M. Linfield, J. T. Nicholson, B. F. Jones, I. W. Cooper, R. W. Bailey, T. W. Adams, Robt. Selby, J. T. Leggett, J. A. B. Jones, C. F. Emory, V. D. Skipper, H. B. Watkins, W. L. Linfield, N. B. Harmon, W. H. Laprade, B. F. Lewis, L. L. Roberts, W. W. Graves, C. C. Evans, W. H. Saunders, J. R. Jones, C. W. Crisler, T. J. O'Neil, Del Longrear and W. O. Sadler.

The church has made progress as the years went by. Today we have a modern departmentalized program of education, having been perfected this year. The church has gone forward this year also in its finances, paying the notes on church due in 1934 and 1935; raised the pastor's salary; paid over one-half the benevolences to date and expect to report everything in full at Conference. R. H. Clegg is the present pastor and Rev. C. W. Crisler, D.D. is the presiding elder. It has been said recently that no church in the district has made as much progress this year.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

I John 5:4: This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

1. World. Study the Scriptural use of the term "World." John writes: "Love not the world nor the things of the world; for if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him: for all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and the vainglory of life, is not of the Father, but of the world. And the world is passing away and the lusts thereof. But he that doeth the will of the Father abideth forever." St. Paul gives expression to the same idea: "Be not conformed to this world." "The God of this world hath blinded the eyes of them which believe not." "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world." "The world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world!" Jesus said, Now is the judgment of this world, now shall the Prince of this world be cast out. "The Prince of this world cometh and hath nothing in me." Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world." "They are not of the world, as I am not of the world."

"The world" is that which is opposed to the will of God.

2. "Victory that overcometh the world." The New Testament makes frequent use of metaphors of victory. For instance in the second and third chapters of Revelation there is a promise to each of the seven churches of Asia. The promise is to those who overcome. To the Ephesians. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God." 2:7. To the Christians at Smyrna: "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death," 2:11. To those at Pergamos: "To him that overcometh, will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and I will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth save he that receiveth it," 2:17. To the saints at Thyatira: "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power among the nations. And he shall rule them with a rod of iron as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers: even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the morning star," 2:26-28. To the disciples at Sardis: "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before His angels." 3:5. To the Philadelphians: "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God; and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem, which cometh down out of Heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name," 3:12. To the Laodiceans: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in His throne," 3:21.

All the blessings of sustenance, repose, influence and authority are to those who overcome. Christians worship a triumphant, regnant Lord. Christians today can overcome the world.

3. "Faith." The agency by which Christians overcome the world is faith.

One of the causes of the present-day spirit of defeatism is lack of faith. A revival of the conquering faith of the early Christians will bring new victories to a triumphant Church. A virile faith is necessary to make strong Christians. In the fellowship of a common faith, Christians can bring marvels to pass. It is a sin to limit God. Christ can do no mighty works where he finds no faith. "According to your faith be it unto you."

4. "Our." Faith must be personal if personal victories are to be won. The faith of another will be impotent for you. Paul could write to the Romans, "And now to Him that hath power to establish you according to My Gospel." The Gospel of Christ gripped him. Every soul stands individually before God.

5. "Is." "This is the victory." The victory is in the present tense. "Ye are of God, little children, and have conquered them; because greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world." I John 4:4. Why stand bemoaning the prevalent weakness of others. Go forth in God's name, conquering and to conquer. God is not dead. His Almighty Arm is not shortened. He is still mighty to save.

PRAYER

Our Father, we are taught that "all that is born of God conquers the world." "We can be more than conquerors through Him that loved us." Let the Church today throb with the glorious power of God. Strengthen our faith. May we so devote ourselves to Thee that we can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth us. In Jesus' name we ask it.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

The proper treatment for a bilious child

THREE STEPS

TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, must be carefully regulated as to dosage.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

REV. A. J. COBURN

"He was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost and Faith." Thus Luke paid tribute to a man with whom Paul, his chief in the Gospel work had had some differences. I know of no man of whom these words can be spoken more appropriately than of A. J. Coburn, the man who is the subject of this memoir. I know of no tribute that is holier than this, that can be spoken of any man. It is better to be good than to be prominent, it is better to be good than to be great by the world's standards. It is better to be good than to be rich. Brother Coburn was not prominent among his brethren, he was not rich in possessions, he was not great by the world's standards. But in sterling character he had a great standing. He was a great soul. Every achievement was with him against the dead weight of an afflicted body, and a heroic soul took every handicap as a challenge to greater exertion, and every affliction was a refiner's fire, purifying the gold and consuming the dross of his character. And such was the spirit he developed that he actually did more work and better work sick than most of us can do with sound bodies, and better opportunities.

Andrew Jackson Coburn was born in Hindman, Kentucky, August 4, 1858. He died in Ponchatoula, La., October 30, 1935. He was born again when he was well on toward middle life, having been brought under conviction by the Holy Spirit under the first Methodist sermon he ever heard, it was preached by one of the Godbys in his community in Kentucky. From this experience he strayed, and for several years did not practice his religion. He was reclaimed under the preaching of Rev. Beverly Carodine in Atchison, Kansas.

Brother Coburn first took up for a life work the study and practice of law, first in Kentucky and later in Kansas, where he moved after the death of his first wife. It was in Atchison that his entire life was changed. Brother Coburn was twice married. First in Kentucky to Miss

Invisible Ear Drum

The Invisible Ear Drum invented by A. O. Leonard, a son of the late Rev. A. B. Leonard, D.D., for many years secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, for his own relief from extreme deafness and head noises, has so greatly improved his hearing that he can join in any ordinary conversation, go to the theatre and hear without difficulty. Inexpensive and has proven a blessing to many people. Write for booklet to A. O. Leonard, Inc., Suite 171, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York city. Adv.

Francis Allen. Of this union two sons were born, James and Jay. His second marriage was in Atchison, Kansas, about the time of his reclamation under the preaching of Dr. Carodine. This marriage was to Miss Mamie Winterringer, October 13, 1891, and two sons were born of this marriage, William J. and Andrew Lee. Jay, followed his father into the ministry, and at the time of his death was a member on trial in the Mississippi Conference. Andrew Lee died in his childhood.

Returning from Kansas after his second marriage and his great religious experience he entered the Western Virginia Conference of our Church, and served the first year on the Liberty circuit in Kentucky, being assigned there in September, 1897. In 1899-1900, he served the Glenville circuit in West Virginia. He discovered that he was developing lung trouble, and on the advice of his physician he transferred to the Louisiana Conference. Embarking on a river steamer on the Ohio river he came down that and the Mississippi arriving with his family in Baton Rouge about the middle of December, 1900. Conference was then about to convene under the presidency of Bishop Chas. B. Galloway. At this Conference he was assigned to the East Feliciana circuit which he served in 1901. From there he was moved to Denham Springs where he served in 1902-03, seeing his health falling he took the supernumerary relation, and remained for two more years in Denham Springs. In 1906-07 he served the St. Martinsville circuit, from which he moved in December, 1907, to Farmerville where he served from 1908-11. Then he again took the supernumerary relation and spent the next two years in Texas where he supplied the Fowlerton and the Seadrift circuits, in 1912 and 1913 respectively, retaining his supernumerary relation to the Louisiana Conference. On returning to Louisiana he was again assigned to Farmerville where he served during 1914-15. He was then sent to Clinton where he served four years, 1916-19. In 1920-21, he served Ponchatoula, and in 1922-25 he served Kentwood. Here in November, 1925, he asked for the superannuate relation, which he held for the last ten years of his life.

Brother Coburn has shown the preachers who have served Ponchatoula in these last ten years that a man need not consider his work done when he has to superannuate. But with his remaining strength can serve the Lord profitably. His failing strength was so used as, like the setting sun, to turn all his vicinity into a field of glory. It was light in his eventide, I think he suffered more in the course of his life than any man I ever knew, and took it more cheerfully.

His life was fruitful, in every place he served where I have been, his name is like ointment poured forth. He brought men to Christ, and many in all these places date their conversion from the time of his pastorate among them.

"Servant of God, well done, rest from thy loved employ."

"The battle fought, the victory won, enter thy Master's joy."

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

CONFERENCE BOND ISSUE AND BENEVOLENCES

As we approach the end of the Conference year, I desire to remind every minister and every layman in our Church in Louisiana of the situation with reference to our Conference Bond Issue.

1. The bondholders agreed, last January, to remit the 3½% interest that had accrued up to that time and accept the 3% interest that had been paid them, and thereby the Conference was relieved of more than $23,000.00.

2. They also agreed to take 3% interest for the current year, thereby relieving us of 3½%, or more than one-half of the interest for this year.

3. $94,000.00 of these bonds belong to Centenary College, which took them up and which has received no interest whatever. The bondholders, with whom we were dealing and to whom reference is made above, represented the remaining $205,000.00 of these bonds that were outstanding last January. The entire issue is overdue. We paid $2,500.00 on the principal last February, reducing the bonds now outstanding (other than those held by Centenary College) to $202,500.

4. A joint meeting of the Bishop and his Cabinet and the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Christian Education agreed with the representatives of these $202,500.00 of bonds to pay them 3% interest for this year and to pay $5,000.00 on the principal by the end of this year. It will take a little more than $6,000.00 to pay the interest, and a little more than $11,000.00 to pay this interest and this principal. In addition to that, the Conference has other interest obligations that have to be met.

5. Of the $60,000.00 apportioned for Conference work this year, one-third, or $20,000.00, is devoted to Conference debts. In order to make interest and principal payments above outlined, this $20,000.00 will have to yield in excess of $12,000.00, or more than 60c on the dollar. I am not advised as to what portion of this $60,000.00 was accepted by the churches of the Conference, but doubtless somewhat less than the amount apportioned. It may be that the apportionments will have to be collected practically in full in order to produce the money necessary to make these payments. Last year our Methodist benevolent dollar in Louisiana was only worth about 40c.

6. The full collection of our benevolences is necessary not only to take care of these debts, but to give adequate support to missions and other benevolent causes. For example, observe the following as to our benevolences for General work: During 1934, our Conference paid in round numbers $24,000.00 to the General work, including the Kingdom Extension. Our askings this year for General work were $50,000.00 in round numbers, and the Conference accepted $40,000.00 (and the $60,000.00 referred to above for Conference work). The quarterly conferences accepted in round numbers for this General work $36,000.00, or about 72% of the askings. If our contribution for General work is to amount to $24,000.00, and it certainly must amount to that if the program is to be supported, then the Methodist dollar this year must be worth right around 70c. I hope that it will be worth $1.00, and that we may have increased funds for all causes.

7. It is necessary for our Annual Conference to consider, and if possible to adopt, some method for the liquidation of the Conference bonds. Possibly this should be in the shape of a ten-year liquidation. I think much of it ought to come through the regular benevolent collections. Some of it is going to have to come by special gifts. I think it would be well for our ministers and laymen to be thinking about this and maturing their ideas as to what is the best course to follow.

Cardui, for women, is composed of the extracts of some of Nature's most useful plants. Medical authorities acknowledge their great value in the treatment of conditions which Cardui is intended to benefit. Where there has been functional monthly pains, from the early teens, through the years of mature womanhood and into the late forties, Cardui has helped to make women more comfortable. Because Cardui helps to strengthen the entire system, there is less tendency to severe recurring attacks. Women who need Cardui should get a bottle at the drug store and take it as directed. Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit you, consult a physician.

Lafayette Methodist Church

STRANGELY ENOUGH, the original Methodist circuit in Louisiana was formed in the southern part of the State, though that section has always been predominantly Roman Catholic. This circuit was sometimes called "Attakapas" in the early nineties, and sometimes "Appalou-sas." It reached from Bayou Rapides to Berwick Bay, and, on his regular round of more than five hundred miles on horseback, the itinerant doubtless included among his preaching places the village of Vermilion, located where the Old Spanish Trail crosses Bayou Vermilion, on the outskirts of Lafayette. However, Lafayette was not incorporated until the middle of the '30's, and the name does not appear in the Methodist minutes until 1845, when Lafayette was joined with "New Town," as New Iberia was then called.

THE FIRST RADIO BROADCASTING STATION for Palestine will begin operation in time to broadcast the Christmas services in the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem. The station will be located at Jerusalem, and the program will be broadcast in three languages—Hebrew, Arabic, and English. No event of the season will command a wider interest than this service from the little town where the Saviour was born.

THE CHRISTIAN HERALD, New York, recently sent out a questionnaire on the subject, "Should ministers preach on political and economic subjects?" The interesting thing about the result was that seventy per cent voted in favor of the preaching on those subjects when the minister feels it necessary to do so. That is at least encouraging, but the minister cannot afford to overlook the fact that the remaining thirty per cent make a lot of fuss and throw a lot of mud.

THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION, according to a recent press release, expended $12,679,775 during the year 1934. This vast sum of money was used for the "well-being of man," and it was applied to research in the field of public health; medical science; natural science; social science; and the humanities. The operations of this Foundation are world-wide in scope and the ramifications of its research effort touch almost every problem and interest of life. In reality, it is a great research university with the whole world for its clinic. The world will long have occasion to bless such noble philanthropy.

AMULETS AS CHARMS AGAINST EVIL, physical or spiritual, are as old as human history. They appear to have originated in connection with some form of mystical religion and then to have degenerated into charms with powers all their own. George Eliot represents the forsaken Baldassarre as opening a small bag which he had worn from childhood and finding in it a sapphire amulet which was worth five golden ducats, and that saved him from hunger. Macaulay tells us that when William III died they found next to his skin a bit of black ribbon which encased a gold ring and a lock of the hair of Mary. Explorations in Lhasa, the Buddhist sacred city of Tibet, have brought to light amulets once used as the symbols of a religion developed by the greatest mystics of human history. The scarab has been from time immemorial the protector of Egyptian dead.

THE METHODISTS OF JAPAN, says an exchange, have trouble in pronouncing their denominational name. They call it "Me-so-ji-su-to." Dr. Berry of Tokyo, who is the author of the foregoing statement, says also that the name used for bishop in Japan is "boss." That term may not express all that we understand to be the functions of that high ecclesiastic, but, after all, it is not so bad as a stab at its immediate and superficial aspects.

The undertaking is being led by Wu Tchen, mayor of Greater Shanghai, and Jan Kungchan, commissioner of education. Specially trained teachers are now at work in 220 schools of the municipality of Greater Shanghai and each school is prepared to teach 300 students every day. It is planned to turn out 66,000 at the end of the first period and to complete the whole task in a year.

THE HOPI INDIANS OF ARIZONA are said to have observed a nine-day dance period for a thousand years. It is an annual practice by which the sons of the desert seek to propitiate the rain god. During the period of the dances, runners scour the desert for snakes, rattlesnakes, bull snakes and red racers. At the end of the period these reptiles are made the bearers of the prayers of the Hopis to the rain gods in a ceremony which no white person was ever permitted to witness. The snakes are sprinkled with prayer meal and returned to the gods of the underground as a concluding ceremony of these prayer rites for rain for the coming year.

TWO NEW ORLEANS CHURCHES

Two of the New Orleans churches will make great reports to the Louisiana Conference, which convenes in this city this week. They are First Church and Rayne Memorial. Both of these churches accepted the askings for General and Conference work assigned by the District Stewards and both have met every financial obligation of the year in full. Dr. Wallace has added 113 to the membership of First Church this year—40 of them on profession of faith. He has paid $1,500 on the indebtedness of the church building, and the salary for 1936 will be increased to $4,000. Dr. Holmes, who is completing a quadrennium of service at Rayne Memorial Church, has received 92 members this year, 31 on profession of faith; and during the four years of his pastorate, he has added 515—a number nearly equal to the membership of the church when he was assigned to the charge. There are now 807 members on the roll, all interest payments on the building debt have been met promptly, $10,000 has been paid on the principal, and only $5,000 remains to be paid. We venture to say that no two churches in any city have done better work, nor do any face a new year with greater promise.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

The session of the Mississippi Conference got under way, at Laurel, Miss., last Wednesday evening. There was the old time air of optimism among the preachers, and everything that we heard was hopeful and inspiring. The editor had to return to the Advocate office before the treasurer of the Conference was ready to make his reports on the payments for benevolences, but we understand that there has been a marked improvement over the returns of recent years. Among the noteworthy matters to which the Conference gave its attention and support, was an annual donation of $1,000 for a period of ten years to assist in building a worthy church at Oxford, Miss., the seat of the University of Mississippi.

This amount and a sum to be raised by the North Mississippi Conference is to be used as a supplement to the funds to be raised by the local constituency in order that the new church building may be made adequate to serve the needs of the Methodist students of the Institution. Bishop Dobbs is in great favor with the Conference and perfect harmony and good feeling was manifest on the floor of the Conference, in the hotel lobby and elsewhere.

THE NEW FINANCIAL PLAN

In the round of Conferences held thus far, there has been a net gain of \$56,424.78 in the payments for General and Conference work over the combined payments for benevolences and Kingdom Extension in 1934. The report sent out by the General Board of Lay Activities includes 23 of the 38 home Conferences and none of the foreign fields. Six Conferences fell behind the payments for 1934, and 13 showed decisive gains. The gain is more impressive in the aggregate, however, than when it is expressed in the  $4\frac{1}{2}$  per cent of advance. The increased payments were doubtless influenced by the better economic outlook of the country, but some credit must be given to the voluntary principle of the new financial policy of the Church. The gain is too small to be offered as evidence of the triumph of the new method which has been introduced. To any discriminating student of church finances, it must be clear that the real time of testing for the voluntary principle of our financial plan is still ahead. It is a remarkable fact that we have made an advance over the combined results of our various campaigns, during the first year of operation of the new plan; but the Church must not presume that the battle has been won. We must work earnestly and consistently to establish a benevolent conscience in all our people, for therein lies the key to the success of the daring course upon which we are launched. Let no one forget that next year is going to be a real time of testing.

REV. L. A. McKEOWN DIES

Notice just received from Rev. J. H. Holder announces the death of Rev. L. A. McKeown, at Merigold, Miss., Saturday, November 16, 1935. His remains were carried to Clarksdale where they were interred beside the body of one of his sons. Truly a good man has gone. We hope to have a more extended notice later.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Reported by Rev. W. B. Jones

The one hundred and twenty-third session of the Mississippi Conference convened in the beautiful First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., November 13, 1935, at 7 o'clock p. m. Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, president, called the Conference to order promptly at the hour set, and announced Hymn No. 402, "And Are We Yet Alive?" in the new Methodist Hymnal, which was sung; he led the Conference in repeating the Apostles' Creed, and led the Conference in prayer. Hymn No. 209, "Amazing Grace," was sung and the Bishop made very strong and helpful remarks, after reading a lesson from the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, being assisted by J. F. Campbell, pastor-host, C. W. Crisler, B. L. Sutherland, J. A. Smith, L. J. Power, H. G. Hawkins, J. T. Leggett, and A. T. McIlwain, of the North Mississippi Conference, and presiding elder of the Greenwood District.

J. F. Campbell, pastor, spoke words of welcome to the Conference, and Bishop Dobbs responded on behalf of the Conference.

W. B. Jones, secretary of the last Conference, was requested by the Bishop to call the roll of the Conference, and the rolls of the clerical and the lay members was called and many answered to their names. The Conference was requested to stand while the secretary called the names of M. L. Burton, J. C. Ellis, C. M. Crossley and E. D. Phillips, superannuates, who had died during the year, and the Bishop requested J. T. Leggett to lead the Conference in prayer. These were the first names called, and they were referred to the Committee on Memoirs.

W. B. Jones was elected secretary by acclamation, and, on his nomination, Swep S. Harkey and George H. Jones were elected assistant secretaries, and J. W. Moore, chairman, Roy Wolfe, T. E. Nicholson and O. H. Scott were elected statistical secretaries.

The hours for meeting and adjourning were fixed at 8:30 a. m. and 12 o'clock noon, and the bar of the Conference was declared to be the main room of the first floor.

The following visitors were introduced to the Conference by Bishop Dobbs: A. T. McIlwain, M. H. McCormack, Jr., and W. L. Robinson, of the North Mississippi Conference; Dr. J. Fisher Simpson, of the General Board of Christian Education, Nashville, Tenn., Mr. J. R. Smith of the Methodist Publishing House.

Bishop Dobbs called question 22, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" J. T. Leggett was appointed by the Bishop to act in the place of V. G. Clifford, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, in the absence of the presiding elder, due to his very unfortunate illness.

The several districts were called and the presiding elders answered that there was no blame attached to the name of any one, and they were all passed in examination of character.

It was announced by the Bishop that Dr. Theodore Copeland, well known evangelist, would arrive during the night and would be the guest preacher of the Conference, and that he would deliver his first sermon Thursday afternoon, at three o'clock. The Bishop also announced that Dr. Fagan Thompson, of Vanderbilt University, and Dr. A. P. Hamilton, of Millsaps College, would lead the singing and present the new Methodist Hymnal at various times during the Conference.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Barksdale, of Hattiesburg, the former a lay delegate, representing the Associated Press, were presented to the Conference and given a hearty welcome among us.

The secretary was requested by the Conference to send suitable messages of love and greeting to Mrs. V. G. Clifford, because of the illness of her husband, and to A. J. Davis and P. D. Hardin, who are absent on account of being sick. The secretary was also requested to send suitable greetings to the Southern Baptist State Convention in session in Meridian, Miss.

The Conference sang "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow," and adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by W. J. Ferguson.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14.

The Conference was called to order at 8:30, Bishop Dobbs in the chair, who called upon Dr. Fagan Thompson to lead in singing. He announced Hymn No. 140, "There is a Fountain Filled with Blood," part of which was sung by the Conference. Bishop Dobbs led the Conference in reading in concert from page 544, the passage entitled, "Christian Unity," and the Conference was led in prayer by A. T. McIlwain. Dr. Thompson led in singing Hymn No. 387, "A Charge to Keep I Have."

The minutes of last night's session were read by the secretary and approved by the Conference.

Various communications were referred to appropriate boards and committees.

J. R. Smith and W. A. Moore, representing the Publishing House, were introduced, and the former addressed the Conference in behalf of the publishing interests. He presented the Conference with a check for $1,642.84 from the Publishing House for the superannuated preachers. Bishop Dobbs made suitable response and the check was delivered to the Conference Board of Finance.

The roll of the absentees of last night's session was called, and a number of the clerical and lay delegates answered to the call of their names. Various substitutions were made in the several districts by alternate lay delegates for principal delegates.

Dr. Theodore Copeland, of Dallas, Texas, one of the evangelists of our Church, and Dr. Fagan Thompson were introduced to the Conference.

The interests of the Methodist Benevolent Association were presented in an address by Dr. M. P. Woods, a member of the Tennessee Conference.

The various standing committees, nominated by the presiding elders, were accepted by the Conference, as were also the nominations supplying vacancies in several boards.

Under Question 8 and 10 no one was re-admitted into the Conference and no one was received from other Churches as traveling preachers.

C. H. Williams, a superannuate, was granted location at his own written request.

It was announced that there is none to be placed on the supernumerary list.

The roll of the superannuates was called by the secretary, who read messages of greeting from B. H. Rawls and C. F. Emery. The superannuates present J. T. Abney, H. G. Roberts, J. L. Greenway, J. B. Stringer, and W. W. Graves, were called to the front. They received the greetings of the Bishop and the Conference stood as a tribute to their life and service. The Bishop requested W. W. Graves to lead the Conference in prayer. The entire list of superannuates was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation.

On motion further roll call was dispensed with.

Resolutions against the sale of wine and beer were read by J. L. Neill, and were adopted by unanimous standing vote. This resolution requested the Bishop to appoint a committee of five to present these resolutions to the next regular session of the State Legislature. This committee will be appointed later.

Forrest Jackson was elected a lay member of the Board of Missions and the Committee on Evangelism in place of Judge J. M. Forman, who has moved to North Mississippi.

The Conference was pleased to receive a telegram of greetings from the Mississippi Baptist Convention in session at Meridian.

Bishop Dobbs read the credentials of H. C. Chapman, D.D., representing the Bureau of Evangelism of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, and introduced Dr. Chapman, who addressed the Conference in behalf of the Mississippi Industrial College at Holly Springs, Miss., and Dr. Chapman sang a solo while the Conference presented an offering of $95.24 to this college.

Dr. R. H. M. Matson, district superintendent of the Nazarene Church, and Dr. J. G. Coleman, pastor of the local Nazarene Church, were introduced to the Conference by Bishop Dobbs.

In a report from the Board of Missions District Missionary Institutes were announced as follows: Crawford Street, Vicksburg, Jan. 28; Jefferson Street, Natchez, Jan. 29; Brookhaven, Jan. 30; Galloway Memorial, Jan. 31; Central, Meridian, Feb. 4; Main Street, Hattiesburg, Feb. 5; First Church, Gulfport, Feb. 6.

The following were referred for the first time to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuate relation: V. G. Clifford, J. D. Ellis, W. W. Murray, and A. J. Davis. On Motion of L. J. Power, the Conference presented the sum of $100.60 raised in free-will offering for equal distribution by the Board of Finance for these four brethren, while the Conference sang Hymn No. 315, "How Firm a Foundation."

Arthur Lewis Gilmore and Floyd Osmond Lewis, having passed the course of study and in the examination of character, were advanced to the Class of the Second Year. Floyd Wesley Odom, of the same class, was discontinued at his own request.

Frank Marion Casey, Roy Lesly Lane, William Rugh McRaney, and James Dudley Slay were passed in examination of character, and, having stood approved examinations in the course of study, were advanced to the Class of the Third Year.

William Marion Tabb, having met all disciplinary requirements, was passed in examination of character, was announced by the Bishop as having completed the entire course of study.

Dr. H. B. Trimble, of Emory University, and a member of the General Commission on Budget, was introduced, and he addressed the Conference in behalf of Emory University.

The laymen's hour was set for Friday at 11 o'clock. Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference lay leader will have charge.

The standing rule with regard to the Memorial session was changed so as to set the time of the Memorial session at 3 p. m. Sunday.

The adoption of the report of the Board of Finance, which was read by W. B. Alsworth, authorized and requested a special offering to be taken in each church for the superannuates during the month of December, as early as possible. This offering is to be remitted to W. B. Alsworth, who in turn, will remit the proper amounts to the superannuates, their widows, and children, as a Christmas gift from the Conference.

Dr. R. N. Allen, assistant secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, was presented, and he addressed the Conference.

It was announced by the treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance that he was the recipient of a check for $500.00 from the Mississippi Conference Endowment Fund for the superannuates. The Conference joined in singing "O For a Thousand Tongues."

W. S. F. Tatum, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Methodist Hospital, Hattiesburg, Miss., was introduced to the Conference by the Bishop, and he addressed the Conference in behalf of the hospital. The report that he read from the Board of Trustees was referred to the Board of Missions.

Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College, addressed the Conference in behalf of the college and made certain requests for financial aid which were referred to the Board of Christian Education.

Various announcements were made. The Conference sang "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow," and adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Dr. Theodore Copeland.

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15.

Morning Session

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs called the Conference to order at 8:30 o'clock, and Dr. Fagan Thompson announced and led in singing Hymn No. 373, "Forever Here My Rest Shall Be," and the Conference was led in prayer by L. J. Power, presiding elder of the Seashore District. The Bishop led in the responsive reading of the section marked, "The Higher Justice" on page 538 of the new Hymnal. Hymn No. 364, "More Love to Thee, O Christ," led by Dr. Thompson, was heartily sung by the Conference, as was also Hymn No. 277, "My Soul Be On Thy Guard," after a very excellent devotional message delivered by the Bishop.

The secretary read the minutes of yesterday's session, and they were approved by the Conference. The secretary read a letter of greetings from W. T. Griffin, of Jacksonville, Fla., who was for forty-two years a devoted and active worker in the Conference, now a superannuate member. The reading of the message was heard with pleasure.

By vote of the Conference a session of the Conference was set for two o'clock this afternoon for the purpose of hearing an address by former United States Senator J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, a life-time member of the Methodist Church, and an influential layman.

The following were introduced to the Conference by Bishop Dobbs: W. L. Duren, D.D., editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate; W. R. Lott, pastor of the Methodist Church at Oxford, Miss., and secretary of the North Mississippi Conference; Dr. Malcolm Guess, dean of men, University of Mississippi; Dr. J. E. Stephens, pastor at Clarksdale, Miss.; M. A. Franklin, D.D., of Highlands Church, Birmingham, Ala.; and N. S. Jackson, D.D., State superintendent of Anti-Saloon League.

A very stirring address on Christian Education was delivered by Dr. J. Fisher Simpson, of the General Board of Christian Education.

Bishop Dobbs introduced to the Conference the Hon. J. Thomas Heflin, of Alabama, under recent appointment by President Roosevelt as a director in the work of the National Administration Housing Act. The fathers of the Bishop and Senator Heflin were fast friends, and their distinguished sons are no less so.

Dr. G. F. Winfield, associate president of Whitworth College, a member of the Board of Christian Literature, and secretary, read the report of the Board, and pending its adoption the Conference was favored with an address by Dr. W. L. Duren in the interest of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Marvin A. Franklin, D.D., pastor of Highlands Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala., was presented and he addressed the Conference on the subject of the American Bible Society and the four hundredth anniversary of the printing of the English Bible.

Dr. J. L. Decell presented resolutions concerning a proposed church building at Oxford, Miss., proposing that certain boards of this Conference pay five hundred dollars each, annually, for the project each year for the next ten years. After discussion by various ones the resolution was adopted.

Report No. 1 of the Commission on Budget was read by J. W. Sells, and was adopted. This report carries an allotment for this Conference of $52,646.00 for General work and $67,485.00 for Conference work. It also carries the election of F. Y. Whitfield as Conference treasurer, and the Merchants and Farmers Banks of Meridian, Miss., as the depository for Conference funds.

The order of the day having arrived, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference lay leader, representing the General Board of Lay Activities, led the exercises of the laymen's hour. He read Report No. 1 of the Board of Lay Activities, and interspersed the reading with comments. He was followed by W. H. L. Carruth, lay leader of the Hattiesburg District.

Following this, L. T. Ficklin, lay leader of the Seashore District, read Report No. 2 of the Board of Lay Activities, and the report was adopted, carrying the election of Dr. J. M. Sullivan of Millsaps College as Conference lay leader.

The secretary was requested to write a letter of condolence to Mrs. J. E. Crawford, because of the sudden demise of her husband, who was scheduled to speak at this Conference during this laymen's hour.

A fervent address on the subject of missions was delivered by J. F. Rawls, treasurer of the General Board of Missions, Nashville, Tenn.

It was announced that the Board of Missions would observe its anniversary at 7:30 o'clock tonight with addresses by J. F. Rawls and Mrs. Gayle C. Beanland, daughter of W. M. Williams of our Conference, a missionary of the Presbyterian Church in Africa.

The Conference adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by C. W. Wesley.

Afternoon Session

The Conference was called to order at 2 o'clock by Bishop Dobbs, the Conference sang Hymn 489, "My Country 'Tis of Thee," and was led in prayer by J. L. Decell, the Conference also joined in singing Hymn No. 491, "America, the Beautiful."

In a very gracious way Bishop Dobbs introduced former Senator J. Thomas Heflin of Alabama, who delivered a patriotic and inspirational address and delighted the Conference with his great presentation.

The Conference sang "Praise God, From Whom All Blessings Flow," and adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by Dr. Theodore Copeland. Following this Dr. Copeland preached to a large and appreciative congregation from Col. 3:2.

FOURTH DAY—MORNING SESSION

The Conference was called to order at 8:30 a.m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. Dr. Fagan Thompson announced hymn 379, "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord," and the Conference was led in prayer by R. H. Clegg, at the request of the Bishop. Hymn 371, "Jesus, Thine All Victorious Love," was sung, and the Bishop led in the responsive reading of "The Eternal Presence" from the Hymnal. Bishop Dobbs read James 1:27, and delivered a very strong devotional message on "Pure Religion." Hymn 376, "Dear Master, In Whose Life," was sung by the Conference.

The secretary read the minutes of the morning and afternoon's sessions of yesterday, and they were approved as read.

On motion of C. V. Hathorn, layman of Columbia, was excused from further attendance upon the Conference because of a death in the family, and the secretary was requested to send a telegram of sympathy.

The presence of C. A. Bowen, Editorial Secretary, was noted and he was introduced to the Conference by the Bishop. The presence of Dr. B. F. Jones also was noted. Mrs. Gayle C. Beanland was introduced to the Conference.

Bishop Dobbs presented the schedule of the morning's program, which by vote was duly authorized by the Conference.

Under question 17 the names of Frank Marion Casey, Roy Lesly Lane, William Hugh McRaney, and James Dudley Slay were called, and they were elected to the order of deacon.

Under question 19 the name of William Marion Tabb was called, and he was elected to the order of elder.

Question 1, "Who are admitted on trial?" was called, and Norman Udell Boone, Morelle Wells, Robert Edward Case, Edward Marshal Lane, and Warren Columbus Black, having met all Disciplinary requirements, were unanimously admitted. Julius Allen McRaney was also admitted by special vote.

Question 6, "Who are admitted into full connection?" was called, and Frank Marion Casey, Roy Lesly Lane, William Hugh McRaney, and James Dudley Slay were called to the front, charged by the Bishop, and by unanimous vote were admitted into full connection.

J. W. Ramsey, for forty-five years a member of the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences, an effective and useful servant of the Church, after a fine representation by his presiding elder, Dr. J. A. Smith, had his name referred at his own request for the superannuate relation.

Bishop Dobbs called questions 25 to 45, inclusive, and they were answered by J. W. Moore, chairman of the statistical secretaries.

Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, President of the Mississippi Conference (Woman's Missionary Society), was presented to the Conference by Bishop Dobbs, and she delivered a very happy address on the work of the women of our Conference.

Bishop Dobbs called question 47, "Where shall the next session of the Conference be held?" and Dr. J. L. Decell, pastor of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss., yielded the floor to R. L. Ezelle, a prominent layman of that church, who in a very gracious way cordially invited the Conference to meet at Galloway Memorial in its next session. The Conference by unanimous standing vote, accepted this invitation. Next year will be the centennial anniversary of this great church, and the next session will close its centennial activities.

Bishop Dobbs, having been requested by the Conference at a former session to name a committee to present certain matters concerning the sale of beer and wine, to the next legislature, announced the following Committee: B. L. Sutherland, J. L. Decell, B. M. Hunt, Judge Morgan Stevens, and Dr. J. M. Sullivan.

The Bishop called for the reports of the presiding elders and each made his report, J. T. Leggett representing the Hattiesburg District. The reports indicate a considerable advancement in the work of the Conference, and these, together with the statistical tables, indicate an increase of about thirty-four per cent in the payment of the benevolences.

During the year there have been received on profession of faith 2,675, there having been licensed to preach 14, and the total membership of the churches of the Conference is 77,142.

F. Y. Whitfield, Conference treasurer, made his financial report, and also reported his receipts for the Golden Cross.

Dr. C. A. Bowen made a brief address concerning his work as Editorial Secretary, and the Bishop graciously emphasized the great work that Dr. Bowen is doing.

Dr. N. S. Jackson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in Mississippi, was introduced and addressed the Conference.

The Bishop requested Dr. J. L. Decell to occupy the chair. Dr. L. W. Rose, an aged retired Episcopal rector, long a pastor in Laurel, was presented to the Conference.

The report of the Committee on District Conference Records was read by J. B. Bridges and adopted.

Reports were read and adopted for the following Boards and Committees: Ministerial Training, Commission on Budget, Church Extension, Sabbath Observance, Christian Education, Evangelism, and Board of Missions.

The Committee on Evangelism recommended the appointment of H. A. Wood as Conference Evangelist with recommendations that he be appointed a General Evangelist.

The Bishop, having resumed his seat, asked that the time be extended to complete pending business, which was done.

The Bishop introduced Rev. B. Z. Herrington, the Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, of the Methodist Protestant Church.

It was announced that the Historical Society would hold its annual meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock, at which time Dr. Charles F. Smith will deliver the principal address on "Mississippi's Contribution to Texas."

The Committee on Public Worship announced the appointments for preaching services at the various churches of the city and vicinity for Sunday.

The Conference adjourned, the benediction being pronounced by H. G. Hawkins.

Afternoon Session

Bishop Dobbs called the Conference to order at 3 o'clock p. m., Dr. Thompson announced and led the Conference in singing hymn 311, "Come, O Thou Traveler Unknown," and the Conference was led in prayer by Dr. J. O. Leath.

The Bishop expressed the sincere appreciation of the Conference for the great contribution that Dr. Thompson has made in leading the Conference in singing from the new Methodist Hymnal, and requested him to sing a solo, which he did, using hymn 387, "Make Me a Captive, Lord."

The secretary read the journal of the morning session, and it was approved as read. Mrs. O. S. Lewis, alternate lay delegate from the Brookhaven District, was seated in the place of V. D. Youngblood, principal delegate.

Bishop Dobbs announced the transfer of C. F. Nesbitt, an elder, to the Upper South Carolina Conference, and he also announced the transfer of J. O. Leath, an elder, from the North Texas Conference to the Mississippi Conference. Dr. Leath was introduced to the Conference.

Dr. A. B. Hamilton, of Millsaps College, read report No. 1 of the Committee on the Spiritual State of the Church, and it was adopted. Report No. 2 of the Committee on the Spiritual

State of the Church was read by J. W. Leggett, Jr., and pending its consideration W. M. Sullivan and T. O. Prewitt addressed the Conference. It was adopted.

J. B. Cain, Conference Director of Young People's Work, addressed the Conference concerning the meeting for Young People to be held in Memphis, Tenn., December 27 to January 1.

On motion of J. L. Neill, the Conference very graciously, by rising vote, expressed thanks and appreciation of the work being done by the secretaries and statistical secretaries of the Conference.

J. L. Sells represented the work of the Methodist Benevolent Association in remarks made to the Conference.

Reports of the Committee on Orphans' Home, the Bible Board, and the Lake Junaluska Quadrennial Commission were read and adopted. W. S. F. Tatum was elected trustee of Lake Junaluska Assembly for a period of two years.

On the suggestion of W. J. Ferguson, an offering was contributed by the Conference for the purpose of erecting a marker at the grave of Rev. Louis Fayard, the sum of $35.19 was realized and was placed in the hands of a special committee.

Dr. Charles F. Smith, of the Texas Conference, was introduced to the Conference by Bishop Dobbs.

Pending adoption of Report No. 3 of the Board of Christian Education, which was read by J. L. Carter, the Conference was addressed by Otto Porter, Dean of the Seashore Pastoral School; H. M. Bullock, Ph.D., Professor of Religious Education of Millsaps College, and by Bishop Dobbs.

On motion of G. H. Jones, the name of L. E. Wicht, and on motion of B. L. Sutherland, the name of M. J. Miller were referred to the Committee on Memoirs, that they bring in brief memoirs of these deceased local preachers at the Memorial Session.

The report of the Committee on Conference Relations, which carries the names of the following superannuates, was adopted: W. W. Cammack, R. F. Witt, J. T. Nicholson, C. T. Noble, C. H. Ellis, C. F. Emery, N. B. Harmon, C. C. Griffin, B. H. Rawls, J. H. Foreman, W. W. Graves, J. W. Price, J. G. Galloway, R. A. Sibley, B. F. Jones, J. L. Greenway, A. A. Simms, H. G. Roberts, J. B. Stringer, P. D. Hardin, M. L. White, W. T. Griffin, J. T. Abney, V. G. Clifford, A. J. Davies, W. W. Murray, J. D. Ellis, J. W. Ramsey, and also W. P. George was placed in the supernumerary relation.

T. J. O'Neil filed for record the report of the Trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund, stating that this fund realized five hundred dollars during the year for superannuates.

The report of the auditors was read by T. B. Cottrell.

The time for the suspension of T. B. Winstead having expired, he was reinstated by the Conference, and on his own request was granted an honorable location.

W. B. Alsworth read the report of the Board of Finance. The amounts to be paid the claimants of this Board will be materially increased for the coming year.

Dr. G. F. Winfield, Associate President of Whitworth College, addressed the Conference relative to the work of the College, and showed it to be in more prosperous condition.

On motion of C. W. Crisler, it was ordered that the Memorial Session be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Swanson F. Hawkey read the journal of this session, and it was approved as read.

The Conference sang hymn 240, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," and, after the benediction being pronounced by T. J. O'Neil.

FIFTH DAY—AFTERNOON SESSION

The Conference met in memorial session, according to the custom of the Conference, at 3 o'clock p. m., Dr. J. O. Leath.

one of the honored superannuates, of Brookhaven, Miss., was in the chair according to appointment of Bishop Dobbs. After singing appropriate hymns, Dr. Jones read a part of the fourteenth chapter of the gospel of John, and the Conference was led in prayer by W. B. Jones.

Question 14, "What preachers have died during the year?" was called, and was answered: M. L. Burton, J. C. Ellis, C. M. Crossley, and E. D. Phillips. The memoir of M. L. Burton was read by George H. Jones, who also wrote the memoir of C. M. Crossley, which was read by S. F. Harkey; the memoir of J. C. Ellis was read by J. L. Neill, and the memoir of E. D. Phillips was also read. Dr. J. L. Decell made some remarks on the life of M. J. Miller, and a memoir of L. E. Wicht was read by T. O. Prewitt. These brethren were local preachers and were both members of the Conference at one time.

Among those who paid loving tribute to these departed brethren were W. M. Sullivan, W. W. Moore, G. W. Ware, J. L. Neill, W. B. Jones.

At the morning service Bishop Dobbs preached a great sermon on the Church, and ordained Frank Marion Casey, Roy Leslie Lane, William Hugh McRaney, James Dudley Slay.

The minutes were read and approved, and the Conference adjourned.

Evening Session

Bishop Dobbs called the Conference to order at 7 o'clock, and the choir of the First Methodist Church rendered very effective music, as they had done all through the Conference, and H. G. Hawkins led the Conference in prayer. The Conference authorized the Bishop to increase the number of the committee appointed to present certain matters to the next session of the Legislature on the question of the sale of beer and wine, and Bishop Dobbs named T. M. Brownlee, Judge E. M. Lane and J. L. Neill as the additional members.

Bishop Dobbs, assisted by the presiding elders, ordained William Marion Tabb an elder.

Resolutions of thanks to the First Methodist Church, the pastor, to all who had a part in entertaining the Conference, the papers, and to all others who had helped to make this one of the most pleasant Conferences held in recent years, were unanimously adopted by a rising vote. The Conference has been very beautifully entertained, and the hospitality very much appreciated, and it will not be forgotten soon, if ever. The minutes of the evening session were read and approved, the appointments read, and the Conference adjourned.

Transferred Out—C. F. Nesbitt, an elder, to the Upper South Carolina Conference.

Mississippi and Louisiana

Mrs. G. W. Huff, Baton Rouge, La., writes us a note expressing her delight with her Christmas cards and the Advocate.

Mrs. C. Krause, Sicily Island, La., writes that she is in good health and active and that she enjoys her Advocate. She is now in her eighty-fourth year.

Rev. J. C. Wasson, recently assigned to Valden, Miss., has reached his new field, and is thinking of the Advocate as among the first tasks of the new year.

Wm. D. Burdine, West Point, Miss., says that he was an Arkansan and read the Arkansas Methodist for years, but the New Orleans Advocate fills his need for a church paper.

Mrs. J. W. Whittle, a matron in the Masonic Home at Meridian, Miss., sends greetings to the editor and his wife. She and her family were members in our first pastorate.

Rev. W. T. Phillips, of Webb and Sumner charge, has been graciously received by the people and he begins his fourth year with a better outlook than usual. The new church in Sumner is nearing completion.

Rev. J. S. Lewis gives an enthusiastic report of the meeting at Brookhaven, Miss., in which he was assisted by Rev. W. C. Newman of Grenada College. Brother Lewis says that he expects to pay everything in full.

The editor acknowledges receipt of a check for $100 sent by Brother R. H. Nelson, lay leader of the Shreveport District. This amount is to be applied on the Advocate debt fund and is contributed by the laymen of that district.

Mrs. R. R. Bridges, in a note to the office, says that she had about decided to give up the Advocate which she has read from childhood, but her children refused to permit her to miss the joy of its visits.

Mrs. I. W. Ingram, of Houston, Miss., writes that she loves the Advocate and that her church paper never gets old to her. We appreciate the cordial words of appreciation which she sends to our office.

PROTECTION AGAINST OLD AGE

Mrs. J. A. Goad, now living at Pascagoula, Miss., writes the editor a note which recalls the memories of the days when she and her sainted husband were in the Columbus District, of which we were the presiding elder. Thank you, Sister Goad, for the thoughtful and helpful message.

Doctor George S. Sexton, heralded as "one of the outstanding YOUNG WOMEN of Louisiana," was scheduled to speak on the Brotherhood program at Oak Grove, La., on the evening of October 17. We confess that that strikes us as a new role for Dr. George.

RESOLUTIONS

Moved by a deep sense of appreciation for the personality and service of our retiring presiding elder, the Rev. K. W. Dodson, this adjourned session of the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Keener Memorial Church, desires to go on record with the following resolutions:

Whereas, throughout the entire four years of Brother Dodson's eldership to Keener Memorial Church he has been a true friends and counselor; patient, sympathetic and helpful to us in all of our trials, burdens and problems.

Whereas, many times when the official church family felt discouraged at the fact that we were not measuring up to our possibilities, he has been the one to point out to us some work that he believed was being done that was really worth while, and by his words of encouragement and commendation has inspired in us a desire to be faithful to the task, even if the results were not what we desired.

Whereas, throughout his entire term of office he has never been too busy to assist us in our regular preaching and prayer meeting services, and by his attendance and that of his wife has been an inspiration and help.

Whereas, it gives us pain to know that this relationship will necessarily be changed at the Annual Conference which will be held in a few days; we shall ever rejoice that we have known him and his good wife, and been associated with them in this capacity. Rejoice that we may still be together in Christian fellowship and earnestly pray that our Heavenly Father may continue to keep His banner of love and care over them; and, that as their presence and service is blessing others, that there may be a rebound to their own lives.

The above resolutions was passed by the adjourned session of the Fourth Quarterly Conference of Keener Memorial Church by F. J. McCoy and members of the Conference.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Chapter IV. "The Dawning Vision of God," was dramatized. The scene was Dr. MacKay's room in Santiago Hotel, Chile. He was sitting in soliloquy when interrupted by two students seeking a faith and wanting to know if religion can really change life. This scene revealed the heart of the Borh, was gripping and effective, proving religion can and does change life. The entire delegation sang a fitting climax to this wonderful message, "Living for Jesus." This closed the morning session.

At the noon hour two charming and lovely Senoritas incostume came in and in song gave the invitation to lunch in Mexico City. The dining room was bright and gay—Mexican colors, red, white and green were carried out in decorations, place cards, and favors. A tasty lunch was served by maidens fair in bright Mexican costume. Liltng Spanish song, the lovely strain of the violin and a spicy talk on status of Latin American women added much pleasure to this hour.

After lunch came another delightful as well as instructive period when every one was invited into a curlo shop—a room most colorful with flowers and articles from various Latin American countries.

In the afternoon the study opened with song, "Blessed Assurance," followed by a prayer.

Chapter V. "Evangelical Mirrors," was well presented. A woman from Brazil came to let the conference look into four great mirrors through which Christianity had let Latin America see God. Four young women in costume represented these mirrors—the Bible, the Church, the School, the Social Wish. The scene was very personal and closed with the song, "Open Mine Eyes That I May See."

The presentation of Chapter VI. "Challenge to Christian Action," was most appealing. This was in drama form. The scene—Miss Mabel Howell's room, Scarritt College, Nashville. Four young women who had just finished their course were gathered there to have a last heart-to-heart talk with their teacher before going to Latin America to battle for Christ. Each showed how she was going to fill one great need in the field and thus help her brothers find the Savior. Every heart present seemed to feel a desire to do something for her Lord, so all stood and sang as a rededication of self, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go, Dear Lord."

The day closed with a pageant, "Over the Hills and Far Away," an effective playlet, showing very clearly the great need of Protestant Mission among the Indians of Latin America.

The Conference was dismissed with "Blest be the Tie" as a benediction.

This was indeed a red letter day for the Tupelo auxiliary. The spirit of love, fellowship, goodwill prevailing among the 140 present was marvelous. Everything went to prove MISSION Study can be made most attractive and helpful. May this be an example for years to come.

MRS. JACK CONDREY;

Chairman Mission and Bible Study.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

I wonder if you know about "Here and There," a missionary publication of the Board of Christian Education. Mr. Williams tells me he will be glad to provide you with as many copies as you need if you find a profitable way to use it. Certainly conference and district leaders should use it. Please advise me of your wishes about this. We have 200 copies of the Missionary Education Movement catalogs at Literature Headquarters now, and I am sure all conference officers will find them useful. Order as you wish.

I have divided the conferences into groups according to membership, and they are listed for comparison within their group. I hope your conference officers will study every department of work in your conference and comparing it with those in your group, discover where your strong and weak points are. Then see what relation your progress in mission study is to your total development. See if there is any relation between your Bible study and your Spiritual life. Watch for definite results from your study program.

Let me remind you to watch for encroachment on Woman's Missionary Society funds. Do not permit money given for missions to be used for the benevolences, the church budget, or local work. Be loyal and generous to your church and its world-wide program, but try to prevent that local-mindedness which admits diversion of missionary pledges. Do not allow your Woman's Missionary Societies to be saddled with a church or school debt. Assume your share of those things as a church woman.

All new record books are now ready. Conference secretaries may order new ones from Literature Headquarters for 75 cents. Urge district secretaries to get new ones at 50 cents, and societies to get a new set at 70 cents. They are all uniform now. But where the old and new books are being used, I insist that a pen, with a little time and trouble, can make reports uniform.

Today, there are six conference secretaries' reports not in. From those received, I find all but nine have a gain in members, with three reports showing fewer societies and members, although they have several new societies. Two have lost members, while four report gain in societies, but fewer members. Inaccurate reports may be responsible for this, so let your district secretaries know how their reports represent the conference, but watch your losses and net increases. Prompt and accurate reporting and studying of reports is one of the secrets of the success of Woman's Missionary Societies. Before making my next report, I shall compare the number of members with the number studying and with the number studying in Council classes. Then next year, I shall compare increases and watch for development, also try to learn how finances and study are related in the different groups of conferences. Your letters have been delightful. I appreciate every line of the good news you write, and I am eager to try to answer your questions and serve you in any way that I can.

Now, we shall endeavor to make this last quarter count for the most in every department, but with special emphasis on the Week of Prayer, Spiritual Life, meeting all pledges in full, and closing the year creditably. There is nothing so important as a dynamic spiritual motive in all this work we are trying to do with God and one another. Unselfish prayer and sacrificial service must be achieved in our individual lives if we would co-operate with God in His redemptive world-purpose. What are our prayers for Ethiopia and Manchuria, for the Orient and Latin America causing us to do today?

An unusually constructive agenda is being prepared for the mid-year executive committee meeting, November 19 and 20. Please hold this meeting in your thoughts and prayers and thus help us to find and do God's will.

GARLANDSVILLE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

Probably the greatest day that the Garlandville Methodist Church, Montrose charge, Mississippi Conference, has ever had in its more than one hundred years of history was on Tuesday, October 22, when the Centennial Celebration brought people from far and near, and many church notables, including Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs.

The program proved to be interesting and inspiring, and Bishop Dobbs has characterized the day as being "highly creditable to Mississippi Methodism." During the day money was raised to erect an appropriate marble marker near the church, which itself was erected probably in 1841 as the successor to a log building which seems to have been built

Sure Relief for Malaria!

Don't try homemade treatments or newfangled remedies! Take that good old Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. Soon you will be yourself again, for Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic not only relieves the symptoms of Malaria, but destroys the infection itself.

The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic kills the Malarial infection in the blood while the iron it contains builds up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and fortify against further attack. The twofold effect is absolutely necessary to the overcoming of Malaria. Besides being a dependable remedy for Malaria, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is also an excellent tonic of general use. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle today at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

before 1830.

The program of the day included the following:

FROM THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Billy Gannaway, Publicity Supt.

To the Pastors of the Louisiana Conference:

To you who are disciples of the Master and have gone about your daily tasks in making the world a better place in which to live, and have done so much toward the extending and bettering of young people's work in your own church and throughout the Conference, we, as young people, wish to express our sincere appreciation for the work that you have done throughout the past year.

Whether you are moved to a new appointment or returned to your present, we, the young people, pledge ourselves wholeheartedly to co-operate with you in carrying on the work next year. I feel that I express the sentiment of every Louisiana young person when I make this pledge.

We beg you ministers who have not taken a very active part in young people's work to join with those who are already deeply interested and help to make our Conference really accomplish great things during the next year.

May the united forces of young people and adults help to make the Kingdom of Heaven come upon the earth. May God, our Father, be always beside you as you continue to preach the gospel and serve your fellow man through the years that are ahead.

Your loving friends and admirers,
LOUISIANA YOUNG PEOPLE.

CARDUI

Cardui is a medicine which increases the appetite and assists digestion, helping women to get more strength from the food they eat. As nourishment is improved, strength is built up; certain functional pains go away, and women praise Cardui for helping them back to good health. A booklet about Cardui, containing many helpful facts about women's health, may be obtained on request from Dept. A, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn. Meanwhile, if you need a medicine for functional periodic pains, get a bottle of Cardui at the drug store and try it.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, NOVEMBER 24.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

THE MESSAGE OF HAGGAI AND ZECHARIAH

Some sixteen years had elapsed since the return of Judah to the homeland, but no more than the foundations of the temple had been laid. A measure of prosperity had come to individuals, and luxurious private homes had been built, still treasure seemed stored in bags with holes, and there was neither national prosperity nor contentment. Haggai urges the building of the temple as a remedy for the ills of his people. But what could the piling of stones and mortar on Mt. Zion have to do with bountiful crops or profitable markets? Directly, nothing; indirectly, everything. Progress and prosperity come through order and orderliness. First things must come first. God is first or not at all. When he ceases to be first he ceases to be God. Religion must precede economics. Fulfilling a trust comes first, and Cyrus had commissioned and equipped Judah to rebuild the temple. For this cause had their neighbors in Babylon given silver and gold. For this cause God had opened their way and made them safe. To this cause they were pledged and bound by most solemn ties. Without fulfilling their vows and discharging their duty they could not be good people, and it takes good people to make good times. Only the temple could bring unity among the people and permanency in their worship of Jehovah. Without it they would soon forget him. So Haggai exhorted them to build as a basis for prosperity and happiness.

They said "it is not the time," "there is opposition," "we are poor"—all alibis, and mostly lies. It is never time to do that to which our hearts do not incline; we are always too poor to buy what we do not desire. A purposeful procrastination delays what one hopes to avoid or to defeat. In this case delay meant dishonor. So long as the house of God lay in waste the presence of Judah in the land of promise was a living lie. They could not hold up their heads before their children nor their neighbors who had heard them shout for joy on their return. When violated conscience upbraids, there can be no peace nor joy in any phase of living. When the highest duty is neglected no lesser good can bring its legitimate satisfaction. Early Americans landed on these shores for the express purpose of building a place of worship. Has that pledge been fulfilled, or has it been lost to sight as private homes have been panelled and wages poured into "bags with holes?"

The prophets not only urged that building proceed, but they pointed the way. First claim on silver and gold inheres in their Maker, God. That force is slight and means are small or matters of little weight with him whose work is wrought by spirit. Those who despise the day of small things have not noted how nature provides grain for feeding a world, nor how great benefactions depend not so much on the few large donations of the rich as upon the multitude of gifts by the Lord's poor. The world today faces difficult conditions, but there is abundance for every need of God's church if only his professed followers set themselves with resolution to build as they have vowed. If they refuse to do this, how can they make any plea for prosperity? Is it good business, good sense, or good religion to trust great things to those who have been unfaithful? There are no cash prizes to be drawn by those who visit the altars of the Lord, but the universe is ordered for the upbuilding of the faithful.

When Children

Need a Laxative

In children's little bilious attacks and common colds, a very important part of the treatment is to keep the bowels active. Mothers have found pleasant-tasting Syrup of Black-Draught very useful in such cases. In fact, whenever laxative medicine is needed, children will not object to being given Syrup of Black-Draught, and by its relief of constipation, recovery will be hastened. Sold in 5-ounce bottles, price 50 cents.

RALLY DAY AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

The Methodist Church School of West Point, Miss., (500 pupils), had a most interesting and successful Rally Day on Sunday morning. At ten o'clock the pupils marched in procession from their different departments, two junior boys led the procession carrying, one the Christian and the other the Conquest flags. These were placed on the rostrum, as they indicated the spirit of the day—rallying to the Cross of Christ, marching under His banner. Miss Margie Grizzle was at the organ. All sang, "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Mr. Sam Dexter asked God's guiding hand over the work of the Sunday school. Mrs. B. M. Howorth as general superintendent led the program. She spoke of the meaning of the day, its bringing in of new pupils, and its getting of all together for the spirit of good fellowship and co-operation, that all might know one another, as through the remainder of the year the school meets entirely in departments.

She introduced the pastor, Rev. S. H.

Caffey, as the head of all activities of the church. He responded with a few words of encouragement on, "Beginning the New School Year." She then introduced Mr. C. R. Justice, assistant superintendent, who responded with appreciation of the work of the school. Dr. D. A. Meek, general secretary and treasurer was recognized as carrying out so faithfully his official duties, not having been absent from his post but once during the entire school year.

The different departments were then called and reported by classes. Each teacher stood with her class, repeated their favorite Bible verse and gave a short report. There was much interest in seeing how many perfect classes there were and how many new pupils each had obtained. There were found to be five perfect classes in both the junior and intermediate departments. Mrs. Howorth presented the junior classes with Christian booklet each, to be read by all, and the intermediate classes with a pennant each.

The early adult class received the pennant for the most new pupils and intermediate class No. 4 received the pennant for the largest per capita offering (exclusive of adults). The intermediate department had challenged any other department to excel their record in attendance for the Sunday school year just past. It was found that the junior department had done this.

The Robert Raikes roll for the whole school was read by Mrs. Howorth. The Methodist Sunday school has kept this roll for 24 years. It shows perfect attendance for each pupil for these years. There were 80 who had not missed this year. Miss Ethel Hines heads the list. She has not missed for 23 years, Miss Lucile Belk comes next with a record of 19 years, Mr. J. W. Belk with 15 years, Mr. D. A. Meek with 13, Miss Mary Haughton with 12, Mr. John Landin with 11, Misses Helen Harrold and Bessie Campbell with 10 each.

A basket of flowers was given to the mother of the youngest member and one to the mother of the oldest member of the Sunday school.

Dear Brother Duren: This is to express my thanks and to acknowledge receipt of the nice cards sent me upon renewal of my subscription for the Advocate.

I would also express my appreciation of a good Church paper. It is worth the price and should be read by every Methodist. However, if this were not true, it should have the support of every loyal Methodist to make it true.

Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound regularly for a while. It quiets quivering nerves—induces restful sleep—makes life a little easier.

"It Seemed As If Morning Would Never Come" says Mrs. Emma G. Batchelder of 32 Heard St., Chelsea, Massachusetts. "I was so nervous I could not get to sleep. My husband works hard at engineering and needs his sleep but I kept him awake too. I heard about the Vegetable Compound and tried it. Now I sleep better than I ever have and I feel fine."

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Ezra 7:10—For Ezra had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord and to do it, and to teach in Israel statutes and judgments.

Ezra was a man of distinguished ancestry: "Ezra, the son of Seiah, the son of Azariah," (vs. 1-5). He could trace his pedigree to Aaron, the high priest. "He was a ready scribe in the law of Moses." Ezra was a trusted counsellor of the king of Persia. Artaxerxes had authorized the return of the Israelites from Babylon to Jerusalem. Ezra would lead them.

Ezra was a man of influence among his own countrymen. In chapter eight we read the priests, Levites, people of the other tribes, and Nethenims accompanied him from Babylon to Jerusalem. There were upwards of 1770 males in the party. So the total, including wives, children, and servants would probably be from eight to ten thousand people.

Ezra believed in the importance of teaching religion. He wanted "to teach in Israel statutes and judgments." It was not secondary. It was primary. He desired to impart the highest knowledge. A solemn obligation rests on us not only to acquire the truth, but to impart it. Paul wrote Timothy to give heed to reason, exhortation, doctrine. How shall we go about teaching religion? Let us study the procedure of Ezra.

1. "Ezra prepared his heart." Without personal religion, all other qualifications would be unavailing. The teacher takes precedence over the lesson. John Wesley found his efforts impotent for years. "I went to America to convert the Indians, but who shall convert me?" The Aldersgate experience changed all that. Think of the preparation of Paul for three years in Arabia. Consider how carefully Jesus prepared His disciples. Remember the forty years of preparation of Moses in the wilderness. After the ascension of Jesus the disciples tarried in the upper room for the enduement of power, the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

2. Ezra prepared his heart "to seek the law of the Lord." He engaged in intellectual preparation. There is nothing pious in ignorance. To meet pupils unprepared produces a very demoralizing effect. Ezra sought the law of the Lord. He searched the Scriptures. To heart sympathy, he added knowledge of revealed truth. He must know more of the law of the Lord than his pupils if he would instruct them. Teachers must know before they can teach. "Then shall we know if we follow on to know the Lord," (Hos. 6:1).

3. "And to do it." Ezra prepared his heart not only to seek, but to do the law of the Lord. Moral preparation is absolutely essential for effective teaching. Character is a primary requisite of a Christian teacher. There must be a hearty doing of the discovered will. The teacher of religion must have a thoroughly religious attitude toward life. It is useless to teach others law observance unless the teacher obeys the law.

We know of a city not far away that has learned at last that it is folly to elect a mayor who himself defies the law. It is impossible for an official to enforce commands against gambling when he gambles; against strong drink when he drinks; against carrying concealed weapons when he shoots a man. The citizens are now trying to rectify their mistake.

This moral behavior is absolutely indispensable to teaching. Christians are to be doers of the Word, and not hearers only. Jesus said, "If any man do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God," (John 7:17). Ezra translated his discoveries into deeds.

Parents place themselves in an anomalous situation when they say they desire their children to be taught religion, yet they personally take no active part in religious exercises. Such parents are not fooling their children, their neighbors, their God.

To impart knowledge is the mere beginning of the duty of the teacher of religion. His supreme duty is to communicate through personality the spirit of worship and reverent living. "Religion is caught" as well as taught.

4. Having prepared his heart, having sought the Lord, having obeyed the law, Ezra became an effective teacher. All the congregation were convinced of their sin, and truly repenting; they cried out, "As thou hast said, so must we do," (10:12). Knowledge treasured in the heart and duly observed in the life ever gives power and energy to the teachings. So have teachers imparted to others a vital religious life.

PRAYER

Our Father, may we hear Jesus as He bids us to learn of Him and follow Him. He not only points the way, He is the Way. His light is the life of man. May He enlighten us and enliven us. May He teach us and inspire us.

May we be enabled to share Him with others. To carry out the Great Commission to teach all nations challenges our best, our all. But Christ has promised to be with us always as we engage in this difficult task. Help us to teach, we pray in Jesus' name.

The Chapel Choir

A chorus of sixteen well-trained professional voices, under the direction of John Lewis, well-known baritone, will broadcast hymns from the New Methodist Hymnal each Sunday evening at 5:30, Central Standard Time, over Radio Station WSM, Nashville, Tenn., 650 kilocycles. This program is presented in a very interesting way and one you will appreciate.

We earnestly request our preachers to inform their congregations about this broadcast each Sunday morning.

The first program went on the air Sunday, October 6, and comments from all sections of our Church indicate that it was well received and highly enjoyed.

JAMES MASON LAMPTON

Many lives, like the autumn leaf, mature, turn a golden glow and fall to mother earth. Not so with Mason Lampton, but like the green leaf broken premature, his life came to an abrupt end, leaving void the space and bringing untold grief to the family, and sorrow to the hearts of the people of his home town, and elsewhere. It would seem that his death was untimely, his life all too short, the bier too near the cradle. But under the loving hand of Him who makes no mistakes, we may come to understand some good day.

James Mason, better known as (Shrimp) to his friends everywhere, was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lampton and a representative of two of South Mississippi's leading families; the Lamp-ton and Ratliffs. Mason was born at Darbin, Miss., July 2, 1901. He was reared in an atmosphere of culture and refinement, given the advantages of an elementary education, and college training, which prepared him for a successful business career. He was a member of the Sigma Chi Fraternity, a Mason, Knight Templar and a Shriner, holding membership in Wahabi Temple, Jackson, Miss.

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

Mr. and Mrs. Lampton and children moved to Magee in 1925. Here they entered the mercantile business. Mason was made a member of the firm: J. H. Lampton & Son. Apart from this successful business, Mason was employed as Labor Supervisor by the State Highway Department, and it was while traveling in the interest of the department that the fatal accident occurred. A collision with a truck, the compact being so great, Mason was thrown from his car and seriously injured. He was carried to the General Hospital at Laurel, but lived only a few hours, passing out July 25, 1935.

Mason joined the Methodist Church at China Grove at the early age of ten; here his purity of life, consecration and loyalty was in evidence. His love for his parents and sister was past description; his interest in making the beautiful home attractive and comfortable was one of his chief delights. His high regard for the kingdom of God made it impossible for him to tolerate deception or hypocrisy. His sense of justice, right and fair play made him popular with all of the employees of the road, Negroes as well as whites. The white people came by the score to see his lifeless body, and add their tear of sorrow. The Negroes likewise were permitted to pass by, and with tear-stained cheeks, said good-bye to their friend. Truly it can be said the rich as well as the poor, the colored the same as the white, paid him the tribute of respect and honor.

When the Methodist people of Magee were contemplating building the new parsonage at Magee, it was two of the members, J. H. Lampton and son, that helped solve the financial problem, by saying, "We will see that you get the money and at a low rate of interest." Soon after the structure was completed, Mason said: "Now if we just had a new church in keeping with the parsonage."

The funeral was held from the Tyler-town Methodist Church. In the absence of the pastor, who was out of the state, Rev. J. T. Weems had charge, and was assisted by Rev. W. M. Williams, and Rev. B. H. Wiggins of Magee. With the following pallbearers: Fred Corley, Pat Ryan, A. A. Bush, Willie Caughman, J. B. Lockhart, Richard Simmons, Vance Harvey and W. Beck.

The beautiful floral offerings, the crowd that could not be seated, bore testimony to his popularity and his worth.

Besides the parents, one sister, Mrs. H. H. McCloud, are left behind to miss him in the sacred precincts of the home and world.

H. C. CASTLE, Pastor.

LAFAYETTE METHODIST CHURCH

November 20, 1929, stated that the Methodist church in Lafayette was organized in 1858, that Benjamin Porter Paxtin gave a site, and that a building was soon erected. The present magnificent building, valued at $100,000, was built during the pastorate of the late Rev. Leon I. McCain, and largely through his tireless efforts. The cornerstone was laid by Bishop Hay in November, 1924, while the Louisiana Conference was in session in Crowley.

The indebtedness that remained was small compared to the cost of the building, but it became a heavy burden when the years of depression came. The members were discouraged and fears were even expressed that the property might eventually be lost to the Church. But toward the close of last year a campaign was undertaken to reduce the indebtedness. As a result $6,000 has been paid on the principal, reducing it to $13,000; the interest has been reduced to five per cent, and arrangements have been made to extend the indebtedness through a period of ten years. Paving assessments, together with back interest of about $1,500, have been provided for. Annual payments have been fixed at approximately $1,000 a year. The strain upon the congregation has been relieved and the whole indebtedness can eventually be paid without hampering the regular work of the church.

Lafayette is a city of 15,000 inhabitants, and the Methodist church has a membership in excess of 500 and is the largest Protestant congregation in the city. Its splendid house of worship was greatly needed by the growing congregation; also because of the location in Lafayette of the Southwestern Institute, a flourishing State college which annually enrolls a thousand students. Because of this fact, the Board of Church Extension has generously aided in the new church enterprise. Also because of this fact the church felt it proper, in the recent campaign, to appeal to friends outside of Lafayette. The Louisiana Conference endorsed a general appeal, and a number of the pastors sent contributions, while many other friends—some in places as distant as New York City—sent contributions, and for all these the Lafayette church is very grateful.

Through the General and Conference Boards of Christian Education provision has been made for a student pastor at the Institute, and Rev. W. C. Barham has been employed for part-time service. The work was begun last year and will be enlarged during the session soon to open.

Notwithstanding the burden of the debt campaign, progress has been made in the regular work of the church. Last year and this good Vacation Bible Schools have been held. The total enrollment of the school this year was 137, and the closing service at night on the beautiful grounds of the church was a great occasion. Determined efforts will be made to meet all the financial obligations of the church this year in full. The present pastor, since coming to the church the last Conference year, has received 126 members, 52 of them on profession of faith.

MRS. J. H. BROWN

Mrs. Ruth Brown, widow of the late Rev. J. H. Brown, was born in Biloxi, Miss., March 28, 1853, and passed away at the home of her son, John Brown, near Jonesboro, La., May 27, 1935, at the age of eighty-two years, one month, and twenty-nine days.

On January 1, 1873, she was happily married to Rev. J. M. Brown, who preceded her in death some twelve years ago. For fifty years they fought bravely the battles of life, gladly bearing the burdens, going up and down the country wherever directed, serving the Church in the itinerant ranks in difficult places and on small salaries.

To this union were born six children, five of whom survive: namely, Walter and Reed, of Monroe; Miss Edna, of Los Angeles, California, John and Mrs. Bessie Brown Calloway, of Jonesboro. The second child died at the age of four. Fourteen grandchildren survive. Sister Brown was a Christian from childhood, uniting with the Methodist Church at an early age. She was rich in faith and Christian experience and lived her life for her Lord, for the Church, for her family, and for her friends. She belonged to that group of pioneer souls who blazed paths where highways never ran, and was content to live in her house by the side of the road and be a friend to mankind. Following services, conducted in the church by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. M. Henley, her body was laid to rest in the silent place in "God's Acre" at Jonesboro, La. Her memory is a precious ointment in this community.

Crawford Street Methodist Church

Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Miss., had its beginning in Openwood church, which was organized by the Rev. Newit Vick, in 1814; the congregation being domiciled in a neat log house about seven miles north of the site of the present church.

In 1820, the church was moved to the then village of Vicksburg, and the congregation was housed in a blacksmith shop, Rev. John Lane being the pastor. The church formed a part of the Warren Circuit, and services were held in private residences, and store buildings, etc., until 1830, when the congregation was taken from the Warren Circuit, and made into a station with Rev. John O. T. Hawkins, pastor.

Services were held in the county courthouse for two years. Then a small building was erected on the corner of Grove and Cherry Streets, where services continued until 1846, when a more suitable lot was secured at the corner of Crawford and Cherry Streets, and the house and lot previously occupied was deeded to the colored Methodists (then slaves), for a place of worship.

A comfortable brick structure was erected on the corner of Crawford and Cherry Streets in 1846, during the pastorate of Rev. Hayden Leavall. In 1899, during the pastorate of Rev. A. F. Watkins, the building was dismantled, and a more commodious structure was erected. This building stood until April 5, 1925, when it was destroyed by fire, while Rev. Geo. H. Thompson was pastor. Immediately plans were matured for the construction of the edifice in which the congregation worships at the present time, and which is one of the most beautiful church buildings in Mississippi.

The church yard is adorned with suitable shrubbery, and is made sacred by the dust of Rev.

Tobias Gibson, who is emphatically the father of Mississippi Methodism; which was moved from its resting place on a lonely, neglected hill, just south of Vicksburg on June 28, 1935, the project being sponsored by the Mississippi Methodist Historical Society, Rev. Henry G. Hawkins president.

Following are the names of the pastors who have served this church:

Wallet of the Week

THE COMMEMORATION FUND of the United Methodist Church of England is meeting with rather difficult conditions. When the union of the three branches of British Methodism was consummated it was planned to raise approximately $2,500,000, but only $1,110,000 of the total was reported to the 1935 session of the Conference. It is said that the slow progress of the movement was caused by stringent financial conditions and it is hoped that, with a measurable improvement in the business situation, the remainder of the proposed sum may be raised by the 1936 session.

ENGLAND HAS A MOVEMENT on foot to legalize "mercy killings." The move is sponsored by the "Voluntary Euthanasia Legalization Society," and is reported to have the support of Dean W. R. Inge. The bill seeks to give physicians legal authority to terminate suffering from incurable diseases if the patients wish it. It is proposed that a referee see the patient and decide whether permission for the voluntary death should be granted. After that, the patient would have seven days in which to change his mind. Another evidence of the emotionless and mechanistic thinking of our age.

THE REVENUE FROM DOG LICENSES has disclosed some interesting facts. It is said that there are now 12,000,000 licensed dogs in the United States, and it is estimated that there are 3,000,000 more that are unlicensed. It is alleged that the number of dogs has greatly increased since the beginning of the depression and that there has been an increased interest in dog breeding. The yearly expenditure for specially prepared dog foods is estimated at from $100,000,000 to $130,000,000. Dog raising may be profitable, but we doubt if it indicates a wholesome trend in American life.

BIBLE STUDY in the public schools of Chattanooga, Tennessee, is an elective course for which full credit is allowed. Nine or ten teachers, paid from other than tax funds, are employed for full time in the white schools of the city; nearly 9,000 children were enrolled in the Bible classes last year; and during the past thirteen years, more than $85,000 has been contributed by individuals, churches, and other organizations for the maintenance of that work. The experiment has been so successful that the State Board recently granted permission for the Bible to be taught as an elective course in the high schools of Tennessee.

THE RAREST POSTAGE STAMP in the world, according to the Christian World, is "a one-cent British Guiana black on magenta." At an auction recently it was withdrawn from sale when the bidding had reached $37,000—A one-cent stamp.

IN TURKEY, there are 238,917 more women than men, according to the tabulations of a recent census in that country. Compared with the census of 1927, which was the first in its history, there was an increase of eighteen per cent in the population. The population at present is 16,188,767. The gain of the last eight years marks a phenomenal growth, if not a record in the progress of population.

DR. HENRY SMITH LEIPER, foreign secretary of the Federal Council of Churches, believes that only a united front by the Churches can prevent Christianity from being supplanted by nationalism. His belief was expressed in a recent address before the Wisconsin Ministers Association. His subject was "The German Church Confronts Caesarism." The hopeful note was struck in the assertion that there is already in motion a process of getting together on the part of the Churches.

JOSEPH LEWIS, president of the Free Thinkers of America, has lost his suit to prohibit the use of the Bible in schools, hymn singing by public school children, or the use of school buildings for religious and social club meetings. Justice Collins held that the use of the Bible in no way affects the beliefs of free thinkers. He declared "Authentic free thinking involves the indubitable right to believe in God as well as the unfettered license not to believe or to disbelieve in a Deity."

DOCTOR FRANZ MANSFIELD, German archaeologist doing research work in Patagonia, reports the finding of the araucaria, a variety of pine tree with edible seeds which he says dates back to about forty million years ago. The wind swept pampas, now under investigation, are so barren of vegetation that more than three thousand acres are required to feed a goat; but they were once rich in tropical forests and vegetation and they were the native habitat of prehistoric monsters which have long been extinct. Patagonia today is the happy hunting ground of the archaeologist and it is said to be rich in the fossil treasures from which the intriguing story of the far distant years is being reconstructed.

DR. A. B. DINWIDDIE

In the death of Dr. A. E. Dinwiddie, Tulane University has sustained a great loss; the city of New Orleans and the state of Louisiana have suffered the loss of a worthy citizen and a man of great mold; and the cause of education in the South has been deprived of a trusted and capable leader. Dr. Dinwiddie embodied as perfectly as any man we have known the best ideals and traditions of the South. He was a man of real culture and he possessed marvelous administrative ability, but withal he was as modest and unassuming as the humblest man of the community. He was a Kentuckian by birth, a Virginian by rearing and education, a Louisianian by citizenship and service, and in his interests he belonged to the nation. In faith he was a Presbyterian, son of a Presbyterian minister and son-in-law of a Presbyterian minister, but he was ever a man of the broadest catholicity and he held the confidence of men of all classes and beliefs. We mourn his going, but we rejoice to have had such a friend.

BEFORE AND AFTER

"This time last week I was a very popular man. In fact, I was a much beloved man. The friendship of the brethren for me knew no bounds. Really, this was the time for which I had been waiting through all these years, the time when the brethren would come to me in droves, put their arms around me and tell me how greatly they admired me. My heart swelled with pride and I felt like a debutante at her coming-out party. They needed a man like me in the cabinet. The presiding eldership was being redeemed through my influence, and the preachers were looking to me to bring them to the place where the heavenly manna fell in abundance every day and the water in the brook never dried up. They called to me. They waved at me. They smiled upon me. They whispered endearing words into my ears. They actually made me believe that I had come to the kingdom for just such a time as this.

"That was during the three days that our Conference was in session and the appointments for the new year were being worked out. Now the Conference is over, the appointments have been read, and my popularity is gone. My stock has gone way down and I am not so great or so good as I was a few days ago. Those who fared well in the matter of their appointment, did so because of their recognized worth, while those who were disappointed, were blocked by some scheming presiding elder, in order to promote the interests of some friend.

"I can understand now why so many presiding elders are elected delegates to the General Conference. The election comes right at the time when we are most loved and appreciated. If it ever happens that the election of delegates to the General Conference takes place after the appointments are read, not a single presiding elder will be elected. One man called up about two hours after the appointments were read, and said: 'How did it happen that you could move nearly every man in your district as well as some in other districts, and yet do nothing for me?' Another called up and, with a voice in which there was no music at all, said: 'Well, I just want you to know what I think of you before I leave town.' The strange thing about it is, neither one of these men was in my district and I did not know that they were looking to me to give them a break.

"This thing of being a presiding elder is certainly no snap. It has more vexing problems to the square inch than any job I ever had. If you call Question 31, you are mercenary and all you are after is your percentage, but if you don't call it, they will starve you to death. By the way, not only do I ask, 'What amount has been raised the present quarter for the support of the ministry,' but I also add, 'AND HOW HAS IT BEEN APPLIED?' You see, they don't class elders as ministers any more, and if you don't put the question that way they will leave you out altogether.

"Well, I am trying to be religious, even as a presiding elder. It is not an easy thing to do either. It is a hard and thankless task, and after you have done all that you could, you remain the original 'unprofitable servant.' Your Conference will be in session in a few days. Here's wishing you luck."

THANKSGIVING FREE CARS

Dear Friends: The youth of the world is found mainly in two sets of surroundings. The first and original environment is the sacred precincts of the family home. Here the adjustment is in the hands of parents who discharge their duty with the aid of the government, the church and the school.

It has been said that, "home is a man's castle, a woman's heaven and a child's garden of memories." The divinely instituted home will assuredly look after its own. But what of the home wherein are lodged those upon whom fortune has never smiled? What of those in Institutional Homes, whose garden of memories have never assumed a tangible form? What of those children who depend for their spiritual and physical welfare, not upon the mother and father, who are their preconceived guardians, but upon the bounty and kind-heartedness of the givers, who donate the "loaves and fishes?" If we have a problem at all in the child world, it is concerned mainly with the homeless child who, but for the care of ministering givers would be "an unknown bark upon an unknown sea."

The Methodist Home in Jackson, both in a denominational sense and otherwise, represents a field of activity to be likened to the white harvest ready for the hand of salvation. The care and welfare of nearly 200 children is a 365-day problem that can be solved only through the channel of "Loaves and Fishes," and by the graciousness of those who have been blessed with the power to give. Included, of course, in these daily, weekly, monthly strivings are the special seasons when the needs of the moment loom up in a larger way by reason of the "holiday spirit" and "seasonal rejoicing."

Thanksgiving Day is a calendar event when appeal is recognized in all Christian lands. "To share and have part in the sorrows of our friends, broadens the vision, tempers the heart and makes golden the light that falls across the hearthstone where we with loved ones dwell." On this pending day of annual Thanksgiving may we reflect that 200 children without a "garden of memories" and without the individual hearthstone are depending upon the loving kindness of the Creator as it shines pure and soft through the soul of the giver.

It is only a short step from Galilee to America. There is no space at all between God and the heart of the giver. The identity is perfect; the plan is flawless and it remains for the broad mantle of charity to protect within its enveloping folds the child life that has been placed in our midst. "Loaves and Fishes." Who will give the "Loaves and Fishes?" May all who love childhood be blessed with the power and spirit to give.

To whom shall we give? Shall we donate to all the thousands of worthy causes to which our attention is directed? Or in keeping with our ability and means, shall we select the principal cause to which we must incline because of natural affiliation? That and the character of our gift must be decided by the giver.

The giver and receiver constitute the plan of Christian charity. Although self-evident truth needs no recommendation, the statement is not amiss that without the opportunity, the generous hearted would be unable to demonstrate the principle of relief in its manifold ways.

You have done your part in the past and it is because you have so thoughtfully and generously discharged your voluntary obligation in the past that I am requesting you to again assume the robe of benevolence with the children in our Home this Thanksgiving season. We are asking you to remember those in need when the Free Cars pass through your city during the week beginning November 25, with any of the articles listed below.

Your own innermost imagination will supply you with just a shadow of what the children feel when you feed and clothe them.

Mark all donations "The Methodist Home." We suggest the following to be sent: all kinds of groceries, canned goods, clothing, mops, brooms, sheets, school supplies, and farm products.

With every good wish and with love from the children, I remain,

Very sincerely,

FRED J. McDONNELL, Supt.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Reported by Rev. Robert H. Harper, D. D.

The Louisiana Annual Conference convened in ninetyeth session in First Methodist Church, New Orleans, Wednesday evening, November 20, 1935, at 7:45, with Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs in the chair. After a devotional service, consisting of appropriate readings, special music by the choir, and prayer led by Dr. Franklin N. Parker, the Bishop administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, assisted by W. H. Wallace, Jr., pastor-host, and the presiding elders of the Conference.

The roll call showed a large percentage of the members of the Conference present, and a fair proportion of the lay delegates.

R. H. Harper was elected secretary, John F. Foster and J. C. Rousseaux were elected assistant secretaries. R. W. Vaughan was elected statistical secretary, and H. W. Cudd, H. B. Hines, J. E. Hearne and C. E. McLean were named as his assistants. Upon motion of W. H. Wallace, Jr., the hour of meeting was fixed at 9 a. m., and that of adjournment at 12:30. The main auditorium was made the bar of the Conference.

Annual Committees were named as follows:

Conference Relations—B. D. Watson, J. A. Alford, J. W. Faulk, D. B. Boddie, J. B. Grambling, W. H. Royal, R. T. Ware.

Memoirs—R. W. Vaughan for A. W. Turner, J. G. Snelling for C. C. Wier, C. E. McLean for C. C. Miller, R. M. Brown for J. S. Henley, H. N. Brown for A. J. Coburn, N. E. Joyner for E. L. Cargill, W. L. Duren for Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., and Mrs. J. D. Nesom, J. C. Rousseaux for Mrs. H. W. May, Louis Hoffpalur to be responsible for securing the memoirs of Mrs. J. B. Cassity and of Mrs. J. H. Brown, and Briscoe Carter to be responsible for securing the memoir of Mrs. B. F. White.

Courtesy—H. W. Rickey, Ellis Smith, and A. M. Serex.

Resolutions—W. W. Holmes, J. R. Spann, and Dana Dawson.

Public Worship—W. L. Duren, W. H. Wallace, Jr., W. W. Holmes, J. W. Rely, Fred Howell, D. B. Raulins.

District Conference Records—R. S. Walton, H. B. Hysell, W. T. Gray.

The character of all the preachers in the Conference was passed.

Dr. A. F. Smith, one of the Publishing Agents; Dr. W. M. Alexander, secretary of the Department of Schools and Colleges of the General Board of Christian Education; Rev. L. F. Alford and Rev. L. J. Power of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. D. L. Coale, one of the general evangelists, were introduced.

A very interesting feature of the evening was the unveiling by Mrs. Lelia Carré, of an oil painting of Judge Edward McGehee. The picture is the property of Mr. Stewart McGehee of Wilkinson County, Miss., and will eventually be given to the First Methodist Church of New Orleans. Upon request of Dr. Wallace, R. H. Harper was requested to speak of the character of Judge McGehee and his splendid service in the founding of Methodism in New Orleans. Judge McGehee had a notable part in the building of the first Methodist Church building on Gravier Street, New Orleans, in 1825, and in the building, later, of the Poydras Street Church, giving of his time and contributing most liberally of his own means, and it is fitting that the mother church of Methodism in New Orleans, which has had an uninterrupted existence of 110 years, and which is now commonly known as First Methodist Church still bears the corporate name of "Methodist Episcopal Church, South, McGehee Charge."

Announcements were made, the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Dana Dawson, and the Conference adjourned.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 21.

Conference convened, according to rule, at 9 a. m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. Dr. Fagan Thompson, of Vanderbilt University, who was in attendance upon the Conference to acquaint the brethren with the New Methodist Hymnal, led in the singing, and Dr. J. R. Spann led in prayer.

The roll of absentees was called; substitutions of alternate delegates were made, and, upon motion, further calling of the roll was dispensed with.

Dr. R. N. Allen, associate secretary of the Board of Church Extension; Dr. Elmer P. Clark, of the Board of Missions; Dr. M. P. Woods, of the Methodist Benevolent Association; Dr. Walter Anthony, of Waco, Texas, guest speaker of the Conference; Dr. C. C. Neal, of the C. M. E. Church, representing Haygood Institute of Moton, Arkansas, were presented at different times during the morning, and, with the exception of Dr. Anthony, all addressed the Conference; as did Dr. A. F. Smith, Dr. W. H. Alexander, and Mr. C. M. Chalmers, manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and Dr. Franklin N. Parker, dean of the Candler School of Theology. Following the address of Dr. Neal, an offering of $56.60 for Haygood Institute was laid on the table. Mr. Chalmers informed the Conference of the welcome fact that the New Orleans Christian Advocate is now free of debt.

Communications were received from the several boards of the Church and were referred to the corresponding boards of the Conference. A letter was read from Dr. F. S. Barker, expressing his regret at his inability to attend the Conference and making request concerning his work, and it was referred to the Board of Christian Literature. The secretary also announced the receipt of a letter from Rev. W. F. Henderson, one of the superannuates.

Mrs. Hoyt M. Dobbs, Mrs. W. H. Wallace, Jr., Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Mrs. W. L. Duren, and Mrs. Dana Dawson were presented to the Conference. Mrs. George S. Sexton, Jr., and Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter, president and corresponding secretary, respectively, of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Conference, were presented. Mrs. Ledbetter submitted the report of the Society and it was ordered to record, as was also the report of the Conference treasurer of the Society. The reports show 214 auxiliaries and 6,551 members, and a total of $26,723.86 sent the Conference treasurer, and $17,838.07 for local work reported.

Upon motion of W. H. Giles, J. C. Price was made a member of the Committee of the Second Year, in place of J. S. Henley, deceased.

Mrs. Susie Lingle, of Shreveport, was presented, and she stated that copies of a picture of early bishops of the Church could be secured on application to her.

Hearing of the report of the Board of Lay Activities was made the order of the day for 11 a. m., Friday.

The names of the superannuates were called and those present—J. E. Williams, John F. Foster, S. J. Davies, F. N. Sweeney, G. F. White, J. D. Nesom, J. T. McVey—came to the chancel; Bishop Dobbs addressed them in high appreciation of their long service and assured them of the pleasure of the Conference in their presence, and, following this, Dr. Fagan Thompson led in the singing of "How Firm a Foundation."

Question 14 was called: "What preachers have died during the year? The secretary read the names of C. C. Miller, E. L. Cargill, A. W. Turner, C. C. Wier, A. J. Coburn, J. S. Henley; upon request of the Bishop the Conference stood a few moments in silence, then, upon his request, R. H. Harper led in prayer.

W. W. Holmes read the report of the Committee on Public Worship as follows:

Report of Committee on Public Worship:

Our Conference guest preacher is Dr. Walter Anthony from Waco, Texas. He will preach today and tomorrow at 3 p. m., and 7:45 p. m.

Sunday Services—9 to 9:30 a. m., Radio sermon over WSMB—F. N. Parker.

Evangelical Churches—Trinity, 7:30 p. m., J. J. Rasmussen.

Christian Churches—St. Charles Avenue, 11 a. m., J. R. Spann; Carrollton Avenue, 11 a. m., Guy M. Hicks.

Methodist Episcopal Churches—Napoleon Avenue, 11 a. m., B. C. Taylor, 7:30 p. m., W. W. Perry; Eighth Street, 11 a. m., A. M. Shaw, 7:30 p. m., G. W. Pomeroy.

Southern Methodist Churches—First Methodist, 9:30 a. m., Love Feast, conducted by H. N. Harrison, 9:30 a. m., Wesley Class—A. M. Serex, 11 a. m., Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs, 7:30 p. m., Dana Dawson; Carrollton Avenue, 9:30 a. m. Men's Class—E. C. Gunn, 11 a. m., H. L. Johns; Epworth, 11 a. m., W. C. Scott, 7:30 p. m., all former pastors; St. Mark's, 11 a. m., J. D. Fombey; Algiers, 11 a. m., R. M. Brown; Felicity, 11 a. m., F. N. Parker; McDonoghville, 11 a. m., D. W. Poole, 7:30 p. m., H. N. Brown; Chalmette, 11 a. m., L. W. Cain, 7:30 p. m., Jerome Cain; Parker Memorial, 11 a. m., H. N. Brown; Louisiana Avenue, 11 a. m., J. W. Faulk; Gentilly, 9:30 a. m., W. H. Royal; Rayne Memorial, 11 a. m., L. L. Cowen.

Announcements were made, including that of preaching at 3 p. m., and 7:45 p. m., by Dr. Walter Anthony, the doxology was sung, tune of Sessions, led by Dr. Fagan Thompson, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. B. Williams, and the Conference adjourned.

THIRD DAY—FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 22.

Conference convened, according to rule, at 9 a. m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. Dr. Fagan Thompson led in the singing of "Come, Thou Fount," Rev. C. K. Smith led in prayer, and the Bishop led the responsive reading. Dr. Thompson sang one of the hymns of the New Hymnal. The minutes of the second day were read and approved.

Rev. Porter M. Caraway, formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference, now pastor of First Church, Gulfport, Miss., and Dr. J. J. Morgan, of the American Bible Society, were introduced.

R. H. Harper called attention to the death of Dr. A. B. Dinwiddie, late president of Tulane University, and, moved that the Conference, in recognition of Dr. Dinwiddie's long service to our youth, and in view of the fact that Mr. William Duren was a professor in the department of mathematics of Tulane and that a number of the sons of our ministers are students in the institution, stand for a few minutes in silence, and the motion prevailed. The secretary, upon request of the Bishop, led in prayer.

Dr. G. L. Morelock, general secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, and Dr. Pierce Cline, president of Centenary College, were introduced. Later, during the morning, Dr. O. E. Kriege, who was for many years president of the former New Orleans University of the M. E. Church, and Rev. W. H. Bengtson, pastor of the Eighth Street M. E. Church of the city, were introduced.

Dr. Pierce Cline, president, read the report of Centenary College. The report shows that the present enrollment is 490. Of these, thirteen are studying for the ministry. "A wholesome standard of moral conduct is exacted and received from each student in school. The religious atmosphere of the campus is increasing in its influence. The Ministerial Association and the C. M. C. A. are flourishing. Last spring religious emphasis week was observed, the services being led by Rev. W. H. Wallace, pastor of First Methodist Church, New Orleans." The standards of scholarship, already high, are being raised. The success of Centenary students in the universities and graduate schools is noteworthy. "The financial picture at Centenary has varied shades of light and darkness. During the past two years all bills have been paid and more than $30,000 of indebtedness retired. Additional indebtedness is being retired during the current session. The darker side of the picture is mainly the result of rising costs of living. Our faculty is working on a salary less than the minimum fixed by the Southern Association of Colleges, of which we are a member. It seems imperative that means be provided to give increased salaries to the faculty. During the summer some of the columns, the cornerstone, the doors to the main auditorium, and the pulpit of the Union Literary Society of the old Centenary building at Jackson, Louisiana, were purchased, and have been removed to our campus. Some of the columns can be seen standing in front of the spot where a good administration building ought to be. These worthy relics of the magnificent Centenary that was bear mute but eloquent testimony of the undying faith and the unquenchable spirit of the little school with a large purpose.

Dr. D. B. Raulins read Report No. 1 of the Board of Christian Education. The report recommended that every effort be made to carry out the agreement entered into on January 3, 1935, between the bankers holding the bonds and the executive committee of the Conference Board of Christian Education, and "that the same apportionment for annual interest on bonds be retained in our budget as this year, and that the Bishop, presiding elders, Centenary College officials, preachers and Methodists of the Conference co-operate to raise an additional amount necessary to pay 3% interest and $10,000 reduction on principal by the time of the 1936 Conference session." G. W. Holloman explained the provisions of the report concerning the bonded indebtedness. Rev. Louis Hoffpauir offered an amendment that the Bishop appoint a committee to undertake to raise a substantial amount on the principal indebtedness, and the amendment was lost. Rev. C. K. Smith asked a question concerning the report. G. W. Holloman, Rev. H. L. Johns, and W. L. Doss, Jr., discussed the matter. The report was then adopted.

R. H. Nelson read report No. 2 of the Board of Lay Activities. Dr. G. L. Morelock, general secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, Bishop Dobbs, and S. M. McReynolds, Conference Lay Leader, spoke to the report, and it was adopted.

The report urged the promotion of Christian stewardship, commended the Christian Advocate for designating the issue of the last week in January as a Stewardship Number and urged particular emphasis upon the observance of February as Stewardship Month, stressed the importance of personal evangelism; reported a substantial increase in the benevolences under the new financial plan, and, in view of the great needs to be met, recommended that both our ministers and laymen everywhere be untiring in their efforts to increase the benevolences, and that one-half of the same be raised by the time the District Conference shall meet; recommended a sound financial plan in every church, including an every-member canvass, and the use of weekly or monthly envelopes; adequate support for our ministers and salaries paid monthly; designated the second Sunday in June, or a Sunday as near thereto as practicable, as Laymen's Day, when the program of the laymen shall be presented in every church, recommended the circulation of our church periodicals, and urged that the District Board of Lay Activities, pastors, boards of stewards and other interested laymen meet as soon as possible after the Annual Conference, on call of the presiding elder, for the study of the Church program and to plan the work of the year. The report also nominated S. M. McReynolds as Conference Lay Leader, and, with the adoption of the report, he was duly elected.

Upon motion of Dr. W. W. Holmes, the secretary was instructed to send a message of sympathy to the family of Dr. J. E. Crawford, lately deceased. J. C. Price conveyed to the Conference the greetings of Rev. H. W. Bowman, a superannuate unable to attend the session on account of bad health, and the secretary was instructed to send a telegram of appropriate sentiments, both to Brother Bowman and to his father-in-law, Rev. S. S. Holladay.

Bishop Dobbs, having to meet a committee, called Dr. F. N. Parker to the chair.

Dr. Glenn Sneed, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church of the city, was introduced; also Dr. A. A. Leifste, district superintendent of the Lake Charles District of the M. E. Church, were introduced.

Dr. E. B. Hawk, dean of the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, addressed the Conference, dwelling upon the alarming scarcity of well-trained ministers in many sections of the Church, and stressing the need of adequately preparing our young men for their important calling.

Dr. George S. Sexton, on privilege, spoke in humorous vein of the several mistakes which had been made of late by the newspapers concerning his identity, one of the papers writing of him as the president of St. Mary's College, another as one of the foremost of our women educators, and still another referring to him as "mother superior."

The committee on Public Worship made a supplementary report, appointing Rev. J. H. Alford to preach at Second Methodist Church on Sunday morning and Rev. Carl Lueg to preach at the Church of the Redeemer (Methodist Episcopal).

Announcements were made, including those of preaching by Dr. Walter Anthony at 3 p. m. and 7:45 p. m., Dr. Fagan Thompson led in the singing of "Faith of Our Fathers," Dr. L. L. Cowen pronounced the benediction and the Conference adjourned.

FOURTH DAY—SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1935

The Conference convened, according to rule, at 9 a. m. Bishop Dobbs in the chair. Dr. Thompson led the hymn. Dr.

W. H. Wallace, Jr., led the prayer, and the Bishop led the responsive reading. The minutes of the third day were read and approved.

The Conference was honored with a visit from Mr. Phillip H. Leter, of Shreveport, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge, F. & A. M., of Louisiana, who read an able paper on the ideals of Masonry and its rightful place in the community and its relation to the church. He was accompanied by Mr. Rudolph Latzko, Grand Commander of Knights Templar, and Past Grand Masters James H. Roland and E. H. Addington. The Conference rose in a vote of appreciation of the paper of Grand Master Leter.

Report No. 1 of the Board of Missions was read by Guy M. Hicks, and adopted. The report called attention to the General Missionary Council, to meet in Washington, D. C., Jan. 7-9, 1936, and the chairman of the Board, Dr. W. L. Doss, Jr., Mrs. George S. Sexton, Jr., the presiding elders of the Conference, T. L. James, Dr. Dana Dawson, James W. Rely, W. B. Rely, Dr. W. H. Wallace, Jr., T. W. Holloman, H. T. Wadley, W. T. Murray, R. T. Moore, Mrs. J. B. Pollard, Dr. W. L. Duren, were appointed delegates.

District Missionary Institutes were announced as follows: New Orleans District, Feb. 11; Baton Rouge District, Feb. 12; Lake Charles District, Feb. 13-14; Alexandria District, Feb. 18; Monroe District, Feb. 19; Ruston District, Feb. 20; Shreveport District, Feb. 21. The place and hour of each meeting will be fixed by the presiding elder.

Rev. S. A. Seegers was nominated as Golden Cross Director; Rev. W. H. Wallace, Jr., as Conference Missionary Secretary, and Mr. Van Carter as lay evangelist.

The list of appropriations by the Board of Missions was read by Rev. E. C. Gunn.

The report of the Memorial Mercy Home was read and adopted after the work of the Home had been discussed by the superintendent, Dr. J. G. Snelling, and by Dr. Doss. The report requested the Bishop to re-appoint Dr. Snelling as superintendent, and fixed the second Sunday in February as a day on which the work of the Home shall be represented in every congregation and an offering taken. The report of the superintendent showed that 126 mothers have been cared for in the Home during the year. The report of the auditor of the Home was submitted for record.

The first constructive thing which the Conference has been able to do toward hospital work was initiated by the Hospital Committee of the Board of Missions, in recommending the naming of several hospitals over the State as Golden Cross Hospitals, to which needy patients may be sent through the use of Golden Cross funds. Satisfactory arrangements have already been made with six hospitals in the State—the Baton Rouge General Hospital, the Shreveport Sanitarium, the Southern Baptist Hospital in New Orleans, St. Patrick's Sanitarium in Lake Charles, and the Tri-State Hospital in Shreveport. A relief committee will be set up in each district, composed of the District Director of Golden Cross, the presiding elder, the District Secretary of the W. M. S., District lay leader, and District educational director, which committee shall have authority to assign patients to the Golden Cross hospitals, the expenses to be paid out of the Conference Golden Cross fund. Any Methodist congregation in Louisiana that should desire to bear the expenses of a patient in a Golden Cross hospital may report the amount expended as raised for the Golden Cross. The plan thus adopted has been brought about through the vision and earnest efforts of Rev. S. A. Seegers, who continues as Conference Golden Cross Director.

The report of S. H. Meyer, treasurer of the Board of Missions, was received and ordered to record.

Dr. Leon W. Sloane, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Louisiana, addressed the Conference. Dr. W. L.

Doss, Jr., Dr. W. H. Wallace, Jr., J. R. Abeles and S. M. McReynolds were elected to membership in the League.

An offering was taken for a needy superannuate and the amount received was $78.40.

Luman Eugene Douglas and James Clark Whitaker, from the Ruston District, and James Claire Sensintaffar, from the Shreveport District, were admitted on trial.

Answers to minute questions showed that no one was discontinued, readmitted, or located, and it was also worthy of note that no one had withdrawn or had been expelled.

G. A. Morgan, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, was received by transfer from the Central Texas Conference, and Ivan O. Donaldson, in the class of the fourth year, was transferred to that Conference.

Alfred D. St. Amant, Jr., and Jerome Cain were advanced to the class of the second year. Winans Fletcher Beadle, student in a theological school, remained in the class of the first year.

Albert Alexander Collins and Jack Holland Midyett were advanced to the class of the third year and later received into full connection.

Carl Frederick Lueg, Alton Ausborne McKnight, Alvin Percy Smith and Otis Wesley Spinks were advanced to the class of the fourth year.

Roland William Faulk, Jolly B. Harper, Joe Brown Love, John Fletcher Wilson, David Tarver and Allen Walter Townsend were graduated in the course of study and elected elders. Henry Arberry Rickey, already an elder, was graduated in the course of study. Ivan O. Donaldson, transferring out, and Lovice Alton Carrington remained in the class of the fourth year.

Rev. H. W. Rickey informed the Conference of the birthday of Rev. J. B. Williams. Brother Williams was congratulated by Bishop Dobbs, and, upon invitation, he addressed the Conference.

A number of visiting ministers of city churches, and Mr. W. W. Carre, layman of First Methodist Church, and Miss Mary Werlein, sister of the late Dr. S. H. Werlein, were introduced to the Conference.

The presiding elders made their reports. Briscoe Carter reported a new church at Tullas and ten charges paying in full; K. W. Dodson, more than 1,000 members received and Boards of Christian Education organized in most of the churches; B. F. Rogers, two new parsonages and one new church and a majority of charges paying in full. H. L. Johns, sixteen charges paying in full; W. L. Duren, eleven charges paying in full and a large amount paid on church indebtedness; Louis Hoffpaul, a large number of charges paying in full; George S. Sexton, more than 1,000 members received and every charge paying in full. Bishop Dobbs spoke in high praise of the work done in the several districts, and, upon his request, Dr. Fagan Thompson led the Conference in the doxology.

Following the reports of Briscoe Carter and K. W. Dodson, retiring elders, each was presented a token of love and appreciation from the preachers of his district by J. J. Rasmussen and W. W. Perry, respectively.

Dr. W. L. Duren addressed the Conference concerning the New Orleans Christian Advocate. He stated that the indebtedness of more than $4,000 had been paid and that there was a cash balance on hand of $123.35. The debt being paid, he feared a reaction and loss of interest, and he urged that the brethren continue their hearty support of the Advocate.

H. B. Hysell read the report of the Committee on District Conference Records, which showed that all the records are well kept. One of the records, however, was not before the committee.

The benediction was pronounced by Dr. G. S. Sexton, and the Conference adjourned, to meet at 2 p.m.

Afternoon Session

The Conference met, pursuant to adjournment, at 2 p. m. Dr. Franklin N. Parker, by appointment of the Bishop, in the chair. Dr. Fagan Thompson led in the hymn, and Rev. J. A. McCormack led in prayer. Minutes were read and approved.

The report of the Legal Conference was read by Briscoe Carter and ordered to record. The report of the Commission on Budget was read by R. R. Branton and adopted. The apportionments for the several claims are approximately the same as last year, the total for General Work being $40,000, and for Conference Work $60,000.

Report No. 2 of the Board of Christian Education was read by D. B. Raulins and adopted. The report consisted of a resolution, authorizing the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Methodist Assembly, according to their judgment, to sell and convey to the Trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund of the Mississippi Conference all the property now vested in the Seashore Methodist Assembly, except a certain portion reserved for tabernacle meetings, etc., and it being understood that all debts against the Assembly should be assumed by the trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund.

D. B. Raulins also read report No. 3 of the Board of Christian Education. The report urged that parents of students in State institutions of learning send the names of said students to those in charge of student work, Rev. Joe Brown Love, First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge; Rev. W. C. Barham, First Methodist Church, Lafayette, and others. Four objectives for the local church and the district were set: A functioning Board of Christian Education in every church; a minimum of five local church training classes in each district; that ample time be given in district conferences for adequate presentation of Christian education, and that our pastors continue to call attention, from the pulpit, to articles of unusual value appearing in our church school literature.

S. M. McReynolds read the report of the Committee on Social Welfare and Temperance of the Board of Lay Activities. The report spoke in no uncertain terms against the liquor traffic and other evils of the present. The report deplored the gambling situation in New Orleans and other sections of the State, and called upon State authorities to carry out the law against slot machines and other devices.

The report of the Board of Finance was read by S. A. Seegers. The report nominated Dr. John F. Foster as Conference Director of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and gave the list of appropriations to the Conference claimants.

The report of the Bible Board was read by A. T. Law and adopted. The report dwelt upon the importance of the distribution of the great Book, urged the observance of Universal Bible Sunday, December 8, 1935.

D. B. Boddie read the report of the Board of Christian Literature and it was adopted. The report stated that the New Orleans Christian Advocate has had an increase in circulation of nearly 2,000 readers. Attention was called to the New Methodist Hymnal. The following appointments were recommended: Editor of New Orleans Christian Advocate, W. L. Duren; associate editor, Henry T. Carley; special writer for the Publishing House, F. S. Parker; members of the Publishing Committee, H. L. Johns, A. M. Serex and J. W. Reilly.

R. T. Ware read the report of the Committee on Conference Relations, recommending brethren for the superannuate relation. The list of men remained unchanged with the exception that T. P. Turner was added and that J. D. Nesom's name had not been referred to the Committee and that he automatically returned to the effective relation.

Upon motion of R. H. Harper, the appreciation of the Conference was expressed to the florists of the city who had kept the church decorated with beautiful flowers, and to Mrs. G. G. Tomlinson and Mrs. J. D. Rumph, flower committee.

A. M. Serex, pastor, invited the Conference to hold its next session in Minden. Mr. Thomas Cornell, of Minden, joined in the invitation, and Minden was selected as the place of the next Conference.

Dr. Fagan Thompson led in the singing of hymn 522. Question 14 was resumed: "What preachers have died during the year?" The names of deceased preachers and deceased wives of preachers were called. Memoirs of the deceased preachers, A. W. Turner, C. C. Weir, C. C. Miller, J. S. Henley, A. J. Coburn, E. L. Cargill, and of Mrs. W. L. Doss, Jr., Mrs. J. D. Nesom, Mrs. H. W. May, Mrs. J. H. Brown, Mrs. B. F. White and Mrs. A. W. Turner, were read. S. J. Davies will furnish later the memoir of Mrs. J. B. Cassity, and D. B. Raulins will furnish the memoir of Mrs. Christian Keener. W. W. Holmes spoke upon the character of the late Rev.

Henry Ahrens, local preacher, and formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference.

Following the reading of the memoirs, a number of the brethren paid tribute to the character of the deceased. "Abide With Me" was sung, the benediction was pronounced by R. H. Harper, and the Conference adjourned, to meet at 3 p. m. Sunday.

FIFTH DAY—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1935

The Conference convened pursuant to adjournment, at 3 p. m., Bishop Dobbs in the chair. "How Firm a Foundation" was sung, and Dr. Franklin N. Parker led in prayer. Minutes of Saturday afternoon were read and approved.

R. W. Vaughan, statistical secretary, made his report, answered questions 25-40, and submitted the statistical tables for record.

Reports were received and ordered to record—of the Conference treasurer, of the Board of Church Extension, and of the New Orleans Methodist Depository.

W. L. Doss, Jr., called attention to the Missionary Council in Washington, D. C., and A. K. McLellan called attention to the Missionary Council in Memphis.

Bishop Dobbs submitted his Certificate of Ordination, showing that Albert Alexander Collins and Jack Holland Midyett had been ordained deacons at the morning service at the First Methodist Church, following the sermon of Bishop Dobbs, and that David Tarver, Roland William Faulk, Allen Walter Townsend, Jolly B. Harper, Joe Brown Love and John Fletcher Wilson had been ordained elders in the beginning of the afternoon session.

H. W. Rickey, for the Committee on Courtesy, composed of himself, Ellis Smith and A. M. Serex, read the following expression of appreciation of courteous hospitality received: "White is the absorption of all color. Hospitality is a tree of Methodist life that bears twelve manner of fruits. It is a grace that uses the gifts and talents of a high order—for hospitality is a cluster of fine arts as we have seen exhibited under the guidance of Mrs. D. M. Campbell, General Chairman, and illustrated by the Transportation, Registration, Housing, Lunch, Flower, Music, Pages, Entertainment Committees and the Information Bureau. Dr. Duren, his co-hosts, the pastors, churches, friends of other folds, overlooked nothing that could add to the comfort or business of the Conference. Because they have lived up to the best traditions and reputation of old New Orleans—the valley-gate to five seas—we do vote them our heartfelt appreciation."

Minutes of the afternoon session were read and approved, with instructions that they include the appointments and the record of adjournment, sine die.

H. L. Johns, secretary of the Board, and his cabinet, read the list of changes in charge lines. Bishop Dobbs then read the appointments.

The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Briscoe Carter, and the 90th session of the Louisiana Annual Conference adjourned, sine die.

CONFERENCE NOTES

The ninetieth session of the Louisiana Conference was held in First Methodist Church, on St. Charles Avenue, New Orleans, the splendid house of worship of the mother church of New Orleans Methodism, of a congregation which has had an uninterrupted existence of 110 years, worshiping during that century and a decade in the original building on Gravier Street, Poydras Street Church, "old" Carondelet, rented quarters during the Federal occupation of the city, and in the present building on St. Charles Avenue. But the Conference was the guest of all the Methodist churches of the city, and Dr. W. L. Duren, presiding elder of the district, and Dr. W. H. Wallace, Jr., pastor of First Church, had the co-operation of all the pastors and church leaders of the several Methodist churches in entertaining the Conference most hospitably.

On Saturday automobiles were provided for all who desired to visit the Memorial Mercy Home on Washington Avenue and St. Mark's Hall on Rampart Street.

The large vested choir of First Church, under the direction of Mr. G. Campbell Cooksey, was present at all special services during the Conference and added much to the pleasure and profit of the Conference.

The Bishop and presiding elders were entertained in the DeSoto Hotel, where they had ample accommodations for cabinet meetings. The statistical secretary and the Conference treasurer were also provided for in the De Soto.

Mrs. Lelia Carré, long prominent in the work of the Woman's Missionary Society, prepared a most interesting and instructive exhibit which contained many things of interest in connection with Methodist history in the city, and especially in connection with the history of First Methodist Church.

The new Methodist Hymnal had recently been purchased in large number by First Church and it was in use throughout the session. Dr. Fagan Thompson, professor in Vanderbilt University, was present to lead in the singing and to acquaint the Conference with the new Hymnal. In this he rendered a fine service.

Mrs. D. M. Campbell was general chairman. Miss Alice Wasson, of the transportation committee; Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, of the registration and reception committees; Mrs. B. Kiern, of the committee on housing; Mrs. Paul Hogan, of the flower committee; Mrs. Louis Clark and Capt. Zatarain were the entertainment committee, Miss Gertrude Oliphant, chairman of pages committee, the young people's department of First Church were in charge of the check room, and Mr. Robert Crichlow was postmaster, but illness prevented his serving throughout the session. Luncheon was served at noon each day, with the exception of Sunday, in the social hall of First Church, by the different churches in turn. Mrs. Reilly provided coffee service in the social hall throughout the session.

Dr. Walter Anthony, pastor of Austin Avenue Methodist Church, Waco, Texas, was guest speaker at several afternoon and evening services. On Saturday evening was held the anniversary of the Bible Board, with Dr. E. B. Hawk, dean of the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, and Rev. W. F. Roberts, Presbyterian pastor of the city, as the speakers. Bishop Dobbs preached to a large congregation in First Methodist Church on Sunday morning, and Dr. Dana Dawson delivered an illustrated lecture on Palestine in the same church on Sunday evening. Preachers of the Conference were assigned to preach in a large number of Methodist (South and North), Presbyterian, Christian and Evangelical Churches on Sunday. The weather was cool, crisp and pleasant throughout the session, the Conference was well attended by members and visitors, and it will likely be remembered as a notable one.

NOTICE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

At Noon, Saturday, during the session of the Mississippi Conference at Laurel, some one took the wrong overcoat and left theirs instead. The one left is two sizes too small. The one taken, if it was mine, is marked as sold by "Downing & Lock, Jackson, Miss.," on the inside of the collar.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

Suggested Service Projects

Find out through the annual report of the Woman's Missionary Council the names and locations of our schools in Korea; mark them on the map. Make a list of our missionaries who teach in these schools, reporting to the society by telling anything you may know about them. Special prayer should be enlisted.

Name our hospitals in Korea; also the doctors and nurses in charge. Enlist prayer in their behalf.

Find out in what cities we conduct Woman's Evangelistic work in Korea. Name missionaries engaged at these points.

Make a scroll containing names for whom your society will pray. Let members of the society select the name of a missionary to whom they will write, not expecting an answer.

Paragraphs from Conference Committee Reports In April

That the secretary of children's work and the members of the Missionary Society urge the observance of the fourth Sunday in the Church School as "Missionary Sunday" and the sending of the offering to Mr. R. G. Lord, Conference secretary of Board of Christian Education.

That the secretary of children's division in co-operation with the leaders of the children's division of the local church seek to acquaint the children with the kind of work for which their money is used.

Paragraph from Fall Conference Letter

The Conference secretary for the Board of Christian Education reports very few of the local churches sending their fourth Sunday's Church School offering for missions. You will recall that the Woman's Missionary Society receives eight per cent of this fund. Will you please see that your church sends this offering to Rev. R. G. Lord at Grenada?

* * *

Paragraph from Conference Committee in April

That "Citizenship" be studied during the year by each auxiliary. An institute with invited speakers is suggested, also a study of the Council Packet, price 25 cents at Literature Headquarters.

Paragraph from Fall Conference Letter

Mrs. Comfort is distressed that so few C. S. R. superintendents have reported to her this year. Will you see that at least one definite thing is done in this department before the close of the quarter and gladden her heart with a good report.

Mrs. Stokes reports that only forty-eight societies have reported boxes of supplies sent to Wesley House, Biloxi. If you have not already done so, will you please send your box at once? The Wesley House needs old clothing of all kinds. Any old hose, for making rugs, will be acceptable and they are asking for money to buy fifty folding chairs at $1.35 each.

Our Conference sick list grows. Mrs. Hinchcliff is quite ill in the Greenville Hospital. She entered after Mrs. James Wilburn of Pickens. Mrs. Neblett and Mrs. Brooks are still on the sick list.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

Dear Sisters—One and All:

May I ask you each to accept this as a personal message, and very kindly ask the president of each auxiliary to see that every woman hears the message.

You have labored valiantly these past three quarters of 1935, and we are stepping into the first days of the fourth and last quarter of the year. If the remaining moments, hours, and days are freighted with loyal, zealous service and much prayer, untold success may be written on the remaining pages of conference history.

The outstanding accomplishment of the year has been the beautiful knowledge and better understanding of mission study, whose gate was opened to us through the class taught by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb during the Pastors' School at Biloxi, and through the most excellent programs presented on "Coaching Days." These days have created an unsurpassed interest in mission study, and opened wide the door of understanding which can not be closed, for mission study has become a live, vital thing, creating an interest in, and uniting peoples of every nation, tribe and tongue. We are hoping that our Conference superintendents of Mission and Bible study will be able to report that the 229 auxiliaries have each during the year had two or more studies. Let this be the banner quarter.

To the 229 adult auxiliaries with a membership of 4,696, we gladly add the fifteen young women's circles with a membership of 174, making our total 4,870. I am asking each of these 4,870 fine women to look back over the months that have so rapidly flown away and ask: "Have I given of my very best to my Master—in service, prayers and money? Have I spent more on self than I have for the building of God's Kingdom?"

Our Conference treasurer's report shows that we have paid to date only $10,012.84 on a $20,000 pledge made at annual meeting, leaving a deficit of $9,987.16. There is a glad note sounded in a recent letter received from her: "The total amount for the third quarter of 1935 is an increase over the third quarter of 1934 of $112.68, and the amount sent Council treasurer was an increase of $269.48, as compared with the third quarter of 1934. This is encouraging, but we have a long way to go in order to meet our pledge in full. I sincerely trust that the hearts and interest of the women, as well as their pocket-books, will be so awakened and touched that we will have a record-breaking quarter as the year closes."

Our treasurer challenged us to give 10 cents extra per month to our pledge and see if it would not mean to woman's work what the sales tax did to our state. Let's meet that beautiful challenge, will you? If so, it will add $5,844 to our pledge. Wouldn't that gladden your heart? And it is such a little thing for each one to do; and there may be others who can and will do more.

In 1931, our pledge to Council was $31,028, but since that time we have reduced it until we even reached $18,000, and it has been unpaid. Are you satisfied? Is this the best we can do? Will you say with me, "We MUST reach the $20,000 pledge IN FULL?" I believe you will, and how grateful I am for the renewed effort which I see—through faith.

As we labor to this end; may our spiritual lives be quickened, our faith made stronger, and our days so gladdened that with David we can say, "My cup runneth over."

We feel that the Week of Prayer just closed has meant much to our spiritual lives as well as added the wanted treasury and increased our interest in other people. May our prayers continue for them.

We are entering upon another campaign for that most wonderful publication, The World Outlook, and we are hoping for an increase in subscriptions, not only for its sake, but that each of you may enjoy the outstanding missionary news of the day. You are a loser if you are not a subscriber. Help us meet our quota in the Mississippi Conference.

May we be much in prayer as we are thinking of the election of officers in our auxiliary work, and remember that in our next annual meeting there will be the general election of officers in Conference work, which should be preceded by much prayer for the leadership of His Spirit.

"We are very grateful for the beautiful co-operation which has been so universally manifested by each of you. We covet a continuation of this and your prayers for the work entrusted to our hands as builders in God's Kingdom."

Yours for greater service,

MRS. T. B. COTTRELL.

Whereas, Rev. K. W. Dodson has so faithfully served us as presiding elder for the past four years and has endeared himself to us by his tireless efforts and unflinching sympathy in the problems that have arisen during these unusual difficult years, and

Whereas, our General Conference has set forth that a presiding elder shall return to the pastorate after four years service; be it

Resolved, That we, the Fourth Quarterly Conference of the Ponchatoula Methodist Episcopal Church, South, express our sincere appreciation to him and pray God's richest blessings upon him in the future; and also be it

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of this church and a copy be sent to the Christian Advocate.

Refreshing Relief When

You Need a Laxative

For constipation and the sluggish, bad feeling it causes, take a dose or two of old reliable Black-Draught!

What relief! What a fresh sparkle to the eyes, keen zest for work or a lively good time!

Remember, Black-Draught is a purely vegetable product of Nature—clean plant leaves and roots, finely ground, not so very different when you come to think about it from the vegetables you eat at every meal.

(Black-Draught dosage is easily determined—half a teaspoonful, perhaps a little less, in some cases a little more. You'll soon find just the right quantity for you, and you will not have to be increasing the dosage later on.)

Sold in sealed cardboard containers. So economical that every 25-cent package brings you about 25 doses.

Get Your Christmas Cards Free

Christmas is just around the corner and you will be needing a supply of Greeting Cards to send to your friends. We are offering, as long as our supply lasts, a beautiful box of assorted, lithographed Christmas Cards absolutely free, postage and all, with each renewal or new subscription to the Advocate. This box contains one dozen cards, all of religious subjects, and is made to retail for 75c a box. If you desire additional boxes they can be purchased at 50c per box which is the cost price plus a small additional charge to take care of postage and handling. Send your renewal immediately and secure one of these gifts. Remember, this offer expires when our supply has been exhausted, and therefore a delay in mailing your remittance may cause you to be too late to receive one of these beautiful gifts.

Subscribers that have already received this generous offer, which was made possible by a friend of the Advocate, write that they are even prettier than they had hoped for or expected.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Remedy at Home

No Cooking! No Work! Real Saving!

You'll never know how quickly a bad winter cough can be relieved, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in more homes than any other cough remedy, because it gives more prompt, positive results. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Syrup is easily made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. This gives you four times as much cough medicine for your money, and it's a much better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes fine.

Instantly you feel its penetrating effect. It loosens the phlegm, helps clear the air passages, and soothes the irritated membranes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief in distressing coughs.

Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its soothing effect on throat membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Mat. 7:13: Enter ye in at the strait gate.

I Timothy 4:16: Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine.

One of the shibboleths of our age is that it does not matter what you believe. But the lives of those who say so are a contradiction to this dictum. Loose thinking issues in loose living. Every person is the product of what he believes. We become like what we believe. Beliefs shape life and conduct and determine destiny. A person who worships Jesus Christ is bound to have aspirations and strive for the things that are pure, lovely, and of good report.

It makes a great deal of difference whether a man believes the material or the spiritual is the final fact of the universe. The materialist is shut up to blind fatalism and cruel mechanism. But if the final fact is spiritual, then we are free persons, God is personal. The Fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, the immortality of the soul, are implied in that fact. Religion depends upon it. Materialism is bound to produce moral impotence and despair.

It makes a great deal of difference whether one believes or not that there is a final distinction between right and wrong. For if environment determines social customs, then there are no moral standards. But fundamental principles must be distinguished from social customs that change. Ethics express what is implicit in the very constitution of the universe. In Luke 16 we read that Jesus said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." "And the Pharisees, who were covetous, derided him." And Jesus said unto them, "Ye are they which justify yourselves before men; but God knoweth your hearts; for that which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." The covetous Pharisees might deride Jesus, but His teaching remained unalterably true.

It makes a great deal of difference whether one believes in love or force as the Supreme Arbiter in the universe. If brute strength is the mightiest force, then every righteous cause is a lost cause. But because we believe sacrificial love is the mightiest force, then we have the faith that overcomes the world. We have heart to struggle against principalities and powers and the rulers of darkness. We believe it is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom. God's method of redemption was through sacrificial love.

Real broad-mindedness will cause us to consider the rights of all. A broad-minded man will not confine his thought to himself. Broad-mindedness sees beyond the present. A broad-minded man can see that the wages of sin is death. Jesus had a universal sympathy and the perspective of the centuries. Hence he said, "Enter ye in at the strait gate."

A historical event is definite. One event took place at one certain time and place. There is but one correct answer to the question, "Where was Robert E. Lee born?"

Scientific truth is narrow. H<sub>2</sub>O will make water and nothing else.

Even so, moral truth is narrow. The real thinkers have always been against crime and license. A man who is broad in sympathies cannot ignore the future consequences nor the welfare of others, he must therefore take heed unto himself and unto the doctrines.

E. Stanley Jones in "Christ and Human Suffering" quoted Tagore's story: "A violin string lies on the table. It is under no constraint. We might think it free. But is this mute thing free? Put the string in its place in the violin. It is bound. When set in motion, it gives out dull sounds. But draw it tighter, tighter. Stretch it up to key. Let it be swept by Kreisler's bow. Now it is free.

It sings!" "Jesus stretched His life upon the cross and swept it with His love—God, the song!"

PRAYER

Our Father, we are grateful for the love of Christ. His universal kindness led Him to identify Himself with us. May our love for Him be so great that we shall deny ourselves daily, take up our cross and follow Him. In crucifying the flesh, may we find abounding life of the spirit.

In the name of Jesus we offer our prayer.

Find Out

From Your Doctor
if the "Pain" Remedy
You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's
Well-Being to Unknown
Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 1.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

EZRA'S MISSION TO JERUSALEM

The temple at Jerusalem had been rebuilt for nearly sixty years. Physical equipment for worship was ample, but true religion and devout worship were at a low ebb. Unfortunately, the two are not synonymous. The three patronizing Conferences of the Advocate report more than $10,000,000 invested in church buildings, but are they amply equipped with spiritual leadership? Jerusalem was not. Its spiritual dearth appealed to great-hearted Ezra in exile. He verified the edicts of Cyrus for the restoration of worship on Mount Zion and gathered a small company and large treasure to prosecute the work of servicing the temple and making it of service to God and His people.

His mission was fraught with danger from marauders and brigands, but he was ashamed to ask a guard from the king after having assured him that the hand of the Almighty would protect his servants and prosper their work. His faith was founded in common sense. Armed guards would have indicated hostility, advertised the value of his treasure, weakened the confidence of his people in their God, and perhaps have provoked an attack. Military preparedness is usually provocative. Fear paralyzes the fearful. Confidence in God promotes courage. Better for his mission if he entered Jerusalem empty-handed, but filled with faith, rather than with great treasure and fearful soul. He took the very best means of insuring the success of his enterprise, an intelligent and worthy faith always does. It is no denial of faith in God to use heat as an antidote for cold, food as a satisfaction for hunger, nor medicine as remedy for disease. Only let us keep God first.

Ezra was a prepared man, instructed, devout. A scribe, he was more than a copyist. A prophet, he was more than a parrot repeating the words of another. He set himself to know, to do, to teach. He asked God for guidance in the right way for his people, their children and their substance. Divine help came as needed. The power of prayer is greater than the force of arms. Those who walk with God have a successful journey. His hand is ever upon those who march breast forward.

There are brigands on every highway, opponents of all good. They were never perhaps more determined, more amply equipped, more subtle than they are today. In such case, coalition is worse than open opposition; alliance more deadly than atheism. A victorious Christianity cries: "The world needs the Church;" a defeated Christianity: "The Church needs the world"—or can a defeated group be called Christian? In a confused, perplexed, questioning world, the Church needs to get an example of heroic faith. Depressions are man-made. Recovery can come only through a return to God. The welfare of any country is expressed in the spiritual character of its people. The Church faces its most glorious opportunity since the reformation. It should be dominant, but not domineering. It should lead, being led only by the Spirit of Christ. The world is plastic—even molten. Shall it be cast in the mold of selfishness, greed, nationalism, racial hatred, or be fashioned as the family of God? Gorgeous temples are but monuments to a sacred memory, unless they are filled with the Spirit of the living God. A greater than Ezra is our Leader. Triumphant victory awaits his followers!

THREE STEPS

TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

I. A cleansing dose today;
II. A smaller quantity tomorrow;
III. Less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

COUGH STOPPED quicker by "Moist- Throat" Method

WHEN you catch cold, the tiny moisture glands in your throat and wind-pipe dry or clog. Thick phlegm irritates your throat, making you cough. It is necessary to stimulate those glands to pour out their natural moisture. Pertussin does this. It "unclogs" the glands—loosens phlegm and keeps your throat moist.

Over 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in one year according to Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by American Pharmaceutical Assn.

"Pertussin stopped Jackie's bad cough next day!" writes Mrs. P. Fernandez, Providence, R. I.

55 Features • 7 Great Departments Make THE NEW CHAIN-REFERENCE BIBLE

Truly a Bible Plus a Biblical Library in One Volume

(THIRD Improved EDITION)
(EDITED BY REV. F. C. THOMPSON, D.D., PH.D.)

Not an ordinary Reference Bible with the usual so-called "Helps." This is the only work of its kind in the world. New! Different! Better! The only Bible with all the helps opposite the verses or directly connected with them. The only Bible analyzed by Book, Chapter and Verse. The only Bible containing thoughts linked with references, suggesting deeper spiritual meaning. A great stimulus to Bible study.

And of course only this Bible offers the famed Numerical Chain Reference System, "the greatest development in Bible Helps for a generation." No other Bible is so closely attuned to this progressive, busy age; no other gives the Bible teaching on so many new subjects of every day interest; no other offers as many as over 100,000 references analyzed and classified according to thoughts in the verses. Only in this work will you find the great truths of the Bible taught by contrast. And every particle of inspiring information is made instantly available through the most complete General Index ever devised for a Bible—over seven thousand topics, names and places.

PROFESSOR THORNDYKE of Columbia University says that "only four per cent of the world's greatest work has been accomplished before the age of forty," and he calls 47.5 the "masterpiece age." Professor Dorland is given as authority for the opinion that the period of maximum creative achievement is after fifty—"the age of mental virility" and "the triumph of maturity." As proofs of this assertion, Handel, Wagner, Leonardo da Vinci, Titian and Michelangelo are instanced.

MR. C. R. CRUTWELL, of Hertford College, Oxford, voiced a rather severe criticism of American education some time ago. He is reported to have said: "In the United States, all sorts of attainments count as part of a degree—wrestling, ju-jitsu, self-defence, dish-washing, and other almost unbelievable things. This is a prostitution of the universities which should be guarded against." The criticism, as an indictment of American education, is not just, but it emphasizes the fact that there has been in some instances too great a recognition of sports and the secondary activities of college life.

THE DEATH OF DR. W. C. PEARCE, in southern California, October 25, marks the passing of one of the most widely known and distinguished Sunday school workers in the world. He gave forty-six years of his life to the perfecting of an institution for the religious training of the youth. He was a pioneer and a builder of the Church school organization as we know it today. In the history of the movement, to which he gave his life, his name will be joined with that of Marion Lawrence. No man is entitled to a greater measure of credit for the success of the Sunday school organization than Dr. W. C. Pearce.

THE RUTHLESS VANDALISM practiced by curious and otherwise unoffending people is a reflection upon the integrity of the human race. Washington Monument in the Capital of the Nation bears the scars which evidence the ruthless passion of the curio hunter. The tomb of the famous "Kit" Carson must be protected by an iron fence. A military guard is on constant duty at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. Like precautions are necessary for the protection of the tomb of Napoleon in Paris, and from time immemorial a constant guard has prevented the desecration of the reputed birthplace of the Saviour in Bethlehem.

ALLIED EX-SERVICE-MEN and the people of Mons in France recently presented to the British Ambassador in France, a beautiful silver model of the famous belfry of Mons. The Ambassador accepted it as a gift to the King in celebration of the silver jubilee of his reign. The gift expresses the soldier memories of the tragic days of the World War and the passionate devotion of the people to their famous cathedral.

THE BODY OF ENRICO CARUSO, the world-famous singer who died in 1921, reposes in a mausoleum near Naples in Italy. It is said that the glass covered casket is draped with the American flag and that the clothing on the body is changed every three years. The special embalming and the changes of clothing have no reference to any view of the future life or to the estate of the dead, but they are an expression of the devotion of his friends and admirers who refuse to permit his body to return to the earth. Such is the tribute of the Italian people to their premier of song.

CARBON COUNTY, UTAH, seems well on the way to becoming the center of a new and important industry, growing out of hitherto unused natural resources. It appears that in 1924 a well was drilled which produces 98 per cent pure carbon dioxide gas at high pressure and in great quantity. Until now, no means of utilizing the output has been developed, but Mr. Ickes, on behalf of the Government, has signed leases for the use of the well in the manufacture of "dry ice." Engineers and geologists are much interested in this new project, and there will be a substantial contribution to Federal revenues if the enterprise succeeds.

THE DISINTEGRATION OF THE MOON is represented to be practically certain, by Sir James Jeans, a British scientist. He thinks that in its fall toward the earth it will eventually come within the "danger zone" and will break in half, then in quarters and finally into infinitesimal particles. Those particles, he thinks, will arrange themselves into a shining path around the earth and will appear as the rings of Saturn. There is no reason for immediate concern on account of that catastrophe. We may go on telling our grandchildren the "green cheese" story as it was told to us and the jovial face of the "man in the moon" will still beam down upon us when we come to the end of the way.

EDITORIAL

THE UNSLAIN SELF

A few days ago, President Cline of Centenary College said to the student body of that institution: "It is so easy to find fault and see the shortcomings of others that it is often necessary and well for us to examine ourselves for our own faults." That sentence calls to mind a statement which appeared in a recent issue of the Southern Christian Advocate. In substance it was this: A grim sitting in judgment on others is an offensive and unholy trait, is next to the unpardonable sin and is the magnification of the unslain self. "The unslain self lingers in the spiritually conceited man's every deed. Even the gift of a rose would cause the recipient to cry out in pain because of the presence of thorns—the thorns of the unslain self. Verily humility is the badge of discipleship." There seem to be some who think that to discover a flaw or to sense a stench is evidence of superior spiritual attainment, and that denunciation is a mark of heavenly-mindedness. We offer neither comfort nor apology for wrong-doing, but we think that the critic may fail to detect the presence of conceit and self-acclaim associated with his arraignment of the motives and conduct of others, and he does not confess his own unworthy part in the equation. It is extremely difficult to be a ruthless critic of others without the surrender of that humility and self-emptying which are characteristic of true Christianity. To esteem others better than themselves and to restore an offender in the spirit of meekness, conscious of one's own imperfection, is a far cry from the practice of setting people to right by attack upon their thinking and their motives. A holy cause cannot be made an apology for a spirit and a method which violates both Christian principle and attitude. While Calvary remains a fact in the history and thought of the Church, Christian responsibility cannot be discharged by muck-raking and renunciation. Jesus sought to save Judas in the very hour when his desperate purpose was approaching fulfillment. Christianity is more than law, it is also a gospel of healing.

THE EARTH'S RADIANCE

When Captains Stevens and Anderson made their journey to the stratosphere and landed safely on a prairie in South Dakota, their daring feat became more than a matter of personal gratification to the men who, at the moment, were the center of curious interest throughout the country. From the top of the world, they brought back tidings of thrilling interest. They ascended to empty, soundless space, and to a region of bitter cold and a darkness that was almost black. They report: "We were high enough to see the earth's radiance, its reflection of the sun's rays." Whatever else may be the scientific implications of that superb adventure, it demonstrates the fact that one does not see the glory and the brilliance of the earth until a point beyond its atmosphere has been reached. Many other daring souls will be lured aloft by that intoxicating story, but we are not now concerned with the exploits of those new-made heroes. We are thinking of its spiritual parallel. By the same token, no man can have a real appreciation of the spiritual radiance of the world until he gets beyond the atmosphere of material and sordid things. He cannot enter into the passion and purpose of Jesus until he reaches the stage of spiritual exaltation from which the Redeemer saw the beauty and the value of the souls of men. That vision lured the Son of Man to Calvary. To attain such an appreciation, we must have more than a philosophy of human relations and it is not enough that we be masters of the mechanics of social progress. It calls for utter spiritual abandon, the daring of high and holy purpose. A true appreciation of the sons of men will come when we have paid the price for the vision splendid. When we are able to look down from the heights where discords are hushed and things do not distract, then the beauty and the glory of the world will be revealed. Then we will come into an understanding of the Saviour weeping over blind and sodden Jerusalem. Then our own souls will be burdened for those who sit in darkness, and the cry against war will be heard to the ends of the earth.

THE ADVOCATE

The Conferences are over and, although there are some pledges which have not been paid as yet, we are making a statement of Advocate affairs to date.

At the close of the Louisiana Conference, we had a bank balance of $63. Included in that amount were pre-Conference payments received from the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences of $245.80; but no payments on Assessments paid following the Conferences. It was our hope to pay the debt without the application of any of the money on the assessments of 1935, and we are still hoping to get enough to replace the amounts so applied. The one important fact now is that The Advocate is Absolutely out of debt. Following is a statement by Conferences and Districts as to subscriptions, budgets, and payments by the laymen:

This tabulation shows that the debt of more than $4,000 was met by a response which was more partial than it should have been. In the support campaign, 166 charges did not send in a single subscriber, 42 charges sent in one each, and 25 charges two each. This means that 233 charges had practically no part in either the support of the Advocate or the payment of its indebtedness. The summary of payments through the budgets and by the laymen speaks for itself. As we study the situation, we think that the failure to respond was not due to any indifference to the Advocate cause, but to a putting the matter off until it was too late to get it done, a thing which no charge should allow to happen again.

The Advocate campaign for 1936 has been simplified so that there can be no misunderstanding it. The quota is one subscriber, new or old, for every twenty-five members as shown by the minutes of the 1935 Conference and every subscriber sent in by the pastor, his committee or agent, or paid for through a church budget will be counted on that quota. No subscription collected through the office will be counted on any quota. Every district completing its quota before July 15, will receive a prize of $100, but there will be no extension of the time. The campaign is now on, and we urge every pastor to get the mailing list for his charge at once. One reason for this insistence is that there are 1,000 subscriptions either expired or expiring in December.

The debt is paid in full and the issue of the Advocate has increased from 5,700 in 1934 to 7,800 in 1935. We believe that our real danger now is in a feeling that the task is done and that the matter now rests with the editor and business manager. Any such assumption will be fatal to the Advocate cause. The Advocate was never more necessary than it is today, and its maintenance is a responsibility of every charge, pastor and Methodist in Louisiana and Mississippi. The finance committee of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, continues its pledge of $10 per month for another year; Minden, La., renews its pledge of $5 per month and we confidently believe that others will do likewise. We promise to give the best paper within our power to make, and we are counting upon every presiding elder, pastor, church and church member to join with us in carrying the fortunes of the Advocate to a sure financial condition. We should have 10,000 subscribers in a little while and no charge should fail to have part in that achievement. If we shall all move forward together we can win, and we must win.

ATTENTION, PASTORS OF MISSION CHARGES MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

This is to advise you that you will receive a total of 40 per cent of your appropriation for the past year; while there was a very much larger percentage paid than for previous years, the reduction in the amount of the askings by the various charges kept the percentage to be paid you at the rate given herewith.

We are hopeful that it will be larger another year.

Yours very sincerely,

THE SPIRITUAL VALUE OF RELIGIOUS MUSIC

By E. B. Chappell, Emory University, Ga.

It is not a mere coincidence that every genuine revival of religion is accompanied by an outburst of sacred song. The two things are vitally linked together. It is doubtless true that general social conditions have much to do with preparing the way for a wide-spread revival; but even when conditions are ripe, the revival does not burst out spontaneously, but waits for the leadership of prepared men and women. It begins, as a rule, in some small group of kindred souls whose hearts God has touched and who issue from their retreats of meditation and communion to proclaim that God has been revealed to them and to call others to share their new experience. For, besides the deeper emphasis upon some neglected aspect of the gospel message, or the discovery of some new and deeper meaning of this message with which the genuine revival always begins, there goes an imperative call to some great mission of service.

The new experience of fellowship with God and the new vision of truth and privilege and duty, always fill the souls of those to whom the experience and the vision have come, with a boundless enthusiasm. Life takes on a deeper meaning and self-sacrifice in the way of service becomes a joyous privilege. Those who are exultant and glad in this deep spiritual sense must always sing, because this is the most effective way of expressing their joy in their emancipation from a sense of futility and helplessness and failure. This is why a vital, vigorous and aggressive Church is always a singing Church.

When the Church ceases to sing, or substitutes for hymns expressive of great convictions and deep and vital experience sentimental gush and shallow doggerel, we may be sure that a process of spiritual decline is already far advanced. A triumphant and vital Church not only sings, but sings both with "the spirit and the understanding." The degradation of religious music is almost as fatal to healthy spiritual growth as is the drying up of the fountains of song.

All of this is strikingly illustrated in the history of Methodism. The great religious awakening which began in England two hundred years ago, and out of which Methodism was born, was pre-eminently a singing movement, not only drawing upon the rich treasures that had come down from the past, but adding to these treasures new songs that were born of its new experience. Early Methodists followed with remarkable fidelity the admonition of Paul to the Church at Colossae: "Let the message of Christ dwell in your hearts in all its wealth of wisdom. Teach it to one another and train one another in it with thankfulness, with psalms, hymns and spiritual songs, and sing to God with all your hearts." (Col. 3:16, Goodspeed's translation). Methodism could never have wrought those miracles of personal and social regeneration which give lustre to its early history without its vital hymnology.

Even as late as the time of my own childhood, Methodists gave much more serious attention to religious music and to congregational singing as a part of public worship than they did later in the last century. In the rural community in which I was brought up we had frequent Sunday afternoon meetings that were devoted entirely to the singing of hymns, and during the summer there was always one or more singing schools which ran through several days. On all these occasions the songs were taken from the current church hymnal. Indeed, I was well advanced in my 'teens before I ever saw a collection of songs such as later came into popular use in Sunday schools and revival meetings, and which in rural congregations almost entirely supplanted the great hymns and the dignified music of the regular church hymnals. The publication and popularization of Gospel hymns by Moody and Sankey in the last quarter of the nineteenth century brought about a revival of interest in religious music and an apparent improvement in musical taste, but the improvement was only temporary and was followed by a spirit of still more sad decline.

A discussion of the causes which brought about this decline of interest in religious music and deterioration in musical taste among the rank and file of our church members is, of course, impossible in a brief article like this. As a basis, however, for what is to follow it is necessary to call attention to the paralyzing influence of the general mechanization of life brought about by the rapid increase in the practical application of the results of scientific invention and discovery in industrial production, upon all things belonging to the spirit. Neither religious music nor any other form of art can flourish in a mechanized society.

There are signs, however, of a re-awakening of interest in things that belong to the spirit. The enthusiastic certainty with which men a few years ago were looking forward to a material millennium which was to be brought about by use of machinery propelled by steam and electricity has given place to disillusionment and to a growing tendency to look for the meaning of life in spiritual values. We are assured, for instance, that there has been recently an awakening of interest in music, and the books that are pouring from our presses bear witness to the deep and wide-spread interest that exists among thoughtful men and women in religion. It may be, therefore, that our new Hymnal has appeared at an opportune moment and that it will prove an influential factor in bringing about the revival for which we are longing and praying. It contains by far the richest and the most varied collection ever offered to American Methodism. It not only brings over from its predecessor many of the great timeless songs of the Church universal, but adds others of the same class. And besides a considerable increase in the number of evangelistic hymns of the Moody and Sankey type, it contains many of the best of those more recent songs that express in the language of today the visions and aspirations and longings of devout men and women who are seeking to re-interpret life and duty in the light of a deeper study of the Bible, and especially of the life and teachings of Jesus.

I have said that the issuing of such a collection of "psalms and hymns and spiritual songs" by the Methodists of America may help immensely toward the deepening and enrichment of the spiritual life of the Church. This depends entirely, however, upon the extent to which it is circulated and used. Every presiding elder, pastor, and lay leader should consider it both a duty and a privilege to do everything he can towards placing the new Hymnal in every Methodist congregation whether it be a city or a rural community. And a church-wide movement should be at once inaugurated that is designed to help our people to appreciate the great hymns of the Church, both new and old, and to substitute them for the shallow and inane doggerel now so extensively used.

REMEMBER THE SUPERANNUATES

Last year we received $32.00 for taking care of the subscriptions of superannuates and others who would otherwise have been deprived of its visits. Many persons have enjoyed the Advocate this year because of that fund. If you would like to have a part in making glad the hearts of superannuates and others who can not afford the Advocate, send us a contribution designated "For the Christmas Fund." We will see that no worthy person is denied the joy of the Advocate.

Religious leaders in the open country should encourage the revival of special services of song directed by trained leaders. In town and city churches choirs should be engaged with the explicit understanding that they are expected to help congregations to develop a taste for the great hymns and to teach them how to sing such hymns, instead of trying (and very often failing), to entertain them with solos and elaborate anthems, many of which have but little spiritual value for the average person.

A revival of interest in Christian music such as is found in the new Methodist Hymnal would not be beyond the range of possibility if presiding elders, pastors and lay leaders could be induced to press the matter with a zeal and energy proportionate to its importance. As has already been stated, the general conditions for such a revival are more favorable than they have been at any time within two generations. For, besides the deep religious longing that is so strikingly a characteristic of our era, and the general awakening of interest in music, is the fact that, since music is now quite commonly included in our public school curriculum, many of our boys and girls are learning to sing by note. But this new interest has not been definitely directed.

In a Christian home with which I chance to be intimately associated, there are two bright boys in their 'teens, both of whom are on the way to becoming accomplished musicians. Although both are also members of the church and attend constantly to their religious duties, they have given almost no attention, as yet, to the singing of Christian hymns. In fact, the singing of religious songs in the home, once well nigh universal among Methodists, has quite gone out of fashion. It should be restored as a part of the musical revival for which I am pleading. In conclusion, may I say that my earnest hope is that the circulation and use of the new Hymnal will not be confined to town and city churches. I refuse to believe that

BY W. L. DUREN

We have already mentioned the fact of the dissatisfaction of the Baltimore Conference regarding the anti-slavery action of the General Conference of 1860. This dissatisfaction was not removed by the war and the consequent destruction of slavery; but on February 7, 1866, sixty-nine members of the Baltimore Conference, a body which is said to have maintained an independent existence throughout the war, met at Alexandria, Virginia. Norval Wilson, father of Bishop A. W. Wilson, was chosen president, and J. S. Martin, secretary. On the second day formal vote was taken on the question of adhering to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, "in pursuance of the action of this body in 1861." The resolution of adherence declared that they were not adhering to "dead political institutions, questions, or issues," and that their motives were to promote "usefulness among the people whom we serve and the best interests of the kingdom of Christ." On the roll call the vote stood 69 to 0 in favor of the adoption of the Resolution. Bishop Early, who was in the city by arrangement, was escorted to the chair by S. Register and S. S. Roszell, and he recognized the body as a Conference of the Church, South. On the third day of the General Conference of 1866, Norvel Wilson said that the Baltimore Conference came as the result of pledges to their people going back as far as 1845, that they would sever connection with the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, if action should be taken to "disturb the tranquillity of the Church within our bounds." He declared that such action had been taken in 1860, and that by unanimous vote they were keeping their pledge to the people. The delegates of the newly organized Baltimore Conference were seated in the General Conference.

The General Conference met in Carondelet Street Church, New Orleans, April 4, 1866. Eight years had gone by since it last met, four of those years had been taken up with a war which was as disastrous as it was bloody. The Conference was called to order by Bishop J. O. Andrew who read, in tones befitting the solemnity and the faith of the hour, the twelfth chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews: "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the Cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." He concluded with that burst of apostolic confidence, "For our God is a consuming fire," and the Conference joined in singing hymn 261, "High on his everlasting throne, the King of saints his work surveys." Ninety delegates answered to the first roll call, and 149 of the 153 delegates elected were in attendance at the Conference. Dr. Thomas O. Summers was elected secretary, and what was destined to be one of the most constructive and historic General Conferences of the Church was ready for business.

The war and the new social and political issues which the South had been called to face brought no timidity into the counsels of the men who had gone through four years of struggle on the battle fields of the South. The caution of 1846 was completely gone, and the delegates turned to the task of rebuilding the fortunes of the Church, as veterans whose faith and courage had been revealed in the long struggle that had ended. Strangely enough, the Conference was disposed to disregard the constitutional restrictions upon the legislative function, and to give an amazingly wide discretion to the Annual Conferences for determining the application of the enactment of the General Conference. This definitive power, which it was proposed to confer on the Annual Conferences called forth a written protest from Dr. C. F. Deems, of North Carolina, against what he termed the granting of "reviewing, legislative, and veto" powers to an Annual Conference. At this juncture a compromise was reached, the protest was withdrawn and the measures objected to were modified and made to conform to the constitution of the Church. The explanation of this seemingly radical tendency was probably the fact that the Methodism of the South had to be completely reorganized, and it was done upon the basis of past experience and demand, rather than upon any theory of ecclesiastical administration.

After the enactment of a measure for the introduction of lay-representation into the control of the Church, which we have already discussed, the next important matter to occupy the attention of the Conference was the re-establishment of the missionary work of the denomination. The China mission, with which there had been no communication during the four years of war, had not been closed, but it had not received support from home. The war over, the Church found itself without either money or credit, and it became necessary to lay anew the financial groundwork for the whole enterprise. As an approach to the problem of rebuilding, the General Conference decided to establish two Mission Boards instead of one, as had been the case since 1846. The Domestic Mission Board, of which Dr. John B. McFerrin was elected secretary, was to promote and administer all missionary enterprises in the homeland. The Foreign Mission Board, of which Dr. E. W. Sehon was elected secretary, was charged with the responsibility for the care and support of work organized and maintained in fields outside the United States.

The most serious problem faced by the Missionary organization of the Southern Church was the large debt which had been contracted before the war. One item of that debt was a matter of serious embarrassment to the entire Church, because of the unintentional manner in which it was incurred and the difficulties which it had involved for friends across the border. No incident in the history of the Church has been more completely misunderstood and misinterpreted than this. Even Bishop McTyeire was misled, and time has translated the story into an epic of missionary benevolence and denominational chivalry which flouted the passions of war and defied the inhibitions of war administration. Unfortunately there is no real foundation for this fanciful creation. It has been alleged that our China missionaries were paid for a time, after the beginning of the war, through the Treasurer of the Mission Board of the Church, North. The facts as given by Dr. Carlton, one of the Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, are recorded in the proceedings of the General Conference of 1872. He submitted a statement to the effect that in 1858 or 1859, Dr. Sehon, secretary of the Board of Missions of the Southern Church, asked the treasurer of the Missionary Society of the Northern Church how he remitted money to the missionaries in China? He was told that it was done upon letters of credit obtained through Brown Brothers & Company of New York, on Brown, Shipley & Company, London; and that those letters were secured upon the endorsement of the Book Agents, and the Superintendent of the mission in China was authorized to draw from time to time for such sums as might be needed until those letters of credit were exhausted. Dr. Sehon then asked Dr. Carlton to endorse for the Mission Board of the Southern Church as he was doing for the Missionary Society of the Northern Church. Dr. Carlton said that, inasmuch as the Southern Church had granted them all the terms that they had asked for in the settlement of the property suit, he could not refuse the endorsement. Accordingly three letters of credit were issued: One on December 7, 1859, for £1200, another on February 1, 1860, for £1634, and the last on June 23, 1860, for £1600. Before it was possible to care for these obligations, the war broke out and the interruption of all communication between the sections made payment by the South impossible. It then devolved upon Dr. Carlton, as endorser for our Board, to care for the obligation, which he did. Whatever technicalities of business may have been involved, it was the endorser of our paper and not the treasurer of the Missionary Society who was primarily involved, it was wholly a pre-war transaction, and whatever magnanimity there was in it was a reflection of the liberality of the South in the terms granted for the settlement of the property suit.

In March, 1868, Dr. A. L. P. Green, Dr. C. F. Deems, Dr. T. E. Bond, Jr., and Dr. Sehon met the Book Agents in New York and arranged terms for the settlement of the obligation. The total sum paid in principal and interest on this account was $35,215.02, and the payment was completed by a remittance made on February 2, 1872. In addition to that sum, $11,000 which was entrusted to W. T. Smithson, the treasurer of the Mission Board, was lost in stock market transactions and he was never able to repay any part of it. Thus ended a distressing chapter in the history of our China mission, but the fascinating story of our missionaries being paid by the treasurer of the Church, North, is not borne out by the facts, and the history of the Church should be interpreted—not embellished.

Among other matters of primary importance which came before the General Conference of 1866, was the question of the rehabilitation of the Publishing House at Nashville. Both the business and the plant were in a state of ruin on account of the war and the appropriation of the stock and the machinery for army uses. There was considerable debate as to whether the Church should undertake to rebuild its publishing business, or should have its printing done by contract. It was finally decided to continue the House, and Dr. A. H. Redford of Kentucky was elected Publishing Agent.

The educational interest of the Conference was registered more in the steps which it undertook for securing a more efficient ministry than in the projection of new or even ambitious plans for the rebuilding of the ruined institutions of the Church. Action was passed to require the licensing of ministers by ballot, and an approved examination for Admission on Trial, and to establish chairs for instruction in Bible in the existing institutions of learning. Resolutions were passed also to provide instruction in keeping with the "doctrine of infant membership, as held in the Church."

Animated discussion was brought on by the consideration of the Bishops' veto. This extension of episcopal power had been passed by the General Conference of 1854, but it was never submitted to the Annual Conferences for ratification, as a constitutional question. After it had stood for eight years in the Discipline of the Church, its legality was brought into question, and the debate became so general and the challenge so insistent that it was finally postponed indefinitely. In 1870, it was brought forward a second time, and it was then sent down to the Annual Conferences, where it received overwhelming ratification, and thus became a part of the constitution of the Church.

people of his charge, both at the parsonage and in the church services.

Rev. F. L. Applewhite writes that he has arrived at his new charge, Edwards, Miss., and he is much pleased with it. The editor acknowledges with thanks an invitation to visit him this year. We hope to do so.

The Advocate office genuinely appreciates the cordial words of Brother Marion Mayo and his wife of Shreveport, La. We are always glad to be assured that what we are trying to do is appreciated.

Carrollton Avenue church, New Orleans, will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary next February. The committee having the matter in charge has arranged a Golden Jubilee which is to last throughout the month.

Rev. Rolfe Hunt reports that his seventh welcome to Lauderdale and Electric Mills charge was the most cordial that he has received from the charge. We rejoice with him in the continued favor of his good people.

Mrs. T. H. Goza, Tallulah, La., writes that she is very much pleased with her Christmas cards. She says that she has been a reader of the Advocate the most of her life, and that she hopes to have it as long as she lives.

Rev. H. B. Hysell, the new pastor of Parker Memorial church, was the Thanksgiving preacher for the Methodists of New Orleans. The service was held in the Carrollton Avenue Church and the sermon was well received.

Rev. G. E. Allan, Georgetown, Miss., has been twice remembered recently by the good people of the charge which he is to serve another year. He is naturally in happy mood and reports a good outlook for the year now beginning.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, Purvis, Miss., is in distress on account of the loss of his overcoat during the Conference at Laurel. He lost a good coat and has one of less value and two sizes smaller. He would appreciate the recovery of his own coat.

Bishop Lane, of the C. M. E. Church, now a centenarian, will have the sympathy of a wide circle of Southern Methodists in his bereavement through the death of his daughter, Mrs. Jennie Lane Cleaves. Her death occurred at St. Louis on October 30.

Brother J. C. Cavett, Jackson, Miss., remembers us with a word of encouragement which we sincerely appreciate. He says: "It may interest you to know that my older children learned their letters from the Advocate. I have been a reader of the same for the last forty years."

The recent statistics of the Louisiana Conference show a total membership of 64,997, a gain of 2,250 for the year. The finances show a healthy increase both for pastoral support and benevolences.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The mission study class of the Woman's Missionary Society had an all-day meeting and completed the book, "That Other America." There were thirteen members present and each chapter was well presented. A delicious luncheon was served at the noon hour.

During the first two weeks in August a Church Vacation School was held for primary Negro children of Mt. Pleasant Baptist church, near Alligator. Sixteen children were in attendance. This school was sponsored by the secretary of the children's work of the Alligator Missionary Society.

We are fortunate in having the assistance of a capable colored church school teacher who went enthusiastically into the work and taught the school in her home after we conducted the first session. Work, study, worship, and play were developed by the group. A devotional period was held each morning with appropriate and enjoyable music furnished by the Negro children and their pianist. We loaned them our class book, gave them some pictures, they furnished others, and made a very creditable class book.

The unit, "The Child's Home," from the text "Our Happy World," which we had previously developed with our Beginners, was used. We tried to teach the children that this is God's world and each one must have a share in making it a happy and a good world.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Stanley Wilson,
2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

To the Superintendents of Mission and Bible Study:

"New Days in Latin America" is out of print. Substitute "Latin American Backgrounds" by Hulbert, in its place. That is an excellent book for reference with Council classes, and if the "Quest for Gold and God" is used with it and all requirements are met, that may be the text for a Council class, though MacKay's book is better for adults.

"Women Under the Southern Cross" is not for a Council class but interesting for study and reading.

Some of the Bible study books previously listed and which societies have never used, such as Standard Training School texts, are acceptable when thoroughly done by an auxiliary, a few have asked if they may study "Shield's Life of Christ." Mrs. Bourne says they may if they STUDY it. The difficulty has been that the leader has a book and lectures; you will find in the "Christian Living" series cheap books so all can have one.

Our Conference president, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, stated recently that the outstanding accomplishment of the year has been the beautiful knowledge and better understanding of mission study, whose gate was opened to us through the class taught by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb during the pastor's school at Biloxi, and through the most excellent programs presented on "Coaching Days." These days have created an unsurpassed interest in mission study and opened the door of understanding wide, which cannot be closed, for mission study has become a live, vital thing—creating an interest in, and uniting peoples of every nation, tribe and tongue.

Your Conference superintendent of Mission and Bible Study would be so happy to report that the 229 auxiliaries had each during the year had two or more studies.

Societies are advised not to begin the new home mission study until 1936.

Reports show keen interest in emphasizing a high standard of study. Let this be the BANNER QUARTER!

Those societies who are applying for Special Council Recognition, please make out reports carefully, neatly and preferably with pen. Be sure to mail your

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,

1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

The mid-year executive meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference was held in Crowley late in October. Too much cannot be said concerning the hospitality of the auxiliary women of that little city. Everything was done that was possible to make the stay of the officers comfortable and enjoyable.

Mrs. George Sexton, Jr., president of the Conference presided at all the business sessions.

The work of each department was considered and carefully gone into. Conference officers and district secretaries made reports of their work and gave plans for completing the year's work.

Mrs. C. C. Carver's report of the finances of the Conference was most encouraging but all realized that some courageous work must be done by auxiliary presidents and treasurers if the Conference pledge of $25,000 to Council will be paid in full.

A number of recommendations of the various committees were duly considered and adopted. Auxiliary presidents please take note of the following recommendations and put into effect immediately:

We recommend—

1. That where the circle plan of organization is used the membership of circles be shifted at least once in two years.

2. That auxiliaries be allowed to make requests for the number of copies of the "Louisiana News," the Missionary Bulletin and program leaflets required for efficient work.

3. Since the children's division of the Church School is now operating under a co-operative plan, we recommend that the representative from the Missionary Society on the local board of education or the secretary of children's work urge the placing of the "Elementary Teacher"

The following by-law was unanimously adopted: That when a young women's circle shall have been organized two years that circle shall no longer go by the title of "Young Women's Circle" but a new circle of young women shall be formed, having as a nucleus all of the old members under 25 years of age.

ADAMS CHARGE WELCOMES PASTOR

The rousing surprise welcome accorded the Rev. Lester T. Nelson upon his return to the Adams charge (Brookhaven District), attests the popularity of the pastor and his family. No time was lost in confirming the act of the appointive powers. Scarcely had the preacher relaxed from the strenuous Conference experiences, when the friends—and who does not claim friendship with the Nelsons?—of the Auburn community en masse, irrespective of denominational affiliations, stormed the parsonage home to overflowing, bearing tangible tokens of appreciation.

An appropriate program had been arranged. Speakers representing the several church units and the local consolidated schools participated in the welcoming exercises. Songs and a prayer of thanks were not overlooked. The touching response by Pastor Nelson included the declaration that such an evident spirit of goodwill and co-operation is prophetic of greater achievements on the Adams charge.

The social mingling of the joyous company while enjoying the excellent refreshments served by the neighbor ladies, assisted by several of the loyal young set, strengthens "the tie that binds" such groups.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

themselves with conversation about the broken wall of their city, there was no opposition, but when under the great leadership of Nehemiah the wall began to stand out, their enemies got busy. They tried ridicule, mockery, scorn, and even threatened armed attack. Had the wall truly been too weak "to restrain a fox," no attention would have been given its builders. If organization and social legislation did not promise restriction of vice and intemperance, there would be no ridicule, no slush funds, no subsidized press, no hired lobbyists. When righteous men and women attempt to build walls of temperance, of social and economic justice, of national and racial goodwill, the Sanballats of hate, the Tobiahs of greed, the Ammonites of national ambition, and the Arabians of individualism boast and bluster, hiss and howl about the "futility of trying to curb human nature." They are "very wroth" at the closing of even one breach in the wall.

As they undertook a work for God, Nehemiah and his people prayed. God's kingdom cannot be built without the help of God. The firm cannot prosper without the counsel of the Senior Partner. Prayer is power. Final victory comes not through force, but spirit. Nehemiah put such spirit into his companions that their enemies gave up the attack. Determination is often the best defense, and none are so determined as those whose cause is righteous. Evil thrives in ignorance and prospers in the guise of good. It cannot finally succeed because its devotees cannot commend it and recommend it. It falls by its own weight. Universal thievery would soon have nothing to steal.

Nehemiah not only prayed, but worked and watched. Inaction is a poor expression of faith. Trust in God puts no stones into the wall. Man cannot do God's work; God will not do man's work. The wall was built because Nehemiah followed God and the people followed Nehemiah. All worked together, each man in his own place and in his own way. In providing weapons of defense, they chose the best method they knew, probably the only one suited to their times. To insist that war is the best means of settling differences today is to deny both reason and religion. It is to invite international suicide. Good men may yet have to fight, but wise men should find a better way, and the world has had ample time and cause to become wise. God and right, peace and goodwill may be delayed, but defeated, never!

ON TO MEMPHIS

Rev. J. B. Grambling, in charge of registrations and transportation for the Louisiana delegation to the Young People's Conference at Memphis, has secured a "Bargain Rate" over the Missouri Pacific Railroad. This rate is so attractive that pastors, young people and other church leaders planning to go to the Young People's Conference December 27-31, should avail themselves of this opportunity.

The rate is $7.90 round trip, provided there are seventy-five purchasing tickets. The delegates holding round trip tickets must board the train at New Orleans, Alexandria, or Monroe. Each delegate or visitor to the conference should send $7.90 to Rev. J. B. Grambling, 4520 Cleveland Ave., New Orleans, not later than December 16, as the party ticket must be purchased in New Orleans. If there isn't a sufficient number the money will be refunded and each delegate will purchase his own individual ticket. It is absolutely necessary that your $7.90 be sent to Brother Grambling in order that he be able to purchase the tickets and make final arrangements with the Missouri Pacific.

HAVE YOU REGISTERED?

After November 15, all quotas will be suspended and it will be first come first served for those seats remaining. Do not let this deter you from registering if it is impossible to do so by November 15. Registrations will be accepted until the last seat in the auditorium is taken.

Registration blanks may be obtained from your district director, or from Rev. G. W. Dameron, Crowley, La., or from Rev. A. K. McLellan, Box 750, Alexandria.

HOTEL ARRANGEMENTS

The Chisca Hotel has been designated as official for the Louisiana delegation. Please note this on your registration blank. Write to your district director, naming the price room you desire, and also your roommate. This will be taken care of as far as possible according to the wishes of the delegates.

The hotel rates for our party are as follows: room with bath, for two persons, $3.00 or $1.50 per person; room with bath, for four to six persons, $1.25 per person; room without bath, for two persons or more, $1.00 per person. We will be in the hotel four full days.

The railroad schedule for the trip is as follows: Leaving New Orleans at the Texas & Pacific and Missouri Pacific station, on Thursday, December 26, at 1 p. m.; leaving Alexandria, Missouri Pacific, Thursday, December 26, at 4:45 p. m.; leaving Monroe, Missouri Pacific, Thursday, December 26, 9:30 p. m.; arriving at Memphis on Friday morning at 7 a. m.

The party on return will leave Memphis shortly after midnight, December 31.

We urge all our registered delegates to consider this very special rate by the Missouri Pacific Lines. It will be safer and cheaper in the long run than to attempt to go in cars, because of the distance and the hazards of the highway.

Again we urge the necessity of having seventy-five tickets sold in advance, and that your money should be sent to Rev. J. B. Grambling not later than December 16.

A. K. McLELLAN.

THE SPIRITUAL VALUE OF RELIGIOUS MUSIC

country people are less capable of learning to appreciate and enjoy great hymns set to noble music than are those who live in towns and cities, or that they should not be willing to make the small financial sacrifice required for supplying their churches with the new Hymnals if only they were given a fair opportunity to learn something about its spiritual value.

Get Your Christmas Cards Free

Christmas is just around the corner and you will be needing a supply of Greeting Cards to send to your friends. We are offering, as long as our supply lasts, a beautiful box of assorted, lithographed Christmas Cards absolutely free, postage and all, with each renewal or new subscription to the Advocate. This box contains one dozen cards, all of religious subjects, and is made to retail for 75c a box. If you desire additional boxes they can be purchased at 50c per box which is the cost price plus a small additional charge to take care of postage and handling. Send your renewal immediately and secure one of these gifts. Remember, this offer expires when our supply has been exhausted, and therefore a delay in mailing your remittance may cause you to be too late to receive one of these beautiful gifts.

Subscribers that have already received this generous offer, which was made possible by a friend of the Advocate, write that they are even prettier than they had hoped for or expected.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE,
512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

Los Angeles, Calif., asks us to say that he is making up his slate for the new year, and that he would be glad to have notice as soon as possible from any pastor desiring his services in a meeting. He plans to spend considerable time in Louisiana next year.

Friends of Rev. R. H. Clegg, pastor at Hazlehurst, Miss., will learn with sorrow of the illness and the operation performed on his daughter, Mildred, in the Methodist Hospital, Hattiesburg. Miss Mildred, who is a sophomore at Whitworth College, is reported to have stood the ordeal as well as could be expected. Let our people remember Brother Clegg and his daughter in prayer.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Recently the president of a Ministerial Association in a southern city was quoted as saying, "This administration is going to be FOR things, not AGAINST things." We heard favorable comment on his stand.

We, too, believe in being for the right. We believe in being for the kingdom of God. But there is no way of standing fast for that which is right at all times without antagonizing that which is evil. We are bidden to cleave to that which is good," Romans 12:9. The same verse contains this admonition, "Abhor that which is evil."

Paul wrote to the Galatians, "The flesh lusteth AGAINST the Spirit, and the Spirit AGAINST the flesh." As long as this moral struggle goes on, the Christian is for the things of the Spirit and against carnal things. "The face of the Lord is AGAINST them that do evil," Ps. 34:16. God is holy, and if man is to be like God, man must be moral. There are moral conditions that must be met if man is to enjoy union with Christ. The love of God is ethical. Pure love is always a holy love. Jesus came to save us from our sins.

The shepherd is against the wolves that would destroy the sheep.

CAPUDINE

There is a great, positive affirmation of faith in God when we say "No" to evil. "Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank." (Daniel 1:8). Here was a positive, intelligent purpose to protect the sober habits that preserve life. Man affirms his faith that the body is a holy temple by refusing things that defile.

Jesus refused to turn stones into bread. He refused to hurl Himself down from the pinnacle of the temple. He refused to fall down and worship Satan. In each instance there was a great principle that Jesus was affirming. He faithfully carried out His mission in perfect obedience to the Father.

When God gave the ten commandments, He was building character. The prohibitions were to safeguard life. In the commandments against idolatry, there is a great affirmation that God is one, holy, personal, spiritual. Idolatry is debasing. God was building character. In the commandment against taking the name of God in vain, God was teaching reverence for the Deity that is the very foundation of any vital relationship to Him. In the commandment AGAINST murder, God was affirming the sacredness of life. In the commandment AGAINST adultery, God was teaching the sanctity of the person. In the commandment AGAINST theft, God was affirming the rights of property. In the commandment AGAINST false witness, God was teaching reverence for truth in preserving the integrity of the witness. In the commandment AGAINST covetousness, God was protecting the welfare of society, for covetousness would lead to oppression of the poor and the destruction of rich and poor. In every commandment, God is pleading for justice.

To say "No" resolutely to evil is to make the most positive affirmation of our faith in God and to express in an intelligent way our purpose to glorify God. To affirm our faith in the sacredness of human personality, we would emphatically say "No" to anything that would desecrate God's holy temple. We must say "No" to atheism in theory or practice. Sin is the denial of the will of God and therefore practical atheism.

In Mark 1:23,24 we read, "And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out, saying: 'Let us alone.' What did Jesus do? Did He leave him alone? Was He for his uncleanness and sin? In verse 25 we read, 'And Jesus rebuked him, saying:

Hold thy peace, and come out of him.' We had better follow the example of Jesus and get rid of sin, even if the unclean forces cry to be let alone.

PRAYER

Our Father, our Savior taught His disciples to pray "Thy kingdom come." We realize that if Thy will is done on earth as it is done in Heaven, we must drive out every defiling thing. "Deliver us from evil."

Having prayed for the cleansing of Thy Spirit, we would also pray that Thou wilt enlighten us and enliven us. May we ever be faithful to Thy will.

May we affirm our faith in God, our concern for others and our concern for the future of all. We ask in Jesus' name.

STOP A COLD THE FIRST DAY!

Drive It Out of Your System!

A COLD once rooted is a cold of danger! Trust to no makeshift method. A cold, being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. A cold also calls for a COLD treatment and not a preparation good for a number of other things as well. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is definite treatment for a cold. It is expressly a cold treatment in tablet form. It is internal in effect and it does four important things.

Four Effects

First, it opens the bowels. Second, it checks the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Grove's Bromo Quinine is distinguished for this fourfold effect and it is what you want for the prompt relief of a cold.

All drug stores sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. When you ask for it, don't let anyone switch you to something else for any reason! The cost is small, but the stake is large!

THE GIDEONS, famous for the furnishing of Bibles for hotel rooms and for placing Bibles in many prisons, are now offering schools in the province of Canada to supply Bibles to meet the need of pupils unable to bring them from home, provided a request be made by the boards. This new move was brought about by the suggestion that, if there were more Bibles in the schools, fewer might be needed in the prisons. All honor to the Gideons.

ALFRED DUFF COOPER, the new British secretary of State for War, is one of the staunchest of British statesmen in his defence of the League of Nations, according to the New Outlook. He is credited with the statement: "All we have done since the World War is the League of Nations. It is the only thing between us and ghastly foolishness, but even if it is the only hope let us still cling to it." This expression is said to represent his sincere conviction on this great subject.

DR. JAMES H. BREASTED'S DEATH brings to a close the career of one of the most renowned and accomplished archaeologists of this generation. He was a native of Rockford, Ill., a graduate of Northwestern University and was connected with the department of Archaeology of Chicago University. He won fame for explorations in the citadels of Darius and Xerxes, kings of Persia; for the uncovering of the temples of King Sargon in Assyria; for researches among the public works of King Sennacherib, the battlefield of Armageddon, and explorations in the tombs of the Egyptian Pharaohs. He was probably the best informed man of any land on the history of ancient civilization.

THE WRECK OF THE LUSITANIA has been located after a four months search by the Glasgow salvage ship, Orphir. This brings back into the thought of the world a tragic chapter of the World War—a catastrophe in which nearly twelve hundred persons were sent to death by German torpedoes. For more than twenty years the Lusitania has lain on the ocean floor in approximately three hundred feet of water off the coast of Ireland. The discovery was made by the use of an echo-sounder apparatus, and the positive identification was made by divers who went down in a new type of all-metal suits and examined the wreck in its position on the ocean bottom. The longer and more difficult task of salvaging the lost treasure is still to be accomplished.

THE QUEEN MARY, which is to be Great Britain's greatest liner, is scheduled to begin her maiden voyage from Southampton on May 27 of next year, and the return voyage from New York will begin on Friday, June 5. The new ship will have a capacity of more than twenty-five hundred passengers and will have a crew of twelve hundred. It is stated that a long list of applications for passage on the maiden trip are already in hand. Thus is to begin the career of this creation of Britain and the challenger of Atlantic records for speed and comfort.

THE CENTENARY OF ANDREW CARNEGIE, the Scotch-born millionaire, on November 25, is a credit to the character of the great industrial leader of a few years ago. He was probably the man who inspired the rich givers who have in recent years shared their fortunes with the people who, without such sharing, would have been deprived of many cultural opportunities. Mr. Carnegie knew life from top to bottom. He was the son of a weaver, he began life as a messenger boy and he developed the steel corporation which placed him at the head of the industrialists of his generation.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE is said to control more than one-half of the world's supply of cocoa, ground nuts, wool, jute, rubber, nickel, and gold. It controls thirty per cent of manganese, chrome, zinc, lead and tin ores; has over twenty per cent of all the wheat, vegetable oils, copra, cotton, coal and copper, and nearly one-fifth of the world's silver. These facts explain the world interest of Great Britain, commercially and otherwise, and they explain also the interest of other nations in the thought and purpose of the British.

DOCTOR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Archbishop of York, has made a three-point attack upon what he calls the "heretical" tendencies of the opposition to the use of force in support of law. He holds that the New Testament completes and corrects the deficiencies of the Old Testament, but does not supersede it; that matter and material force can be completely subordinated to the spirit and that spirit normally manifests itself by directing and controlling what is material; and that man is incapable of living by love unless the grace of God has both converted and sanctified him, so that the law of love is not applicable to nations consisting in large measure of unconverted or very imperfectly converted citizens.

A NEW GESTURE OF LIBERALISM

Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., one of the chief promoters of the Rethinking Missions movement, is now sponsoring a new innovation. This time he is not challenging a single enterprise of the Christian Church, but he calls into question the process by which Christianity has become a world factor in effectiveness and in the wideness of its influence. He turns to an interdenominationalized process of propagation. Mr. Rockefeller's letter to the Northern Baptist Convention is in every way courteous and even affectionate in tone toward the Church to which he belongs by extraction and by personal affiliation; but its address is not more to that body than to every form of denominational organization. It is in reality an attack upon the whole religious set-up of the past and the present. We do not criticize the heart of a man who has been to his own denomination and even in a larger sense one of the most consistent and princely givers in a generation of noble philanthropy. But we question with earnestness and sincerity a policy which seeks to decentralize Christian effort, and which seeks to commit the whole Christian enterprise to an irresponsible and unorganized democracy of the spirit—a thing as variable as the emotions and the moods of life. We realize the denominational faults against which the mind and heart of Mr. Rockefeller are in revolt; but we do not believe that the history of Christian progress offers us encouragement to believe that anything constructive and permanent can be achieved without having a responsible, a coherent and a constant group for its promotion. The denominational tie, as we see it, is the most dependable bond for securing coordination and continuity of effort that has been developed thus far. We do not believe that anything else offers hope for carrying through the universal and ageless program of the Christian Church. Support is a very important factor in Christianity, but it is not more important than a unit of organization devoted to an ideal and maintaining a continuous existence. The very liberty involved in the suggestion of denominational dismemberment is, we think, not constructive, nor would it be calculated to promote or conserve the fruits of Christian achievement.

REV. L. A. McKEOWN

At noon, November 16, Rev. L. A. McKeown died and in his going a true and knightly soldier of the Cross has fallen, and the North Mississippi Conference loses one of the most unique and valuable men ever admitted to its membership. He was a monumental example of the transforming power and the conquering efficacy of divine grace. If we remember correctly, Brother McKeown was a railroad employee at Iuka, Miss., at the time of his conversion, and he was kept out of the itinerant connection for many years because of his lack of educational qualification. As a matter of fact, he served twelve years as a supply before he was admitted on trial, and he was thirty-one years a member of the Conference. Twenty-eight years of his ministry were spent in the Greenville District. At the time of his death, he was eighty-one years of age, had been a superannuate for several years and had been in failing health for some time. The writer met him about thirty-seven years ago, while he was still a supply preacher, and for all these years we have carried a vivid recollection of a sermon which he preached from the text: "Remove not the ancient landmarks which your fathers have set." He served well and acceptably in every charge to which he was assigned. His educational deficiencies were more than offset by his great native ability and his profound consecration, and he achieved success because, like the lad with the loaves and fishes, he gave all that he had to his Lord. No man could sing more truthfully or triumphantly than he:

"Thy saints in all this glorious war
Shall conquer, though they die;
They see the triumph from afar,
By faith they bring it nigh."

HENRY LEON

On Thanksgiving Day thirty years ago, Henry Leon, then a mere lad, came to work for the Christian Advocate. As mailer and porter he made a place for himself and he has given the best years of his life to the paper. We make no reservation when we say that no business ever had a more faithful or capable employee. Editors have come and gone, as have printers and publishers also; but, through all changes of administration and circumstance, Henry has neither failed nor faltered. The Advocate has today no more faithful and loyal friend than Henry Leon. We hope that he may be spared to add many more years to his long and honorable record of service.

THAT DISILLUSIONED ELDER

It seems that all the new elders are getting accused of writing the humorous musings which we inserted a short time ago. For the defence of those who are under suspicion, we beg to say that the author of the observations quoted does not live in Mississippi or Louisiana. Let your elder alone!

LAYMENS' ADVOCATE FUND

Since our financial statement of Advocate affairs, we have received $70 from the Greenville District of the North Mississippi Conference. ### THE BASIC BELIEFS OF JESUS

By Bishop Paul B. Kern
Cokesbury Press, Nashville. Price $2

This book was delivered on the Cole Lecture Foundation at Vanderbilt University in the early part of the present year. In our opinion it is one of the best books that we have read in that series. Its values cannot be appraised, however, by less than a reading of the entire book, for from the first page to the last it works toward a conclusion. In a few instances, we were not in complete accord with what seemed to us to be the implications of some statements, but there are other passages which rise to sublime heights—they are irresistible. Such is the discussion of war and the chapter on Love and Human Redemption. The climax is reached in the last chapter. There Bishop Kern abandons quotation and gleanings from current and other literature, and he sums up with rare felicity and power what he conceives to be the fundamental facts in the explanation of Jesus and his message. It is not extravagant to say that it is a great message and is in every way worthy of its place in the succession and of the man who delivered it.

The New Chain-Reference Bible, compiled by Frank Charles Thompson, D. D., Ph.D., B. B. Kirkbride Bible Co., Indianapolis, Publisher.

The third edition of this already famous Bible and system of Bible study furnishes an almost inexhaustive fund of information concerning the Scriptures. There is scarcely a point of interest or a question of importance in the whole range of Bible study which has not been explored and illuminated by painstaking study and scholarly research. Every important teaching or incident can be traced from its first mention to the close of the sacred canon. To the chain-references are added an exhaustive cyclopedia of topics and texts, a discriminating analysis of the books of the Bible, a harmony of the Gospels, eighty pages of concordance, twelve good maps, and other features which can be found in no other Bible. A number of years ago, the editor of the Advocate bought the first edition of this Bible. We commend it to anyone who would have the Bible story and teaching made accessible and easy of understanding.

SONGS FROM THE SLUMS

By Toyohiko Kagawa

Cokesbury Press, Nashville. Price $1

The interest in this book will not be in the perfection and appeal of its poetry, but in its portrayal of the soul of the great Japanese leader now enroute to America for an extended lecture tour. Kagawa was born outside the pale of wedlock, he was schooled in privation and suffering from early childhood and he has long been the friend and the advocate of the underprivileged and the outcast. As a slum worker, philosopher, social leader and Christian he is known around the world. On a former visit, his message was not so well received in America, but the social thinking of the present time, together with the riper experience of the man, give a more promising outlook for the present visit. The English translation of the Japanese poems has doubtless lost much in the change of language, but the soul of the man and the passionate interest of the great Christian statesman and world citizen are still there.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE HOLLY GROVE METHODIST CHURCH—1835-1935

By Rev. G. H. Corry

In giving a brief account of the Holly Grove Church for the past one hundred years, it might be well to go back and look at some of the influences which led up to that history.

During the first two decades of the nineteenth century there were almost no Methodist people or preachers in north and west Louisiana. Evidently the first penetration of Methodism into this section of our state was about the year 1826. In that year Rev. Henry Stephenson, a local preacher from the Missouri Conference, came into what is now Claiborne Parish. He was admitted into the Mississippi Conference, which then included the work in Louisiana, at the close of 1828. The name of the Natchitoches circuit, which had been recently formed, was then changed to "Claiborne," and Mr. Stephenson served it in 1829. Three years later, 1832, the name "Sabine" appears for the first time in the list of appointments, with Preston Cooper in charge. Sabine also appears in 1833 and 1834, but after that it cannot be found in the appointments. Yet since then the names of "Claiborne," "Natchitoches," and "Darbonne" appear regularly. The supposition is that Natchitoches included the territory now in the parish of that name, and, without doubt, the bordering territory of Sabine, which then included Vernon Parish.

During these early days, besides Cooper and Henry Stephenson already mentioned above, there were the following preachers appointed in charge of the Sabine (or as it thus became known in 1835 as the Natchitoches circuit): James P. Stephenson, M. McIntosh, and Henry B. Price. In 1841 the appointment of Joel Sanders to this circuit marks an epoch in the history of the Holly Grove Church. For the church had already been organized as a Methodist Protestant Church, but in that year it was taken over by the Methodist Episcopal Church. This fact is revealed by the following quotations from the writings of Rev. Thomas Franklin, (1826-1891); "Rev. James Ford, a Protestant Methodist, organized a society in the first school house that was put up in this country." This agrees with an unidentified note found in an old church register possessed by Rev. R. T. Wright, a local preacher of this community. This anonymous note states that the Holly Grove Methodist Church was organized in 1835 by Rev. James Ford, a Protestant Methodist preacher. Again, quoting from Rev. Thomas Franklin; "Rev. Joel Sanders, an itinerant Episcopal Methodist, traveled from Bienville Parish to this settlement, crossing Bayou Toro at the mouth, going to Negreet, then to Many, Bayou Scie, Pleasant Hill, and back to Bienville every month." Thus we see that from the appointment of Joel Sanders in charge of the Natchitoches circuit in 1841, the evidence is very substantial that the Holly Grove church has been a part of the itinerant connection. However, it should be taken into account that in a brief history of Holly Grove written by Rev. John Franklin and J. W. Conerly in 1917, it is stated by these two outstanding and faithful men that the Holly Grove Methodist Church was first organized as a Methodist Church, South, in 1849.

At that time they state that the charter members have long since passed away, but many of their descendants still remain. Besides Joel Sanders, other preachers mentioned in the appointments to the Natchitoches circuit down to 1847, were Richard Overby, W. Hinds, John Eddins, and John M. Hamil. After 1847, the year the Louisiana Conference was organized, the following is an almost complete list of the preachers who have served as pastor of the church: Daniel Watkins, 1849; Rev Goodwin, 1850; P. P. Mathis, 1851; T. J. McLendon, and Coarsed, 1856-7; Rev. Mr. McReary, 1858; Rev. Mr. Griswell, 1860; W. D. Staton, 1862; Rev. Mr. Moore, 1863-4; J. M. Franklin, 1865-6-7-8; R. H. Adair, 1869; Isaac Wright, 1870; J. M. Franklin, 1871; Rev. Mr. Smith, 1872-3; F. G. Hocut, 1874; A. Drowdy, 1875; R. M. Blocker, 1877; John Dampton, 1881; John Franklin, 1882; G. W. Sherod, 1884; S. S. Holiday, 1885; John Franklin, 1886; J. C. Cornline, 1887; T. R. Wimberly, 1888; Robert Hurst, 1889; J. C. Cornline, 1890-1-2; R. T. Wright, 1893; J. H. Stafford, 1894; H. C. Murphy, 1895-6-7; Joshua Sanders, 1898; S. S. Hoilday, 1899-1900; E. L. Cargill, 1901; H. C. Murphy, 1902-3; Oscar Rainey, 1904; John Franklin, 1905-6; J. S. Roberts, 1907-8; A. J. Bonnett, 1909-11; John Franklin, 1912-13; J. E. Napper, 1914; Rev. Mr. Thompson, 1915; A. C. Searcy, 1916; C. F. Starnes, 1917; L. P. Moreland, 1918-22; W. W. Perry, 1923-6; C. B. Powell, 1927; J. L. Lay, 1928-29; L. E. Crooks, 1930; C. F. Shepherd, 1931-32; R. A. Bozeman, 1933; G. H. Corry, 1934.

Quoting from Rev. John Franklin and J. W. Conerly, "Through the efforts of these godly men hundreds of souls have been saved, and the cause of our Lord has been strengthened. It was on the Anacoco circuit (as the circuit that included Holly Grove for many years was called), that the cause of Prohibition was first agitated in this parish. And the ward in which Holly Grove was located was one of the first wards in the state to vote dry. And through the efforts of one of our preachers, Brother Roberts, of Anacoco circuit, our parish was one among the first to vote dry. We feel proud of the history of our church. It has been one of the greatest agencies in making our community what it is today, and the end is not yet, for Methodism is destined to play a greater part in the progress and moral and spiritual uplift of our country.

The building in which the church was organized was a log house located 140 yards north of where the church now stands. As stated above, this building was also used for school purposes. About the year 1854, the old house was removed and a new hewn log house 24 feet by 30 feet was built in its stead, about where the present building stands. The school was also conducted in this building. The people worshipped in this house until about the year 1872, when it was removed and a boxed house 34 feet by 40 feet was built. In 1894 a two-story frame building was erected. The first floor was used for church and the upper floor for a Masonic hall. The size of this church was felt to be too small, being only 24 feet by 34 feet, so it was remodeled in 1915, and an annex was added, which makes the present building nearly double its previous size.

Thus briefly we have traced in outline form the history of the Holly Grove Methodist Church. We wish we had time to trace in some detail the many facts about the membership, from charter members on to the present time, for in the last analysis, the membership constitutes the church. But on account of the lack of the roll of the charter members and lack of definite details in many respects, we shall have to be content by saying confidently that we know Holly Grove has had a glorious hundred years of history. May her sons upon whose shoulders the glorious mantle of the Fathers has fallen, take up the torch of truth and holiness, and carry on with the same heroism and zeal that was theirs!

McMAHAN'S CHAPEL, TEXAS

A shrine of Texas religious freedom, the 101-year-old McMahan's Chapel, where early day Protestant Texans worshipped in defiance to Mexico, promises to rise in a new grandeur during the Lone Star State's Centennial exposition centering at Dallas, next year.

REMEMBER THE SUPERANNUATES

Last year we received $32.00 for taking care of the subscriptions of superannuates and others who would otherwise have been deprived of its visits. Many persons have enjoyed the Advocate this year because of that fund. If you would like to have a part in making glad the hearts of superannuates and others who can not afford the Advocate, send us a contribution designated "For the Christmas Fund." We will see that no worthy person is denied the joy of the Advocate.

A movement is under way to convert the chapel, located in Sabine County, into a permanent memorial and Judge W. F. Goodrich of San Augustine, head of the building committee, contemplates its dedication during the centennial year.

The landmark is one year older than Texas independence from Mexico, the commemorative theme of the six-months world's fair at Dallas. What the San Jacinto battle meant to Texas liberty, McMahan's Chapel meant to Texas Protestantism.

The chapel is a Methodist institution, founded in 1835 by Littleton Fowler, a missionary who was one of the organizers of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Texas and who served as chaplain in the first Senate of the Texas Republic formed in 1836, immediately after Mexican control was driven below the Rio Grande river.

It was established on the cotton plantation of Col. Samuel D. McMahan which served as a refuge for the state's pioneer Methodists when the Catholic religion was decreed by Mexico as the official form of worship. The weather beaten, one-story building is surrounded by trees older than the birthplace of Texas Methodism itself.

The grave of its founder, Missionary Fowler, lies beneath the pulpit. His headstone rises behind the altar.

Services have been held in the building at least once a month since the church was organized. This is said to be a record for continuous activity for Protestantism in Texas.

Methodists gathered at the McMahan plantation as early as 1817 to worship. In 1833 they organized a religious society of 48 members there. In the following year they held the first Methodist camp meeting on record in Texas.

In 1835 when Texas was flaming towards rebellion against Mexico the group began functioning as a church. Soon after the Texas Republic was established in 1836 Missionary Fowler organized the San Augustine District of the Methodist Church.

The Trail of The Circuit Rider

BY W. L. DUREN

Another matter which was indicative of the mood of the time was the proposal to bring forward from the Journal of the General Conference of 1858 a resolution which was not acted on, but which proposed to change the name to the Methodist Church. The subject had been discussed in 1854. It was now proposed by a Committee on Changes of Economy, and the Conference finally voted to submit the name, Episcopal Methodist Church. The change was not ratified by the Annual Conferences. While the Conference voted to change the name of the Church, it refused to adopt a resolution to abrogate the geographical boundaries which had been established in 1844.

Another step of far-reaching importance was the adoption of a measure looking to the setting up of the Negro membership of the Southern Church in a separate Church. Pursuant to this action, the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America was organized at Jackson, Tennessee, December 16, 1870. William Henry Miles and Richard H. Vanderhorst were elected Bishops and they were consecrated by Bishop Robert Paine and Bishop Holland N. McTyeire. After a sympathetic address filled with wisdom and a profound interest in the Negro race, Bishop Paine surrendered the chair to Bishop Miles, and the future guidance of the Church to the Bishops who had been elected and consecrated. Bishop McTyeire also delivered a valedictory message to the newly launched Church. The reply of Bishop Vanderhorst to the addresses of his white friends was touching and in every way worthy of the man. He said: "Brothers, say not good-bye; that is a hard word. Say it not. We love you and thank you for all you have done for us. But you must not leave us—never."

Other things done by the Conference were the abrogation of probation for membership, the establishment of "family sittings" in public worship, deletion of the regulations regarding dress from the Discipline, the extension of the pastoral term from two to four years, boundary changes made necessary by the growth of the Church and the results of war, and such revision of the laws as were indicated by the conditions existing and the new outlook of the Church. No previous General Conference ever came to such an opportunity, and it is doubtful if any other Conference ever handled more wisely and constructively the great issues and problems which were then up for settlement. All that it did was not approved, some things which were approved were changed later, and some things which it discussed but failed to do were enacted later, but no other Church Council ever handled so many vital questions with such ability and understanding.

An incident of the Conference was the presence of Rev. Jacob Ditzler, of the Christian Union Church, of Illinois. This organization began in 1863, and was completed at a General Council held at Terra Haute, Indiana, in 1865, in which six state organizations were represented. It is said to have been composed mainly of those who had withdrawn from the Methodist Episcopal Church during the war. The General Conference passed the following Resolution:

"Resolved, That in the interval of the General Conference, if any number of ministers representing a respectable number of churches and congregations, occupying territory not embraced within the prescribed boundaries of any of our Annual Conferences, shall signify and formally express a wish to unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and shall give satisfactory assurance that they are cordially willing to be governed by our Discipline, our bishops may organize such district or territory into a Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which shall be entitled to all the rights, privileges and immunities of the other Annual Conferences holding connection with said Church."

This action did not specifically name any ecclesiastical body, but at a Council of the Christian Union Church, held at Clinton, Illinois, June 7-10, 1867, which was attended by Bishops Doggett and Marvin, the Council resolved to unite with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the name of "The Episcopal Methodist Church," to adopt its hymn book and Discipline, and the Bishops of the Church, South, were asked to take charge of them until the General Conference of 1870. This Bishop Doggett did with the consent of Bishop Marvin. The first session of the Illinois Conference met in Nashville, Illinois, October 16, 1867, with Bishop Doggett presiding. The Conference reported forty traveling preachers, seven admitted on trial, sixteen local preachers, twenty-five hundred members, ten church buildings, twenty-seven Sunday schools, and one thousand and eighty scholars. It is interesting to note in this connection that, although the name Episcopal Methodist Church was rejected by the Annual Conferences, the Illinois Conference continued under that name until the General Conference of 1878 granted permission to change it to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The delegates who launched the quadrennium well begun by the legislation of the General Conference of 1866, came from the council chamber of the Church to find the practical problems a grim reality. On the morning of March 6, 1867, Bishop Joshua Soule died. He had been in feeble health, but no man ranked with him as a tower of strength in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. His going was widely mourned, but the contribution which he made to Methodist law and administration abides until this day. In the summer of 1867, the South had another disastrous visitation of yellow fever and cholera. Worse than the effects of the passing scourge, was a spirit of intolerance which pervaded the religious attitudes of all denominations. Bishop Potter, of the Protestant Episcopal Church in New York, and the establisher of the "subway tavern" in later years, brought Rev. John H. Tyng, Jr., to trial for preaching in a Methodist Church within the parish limits of two rectors of the Church. Tyng had preached in St. James Methodist Church in New Brunswick. His trial was set for January 17, 1868, but was postponed until February 10. He was convicted and censured in the Church of the Transfiguration, March 14, 1868.

The first year after the reorganization of 1866, showed a gain in the white membership of more than forty-seven thousand, and a loss in the colored membership of nearly twenty-five thousand. Up to the present time, only three years have shown a recession in the white membership of the Church, South, and those losses were nominal. The losses in the Negro membership continued from year to year until the organization of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in 1870. In 1868, Dr. Sehon, who had been Secretary of the Board of Missions since 1860, resigned and Dr. W. G. E. Cunyngham served as corresponding secretary and Dr. W. E. Munsey was appointed for the last year of the quadrennium, but he was not re-elected in 1870, the honor going to Rev. John B. McFerrin.

In the Methodist Episcopal Church, the events of this period were many and varied. One item which reveals the feeling regarding the old controversies, was that the General Conference at Chicago in 1868, passed a resolution rescinding the censure of Samuel Morris and George Starrs for delivering abolition speeches at Cincinnati, during the General Conference of 1836. On January 6, 1869, Dr. Charles Elliott, the historian of the Separation for the Northern wing of Methodism, died of a stroke of paralysis at Mount Vernon, Iowa. The years of 1870 and 1871 were disastrous years for the episcopacy of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Bishop Thompson died March 22, 1870, Bishop Kingsley died in Bierut, Syria, April 6, 1870, and Bishop Clarke died May 23, 1871. This depletion of the episcopal bench led to the election of eight new bishops in 1872.

An event of Church-wide interest in the South, immediately preceding the session of the General Conference, was the death of Dr. William A. Smith at Richmond, Virginia, March 1, 1870. He was a man who stood at the center of the storm in the most turbulent years of the church and the nation, and he neither faltered nor compromised on any issue. He was never robed in the gown of the episcopal office, but he carried its authority in his soul. As the defender of Bishop Andrew before the General Conference of 1844, and as a contender for the rights of the Southern Church, his impress upon the history of Methodism was positive and his contribution will not be forgotten.

The General Conference met in Court Square Cumberland Presbyterian Church, May 4, 1870, but on the sixth day the sessions were moved to the Second Street Methodist Church, on account of the bad acoustics of the Court Square building. It was not a great Conference in the sense that was true of the previous one, and in the very nature of the case, it would suffer by contrast. There were no such opportunities for constructive and far-reaching legislation as in 1866. But the Conference was made up of men of real ability, as was shown by the report of Dr. L. C. Garland for the Committee on Education. The report took the position that the first need of the ministry was not a technical training in theology, but a broad general education; and that the first task of the Church was to strengthen its literary schools. The East Alabama Male College located at Auburn, Alabama, had tendered its facilities to the Church for a theological school, but it was not accepted; and the Conference took action re-emphasizing the legislation of 1866 regarding the establishment of Chairs of Bible Instruction in Methodist literary institutions.

The Missionary enterprise was again consolidated under one Secretary, to which place Dr. John B. McFerrin was elected. The Sunday school interest, which had rather grown up than been developed, was now organized as a separate department and was to be directed by a General Board. Action was taken to establish a new Monthly Magazine, and the Southern Review, under the editorial direction of that brilliant, but politically minded and theologically daring genius, Alfred Taylor Bledsoe, was adopted. The first issue of the Review, as a Methodist publication, appeared in July following the Conference, but the relationship was destined not to be a happy one. The Church had undertaken to adopt the Review without assuming responsibility for the political and theological views of its editor, and complaints of the political character of the publication greatly affected its usefulness and contributed to an early dissolution of the tie between the Review and the Methodist Church.

Five new Conferences were set up; the North Mississippi, North Alabama, Western Los Angeles, and Illinois, the last under the resolution of 1866 regarding churches and territory not embraced within the bounds of existing Annual Conferences. A District Conference

Mrs. Mabelle Martin of Meridian says that the Christian Advocate is the first paper that she remembers in her home. And we say that the Advocate has no better friend than she.

Dr. R. E. Smith, formerly dean of Centenary College, was speaker and leader for Religious Emphasis Week at Millsaps College last week. This event is an annual feature of the College calendar.

Rev. O. S. Lewis says that he has been warmly received at East End, Meridian, both by the membership of his church and by friends in the city. He is looking forward to a good and happy year.

Rev. J. T. Nicholson, a superannuate of Laurel, Miss., extends his subscription to March, 1937, and along with his remittance he sends a word of appreciation for the Advocate, and for both we thank him.

Mrs. J. M. Givens, Logtown, Miss., says that she is glad to know that the debt of the Advocate is paid. In that we share her joy as do a large circle of Advocate friends throughout Mississippi and Louisiana.

Rev. J. O. Ware, Picayune, Miss., is at his new post of service, and he asks that his Advocate be changed at once, since he does not want to miss a single copy. Thank you, Brother Ware, the change has been made.

Rev. A. W. O'Bryant, Purvis, Miss., is serving the Logtown charge until Christmas for Rev. W. C. Black. Brother O'Bryant is a former Mississippian, but is now a superannuate in the North Alabama Conference.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, that untiring worker and devoted superintendent of the Memorial Mercy Home of this city, writes us an appreciated note regarding our work as presiding elder, particularly as it was related to the Home.

Rev. W. M. Tabb, Taylorsville, Miss., reached his new field on November 25, and found everything spic and span, a good dinner and a great welcome from his people. Naturally he is optimistic over the outlook for the new year.

Rev. H. J. Boltz, Box 527, Ruston, La., writes us that he was eighty years old his last birthday. He is one of the veterans of the Louisiana Conference, his body leans toward the sunset, but his face is turned toward the morning.

On November 12, Benedict Galloway, a kinsman of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, was licensed to preach by the Baton Rouge District Committee. The young man is a member of Keener Memorial Church and is a freshman at L. S. U.

Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, Zachary, La., says: "I showed my Christmas cards to the congregation Wednesday night, and I have two renewals for you." Thank you, Brother Rousseaux, and may there be many others who will do likewise.

Dr. Charles W. Crisler, presiding elder at Brookhaven, Miss., thanks us for uniform courtesy to himself and to the brethren generally. It is our sincere desire to be courteous at all times and in all things and render the most helpful service possible.

The first contribution to the Christmas Fund comes from Rev. J. H. Stafford, a local elder of the city. Brother Stafford has been an attache of the Custom House for a number of years and has always carried on such ministerial labors as he could make way for.

Keep to the "Christmas spirit" and send a Christian messenger to bear your greetings. Send the Advocate.

The Advocate extends sympathy to the family and friends of J. Curren Johnson, whose death on December 3 brought sorrow to many hearts. The editor of the Advocate has known that family all his life and he numbers the members among his staunchest and most loyal friends.

Our good friend, Rev. W. T. Griffin of Jacksonville, Fla., writes us an appreciated note in which he says some pleasant things about the Advocate during the past year, and he intimates that he is expecting much more since it is to have two editors for the year now beginning.

Judge H. D. Minor, upon the unanimous request of the congregation at Poplar Corner, Miss., has consented for the chapel which he is building to be named Minor Memorial in memory of his wife, Florence Frayser Minor. The cornerstone has been laid and the building will be dedicated in the spring.

Mr. S. H. Radcliffe, our good friend in Rayne Memorial Church, writes that my friends at Rayne are not among those I mentioned editorially last week. Perhaps we had better say that while we published the article editorially it was quoted, and it was published for the humor of it. The author was not serious in what he said.

We regret to record the death of Brother Tudor B. Carré of Rayne Memorial Church in this city. His death, which occurred at noon Thursday, removes the last but one of a family that will long be famous in the annals of New Orleans Methodism. Brother Walter W. Carré, the surviving member, is connected with First Church.

Among those who make acknowledgment of Christmas cards, are: Rev. T. H. Porter, Senatobia; S. G. Armstrong, Wesson, Miss.; J. H. Frazer, Lake Providence, La.; Mrs. Mattie Irwin, Port Gibson, Miss.; Mrs. A. Hoffpauir. We appreciate the messages of appreciation which are included.

Mrs. L. E. Crooks, who was injured in a taxi accident during the recent session of the Louisiana Conference, is still at Hotel Dieu. We are glad to report that she is improving and that no permanent injury seems likely. It appears that the taxi driver, in order to avoid striking a pedestrian, stopped very suddenly and Mrs. Crooks and her husband, Rev. L. E. Crooks, was catapulted forward. Brother Crooks was not injured.

Methodist Women

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard

The Woman's Missionary Society of Epworth Methodist Church of New Orleans recently gave a lovely surprise birthday party in honor of Mrs. A. L. Dunn in the parlor of the church.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with Rose of Montana and the table was ornamented with a huge birthday cake.

In appreciation of Mrs. Dunn's loyal devotion and consecrated service to the church and auxiliary she was presented with a life membership and pin. How splendid to be worthy of such honor! The words of the writer of old came to our minds—"A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised," and again, "her price is far above rubies."

* * *

As missionary women, are we not coming more and more to appreciate the great hymns of our Church? A women's missionary society is hardly complete without a hymn study. We are indeed delighted to learn that Prof. Charles Mashburn, of Scarritt College, has recently prepared a short devotional study of seven great hymns which may be used in individual or group worship at any time during the year. This may be obtained from Literature Headquarters, 706 Church Street, Nashville, Tenn., for 5 cents a copy or 25 cents a dozen.

* * *

Word has come to us of the organization of a splendid business women's circle of First Church, Baton Rouge Missionary Society. This has appropriately been named the "Ruth McConnell Circle," in honor of Mrs. Gilman McConnell, the most capable president of that society.

* * *

As the Christmas time approaches and we are racking our brains for Christmas gift suggestions for mother and sister, let us not forget life memberships make wonderful Christmas gifts; but if that is a little "too high" let us remember subscriptions to the World Outlook may be had for $1. And did you know our Publishing House has some splendid one volume Bible commentaries which sell for as low as $2.50? Surely any missionary woman would appreciate any of the above mentioned gifts, and are not these gifts most fitting with which to commemorate the birth of our Lord?

Nearly Ten Thousand Miles to a Mission Station

A vivid picture of the long "trek" and the trials and dangers that our missionaries must face as they journey to the heart of the Congo is given in the following letter from Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Reid:

"We left Wilmore, Ky, on March 27, and drove through to New York in our half-ton Chevrolet truck. . . .

"About four o'clock on Monday afternoon, April 8, they pulled up the gang-plank, and we pushed out in the harbor past the great Statue of Liberty. . . . Just as we were putting out to sea a hail storm broke, and reports began to come in of a storm at sea. The ship authorities decided to wait the dawn of day, so they dropped anchor. At daylight we put out into the stormiest sea that most of us had ever seen. . . . The waves broke with terrific force over the prow of the ship, dashed down the full length of the deck, and struck the portholes of our cabin with the force of a sixty-mile tempest. Our ship tossed to and fro like a drunken man. The second, third, and fourth days the storm grew worse until it seemed that we would be engulfed by the waves that broke over us. Yet in the midst of it all, what comfort we had as we committed our lives to the Great Pilot of the stormy seas!

"While the storm was raging they lashed the gasoline launch with great chains and turnbuckles to the deck of the ship. . . . At meal time there was wild confusion. . . . In our cabin everything that was not tied down moved around on the floor. . . . After five days of storm the sea grew calmer and we settled down to normal living.

"Our vessel was a cargo of 10,000 tons capacity of the American West African Line. We had a small group of friendly passengers, four of whom were our own Congo missionaries: Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Lewis and two children and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Maw. After seventeen days at sea we caught our first sight of land, Dakar, Senegal, on the coast of Africa just off the Sahara.

"Our trip along the African coast was long and tiresome. . . . We stopped at eighteen ports. . . . We saw multiplied thousands of black men and women, all too many of them suffering from the curse of a civilization without Christ. . . . After forty-five days on the ocean we went up the Congo river and docked at Matadi, where we prepared for our long overland journey.

"The first day out from Matadi we traveled fifty miles over the roughest mountain roads I have ever seen. Often we trembled as we crossed weak, rotting bridges lest the cars should fall through. At other places we had to stop and practically remake the bridges to cross the deep and swift mountain rivers. . . . The first night out we camped in a deserted house that had neither doors nor windows. Dr. Lewis heard a lion roaring in the distance just before he went to sleep. He arose, got his gun, and lay down to spend a sleepless night, thinking of the possibility of a lion springing into their bedroom. . . . The mountain roads were so steep that sometimes we had to all get hold of the rope and pull the cars up. Again in the plain country the sand was so deep that sometimes the passenger cars had to be pulled out. Our truck pulled through with little difficulty. . . . We made a journey of nearly 1200 miles through Portuguese Angola, passed through hundreds of villages and saw thousands of people, and we could count on one hand all the churches we saw en route.

"On the thirteenth day of inland travel we came to Lusambo, and the next day (June 8), to Wembo Nyama, where a multitude greeted us with shouts of "Moyo" and waving palm branches. We had traveled nearly 10,000 miles—nearly 700 to New York, 7,000 on the ocean, and over 1,700 overland through Angola and the Belgian Congo, and we were gloriously happy to be back again among our people."

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, Brother E. P. Howie has been called to his reward after years of faithful, devoted and loyal service to this his church, and

Whereas, his family have been and are members and earnest workers in this church, and Brother Howie's patient, cheerful and friendly manner was an inspiration and encouragement to all with whom he came in contact. Therefore be it,

Resolved, That the Board of Stewards of Capitol Street Methodist Church, in meeting assembled, express their deep sympathy to the family and recognize in these resolutions their appreciation of his services, his friendship and his inspiration to all who knew him; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to his family, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, a copy to the press and a copy made a part of these minutes.

Unanimously adopted this the 25th day of November, 1935.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 15.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

EZRA TEACHING THE LAW OF GOD

The temple had been rebuilt, the wall restored, physical equipment was ample, the people had rest, but they were well-night bankrupt in religion and spirituality. However, their hearts were hungry for that which had given life and meaning to the glorious days of their forefathers. God had prepared a man and the man had prepared his heart "to know, to do and to teach the statutes and judgments of the Lord." There was unity. Men, women and children old enough to understand "assembled as one man" and called Ezra, the prepared, to read to them the law of Moses. How much or what parts of the law he had assembled and transcribed, we do not know, but when he opened the scroll, the people stood in reverence and Ezra led the worship, praising "the Lord, the great God," while the multitude answered, "Amen!" Then, from morning to mid-day, Ezra and his assistants read from the sacred book and interpreted its deeper and more difficult portions to the people who worshiped with bowed heads and humbled hearts. As they heard the law, they realized how very far they had fallen short of duty, and wept. Ezra taught them that the disclosure of true conditions is not a cause for sorrow, but for joy, and bade them feast and share and rejoice. The word that revealed their sins pointed the path to forgiveness, as the straight-edge which shows crookedness furnishes a standard for its correction.

The Book of Law read and expounded by Ezra would seem small and thin to us today, but it was a pedagogue leading the people on toward Christ, a primer preparing the way for the greater texts to follow. Theirs the promise, ours the fulfillment; theirs the prophecy, ours the history of the Galilean. If such a volume could move to tears and repentance, to reform and rejoicing, what results might not follow the reading of our Bible by all America "as one man?"

Alas, that American barns burst with food while American citizens starve with hunger! Alas, that millions of Bibles lie dusty and unopened in American homes while men, women and children die of spiritual starvation for lack of the sustenance the Book would afford! What abatement of vice and crime, what increase of justice and brotherly love, what glory to God and good to men would follow its devout and daily use! Each man's Bible consists only of the used portion of the book, as his food consists not of the store in pantry or barn, but of that which he eats and assimilates. Some of the Bibles are thin and clouded with fogs of superstition and mists of misunderstanding that earnest study would remove and make the ancient book a lamp to the feet and a light to the path. Better a good Bible reading than a poor sermon. Better "borrow" a sermon from Amos or Isaiah than from Dr. Blank, or the latest volume of "helps."

MISSISSIPPI AND LOUISIANA

Rev. and Mrs. Jolly B. Harper are in sorrow on account of the death of their little baby girl. The babe was only a few weeks old, but it was already the foundation of many beautiful dreams which death has left crushed and ruined. Interment was in Alexandria, La.

Rev. John W. Chisholm, Midlothian, Texas, writes us under date of November 27, saying: "Thirty years ago this Thanksgiving I made my first subscription to the N. O. Christian Advocate. Here goes for another year and a box of Christmas cards—hope they are not all gone." Thank you, and the cards are on the way.

First Church, Shreveport, had a great year under the leadership of Dr. Dana Dawson. From the summary published in the calendar for November 24, we take the following facts: Every financial claim for the year met in full; Two Missionary Societies raised $7,850.00; 326 members added, 151 on profession of faith; 64 babies and 62 young people and adults baptized; 154 subscribers to the Conference organ; 123 training credits; and $47,834.00 raised for all purposes.

REGULAR ARMY VACANCIES

Examinations will be held by the War Department on January 28 and 29, 1936, in which properly qualified and ecclesiastically endorsed candidates of the following denominations may participate: Southern Baptist, Methodist, Missouri Synod Lutheran, Methodist Episcopal, South, and United Brethren. Applications must reach the Adjutant General, War Department, not later than January 6, 1936. Those received after that date will not be considered.

There are at this time seven Protestant vacancies in the Regular Army Chaplains' Corps allotted to the above named denominations. Candidates are requested to inform this office at the earliest possible date of their desire for the ecclesiastical approval which is required upon their applications to the War Department. Members of the denominational Chaplain's committees are also requested to send to this office the names of ministers under the age of 34 years who might be interested in applying for appointment to the Chaplain's Corps of the Regular Army.

MEDITATION

By Rev. B. M. Hunt

Romans 16.

In reading the sixteenth chapter of Romans, we are tempted to skip the list of names. We wonder what edification there would be in studying a long list of unpronounceable names. But let us stop and think.

Paul was rich in his human relationships. His letters were full of warm, appreciative, personal reference. For instance in II Tim. 1:16: The Lord give mercy to the house of Onesiphorus; for he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain. Think of what a stream of sunshine to the prisoner.

Paul appreciated his fellow-workers. He often employed a professional writer to take down his letters, but the salutation was invariably in his own hand. II Thess. 3:17: "The salutation of Paul with mine own hand, which is the token in every epistle; so I write."

In closing the epistle to the Romans, Paul mentions many of his comrades and helpers. They were friends he had met in the churches. Phebe was a helper to many. Priscilla and Aquilla had risked their lives to save him. They maintained a church in their house. Andronicus and Junia had served in prison with Paul. Tryphena and Tryphosa are described as "hard workers in the Lord's cause." Mary "bestowed much labor on us." The beloved Persis "labored much in the Lord." Urbane was a "helper in Christ." The families of Narcissus and Aristobulus were "in the Lord." Many are the personal greetings.

This spirit of Christian fellowship was in the days of the Roman empire. Men were subjects held by the grip of imperial power. The world knew nothing of brotherhood. The people of that day were astonished at the way the Christians loved one another. It was incomprehensible to them. Yet the Christians loved one another, served each other, commended each other, prayed for each other. What was the secret of this brotherhood?

John in his first epistle, wrote: "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son, Jesus Christ." "If we walk in the light, we have fellowship one with another." Paul wrote to the Philippians: "If there be any communion of the Spirit, fulfill ye my joy, that ye be of the same mind."

It was faith in a common Savior that made men brothers in the profound sense. In Christ Jesus there was neither barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free. All outward relationships were swept in the mighty tidal one of unity in Christ. Christianity swept the whole gamut of social, national, industrial, and intellectual life. Jew and Gentile, Greek and barbarian, rich and poor, bond and free, were all swept into the Kingdom under the irresistible power of the gospel. In the catacombs under Rome are the graves of Roman senators and Roman slaves; of men of letters and men without learning; of families of plenty and families of penury.

Yes, the sixteenth chapter of Romans brings a glowing message of Christian brotherhood.

PRAYER

Our Father, we believe in the "communion of the saints." We thank Thee for our comrades who have "renounced the world, the flesh, and the Devil." We thank Thee for our co-workers in the churches. We thank Thee for our mutual faith in Christ. We are grateful for the stimulus and joy of Christian fellowship.

We remember the prayer of Jesus that His disciples might be one. In unity of faith and purpose may we assume our full responsibility and share in the work of Thy Kingdom. In Jesus' name we ask it.

To End Annoying Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

Big Saving! No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up winter coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils and children love its taste.

This simple mixture soothes the irritated throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the phlegm and eases the soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its effect in stopping coughs quickly. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

"Moist-Throat" Method Stops COUGHS quicker

● When you catch cold, thousands of moisture glands in the throat and windpipe dry or clog. Sticky phlegm irritates your throat ... and makes you cough.

Pertussin stimulates these glands to pour out natural moisture. Phlegm loosens. Your throat is soothed. Then—quick relief!

Pertussin, by the "moist-throat" method, checks coughs safely.

Over 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in 1 year, according to the Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by American Pharmaceutical Assn. Buy a bottle!

SARDIS-GRENADA DISTRICT

By M. H. McCormack, Jr.,
District Reporter

With three years experience behind him, our popular presiding elder, Dr. Walter L. Storment, with the pastors of his district, launched the program for the new Conference year. The district meeting was held in the First Methodist Church of Sardis, and the spirit of the meeting was the best the writer has witnessed since the passing of the recent depression. Everybody was in a cordial frame of mind, and the old fashioned optimism and enthusiasm of the twenties manifested themselves throughout the day.

Meeting in the church at 10 a. m. Tuesday morning, we joined in a devotional service led by Brother H. R. McKee of Batesville, and then listened to a presentation of the Conference objectives for the new year by Brother Storment. At the 11 o'clock hour Brother Seamon Rhea of Como delivered an inspiring sermon on "The Church Victorious."

Grenada College was ably represented by Dean Newman and Dr. Felts. The college is now facing its most encouraging year, and with the earnest co-operation of all North Mississippi Methodists it can easily make a creditable showing on its indebtedness, and continue to do a great work in the field of Christian education. It has the largest enrollment it has enjoyed in years, and will probably have more registrations next session than it can accept.

At noon we repaired to a local cafe where we were luncheon guests of Dr. and Mrs. Storment. After a most delightful meal, we remained in the dining hall for the rest of our program. The district objectives were presented, and the brethren joined in a lively but congenial round-table discussion of our new year's work.

The district pastors' association was organized, and the following were elected officers for another year: W. N. Dodds, president; H. R. McKee, vice-president; Roy A. Grisham, secretary and M. H.

Get Your Christmas Cards Free

Christmas is just around the corner and you will be needing a supply of Greeting Cards to send to your friends. We are offering, as long as our supply lasts, a beautiful box of assorted, lithographed Christmas Cards absolutely free, postage and all, with each renewal or new subscription to the Advocate. This box contains one dozen cards, all of religious subjects, and is made to retail for 75c a box. If you desire additional boxes they can be purchased at 50c per box which is the cost price plus a small additional charge to take care of postage and handling. Send your renewal immediately and secure one of these gifts. Remember, this offer expires when our supply has been exhausted, and therefore a delay in mailing your remittance may cause you to be too late to receive one of these beautiful gifts.

Subscribers that have already received this generous offer, which was made possible by a friend of the Advocate, write that they are even prettier than they had hoped for or expected.

ADDRESS

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE,
512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

McCormack, Jr., district reporter. Dr. Storment was declared re-elected presiding elder, without opposition.

The brethren regretted very much the absence of our pastor-host, Brother C. L. Rogers, who was prevented from attending by illness.

The pastors voted to a man to respond, with all the strength of heart and sinew, to the challenge thrown out by the presiding elder, to accomplish the following objectives for the new year.

Conference Objectives

1. A Church School in each church, and a survey in each church. 2. District meetings, with Conference-wide effort, for the purpose of facing up to current issues, problems, and tasks, such as missions, evangelism, alcohol, gambling, etc. The meetings to be attended by all pastors and lay workers. 3. College Day observed in every church. 4. Church School Day Observed in each church.

District Objectives

1. Benevolences assumed to be paid in full; one-third in cash, and the balance in subscriptions, by Easter. 2. Four Standard Training Schools to be held within the bounds of the district this year. 3. A study class in each charge, led by the pastor or someone else who is able to present the book selected. 4. A revival in each church. A survey to reach the unreached. 5. Co-operation with the district directors; Roy A. Grissom, young people's work; K. I. Tucker, adult work; and Mrs. N. N. Maxey, children's work. Their respective addresses are Horn Lake, Oakland, and Coldwater.

ATTENTION, EVERYBODY

The restrictions on quotas for the Memphis Young People's Conference have been taken off, and any young person in the age limit may attend, provided they register at once before all of the available places are taken. Most of the pastors, all of the district directors of young people, and the Conference offices have registration blanks. Let us be well represented at Memphis, December 27-31.

Layman and Wife Gave Hymnals

A loyal layman and wife, who had given two hundred and fifty copies of the new Methodist Hymnal to their church, wrote us, "While present conditions might not indicate it, if the truth were known I am sure that you would find thousands who feel just as we do. Then, too, just where would it be possible to find another opportunity of a gift which would give so much and such lasting pleasure to so many."

Members and Classes Subscribe for Hymnals

"We have used our new HYMNALS now for two Sundays. We are very much pleased with them. We found the matter of supplying our congregation an easy task. The plan was to have the membership subscribe one book or more. The subscriptions ran from one book to fifty. In one public service they were quickly subscribed.

"Our church has determined that the 'singing of spiritual hymns' shall have a larger part in our worship."

"Financing the purchase of the Methodist Hymnals is proving to be a very simple and easy matter. A competent committee was put in charge. Individuals and classes are contributing to supply the auditorium. The contract to pay monthly, beginning thirty days after shipment, was signed, but already several months' payments have been made. Our people are delighted with the Hymnals."

Missionary Society Raises Money

The Vice President of the Woman's Missionary Society in charge of the Circles asked the pastor to recommend some worth-while undertakings for the year 1935. He suggested that nothing would be more fitting than to supply the church with the new HYMNALS. On the first Sunday of October the church was fully supplied with hymnals and they were paid for. This was but one of the local undertakings of these circles this year.

Memorial Plan Used

"We are using the Memorial Plan for financing purchase of the Hymnals. At the first mention of this plan it took wonderfully with our people. A large number of our families immediately subscribed for from one to five books. Too much cannot be said in praise of this plan: it makes it easy to get books; it insures better care of them; it will diminish the probability of their being taken from the auditorium."

THE WISE MEN OF THE CHRISTMAS STORY, according to Dr. William T. Ellis, were from the "East," possibly Chaldea. They were the inheritors of at least four thousand years of culture and they were men of spiritual discernment and understanding. They were more than soothsayers and astrologers, for they were the counsellors of kings. The costliness of their gifts indicates their economic position and the fact that they found ready access to King Herod shows their standing.

FEMININE BARFLIES is the epithet applied to a certain class of drinking women by a secretary of the Keely Institute. The Institute at Dwight, Ill., long famous as a hospital for drink addicts, shows a fourteen per cent increase, in the last ten months, of women seeking "cure." This disclosure added to the mounting totals of traffic fatalities ought to make some impression even on the conscience of a wet Congressman.

MRS. CAROLINE MERRIOTT, believed to be England's oldest woman, is one hundred and ten years of age, and is still active mentally and her voice is strong. She was born ten years after the battle of Waterloo, she remembers the Crimean war, the Corn Law riots and the coronation of Queen Victoria. She has been twice married, a widow since 1906 and worked in a laundry until she was eighty-five years of age. She may not hold the record for years, but hers has certainly been a remarkable career.

THE DRINK BILL of the United States, according to Scottish Rite News Bureau, is estimated at $3,500,000,000. United States Treasury figures show that during the year ending June 30, the following quantities of alcoholic beverages were consumed: beer, 1,351,954,343 gallons; liquors, 65,544,931 gallons; wines, (estimated) 25,000,000 gallons. All this in addition to a boot-leg consumption estimated at from $1,000,000,000 to $2,000,000,000. Such is the record of John Barleycorn, the moral evangelist of the politicians.

THE CITY OF BUDAPEST in Hungary has instituted a novel traffic experiment. The use of motor-horns has been prohibited and motorists are required to slow down to avoid accidents, instead of rending the air with the noise of a horn while they drive like Jehu. The police report that, since the inauguration of the new regulation, the number of traffic accidents has been reduced to one-half. In America such a regulation might reduce the number of deaths due to reckless driving and, at the same time, help along the anti-noise campaign.

THE TRIAL OF THOSE ACCUSED of being accomplices of Dimitro Velitchke in the murder of King Alexandria of Yugoslavia and M. Barthou, the French Minister of Justice, at Marseilles in October, 1934, opened at Aixen-Provence on Monday, November 18. According to the Christian World, it is expected to be the longest and the most sensational trial ever heard in a French Court. That statement takes into account, of course, the sensational trial of Major Dreyfus whose death occurred only a few weeks ago.

AN ANCIENT HITTITE CAPITAL in North Syria has been discovered, according to announcement made by the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago. The city lies to the north of Antioch, which was once the center of Greek culture, with 400,000 inhabitants. Piece by piece the story of ancient civilizations is being recovered from the dust of the ages, and the authenticity of the ancient records is being checked. Each separate discovery made, has added to our confidence in the Scripture account of the peoples of that distant day.

A GLASS EYE for the 200-inch telescope to be erected on Palomar Mountain, near Los Angeles, has been under construction at the Corning Glass Works, Corning, N. Y., for the past seven years. The huge lens will be seventeen feet in diameter and two feet thick. The present cast, which has been cooling for more than a year, is reported to be without a major flaw. The lens will not be finished for at least another five years, and when it is completed it will enable astronomers to see four times farther into space than is possible with any telescope now in use.

THE JAPANESE EMPEROR, Hirohito, has another son, a second heir to the Imperial throne. The event was announced by the booming of cannon—a welcome to the 123rd Son of Heaven. According to the Literary Digest, the reign of the present line goes back to the Sun Goddess of 2000 years ago. At birth, the male children of the royal household are presented with a plain wooden box which is adorned with the Imperial seal, a chrysanthemum having sixteen petals, and containing a nine and one-half inch sword of archaic design. According to a statement once made by P. W. Wilson, the sword is for self-defense.

EDITORIAL

CHRISTMAS

Once again we have come to the threshold of the season to which the heart of the world responds with songs of cheer and with countless demonstrations of joy and human good will. Jew and Christian, rich and poor, bond and free share together in the glad event, though they may not share in common the spirit of praise for a Saviour born. The meditation and thought of the Christian world will center in Bethlehem, nestling in imaginary beauty among the hills of Judea; and the heart will clothe a lowly manger with the glories and the beauty of Heaven. All because of that event which filled the minds of the humble shepherds with wonder and with awe, an event to which the hearts of more than half a hundred generations of men have thrilled with the ecstasies of immortal hope, and an event in which the passing ages have not diminished interest. Despite the bedlam of the market-place and the selfish appeal to the superficial emotions of life, the thinking of the day will have an undertone of spiritual emphasis and expectations deeper than any momentary interest or emotion and more abiding than the indulgent benevolence and abandon of a season. When the innocent and confiding child shall ask, as only a child can, the meaning of all the din of noise and the brilliance of the tinsel and the toys, the mind and heart, in spite of delinquencies and spiritual failures, will be brought back to the hope of the glad morning which was ushered in with the shepherd song of "Peace on earth and good will to men." And, even in the shadows of what may be our own spiritual uncertainty and vagueness of hope, we will be found accompanying with the shepherds on the journey to Bethlehem, the city of David, for a glimpse of the babe in his manger bed. The Christian Advocate joins in the prayer of a great multitude for a season of blessedness and peace, and for abiding good will which, beginning at our own firesides, shall extend around the whole earth.

UNIFICATION

We are making room in this issue of the Advocate for the full text of the Plan of Union, which has just reached us. We believe that its importance is such as to justify giving it the right of way over every other matter. We hope that all our people will study the entire plan soberly, dispassionately and with a profound yearning to do the will of God in connection with this very serious and far-reaching proposal. We do not expect to open the columns of the Advocate for a discussion of the Plan until we approach the time for giving our own decision on the question. Let no one get uneasy, for we expect to give full and ample time for fair and proper discussion of the whole subject. For the present, we are going to give as full a reproduction of opinion, expressed in the press of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as our space will permit. Having the complete text of the Plan before them, our people can know what is being discussed, and a fair cross-section of opinion at the North, we believe, will help them to arrive at a just and a Christian conclusion on this great matter. The rule which we apply to others we expect to apply to ourselves and we will try to give a fair representation of opinion, as it may be expressed in the Methodist press, North.

DEATH CLAIMS VETERAN

Rev. B. F. Jones, honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, entered into eternal rest on December 13. His death occurred at Brookhaven, Miss., following an attack of pneumonia, according to report sent by his pastor, Rev. J. L. Neill. Brother Neill's report will be given in next week's issue.

LAYMEN'S FUND

Since our last issue of the Advocate, we have received $33.50 from Brookhaven District. Credit for raising this is given Brother Curtis Youngblood who is the district lay leader. Dr. Sullivan, not knowing our purpose to give credit for amounts received, held this check in the hope that he might receive more to add to it.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren: As you know Rev. H. A. Wood was appointed at our Annual Conference as a Conference evangelist. Rev. Charles Assaf was appointed as missionary evangelist. The following were appointed as lay evangelists: Oland Hull, Frank Dement and Hardy Norsworthy. As chairman of the Evangelistic Committee, I commend these brethren to you for your careful consideration.

W. M. SULLIVAN, Chairman,
Evangelistic Committee.

PLAN OF UNION

Of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church

Transmittal

We, the Commissions on Interdenominational Relations and Church Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church, holding that these Churches are essentially one in origin, in belief, in spirit, and in purpose, and desiring that this essential unity be made actual in organization and administration in the United States of America and throughout the world, do hereby propose and transmit to our respective General Conferences the following Plan of Union and recommend to the three Churches its adoption by the process which they respectively require.

Division One

Article I—Declaration of Union

The Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Protestant Church shall be united in one Church.

Article II—Name

The name of the Church shall be The Methodist Church.

Article III—Articles of Religion

The Articles of Religion shall be those historically held in common by the three uniting Churches. (See Disciplines.)

Division Two—Conferences

1. There shall be a General Conference for the entire Church with such powers, duties and privileges as are hereinafter set forth.

2. There shall be Jurisdictional Conference for the Church in the United States of America, with such powers, duties, and privileges as are hereinafter set forth.

3. There shall be Central Conferences for the Church outside the United States of America, with such powers, duties, and privileges as are hereinafter set forth.

4. There shall be Annual Conferences as the fundamental bodies in the Church, with such powers, duties, and privileges as are hereinafter set forth.

Section I—General Conference

Article I.—The General Conference shall be composed of not less than 600 nor more than 800 delegates, one-half of whom shall be ministers and one-half lay members, to be elected by the Annual Conferences.

Article II.—The General Conference shall meet in the month of April or May once in four years, beginning with such year and at such place as shall be fixed by the Uniting Conference, and thereafter at such time and in such place as shall be determined by the General Conference or by its duly authorized committees.

Article III.—The General Conference shall fix the ratio of representation in the General, Jurisdictional, and Central Conferences from the Annual Conferences, with the total ministerial membership in the Annual Conference as a basis, provided that each Annual Conference shall be entitled to at least one ministerial and one lay delegate in the General Conference and also in the Jurisdictional or Central Conference.

Article IV.—The General Conference shall have full legislative powers over all matters distinctively connectional, and in the exercise of said power shall have authority as follows:

1. To define and fix the conditions, privileges, and duties of church membership.

2. To define and fix the qualifications and duties of Elders, Deacons, Supply Preachers, Local Preachers, Exhorters, and Deaconesses.

3. To define and fix the powers and duties of Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions, and of District, Quarterly, and Church Conferences.

4. To provide for the organization, promotion, and administration of the work of the Church outside the United States of America.

5. To define and fix the powers, duties, and privileges of the Episcopacy; to adopt a plan for the support of the Bishops, to provide a uniform rule for their superannuation and to provide for the discontinuance of a Bishop because of inefficiency or unacceptability.

6. To provide and revise the Hymnal and Ritual of the Church and to regulate all matters relating to the form and mode of worship, subject to the limitations of the First Restrictive Rule.

7. To provide a judicial system and a mode of judicial procedure for the Church, except as in otherwise prescribed.

8. To initiate and to direct all connectional enterprises of the Church, such as publishing, evangelistic, educational, missionary, and benevolent, and to provide boards for their promotion and administration.

9. To determine and provide for raising the funds necessary to carry on the connectional work of the Church.

10. To fix uniform basis upon which Bishops shall be elected by the Jurisdictional Conferences and to determine the number of Bishops that may be elected by Central Conferences.

11. To select its presiding officers from the Bishops, through a committee, provided that the Bishops shall select from their own number the president for the opening session.

12. To change the number and the boundaries of Jurisdictional Conferences upon the consent of a majority of the Annual Conferences in each Jurisdictional Conference involved.

13. To establish such commissions for the general work of the Church as may be deemed advisable.

14. To enact such other legislation as may be necessary, subject to the limitations and restrictions of the Constitution of the Church.

Section II—Restrictive Rules

1. The General Conference shall not revoke, alter, or change our Articles of Religion, or establish any new standards or rules of doctrine contrary to our present existing and established standards of doctrine.

2. The General Conference shall not change or alter any part or rule of government so as to do away Episcopacy, or destroy the plan of our itinerant General Superintendency.

3. The General Conference shall not do away the privileges of our Ministers or Preachers of trial by a committee and of an appeal; neither shall it do away the privileges of our members of trial before the church, or by a committee, and of an appeal.

4. The General Conference shall not revoke or change the General Rules of the United Societies.

5. The General Conference shall not appropriate the produce of the Publishing House, the Book Concern, or the Chartered Fund to any purpose other than for the benefit of the traveling supernumerary, superannuated, and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows, and children.

Section III—Amendments

1. Amendments to the Constitution may originate in either the General Conference or an Annual Conference.

2. Amendments to the Constitution shall be made upon a two-thirds majority of the General Conference present and voting and a two-thirds majority of all the members of the several Annual Conferences present and voting, except in the case of the First Restrictive Rule, which shall require a three-fourths majority of all the members of the Annual Conferences present and voting. The vote, after being completed, shall be canvassed by the Council of Bishops and the amendment voted upon shall become effective upon their announcement of its having received the required majority.

3. A Jurisdictional Conference may by a majority vote propose changes in the Constitution of the Church, and such proposed changes shall be submitted to the next General Conference. If the General Conference adopt the measure by a two-thirds vote, it shall be submitted to the Annual Conferences according to the provision for amendments.

Section IV—Jurisdictional Conferences

Article I.—The Jurisdictional Conferences shall be composed of as many representatives from the Annual Conferences as shall be determined by a uniform basis established by the General Conference.

Article II.—All Jurisdictional Conferences shall have the same status and the same privileges of action within the limits fixed by the Constitution. The ratio of representation of the Annual Conferences in the General Conference shall be the same for all Jurisdictional Conferences.

Article III.—The General Conference shall fix the basis of representation in the Jurisdictional Conferences, provided that the Jurisdictional Conferences shall be composed of an equal number of ministerial and lay delegates, the ministerial to be elected by the ministerial members of the Annual Conferences and the lay delegates by the lay members.

Article IV.—Each Jurisdictional Conference shall meet within the twelve months succeeding the meeting of the General Conference at such time and place as shall have been determined by the preceding Jurisdictional Conference, or by its properly constituted committee. The first meeting of each Jurisdictional Conference after the General Conference shall be called by the Council of Bishops at a date fixed by them and at a place selected by a Committee on Entertainment appointed by them.

Article V.—The Jurisdictional Conference shall have the following powers and duties and such others as may be conferred by the General Conference:

1. To promote the evangelistic, educational, missionary, and benevolent interests of the Church, and to provide for interests and institutions within their boundaries.

2. To elect Bishops and to co-operate in carrying out such plans for their support as may be determined by the General Conference.

3. To establish and constitute Jurisdictional Conference Boards as auxiliary to the General Boards of the Church as the need may appear, and to choose their representatives on the General Boards in such manner as the General Conference may determine.

4. To determine the boundaries of their Annual Conferences, provided that there shall be no Annual Conference with a membership of less than fifty ministers in full connection, except by the consent of the General Conference.

5. To make rules and regulations for the administration of the work of the Church within the Jurisdiction, subject to such powers as have been or shall be vested in the General Conference.

6. To appoint a Committee on Appeals to hear and determine the appeal of a traveling preacher of the Jurisdiction from the decision of a trial committee.

Section V—Central Conferences

Article I.—There shall be Central Conferences for the work of the Church outside the United States of America with such duties, powers, and privileges as hereinafter set forth. The number of boundaries of the Central Conferences shall be determined by the Uniting Conference. Subsequently the General Conference shall be authority to change the number and boundaries of Central Conferences. The Central Conferences shall have the duties, powers, and privileges hereinafter set forth.

Article II.—The Central Conferences shall be composed of as many delegates as shall be determined by a basis established by the General Conference. The delegates shall be ministerial and lay in equal numbers, the ministerial delegates to be elected by the ministerial members and the lay delegates by the lay members of the Annual Conferences.

Articles III.—The Central Conferences shall meet within the year succeeding the meeting of the General Conference at such times and places as shall have been determined by the preceding respective Central Conferences or by commissions appointed by them, or by the General Conferences. The date and place of the first meeting succeeding the first General Conference shall be fixed by the Bishops of the respective Central Conferences, or in such manner as shall be determined by the General Conference.

Article IV.—The Central Conferences shall have the following powers and duties and such others as may be conferred by the General Conference:

1. To promote the evangelistic, educational, missionary, and benevolent interests and institutions of the Church within their own boundaries.

2. To elect the Bishops for the respective Central Conferences in number as may be determined from time to time, upon a basis fixed by the General Conference, and to cooperate in carrying out such plans for the support of their Bishops as may be determined by the General Conference.

3. To establish and constitute such Central Conference Boards as may be required and to elect their administrative officers.

4. To determine the boundaries of the Annual Conferences within their respective areas.

5. To make such rules and regulations for the administration of the work within their boundaries as the conditions in the respective areas may require, subject to the powers that have been or shall be vested in the General Conference.

6. To appoint a Committee on Appeals to hear and determine the appeal of a traveling preacher of that Central Conference from the decision of a Committee of Trial.

Section VI—Episcopal Administration in Central Conferences

1. The Bishops of the Central Conferences shall be elected and inducted into office by their respective Central Conferences.

2. The Bishops of the Central Conferences shall have membership in the Council of Bishops with vote limited to matters relating to their respective Central Conferences.

3. The Bishops of the Central Conferences shall preside in the sessions of their respective Central Conferences.

4. The Bishops of each Central Conference shall arrange

REMEMBER THE SUPERANNUATES

Last year we received $32.00 for taking care of the subscriptions of superannuates and others who would otherwise have been deprived of its visits. Many persons have enjoyed the Advocate this year because of that fund. If you would like to have a part in making glad the hearts of superannuates and others who can not afford the Advocate, send us a contribution designated "For the Christmas Fund." We will see that no worthy person is denied the joy of the Advocate.

the plan of Episcopal visitation within their Central Conferences.

5. The Council of Bishops may assign one of their number to visit any Central Conference. When so assigned the Bishop shall be recognized as an accredited representative of the general Church; and when requested by a majority of the Bishops of a Central Conference may exercise therein the functions of the Episcopacy.

Section VII—Annual Conferences

Article I.—The Annual Conference shall be composed of all the Traveling Preachers in full connection with it, together with a lay member elected by each pastoral charge. The lay members shall be at least twenty-one (21) years of age and shall have been for the four years next preceding their election members of one of the constituent Churches forming this union, or to the Methodist Church.

Article II.—The Annual Conference is the basic body in the Church, and as such shall have reserved to it the right to vote on all constitutional amendments, on the election of ministerial and lay delegates to the General and the Jurisdictional or Central Conferences, on all matters relating to the character and conference relations of its ministerial members, and on the ordination of ministers, and such other rights as have not been delegated to the General Conference under the Constitution, with the exception that the lay members may not vote on matters of ordination, character, and conference relation of ministers. It shall discharge such duties and exercise such powers as the General Conference under the Constitution may determine.

Article III.—The Annual Conference shall elect ministerial and lay delegates to the General Conference and to its Jurisdictional or Central Conference in the manner provided in this section, Articles IV and V, at the session preceding the General Conference. The persons first elected up to the number determined by the ratio for representation in the General Conference shall be representatives in that body. Additional delegates shall be elected to complete the number determined by the ratio for representation in the Jurisdictional or Central Conference, who together with those first elected as above, shall be delegates in the Jurisdictional or Central Conference. The additional delegates to the Jurisdictional or Central Conference shall in the order of their election be the reserve delegates to the General Conference. The Annual Conference shall also elect reserve ministerial and lay delegates to the Jurisdictional or Central Conference as it may deem desirable.

Article IV.—The ministerial delegates to the General Conference and to the Jurisdictional or Central Conference shall be elected by the ministerial members of the Annual Conference, provided that such delegates shall have been trav-ence not of local preachers, but of all ministers and of elected lay delegates was provided for, the Conference voted to remove the "New Orleans exception" to the law of ministerial tenure, which had been in operation since 1828, and it refused to submit to the Annual Conferences another proposition for the change of the name of the Church. A matter of interest to Episcopal Methodism in America was the visit of Bishop Janes and Dr. Harris of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They represented a Commission on Union with other Churches, and while they were treated with perfect courtesy and accorded every kindness, the Conference made it plain that in its judgment the true interests of the Church of Christ at that time required a separate existence, but it expressed the hope that the day might soon come when "proper Christian sentiments and fraternal relations" might be permanently established.

The rapid decline in the Negro membership of the Southern Church seems to have been due to withdrawals in blocs, since an application for a grant of interest in property was denied, on the ground that the properties were held in trust for colored members of the Church, South. This summary gives a fair idea of the work of the General Conference of 1870. The only other incident of the year was the opening of the Church of the Strangers, formerly the Mercer Street Presbyterian Church, in New York. The opening took place on October 16, 1870, the church was presented to Dr. Charles F. Deems by Commodore Vanderbilt and was to be an undenominational enterprise. Like other combinations of business and benevolences built around great personalities, the Church of the Strangers furnished another illustration of the fact that the Church is not a business and religion is more than an organization and a leadership—it is an emotion of the soul and a profound spiritual allegiance of the individual. But it is altogether probable that Dr. Deems did help to deepen the regard of Commodore Vanderbilt for the South, and in that way the enterprise served as a tie which was not without value to the South.

The period following the General Conference of 1870 was marked by a variety of distresses for Methodism North and South, and for the nation as well. On March 2, 1871, Bishop James O. Andrew died at Mobile, Alabama. His going removed from the Church, South, a man of stainless soul, upon whose head the passions and prejudices of church and state had beaten with ceaseless fury for more than a quarter of a century. On the twenty-second of April following, Rev. Alfred Griffith, the author of the original resolution at the General Conference of 1844, asking Bishop Andrew to resign his office, died at Alexandria, Virginia, in the eighty-eighth year of his age. Thus two men who came into prominence in the most tragic arena of Methodist history had almost a common summons to stand in the presence of Him whom both loved and served, but neither of whom, in all probability, understood the other. On August 19, 1872, Dr. Thomas E. Bond, Jr., died. His father was for a number of years the editor of the Christian Advocate and Journal. Dr. Bond, Senior, was opposed to the Plan of Separation, but he stood with equal firmness for a just treatment of the South in the division of the properties of the Church. Dr. Bond, Jr., was connected with the Southern Church and one of the last important services which he rendered was as a representative of that Church in the adjustment of the China Mission debt with Dr. Thomas Carlton of the Book Concern. Another veteran of that stormy period was Bishop John Early, who died at Lynchburg, Virginia, on November 5, 1874, aged eighty-seven years. On September 2, 1874, Bishop Morris, a Kentuckian who adhered to the Methodist Episcopal Church, but who gave to the Southern Church a distinguished son, died. Bishop Morris retained the confidence and esteem of the South to the end of his life. Closely following the death of Bishop Morris was that of Bishop Roberts in Liberia, January 30, 1875.

On February 2, 1872, as has been stated, Dr. A. H. Redford, Treasurer of the Mission Board, made the final payment on the debt to the Book Concern in New York, but the respite from financial pressure and the period of rejoicing were of short duration; for on February 15, the Publishing House burned, and the appeal of distress was simply transferred to an equally urgent and necessary cause. A different, but no less serious disaster occurred in the latter part of the year 1874. The North and Northwest sections of the country, the great corn belt, were devastated by a terrible drouth and a scourge of grasshoppers which, as Bishop Keener observed, "made no small reputation, both in church and state." The grasshoppers actually darkened the sun in their flight and they destroyed crops, gardens, and even the leaf and bud of apple and peach trees. An area of some eight or ten thousand square miles was absolutely stripped of vegetation and the people were left destitute.

An extremely irritating circumstance between the two contending Methodisms, was the largeness of the appropriation for Domestic Missions in the South, made by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The amount appropriated for 1872 was $119,000, and that for 1874 was $134,000, exclusive of the amounts appropriated for West Virginia and the city of St. Louis. This was commonly regarded as a setting up of Methodist altar against Methodist altar, and the Christian Advocate, Nashville, said that it was a fund devoted to purposes of "Disintegration and absorption." Such were the incidents, the feelings, and the experiences which immediately preceded and were actual accompaniments of the establishment of fraternal relations between the Churches, North and South.

An incident worthy of note, belonging to this period, was the beginning of the modern phase of union revivals, inaugurated at St. Louis with Rev. E. P. Hammond as the evangelist. According to a letter by Bishop Marvin, there were some two thousand conversions and the entire city was profoundly stirred. This movement in simpler form had appeared in Tennessee and Kentucky at the beginning of the century, but it was the camp meeting type led by William McKendree. The new type of revival reached greatness in the South through the genius and consecration of that Prince in Israel, Rev. Sam P. Jones, and its national and international phases were achieved by Dwight L. Moody and Ira L. Sankey. The movement in later years, has probably been abused and even exploited by some who have not altogether appreciated the sacredness of such an opportunity, but it is no less true that it has been the means of good which may not be fully comprehended until the books shall be opened at the last day.

The General Conference of 1874 met in Library Hall, Louisville, Kentucky, on May 1. The reports which were made showed a substantial gain in the membership and a constant progress toward adjustment along all lines. No unusual situation existed in the Church and the legislative achievements of the Conference were expressed more in the revision of existing laws than in the projection of new policies and enterprises. The Church was busy translating the visions of the past into reality, and all that was necessary at this time was the correction of errors that had been discovered, and such adjustments as would make existing legislation more effective in meeting the needs of the Church. The debt of the Mission Board had been paid, and the Methodists were free to face the mission fields with a new interest and with a new feeling of sufficiency for discharging their responsibility to the heathen world.

The outstanding fact of the Conference was the visit of the fraternal messengers of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It was an occasion the recollection of which the members of that General Conference carried to their graves. In the choice of its initial messengers, the Methodist Episcopal Church was very happy. Dr. Albert S. Hunt was an accomplished scholar and a man of wide experience in Methodist affairs. Dr. Charles H. Fowler was an educator, an editor, and a preacher whose eloquence was irresistible. His superb address brought an emotional thrill to every heart and lifted high the fraternal hopes of the hour. General Clinton B. Fisk, who had signed the military order for the return of the Nashville churches to the South, was also known to be a warm personal friend of the South. As a speaker he had a genius all his own. He played upon the heart-cords in his beautiful apostrophe to the veterans of the forties:

"Fond memory to its duty true,
Brings back each fading form to view;
How life-like, through the mist of years,
Each well-remembered face appears."

This tender reference to the heroic band whose tottering forms were lingering in uncertainty and whose fading vision was fixed upon the far horizon swept the emotions of the great throng who came to welcome our brothers from across the border. When that day was done, whatever the reservations of any heart, the issue of fraternity was decided.

The most touching incident of the Conference was the valedictory address of the ninety-year-old Dr. Lovick Pierce, a veteran of 1844. He said that while the membership of that body looked forward to other such historic gatherings, that for him a grave interposed. The implied prophecy was not literally fulfilled, but the facts were so apparent as to create sorrow and profound regret that, in the order of human events, it must be true at no very distant day. The Conference was thrown into gloom by the death of Dr. Fountain E. Pitts, veteran missionary to Brazil, whose funeral was conducted from Walnut Street Church on the afternoon of May 23. Dr. A. L. P. Green, in the eighty-fourth year of his age was forced to leave the seat of the Conference on account of his health, and he died in Nashville, on July 15. Dr. T. L. Maddin, another veteran of 1844, died on June 15, preceding the death of Dr. Green. And so it happened that within a space of less than two months those three veteran warriors died, their worn bodies were consigned to the dust in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Nashville, and their spirits joined the blood-washed throng in the sky.

No outstanding event of Methodist history occurred during the next two years, and the Churches, North and South, were earnestly engaged in expansion and in laying a foundation for meeting their whole responsibility to the world. The Church, South, was strongly intrenched in the life of that section, and not more in rural communities than in the cities. A comparison of church statistics with the census returns revealed the fact that in Atlanta, Georgia, one of every seven of the white population was a Methodist, in Nashville one of every twenty-one, and in Richmond, one of every fifteen. The least favorable ratio in any Southern city

Mrs. J. S. Rutledge has our thanks for a generous message of appreciation. She orders the continuance of the Advocate to her address at Walker, La.

Rev. J. W. Faulk reports a cordial reception upon his return to the Leesville, La., charge for a second year. The salary has been fixed at the same figure as last year.

Rev. William Schuhle, Plaquemine, La., remembers the Advocate both with Christmas greetings and with the material which incorporates the message, "A Prosperous New Year."

Mrs. Ida C. Doxey, Grand Cheniere, La., who is now past her three score and ten years has read the Advocate since she was a little girl, and she says that she must have it still.

Miss Rona Gay, Brooklyn, Miss., wishes us a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, and with her greetings, she assures us that the Advocate seems to grow better.

Mrs. S. M. Munholland, New Orleans, in renewing her subscription for the Advocate sends us a contribution for the "Christmas Fund" for the superannuates. We acknowledge both with thanks.

Rev. M. W. Beadle reports a welcome to Eunice, La., charge which was expressed in an abundant supply of material things as well as in the cordial assurances of his people.

Mrs. J. F. Mars, Meridian, Miss., says: "I married and left my father's home 46 years ago. The same day my father sent my subscription to the Advocate. Had been reading it then since childhood. Am still enjoying it."

Miss Ida Lea, Cheyneyville, La., says that the Advocate has been in her home since her earliest recollection and that she reads it with much enjoyment. We hope that her pleasure in it may never be less.

Rev. George H. Jones was no sooner established in his new home at Ellisville, Miss., than he began his campaign for the Advocate. We have the proof, if

Mrs. J. M. Moore, whose husband was for many years one of the staunchest ministers of the Mississippi Conference, says, "I cannot get along without the Advocate." We trust that she may always find its message helpful.

Rev. Henry A. Rickey, recently assigned to McDonoghville and Reserve charge, Louisiana, is very happy in his new field. We will publish his report over his own signature a little later, but we give personal notice now.

Credit is due Mr. E. A. Tanner, of Indianola, Miss., for the amount sent from the laymen's fund by the Greenville District. In the rush of getting the acknowledgment in, we failed to give due recognition to his excellent work.

Miss Mattie C. Brown, Belcher, La., has won the heart of the editor by expressing her pleasure that the editor of the Advocate was not changed and that the paper is out of debt. We are going to do our best to make the paper all that it is possible for it to be.

Rev. J. C. Whitaker has been changed from Pearl River charge in the New Orleans District to Athens charge in the Ruston District. He was admitted on trial at the last Conference and he begins his ministry properly by subscribing for the Advocate.

The editor acknowledges for himself and for Dr. Carley a much appreciated note from Mr. A. F. Godat, formerly a member of Carrollton Avenue Church who now lives in New York. He has been a consistent reader of the Advocate and his interest and appreciation do not grow less.

The editor acknowledges a card from Rev. J. G. Johnson, a superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference now living in Kline, Colorado, on account of his health. He says that the mountains of Colorado have all the lure of the wild plums he used to talk about in Mississippi.

Rev. W. T. Phillips, Webb, Miss., reports that the new church at Sumner was opened first Sunday in December. The building is fully paid for, is seated with 180 chairs and 180 people attended the first service. Rev. A. T. McIlwain, the presiding elder, was present at the service.

The coast group of the Seashore District organized by electing P. M. Carraway, chairman; H. L. Norton, vice chairman; and J. D. Slay, secretary. ### LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,

1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans

The Mission Study work of First Church, Baton Rouge Society, has been outstanding in its nature. Miss Lily Louise Hartwell is the efficient leader of this group. She writes: "The book 'That Other America' has really been a pleasure to teach. I have taught it to thirty rural churches." Some subjects that were discussed in these classes were as follows: "Don Quixote," "Louis Gottschalk, His Life and Works," "Pan American Union," "Personal Recollections of Dr. John Mackey." Maps, steamship folders and reports of American Bible Society were used in the study.

The final session of the class was in the form of a cruise to Rio de Janeiro. The church parlor was arranged to resemble a library aboard ship. The study topics were presented in the form of conversation among the passengers. The conversation which was pre-arranged by Miss Hartwell led from topics of interest to sightseers in Rio de Janeiro to the American Bible Institute building there and the work of the church. During the conversation a "deck steward" entered with tea.

What a splendidly prepared program! And yet some of our finest missionary women say "mission study is always a drag—it simply cannot be made interesting."

* * *

An interesting zone meeting was held early in December by zone No. 5 of the Ruston District. Mrs. O. H. Futrel, zone leader, presided, and the meeting was held in the Methodist Church at Calhoun. The following subjects were discussed by missionary women from Choudrant, Downsville and Calhoun: "The Contagion of Service," "The Status of Women," "The Christian's Responsibility" and "The Immortality of Service." This was an all-day meeting.

Let us not forget that January is the month for "Officers Training Days" to be held. It is hoped and urged that all district secretaries begin early to plan for a good attendance of auxiliary officers and for well planned programs of instruction.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Mrs. Stanley Wilson,

2212 Fifteenth St., Meridian, Miss.

The Woman's Missionary Society and Children

Now that the Missionary Societies are electing officers for another year, let me insist that every Missionary Society elect a secretary of children's work. As Missionary Societies we cannot enter as effectively into the co-operative plan or the missionary education of our children, unless we elect this officer which the plan calls for. She should, wherever possible, be one of the children's workers in the Church School in order that direct contact both with the children and with the Woman's Missionary Society may be maintained by the same person.

The secretary of children's work should enter into Conference with the teachers and superintendents of the primary and junior departments in the Church School. She should assist them in planning to make the world friendship units as effective as possible. She should help the workers see the need and possibilities for the extra session not only during the period of the world friendship unit but in connection with any other unit of study in the primary and junior departments.

She is expected to assist workers in gathering material for the world friendship units. By securing a copy of the units well in advance, reading them through carefully, the workers will often find available enrichment materials which they can collect for use with the children.

She should keep her interest in the Woman's Missionary Society vital by attending its meetings regularly and assisting whole-heartedly in all its activities and keeping informed on all phases of the work.

She is expected to report regularly to the local auxiliary and twice a year to the Conference secretary of children's work the first of January and first of July. I shall mail soon the report blanks to every secretary whose address I have, and I am looking forward with a great deal of interest to receiving every one filled out in detail. If you do not get a report blank, please write me. Please be sure to return them the first week in January.

The secretary should take every opportunity to enroll in training schools and should read as widely as possible both on the missionary education of children and on children's work in general.

What the Woman's Missionary Society Can Do for the Children

1. The women of the W. M. S. can help wonderfully by transporting children back and forth to the Church School for the additional session. This constitutes a problem for many children, and if some members are responsible one week and others the next, the burden will not be too great on anyone.

2. Some societies have helped the secretary to secure supplementary material for the world friendship units—such as articles, pictures and books. The church school is responsible for buying the units themselves; but the missionary society if it has funds available may assist the secretary in buying the additional material.

3. The women may render a very great service by helping with parties, excursions, and outings.

4. The women may render valuable assistance in making costumes needed in the study of the world friendship units.

5. When the missionary society has organized a mission study class, with a qualified teacher, it is well to invite all the workers of the Church, particularly those in the Church School to attend.

The theme for the world friendship unit will often be the same as for the adult study. Attendance on a mission study class will therefore broaden the background and give excellent preparation for the teachers of the co-operative units.

A revised edition of the pamphlet on the "Co-operative Plan for Missionary Education in the Children's Division" is ready for distribution. I mailed one to every secretary on my mailing list and have a few more available. If you desire one, please write me.

W. M. S. Zone Meeting

The final zone meeting of the year for this zone was held in the Houlika Methodist Church Monday afternoon with the Houston Missionary Society presenting the program.

The program opened with a hymn, "Awake All Ye Nations," by the assembly, followed by prayer by Rev. E. M. Shaw. The devotional was conducted by Rev. G. H. Boyles, of Houston. Next, a beautiful duet, "My Rosary," was sung by Mesdames George Boles and Charles McCrane, with Mrs. Turner Ray as accompanist. The chief feature of the program was a playlet presented by Mesdames Turner Ray, J. R. Priest, Herbert Miller, Louise McCluney, John Rhodes, Wilburn Davis, and Lamar Turner.

Mrs. Tucker, the district secretary, was present and talked of the urgent needs of the Council and stressed the importance of every member giving as much as possible to bring in the full amount of the pledge for the year.

The business session was presided over by the zone secretary, Mrs. Joe L. Davis. Minutes were read and approved. Reports of the work done by the societies represented were given by Mesdames Blake of Houlika, W. T. Ray of Van Vleet, and J. R. Priest of Houston.

There were present from Houston fifteen members; Houlika fourteen, and Van Vleet five. Woodland was not represented.

Mrs. Joe L. Davis was re-elected president and Mrs. Joe Roberts secretary for the coming year.

The meeting for the first quarter of the year will be held in Houston with Houlika presenting the program.

Mrs. E. M. Shaw dismissed the meeting with prayer.

Christian Education

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 22.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

WHAT SHALL WE GIVE OUR KING? (Mal. 3:1-12; Matt. 2:1-12)

The Messianic ideal is the link that connects Malachi with Matthew, the Old Testament with the New, and the tie that binds mankind to both. Early writers may not have been specific and personal in their forecasts, but from the creation story of man made in the image of God to Malachi's messenger with refiner's fire and fuller's soap there is foreshadowed a kingdom of righteousness headed by One in whose presence dross is consumed and dirt is destroyed. The promise of the Old Testament is fulfilled in the New. The world can never repay its debt to the ancient Jews for their ideal of a coming kingdom and a redeeming King. Their tragedy came in becoming so absorbed in the letter of law and prophecy that they lost the spirit and failed to recognize the Prince of Peace. They looked for a glorified Caesar who would consume their enemies with fire and sword, not for a gentle Christ whose life would destroy corruption by purity, war by peace, and selfishness by love; whose method was life not death, the endurance of suffering not its infliction. Their eyes were on a palace, not a stable. They were shocked that his cleansing began not at Rome but at Jerusalem, not at the capitol but at the temple, not with publicans but with scribes—church officers! Leaders may be as blind as followers. The Babe of Bethlehem, heralded by angels, worshiped by strangers, was ignored and rejected by his own to their age-long hurt. Will churchmen who chant His praise this Christmas time dare to follow His way of life in business? In industry? In racial and national relations? In love to God and man?

We make a poor bargain if we exchange the angels' song for jazz; the simplicity, sincerity and devotion of that first Christmas for the tinsel, the noise, the sham, the commercialism, the revelry, the drunkenness which so largely characterize its anniversary today. Christmas time is glad time, chimes and carols should echo round the earth. It is giving time. Not merely a time to exchange presents, but to give with generous hands to that multitude of needy ones who can give nothing in exchange but gratitude—than which no better coin was ever minted! Let us give ourselves, even as the Master gave. Nothing less is worthy. It is a poor Christmas that perishes with a holiday season and ends with the calendar. Let the Christmas spirit like the Christian spirit last all the year and all the years.

Christmas without the Christ is but a mockery. Let Him be the center of all as He was the center of the first. He is the Way without which we are lost; the Truth without which we perish; the Life without which we die. He is the Ideal by which all personality is tested; the Standard by which all standards are measured. Christmas, Christianity, Christ—all summed up in incarnate love. Wherever we see love incarnate, we behold the Christ. So long as we have that, He is with us, though all the jealous, hating Herods of history set themselves to destroy Him.

EAST END, MERIDIAN

According to the Meridian Star, Mrs. C. M. Martin has done a splendid work as superintendent of the nursery department of the Methodist Church at East End. Mrs. Martin is the widow of Rev. C. M. Martin, late of the Mississippi Conference. The report of her work follows:

"Again the nursery department of East End Methodist Church came out victorious in its collections. The last Sunday in September it went over the top to the amount of $72.00 on an assessment of the building fund. Their apportionment was $50.00 on the building budget to be brought in on November 3.

"The amount brought in was $64.00. Mrs. C. M. Martin is superintendent of this department. Mesdames O. E. Burrow and J. M. Lawrence are pianists. The largest amount given by any individual was $15.00—the smallest amount, five cents.

"The oldest person contributing was Mrs. E. C. McDonald, 95. The youngest to contribute was the six-day-old child of Mr. and Mrs. W. Clyde Jones.

"Mrs. Martin expressed her thanks to the friends and mothers of the department for their hearty co-operation with her. This department obligated itself to pay $8.00 each month on the budget for the year, the babies using the envelope system. They paid $28.00 more than their assessment."

LETTER FROM REV. VICTOR G. CLIFFORD

Dear Dr. Duren: Your fine letter was very much appreciated by Mrs. Clifford and myself.

I am happy to state that I have recovered from my recent illness. I would like to express, through the Advocate, my love and appreciation to the many friends who have been concerned about me. Especially do I love that faithful band of preachers in the Hattiesburg District, with whom it was my privilege to work last year.

We expect to move in a few days to Flora, Miss., where we shall live until such time as I shall be able to go back into the active work of the ministry. While there, I expect to turn that printing hobby of mine into a bread and butter proposition by doing mail order printing for those of my brethren who may be interested.

It is needless for me to say that I am grieved that I had to drop out when the work was going so well. Am sorry I can't enter the fray and help the Hattiesburg District reach its quota again for the Advocate.

My best wishes for you and the Advocate this year. With kindest personal regards, I am,

VICTOR G. CLIFFORD,

Send a year's subscription to the Advocate this Christmas. It will help to build a Christian home and will help your Conference organ.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

THE CHILD IN OUR MIDST

By Francis Minor Crymes

Because our very souls are set aglow
When'er our hearts dwell in the Christ-child's birth,

We smile upon all children, and we grow
More tender towards all little ones of earth.

Because from infancy He grew in grace, Endued with childhood's lovely win-
someness,

We see Him when we gaze in each young face;

In each young form we view His lissomeness.

Because He was a gentle, thoughtful boy Who watched all merry play with tender eyes,

We love to hear the ring of youthful joy,

And smile, as they whom love has rendered wise.

Because, while He was yet an earnest youth,

About His Father's business He took thought,

We'd have our children early seek the truth,

Their living faith in golden deeds be wrought.

Because He took wee children in His arms,

And laid caressing hand upon each head,

We would spare childhood all its threatening harms;

Fight for its rights—aye, suffer in its stead.

Because He said, as children we must learn,

And must become as teachable as they,
To His inspired Word we often turn,

That we may wiser grow from day to day.

STATEMENT BY THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS ON THE LIQUOR PROBLEM

Two years ago the national prohibition law was repealed, and it was widely declared that prohibition was a failure. The opponents of prohibition—the advocates of repeal—from the President of the United States down, assured the country that repeal would put an end to bootlegging, would result in a great decrease in consumption of intoxicants and of drunkenness and crime, would yield large revenues for the support of the federal government, and they declared most emphatically that the saloon in any form whatever would never be permitted to return. Now, at the end of two years, it is manifest to all that the pledges of the advocates of repeal have been broken and their predictions have been nullified. Bootlegging and smuggling have not been abolished but both have increased. The consumption of intoxicating liquors has not decreased but has increased by leaps and bounds. Practically no restrictions whatever have been placed upon the manufacture of intoxicants; the saloon, which was never to return, has returned in various and more dangerous forms in the greater part of the country; and there are more than twice as many drinking places today as there were before prohibition. Advertising of intoxicants, which was forbidden and was impossible under the National Prohibition Law, is now carried on by every conceivable method; the radio, the press, billboards, circulars, hand bills, all flaunt some particular brand of intoxicating liquor and endeavor to create, stimulate and develop the appetite for intoxicants.

Already sufficient time has elapsed for a fair comparison between conditions under National Prohibition and under the legalized traffic as it now exists. The secular press in its news columns records daily the failure of repeal. The life insurance companies publish accurate data setting forth the tragic conditions which prevail throughout the country. The official statistics of police and traffic departments in our great cities show an alarming increase in traffic accidents in which liquor has played a part, in arrests for drunken driving and in arrests for intoxication especially of women and youth.

We would emphasize strongly the great importance of the work which is being done by the General Board of Christian Education and the General Board of Lay Activities of our Church. They are endeavoring to develop such educative programs as will put in the hands of our young people, of the teachers of day schools and church schools, of the professors in colleges and universities, of pastors and public speakers, and of the editors of the secular and religious press such literature as will demonstrate and emphasize the wisdom of total abstinence and also the necessity for appropriate legislation for the protection of society. For, while fully recognizing the necessity of thorough temperance education and of the teaching of total abstinence, yet we insist that society has the right and duty to legislate to protect itself from the evils of the liquor traffic. We have quarantine, fire, traffic, and sanitary laws to protect society. So we must have laws to put the brand of the criminal upon the liquor traffic, which is the enemy of the entire economic, industrial and domestic life of our people.

The historic position of our Methodism on the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes is clear and positive. From the beginning it has exacted of all who would be admitted into its Communion an obligation to abstain from "drinking spirituous liquors unless in cases of necessity." It further enjoins upon all its preachers and members that they "abstain from the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, from signing petitions for their sale, from becoming bondsmen for any person as a candidate for obtaining a license, from acting as a dispenser or voluntarily accepting an appointment or election as such under the laws of any state, and from renting property to be used for such sale."

The position of the Methodist Church on this subject for the guidance of the membership is clear and unequivocal. Legislative action may change the legal status of liquor, but it cannot change the nature and disastrous effects of alcohol. No action of Congress or state legislature has changed the historic attitude of Methodism to this inveterate enemy of human society, and we would urge upon all our people the observance of these directions in all fidelity. Our presiding elders, pastors, teachers and members should stand fast by the principles of sobriety and Christian conduct incorporated in our Discipline by the unanimous vote of the General Conference.

The pulpits of our Church can be and should be sounding boards to give the truth to our people concerning the evils of the liquor traffic. It is our hope, indeed our expectation that the pastors and members of our churches will be in the forefront of every battle with this great enemy of the School, the Home and the Church.

WHEN you catch cold, the tiny moisture glands in your throat and wind-pipe dry or clog. Thick phlegm irritates your throat, making you cough. It is necessary to stimulate those glands to pour out their natural moisture. Pertussin does this. It "unclogs" the glands—loosens phlegm and keeps your throat moist.

Over 1,000,000 doctors' prescriptions for Pertussin were filled in one year according to Prescription Ingredient Survey issued by American Pharmaceutical Assn.

"Pertussin stopped Jackie's bad cough next day!" writes Mrs. P. Fernandez, Providence, R. I.

need to be saved. "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; who can know it?" Jer. 17:9. Jesus said: "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, thefts, covetousness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness." Mark 7:21-22.

This text sets forth dissatisfaction with the status quo. We want to be lifted out of the bondage of selfishness and greed, the deception of worldliness, the practice of evil.

The text also shows the realization of God. Christmas is a season of this realization. "This is our God." In the light of the revelation through Jesus—the message of Christmas—how glorious is that realization!

No longer need we wait for Him. Christ has come. The Word has become flesh and dwelt among us. What a pity the world has not crowned Him. He will save the world if we will give Him a chance. The only reason He has not saved the world is because we have not given Him a ghost of a chance. The world has hindered, hampered, and sought to muzzle Him.

Let us put on regeneration rather than reformation; a new heart rather than a new code; conscience rather than convenience; Christ's Kingdom rather than pleasure; the will of God rather than our own self.

PRAYER

Our Father, we are grateful for the message of Christmas. God is with us. We pray for "peace on earth and good will among men." May Christ come in human hearts and save from all sin. We ask in Jesus' name.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT

The Aberdeen District Stewards' meeting was held in our church at Pontotoc, November 27. The elder, Rev. W. P. Buhrman, outlined the following objectives for the year: Adequate revivals in every church; better use of the hymns of the church, especially the new Hymnal; Christian literature, especially the Advocates, the taking an offering at every service of the church; and paying the benevolences in full. Brother Buhrman explained that all these and the other programs of the church could be carried out if all the preachers and people would go to work on them earnestly and at once.

The pastors of the Aberdeen District met in Pontotoc November 27, and organized for the new Conference year. Rev. J. A. George, of Amory, was elected president, Rev. M. A. Scott, of Okalona, was elected vice president and Rev. H. L. Suydam of Nettleton, was elected secretary. Rev. W. P. Buhrman, Rev. V. C. Curtis, and Rev. E. M. Shaw were elected to act as permanent program committee.

The meeting of the Ministerial Association will meet at 10:30 on Tuesday after each first Sunday. The next meeting to be January 7, at First Methodist Church, Aberdeen.

PLAN OF UNION

eling preachers in the constituent Churches forming this union, or in the Methodist Church, for at least four years next preceding their election and are in full connection with the Annual Conference electing them when elected and at the time of holding the General and Jurisdictional or Central Conferences.

Article V.—The lay delegates to the General Conference and to the Jurisdictional or Central Conference shall be elected by the lay members of the Annual Conference, provided that such delegates be at least twenty-five (25) years of age and shall have been members of the constituent Churches forming this union, or of the Methodist Church, for at least four years next preceding their election, and are members thereof within the Annual Conference electing them at the time of holding the General and Jurisdictional or Central Conferences.

Section VIII—Boundaries

Article I.—The Methodist Church in the United States of America shall have Jurisdictional Conferences made up as follows:

Northwestern—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, West Virginia, Delaware, District of Columbia, Puerto Rico.

Southeastern—Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Cuba.

Central—The Negro Annual Conferences, the Negro Mission Conferences and Missions in the United States of America.

South Central—Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico.

Western—Washington, Idaho, Oregon, California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Alaska, Hawaiian Islands.

Article II.—The work of the Church outside the United States of America may be formed into Central Conferences, the number and boundaries of which shall be determined by the Uniting Conference, the General Conference having authority subsequently to make changes in the number and boundaries.

Article III.—Changes in the number, name, and the boundaries of the Jurisdictional Conferences may be effected by the General Conference upon the consent of a majority of the Annual Conferences of each of the Jurisdictional Conferences involved.

Article IV.—Changes in the number, name, and boundaries of the Annual Conferences may be effected by the Jurisdictional Conferences in the United States of America and by the Central Conferences outside the United States of America, according to the provisions under the respective powers of the Jurisdictional and the Central Conferences.

Section IX—District Conferences

Article I.—There may be organized in an Annual Conference District Conferences composed of such persons and invested with such powers as the General Conference may determine.

Section X—Quarterly Conferences

Article I.—There shall be organized in each pastoral charge a Quarterly Conference composed of such persons and invested with such powers as the General Conference shall provide.

Article II. Election of Church officers—Unless the General Conference shall order otherwise the officers of the church or churches constituting a pastoral charge shall be elected by the Quarterly Conference or by the members of said church or churches at a meeting called for that purpose, as may be arranged by the Quarterly Conference, unless the election is otherwise required by local church charters or state laws.

Section XI—Church Conferences

There may be a Church Conference in each church, having such powers and duties as the General Conferences may prescribe.

DIVISION THREE—EPISCOPACY

Article I.—There shall be an Episcopacy in the Methodist Church of like plan, powers, privileges, and duties as now exist in the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Article II.—The Bishops shall be elected by the respective Jurisdictional and Central Conferences and ordained or consecrated in the historic manner of Episcopal Methodism at such time and place as may be fixed by the General Conference.

Article III.—There shall be a Council of Bishops composed of all the Bishops of all the Jurisdictional and Central Conferences. The Council shall meet at least once a year and plan for the general oversight and promotion of the temporal and spiritual interests of the entire Church and for carrying into effect the rules, regulations, and responsibilities prescribed and enjoined by the General Conference, and in accord with the provisions set forth in this Plan of Union.

Article IV.—The Bishops of each Jurisdictional and Central Conference shall arrange the Plan of Episcopal Supervision of the Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions within their respective territories.

Article V.—The Bishops shall have residential and presidential supervision in the Jurisdictional Conferences in which they are elected. A Bishop may be transferred from one Jurisdiction to another Jurisdiction for presidential and residential supervision by the Council of Bishops when such transfer is requested by the Jurisdictional Conference to which such proposed transfer is to be made.

A Bishop may be assigned by the Council of Bishops for presidential service or other temporary service not to exceed a year, in another Jurisdiction than that which elected him, provided request is made by a majority of the Bishops in the Jurisdiction of the proposed service.

In the case of an emergency in any Jurisdiction through the death or disability of its Bishops the Council of Bishops may assign one or more Bishops from other Jurisdictions to the work of the said Jurisdiction with the consent of a majority of the Bishops of that Jurisdiction.

Article VI.—The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church and of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the time union is consummated, shall be Bishops of the Methodist Church.

The delegates from the Annual Conferences of the Methodist Protestant Church in the Uniting Conference shall have the authority and power to elect to the office of Bishop two ministers of their Church who, upon ordination or consecration at the Uniting Conference by the Bishops of the other two Churches, shall become effective Bishops of the Methodist Church.

The effective Bishops shall be assigned for service to the various Jurisdictional Conferences by the Uniting Conference.

Article VII.—A Bishop presiding over a District, Annual, or Jurisdictional Conference shall decide all questions of law coming before him in the regular business of a session, provided that such questions be presented in writing and that his decisions be recorded in the Journal of the Conference.

Such an Episcopal decision shall not be authoritative except for the pending case until it shall have been passed upon by the Judicial Council. Each Bishop shall report in writing annually all his decisions of law, with a syllabus of the same, to the Judicial Council, which shall affirm, modify, or reverse them.

Article VIII.—The Bishops of the several Jurisdictional Conferences shall preside in the sessions of their respective Jurisdictional Conferences.

DIVISION FOUR—THE JUDICIARY

Article I.—There shall be a Judicial Council. The General Conference shall determine the number and qualifications of its members, their terms of office, and the method of election and the filling of vacancies.

Article II.—The Judicial Council shall have authority:

1. To determine the constitutionality of any act of the General Conference upon an appeal of a majority of the Council of Bishops, or one-fifth of the members of the General Conference; and to determine the constitutionality of any act of a Jurisdictional or Central Conference upon an appeal of a majority of the Bishops of that Jurisdictional or Central Conference or upon the appeal of one-fifth of the members of that Jurisdictional or Central Conference.

2. To hear and determine any appeal from a Bishop's decision on a question of law made in the Annual or District Conference when said appeal has been made by one-fifth of that Conference present and voting.

3. To pass upon decisions of law made by Bishops in Annual or District Conferences.

4. To hear and determine the legality of any action taken therein by any General Conference board or Jurisdictional or Central Conference board or body, upon appeal by one-third of the members thereof or upon request of the Council of Bishops, or a majority of the Bishops of a Jurisdictional or a Central Conference.

5. To have such other duties and powers as may be conferred upon it by the General Conference.

6. To provide its own methods of organization and procedure.

Article III.—All decisions of the Judicial Council shall be final. However, when the Judicial Council shall declare any act of the Central Conference unconstitutional that decision shall be reported back to the General Conference immediately.

Procedure—Uniting Conference

Article I.—There shall be a Uniting Conference composed of 900 delegates, of whom 400 shall be from the Methodist Episcopal Church, 400 from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and 100 from the Methodist Protestant Church, chosen in such manner as may be determined by the respective General Conferences, provided that the ministerial and lay members shall be in equal number.

Article II.—The Uniting Conference shall be held within twelve months after the final approval and adoption of this Plan of Union by the three Churches, at the call of the Bishops of the two Churches and the President of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, and at a date fixed by them and at a place selected by a Joint Commission on Entertainment of five persons from each of the three Churches, this commission to be appointed by the Bishops of the two Churches and the President of the Methodist Protestant General Conference.

Article III.—The expenses of the Uniting Conference shall be borne by the three Churches in proportion to their respective representation.

Article IV.—The duties and powers of the Uniting Conference, subject to the provisions of this Plan of Union, shall be:

1. To harmonize and combine the rules and regulations as found in the Disciplines of the three Churches relating to membership, the conference, the ministry, judicial administration, and temporal economy.

2. To harmonize and combine the Rituals of the three Churches.

3. To provide for the unification, coordination, and correlation of the connectional missionary, educational, and benevolent boards and societies of the three Churches.

4. To provide for the unification, coordination, and correlation of the publishing interests of the three Churches.

5. To provide a plan for the control and safeguarding of all permanent funds and other property interests of the three Churches and the interests of those persons and causes for which these funds were established.

Article V.—In order to facilitate the work of the Uniting Conference, the three General Conferences at the sessions wherein this Plan of Union is approved shall continue their Commissions on Union with such changes in personnel as they may desire, and authorize the Joint Commission thus formed to make special preparation for the Uniting Conference by the appointment of proper committees to deal with (a) membership, conferences, ministry, judicial administration, and temporal economy; (b) rituals; (c) connectional boards and societies; (d) publishing interests; (e) permanent and pension funds; and (f) such other matters as imperatively call for advance consideration.

Article VI.—All Annual Conferences of the three Churches shall retain their existing status until by the action of the Uniting Conference it shall be determined otherwise.

Article VII.—The legislative power of the Uniting Conference shall be confined to harmonizing and combining provisions now existing in the Disciplines of the three Churches, or one or more of these Churches.

Article VIII.—The boundaries and composition of the Annual Conferences within the several Jurisdictional Conferences as made up in this Plan of Union shall be adjusted at the time of the meeting of the Uniting Conference by the delegates from the Annual Conferences within the respective Jurisdictions, sitting apart for that purpose during the period of the Uniting Conference, provided that in the case of those Annual Conferences that may be divided by the Jurisdictional Conference lines, their delegates shall allocate themselves to the respective Jurisdictional Conferences upon the basis of church membership of their Conferences in the respective Jurisdictions.

Article IX.—The Uniting Conference shall fix the basis of representation of the Annual Conferences in the first General Conference and in the Jurisdictional and Central Conferences.

Article X.—Pending the meetings of the Uniting Conference each of the three Uniting Churches shall be governed by the rules and regulations of its own Discipline.

Recommendations

I. The General Conference is authorized to extend to the autonomous Methodist Churches outside the United States of America formerly connected with our bodies, an invitation to enter into conference with us with respect to such relationship with the Methodist Church as may seem mutually desirable.

II. The co-operative relationships which already exist between any of these three Methodist bodies and Churches in foreign fields not covered by other provisions herein shall be continued as may seem mutually advantageous.

III. The world-wide character of Methodism shall be recognized by participation in the Ecumenical Methodist Conference and by the appointment of a commission to assist in bringing all Methodist bodies throughout the world into more intimate and effective relationship.

IV. We recommend that financial support of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church be continued by those jurisdictional divisions with which said Church is historically related, and to such an extent as those Jurisdictions may deem wise.

Respectfully submitted,

Wallet of the Week

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS, after three centuries of the iron rule of Spain and three decades of American rule, have entered at last into the ante-room of freedom. On Saturday, November 16, the Philippines were installed in what is to be a probationary period of self-government. If they succeed in the trial period, they will be granted full independence. The time of probation is to extend over a term of ten years. The people of the Islands will doubtless feel that it is a long time to wait for Santa Claus.

THE TYROL IN THE SOUTHERN ALPS is probably one of the most picturesque regions in the world. Fenced in by grim mountains which ascend to dizzy heights, it has bred a race of people who are distinguished for their simple faith and their almost primitive industries. It is famous for woodcarvings which have been sold throughout the world, and from the same section have come some of the most beautiful and romantic legends in the literature of the world.

MISS JEAN BATTEN, the New Zealand aviatrix who flew from Australia to England about a year ago, has recently completed a record flight from England to the West Coast of Africa, and then across the ocean to Brazil. Following this adventurous and daring feat, the loss of the world-famous flier, Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, is reflected in the announcement of the Minister for Defence in Australia, that it was his intention to introduce a bill into the Commonwealth Parliament for the prevention of record-making, reckless and unnecessary flights. It will probably fail to restrain the passion for daring adventure, but it will have the sympathy of many people in many lands.

DOCTOR FRANK MASON NORTH, who died at Madison, New Jersey, on December 17, was one of the founders of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, and was a former president of the body. He was eighty-five years old, was corresponding secretary emeritus of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and was a trustee of Drew and Wesleyan Universities. A matter of interest in this section is the fact that, as a child, his home was in Columbus, Mississippi. His father's home was a large house, about one or two blocks north of the First Methodist Church.

THE CHINA CLIPPER is the name of a giant air liner which recently made the flight from California to Manila in five daily leaps of twelve hundred miles each. The air liner delivered mail in five days, which would have required three weeks by any other route. With this triumphant conquest of the world's widest ocean, the press of the country has turned to discussing a scheduled service across oceans and continents—the establishment of inter-national highways of the air.

THE CHATTANOOGA TIMES, according to The Christian Advocate, New York, recently published a single-copy edition of the paper which intentionally reported a wrong score for a football game between Central High School and Notre Dame High School. That paper was sent to the hospital where James Patrick Byrne lay dying from an injury received in the game. Another single-copy edition was issued by the Toronto Star and was sent to a hospital where Edith O'Donnell had become a mother. The name of her husband, Harry, who was accused of murder had been eliminated from the paper for the benefit of the new mother.

THE LISTENERS UTOPIA is the name sometimes applied to the dual plan broadcasting systems of Australia. One system, owned by private capital and operating over 50 stations, handles commercially sponsored matter and is limited in power to one kilowatt. Twelve government owned stations are unlimited as to power. Listeners each pay an annual fee of $5, tuning in as they choose. There are said to be 800,000 licensed set-owners. At least the system has one virtue for us, we will not be annoyed with hearing about their beauty creams, disinfectants, face powders and breakfast foods.

CANADA'S REINDEER HERD, consisting of over two thousand animals which were brought from the rim of the Arctic Circle and delivered to the Canadian Government at the Mackenzie River preserve some time in March, has been increased by eight hundred fawns this year. The increase brings the total number of reindeer in the preserve to more than eleven thousand, and the herd is reported to be in excellent condition. The Government of Canada has apprentices in training with a view of establishing small herds among the natives, and thus making secure the continuance of the reindeer species.

EDITORIAL

THE NEW YEAR

With this issue of the Advocate, we close the forms for 1935, and we turn our thought to the tasks and the problems of the New Year. Our mistakes have become history and we shall try to make our achievements the inspiration for greater things. The next issue will present some changes in the form and content of the paper. The Trail of the Circuit Rider will be dropped in anticipation of its early publication in book form. Under the Copyright Law, that must be done in order to make possible its being copyrighted. In this, the last issue in which the Trail of the Circuit Rider will appear, we insert a cut of the General Conference of 1866. It is the best that could be made from the picture available, but the Conference was of such historic importance as to warrant its use. Some new features will be inserted, among them a column devoted to Contributed Editorials by Dr. Henry T. Carley, the associate editor. Dr. Carley, who needs no introduction to the readers of the Advocate, will be entirely responsible for the material for this column. We feel sure that he will make this feature eminently worth while. Another feature will be Headlines in the News, and for that service we feel equally certain that Dr. D. B. Raulins, whose breezy style endeared him to a wide circle of friends, will receive a great welcome. He will be responsible for the naming of his column and for its contents. Other features will be carried, but they will appear next week and speak for themselves. It is our plan to reduce the number of wide column pages, in order to conserve space and in order that contributed material may be placed more nearly on a parity. The editor and the business manager join with all in the rejoicing that the debts of the Advocate have been paid, but we beg to remind you that the financial solvency of the paper is in the keeping of every preacher, member and friend in Louisiana and Mississippi. Let us begin the campaign in every charge NOW and no distress call will be necessary later. In a column with the caption, SHOP, we will try to keep you posted on Advocate affairs from week to week.

THE CHURCH VICTORIOUS

The late Dr. W. L. Watkinson once characterized the course of Gehazi, the servant of Elisha, as a "fatal barter." Today there is an apparent disposition upon the part of many churchmen to compromise opposition to practices and corrupting influences with which true Christianity must always be in deadly conflict. The tendency is not peculiar to any age and the only element of novelty which it presents is an adaptation to offending causes. The Church long waged war upon the movies for their debasing and morally hurtful portrayal of the vices of the underworld, but there is a tendency now to shift our emphasis in such a manner as to make us the apologists for the thing which we have consistently opposed. We are not squeamish, old-fashioned, or straight-laced, but we do look with suspicion upon any change of emphasis which, by even the slightest implication, appears to compromise the distinction between a conventional morality and personal religion. If the Church would save the world, it must not sugar-coat sin. The spiritual tone of the Church has, we think, been seriously affected by making religious responsibility so impersonal and so broad that faith sinks to the level of popular and conventional morality—a process of social vaccination. There is, too, a lamentable lack of fervor and of convincing emphasis in some of our ministerial leadership. We seem to be drifting almost unconsciously into a religion which is little more than a theory of social relations. Any pagan on earth could adopt such a religion without doing violence to his paganism. It is much easier and more comfortable to be hospitable to a world philosophy or to an impersonal world brotherhood than it is to face up to the stern implications of a personal faith in God. No mere philosophy of social responsibility made those heroes of whom the world was not worthy, and no more can such build a conquering Church in our day. It appears that the question of the union of American Methodism may be decided upon a social and a race issue rather than upon the directing of a great passion and the fashioning of a mighty instrument for making Methodist evangelism more potent and effective. We need supremely a religion which will make the individual consecrated, dedicated and holy. We do not need a religion which undertakes to bless and make sacrosanct practices or institutions which are selfish, self-centered and corrupt. It makes no difference whether such may be the movies, the state, or the priesthood itself. Nothing can be purified by a label. Real Christianity is not inherited, it is not adopted and it is not organized—it is born of an experience.

THE CHICAGO LAYMEN AGAIN

The Chicago laymen who created something of a stir in church circles, by their utterances in an unofficial conference held last July, held a second conference on November 9. The principal address was made by Governor Arthur M. Hyde, of Missouri. It is not easy to appraise a movement of that kind without a knowledge of the men who sponsor it. As we see it, however, the attitude of those who composed the conference was firm, but was modest and in every way respectful and even appreciative of the leadership of the Church. The resolutions which, after discussion, were adopted without a dissenting vote expressed in simple and direct manner their belief in a spiritual emphasis as primary in Christianity, but admitted at the same time the social implications of the Gospel. No less clear and positive was their insistence that the Church must not, by a minority leadership, undertake to bind the consciences of individuals or groups without their being represented or heard. Particularly did they refer to political, economic and social issues to which such individuals and groups might be conscientiously opposed. We think that the tone of their recent utterances is manly, frank and conservative.

INSTITUTES FOR GREENWOOD DISTRICT

Institutes for the Greenwood District will be held as follows: Itta Bena, Wednesday, January 8; Ruleville, Thursday, January 9; Lexington, Friday, January 10; Winona, Thursday, January 16.

Each meeting will begin promptly at 1:30 p. m. and close about 3:30 p. m. We will have associated with us in these institutes the following persons: Prof. J. R. Bane, Associate Director of Christian Education in the district; Prof. B. D. McCallister, Director of Adult Work; Rev. W. L. Robinson, Director of Young People's Work; Mrs. G. W. Robertson, Director of Children's Work; Rev. R. G. Lord, Executive Secretary of the Conference Board. We will also have other strong speakers with us in these meetings.

We are inviting and urging the following to attend: The pastor, the General Supt. of the Church School, and the superintendents of the three major divisions—Adult Young People and Children's Divisions. And, of course, any others who are interested and can be induced to come.

BISHOP DOBBS' THANKSGIVING ADDRESS

Shreveport, La., Nov. 29.—“Gratitude is first an attitude, and then it becomes an act performed, expressive of that attitude of soul toward Him or toward those who have dealt generously and bountifully with us,” said Bishop M. Dobbs, of the Louisiana-Mississippi District of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a forceful and provocative address before the faculty and student body of Centenary College at the annual Thanksgiving chapel held this week previous to the Thanksgiving recess. Bishop Dobbs' address follows:

“We bow this morning to the authority of the President of the United States, and we respond to the invitation of President Cline and Dean Hardin to participate in Centenary's observance of this, our national Day of Thanksgiving.

“This we do with pleasure and profit to ourselves. The expression of thanks and the showing forth of gratitude and appreciation for the benefits of life are evidences of a quality of soul which is at the heart of all true education.

“We are here to renew our pledge of fidelity to the College and to continue our unchanging respect for its traditions. We re-affirm our conviction that life itself is the gift of God, and we here publicly make this expression of our gratitude to Him, and of our loyalty to the great Republic over which float the Stars and Stripes.

“It is never wise to take too much for granted. We should not yield to the inclination to accept life and its blessings as matters-of-course. They have been bestowed freely upon all, and the attitude of gratitude is the only one worthy of men and women who enjoy our privileges and opportunities. The gentleman of today strives to put back into life more than he takes out of it.

“Upon our arrival at the age of accountability, we ask ourselves certain questions which are individual in their nature and universal in their significance. Among these questions are (1) “Whence came we?”; (2) “Whither do we go?”; (3) “What can we know?”; (4) “What should we do?”. If we have not already asked ourselves these questions, I am sure that they will be soon framing themselves in the chambers of our minds. Much light has been thrown upon these mysteries if we properly strive to see it. Life is full of meaning to all those who know how to find it. But it would be unfortunate indeed to spend our life in this world discovering its meaning, its value, and its unity.

"As we advance in intelligence and maturity we feel the reality and the authority of the inner life which we call the soul. We also find it necessary to relate ourselves to the outside worlds of nature and of human nature—the physical world of things, and the human world of people. Over and beyond all these is the realm of the unknown and the realm of the supernatural. Surviving the total environment of thought and life, the individual arrives at the conclusion that the idea of God is an intellectual necessity and not a subject for debate. There must be Ultimate Reality in such a scheme of things, and that Ultimate Reality must be intelligent and purposeful, and that Ultimate Reality, we call 'God'.

"Upon these upper levels of life a sense of obligation lays hold of us. It is one which we cannot overlook, and it is also one which the noblest men and women in all ages have been ready and willing to acknowledge. They have associated these great gifts of life, society, the world, intellectual power, wealth, health, influence, and opportunity, with God, Himself. They have considered all these as coming from the divine source which we think of and describe as the 'Heavenly Father.' The acknowledgment of a debt is the recognition of the fact that we owe that debt to somebody. Therefore the expression of gratitude and of thanksgiving must be made in personal terms. Gratitude is first an attitude, and then it becomes an act performed, expressive of that attitude of soul toward Him or toward those who have dealt generously and bountifully with us.

"Response is life. No response is death. The measure of our influence and power is just the measure of our readiness and willingness to respond to those who have a right to such expressions of thanks, of appreciation, and of remembrance from us.

"We conclude our meditation as we began it. We believe that life itself is the gift of God. We have learned much of the strange and vast-extending universe in which we live. We feel impelled to acknowledge the voice and the power of the inner man. We are convinced that no expression which we can make of remembrance, of love, and of service will be too great for Him who is the Giver of every good and perfect gift. Bless the Lord, O my Soul, and all that is within me bless His holy name."

REV. LUTHER ALEXANDER McKEOWN

Luther Alexander McKeown, son of Thomas D. and Mary Ann Mahan McKeown, was born in Tishomingo County, Mississippi, August 10, 1854. Two of his older brothers were killed in battle, and his father died about the close of the War Between the States, leaving young Luther to take the lead in caring for his widowed mother, as well as for several dependents left by the brothers. The heroic story must be omitted here. It is the old story of a godly mother and a plucky son. At the age of 13 the lad was gloriously converted to a personal experience of the Christ. He immediately spoke to his youthful companions, seven of whom joined the church that same evening. The eight soon organized a prayer-meeting which became historic in the community.

On February 21, 1876, he was happily married to Miss Sallie Wyatt Hedgepeth, who bore him three sons, one of whom died in early childhood. The other two lived to have families of their own before they passed to their reward. In 1882 he was strongly impressed that it was his duty to preach, but he felt that a man with a growing family, himself almost illiterate, could hardly be used of God in the ministry. For two years he struggled to rid himself of the impression, being discouraged by nearly all relatives and friends except his noble wife. She urged him to yield and, in 1884, he received license to preach. He entered school at Iuka Normal Institute on the same day as his five-year-old son, Luther, and remained for three years, taking such courses as seemed to promise most for his chosen work. His progress was remarkable and he was in the highest favor with teachers and students, especially with President Dean, who was his devoted friend and patron. Naturally, he did not become a scholar, but he mastered a vocabulary and a style which would put hundreds of college graduates to shame. His parish was not to be a library or a cloister, but the open places where men wrought and suffered and sinned.

He gave proof of his ability and sincerity as a local preacher and was appointed to supply Harmony Circuit for the quadrennium of 1887-1890, his four-year tenure indicating satisfactory service. He supplied Blue Springs circuit in 1891 and again in 1898, receiving 226 members in the two years. He served Boonesville circuit in 1894. When not under appointment, he gave himself to evangelistic work with unusual success, and with a remuneration that enabled him to break the shackles of debt, once and for all time. In 1897, he again took an appointment as a supply, and was sent to Austin in the Delta, then more commonly and accurately called the "Swamp." Here he remained to serve eleven of the twenty-one charges in the Greenville district for a total of twenty-eight years. At Hollandale, he served seven years, then a record for the Conference. He was at Byhalia three years, at Iuka three years, and closed his active ministry at Schlater with his pastorate of 1931 and 1932.

So modest was his personal estimate of his worthiness to rank as a full-time itinerant minister, because of his brief period in school, that he continued for thirteen years as a supply. Finally, in 1902, he was almost snared into admission on trial, but he passed all the required studies and became a full member of the itinerancy in 1906, in which he rounded out thirty honest, earnest, diligent years—forty-three in all.

"Brother Mac," as he was tenderly and familiarly called, was a pastor-preacher. He went from house to house with genial, kindly, Christly ministry, facing winter frosts and summer heat, tramping "buck-shot" lanes and cane-brake trails, battling the deadly mosquito that had laid more than one faithful itinerant Methodist preacher to sleep under Delta soil. If ever a door failed to swing wide with welcome at his coming, it was only because the "new preacher" was making his first call. Thereafter, more likely, he was met at the gate. Nor could laymen and children surpass his brother ministers in their affection and welcome for a brother beloved, deeply and genuinely beloved.

Naturally, his sermons were not "bookish" nor borrowed! Born to the open country, he walked beneath heavens that declared the glory of God, and on soil that proclaimed his handiwork, and he walked with open eyes! Under his touch a fading leaf could make stalwart men feel the transitoriness of earthly existence and open their hearts to the life immortal. To him belonged a native eloquence. His preaching was unique, vivid, original wit, humor, pathos blended with a homely philosophy in driving home the great truths of the Bible. Though he had an unusual mind and a remarkable memory, he was ever a man of one Book. All else was subsidiary. He believed beforehand what he preached; others believed as they listened. Under his ministry men became babes in Christ, and babes became strong men of God under his faithful guidance and wise instruction. Dozens entered the ministry and hundreds united with the church. Congregations were organized, churches erected, and all the work of the Kingdom flourished where he was sent.

The wife of his youth died suddenly at Iuka in 1904. In 1905, he was married to Miss Minnie Lee Jourdan, who walked faithfully by his side, shared his ministry and comforted him in his sorrows to the end which came at Merigold, Miss., at high noon, November 16, 1935. In this former charge, Mrs. W. B. Parks had given him and his good wife a home for life, and here he had spent the years of his retirement, lovingly ministered to by all the people of the village. The burial service was conducted by his former presiding elder, L. P. Wasson, assisted by A. T. McIlwain, E. G. Mohler and J. R. Countiss. His body was laid to rest beside that of a son in Oak Ridge cemetery at Clarksdale. Surely the Master

REMEMBER THE SUPERANNUATES

Last year we received $32.00 for taking care of the subscriptions of superannuates and others who would otherwise have been deprived of its visits. Many persons have enjoyed the Advocate this year because of that fund. If you would like to have a part in making glad the hearts of superannuates and others who can not afford the Advocate, send us a contribution designated "For the Christmas Fund." We will see that no worthy person is denied the joy of the Advocate.

FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA

By Joseph Paul Bartak

Prof. Karl Barth was the distinguished speaker at a conference of pastors of the Czech Brethren Evangelical Church at Mysliborice, Czechoslovakia, and at an interdenominational gathering in the Hus House in Prague in the last week of August. Prof. Barth's greatest contribution is perhaps this: In an age which has placed too great an emphasis on the ability of man and has stressed the need of the transformation of society as a whole so as to make this world a more pleasant and comfortable place to live in, Prof. Barth is helping to maintain the equilibrium in theology by emphasizing the absoluteness, omnipotence and transcendence of God. According to Barth, man should be very careful so as not to claim any credit for his own salvation. He disclaims man's ability to rise spiritually by his own efforts, he warns us lest we endeavor to try to build the Church upon man. He insists that the Church has not been left alone to determine its own course, but that it is guided by God Almighty and is answerable to him directly. In an age that tended to obliterate the distinction between God and man Prof. Karl Barth re-emphasizes the fundamental difference of these two categories. Like Isaiah of old, he sees the Lord "high and lifted up," and man low and "of unclean lips." He protests against substituting any other revelation for the Revelation of God and he equally protests against recognizing any other authority to be on par with the authority of God. It is his firm stand upon this principle that cost him the loss of his position in the totalitarian state of Germany.

Mississippi and Louisiana

Rev. Carl Lueg, Slidell, La., sends us a copy of his beautiful art calendar containing his Christmas service. Brother Lueg did an excellent work last year, and he is beginning the new year well.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, the new presiding elder of the Alexandria, La., district was a pleasant caller at the Advocate office last Thursday. He reports a very happy and auspicious beginning in his new task.

Brother John E. Skinner, Biloxi, Miss., says that he enjoys the entire contents of the Advocate, but especially the pictures of churches and their history and the Wallet of the Week.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, Hazlehurst, Miss., remits two dollars for the Christmas Fund. The amount was contributed by two persons to whom we make grateful acknowledgment.

Rev. J. G. Galloway, a superannuate of the Mississippi Conference and living at Crystal Springs, says that he missed his Conference this year for the first time in forty-seven years—a great record.

Rev. G. H. Ledbetter reports that the prospects are very encouraging on Courtland, Miss., charge. We trust that he may have a great year in every detail of the work.

The new gymnasium now in course of erection at Millsaps College is to be named, the Bule Memorial Gymnasium, in honor of Webster Millsaps Bule. Mr. Bule was an alumnus of the Institution and was one of its most loyal supporters.

Rev. W. P. Bailey, of Corinth circuit charge, reports a warm welcome and good prospects for the year. This is his first year and we hope that he may find his new field the most pleasant that he has ever served.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, Porterville, Miss., was superannuated at his own request at the last session of his Conference. We call attention to his article elsewhere in this issue. He desires to be of service to his brethren.

Rev. A. J. Davis requests that we announce his address as being 1114 29th Ave., Meridian, Miss. He expresses his appreciation for the check mailed him, and asks that prayer be made for his recovery, the Lord willing.

Rev. B. C. Taylor reports that his church continues the Advocate in the budget for the new year. Brother Taylor is very happy—says they paid him his first month's salary before he had preached a single sermon.

Rev. W. L. Robinson, Moorhead, Miss., sends us a bulletin of his church, and reports that he is delighted with his appointment. He has placed 100 new hymnals in his church and hopes to hold a study course on church music.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs is scheduled to be with Rev. W. H. Giles at Bastrop, on Sunday, January 5. At that time Brother Giles will have paid a balance of $1,965 debt on the organ, and the organ is to be dedicated that day.

Mrs. J. A. Regan, Wallows, Miss., says that she has read the Advocate for many years and that she looks forward to its weekly visits with much pleasure. Thank you, and may your pleasure in its coming never grow less.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Franklinton, La., veteran of the Conference and unfailing friend of the Advocate, is already making full proof of his ministry in the Advocate cause. If all preachers were as loyal to the Advocate as he is, our problems would be solved.

The editor acknowledges a good letter from Mrs. W. J. Porter, of Monroe, La. Sister Porter's husband, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, was translated several years ago, and she is now confined to her bed most of the time.

Dr. Willis P. Butler has been elected chairman of the Board of Stewards of First Church, Shreveport, for the year now beginning. Mr. Randle T. Moore and Mr. O. S. Williams, who had served the church in that capacity for a number of years, were given a vote of appreciation for their splendid leadership and devotion.

A reporter from the church at Amory, Miss., reports that Rev. J. A. George has lost no time in getting into his work and that the people are delighted with him. He has organized a Junior Board of Stewards, and all services give promise of a great year.

Rev. W. H. Lewis says that improvements made on his parsonage home at Lucedale have added greatly to the comfort of the preacher and his family. He says that all signs point to a good year, and that he is praying for a great forward movement in spiritual things.

Mrs. L. L. Upton, of Slaughter, La., writes that she has been a reader of the Advocate for more than sixty years, and that she cannot forsake the friend of the long, long years. Thank you for your loyalty and friendship. We will try to make the Advocate visits more pleasant from week to week.

Hon. George J. Leftwich, a seventy-six-year-old attorney of Aberdeen, Miss., died on December 18, according to press reports. Brother Leftwich was a member of the Methodist Church in Aberdeen, and the editor was happy to number him among friends of long standing.

Rev. S. S. Holiday, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, says that he has been a reader of the Advocate for fifty-five years. His home is at Pelican, La., and although he cannot see to read it himself, his children read it to him. We wish for him a happy Christmas season and many delightful visits from the Advocate in the years ahead.

We regret to record the death of Dr. Lucien E. Larch, the Church School superintendent and a member of the Board of Stewards of Bastrop, La. His death occurred on December 7. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. H. Giles, the pastors of the Baptist and the Presbyterian churches and Rev. D. C. Barr.

Rev. S. A. Seegers, pastor at Rayne, La., is in great sorrow on account of the death of his mother, which occurred at Haynesville, La., on the morning of December 18. The Advocate joins with many friends extending sympathy to Brother Seegers and others who share his sorrow.

except St. Louis, Baltimore and New Orleans, was one to thirty-nine. Even in New Orleans, Romanist as it was, the ratio was one to one hundred and thirty-four.

The representatives of the Southern Church at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1876, were the venerable Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce, Rev. Dr. James A. Duncan, and Dr. L. C. Garland. There was a romantic interest which attached to Dr.

American Methodism was an impression more delightful and profound made by a single paragraph than his exordium, which was delivered in a manner worthy of the traditions of Cicero." In August following we have noted already, the Cape May Commission translated the emotions of the fraternal exchanges between the long estranged hosts of Wesley into a tone of mutual understanding and friendship which largely settled the harrassing questions of a generation.

Pierce as the rejected suitor of 1848, and on account of his extreme age, he being ninety-two years old. He was too feeble to attend the Conference, however, and his address was read to the Body. In view of the eloquence and the ability of those who were the fraternal messengers to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1874, Dr. Duncan and Dr. Garland faced a most difficult situation personally, as well as officially. But they met the challenge of the hour in a manner worthy of the men themselves and of the Church which they represented. Dr. Garland's address was clear, pointed and scholarly; and Dr. Duncan, from the very first paragraph to the close of his eloquent and masterly address swept his audience as only few men could do. Dr. James M. Buckley quoted his opening paragraph in full, and he said of it: "Never in the history of

But this glorious year was not to close without a touch of sorrow. On June 27, Dr. E. W. Schon, who twenty-eight years was Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, died of a paralytic stroke at Louisville, Kentucky. On October 5, Dr. E. H. Myers, who had been a worthy representative of Southern Methodism on the Cape May Commission, fell a victim of yellow fever in Savannah, Georgia. And on October 19, Dr. John P. Durbin, a stalwart figure of the Methodist Episcopal Church, came to the close of his distinguished career.

With the settlement arranged by the Cape May Commission and the establishment of fraternal relations between the two great branches of Episcopal Methodism, the regime of ecclesiastical strife was formally ended—a consummation too long delayed, for even Appomattox was fast becoming a faded recollection, and the dis-severed secular ties were well on the way to perfect healing. It is as superficial as it is common for people to assert that General Lee surrendered at Appomattox in 1865, but the Church has continued the struggle for three-quarters of a century after. The signing of the articles of capitulation and surrender, in the very nature of the case, related only to military operations and the official status of the soldiers of the National and the Confederate governments. The Church has had to combat within its ranks the backwash of selfishness, prejudice and hate which the war developed, but there has not been a day in all these weary years when its idealism and its heart have not been a bow-shot in advance of the leaden-footed politician and not, however, clear the way for an easy and an unimpeded progress on the part of the Southern Church, for the rebuilding of its material fortune following the war was not something that might be accomplished in a day or even a decade. Every substantial factor of progress was compelled, therefore, to bide a time when the fortunes of the Southern people might be recouped, or when friends, better circumstanced than themselves, might come to their rescue.

The first among the wealthy men of the North to become interested in the South was Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt. He it was who laid the foundation for a new educational hope in the Southern Church. As the founder of Vanderbilt University, which event we will notice later, he became the first influential patron critic who would discredit its labors and its leadership.

CHAPTER XII

PEACE AND PROGRESS

After the year 1876, the two co-ordinate branches of American Episcopal Methodism, having entered into an agreement for the settlement of issues which had disturbed their ecclesiastical peace for a generation, turned each to its own work and way. Partisan feelings and attitudes did not subside immediately, as all might have wished, but the bond to which both groups gave approval officially ended all old grounds for continued contest and controversy. At the South, the years which followed were occupied with the problems of rehabilitation and the routine of administration. The official settlement of the controverted issues did of Methodist education in the South after the war. But almost before the wonder of his splendid gesture was past, his life came to a close. His death occurred on January 4, 1877, in the eighty-third year of his age. In addition to the tie which he had with the South through the connection of his family with that of Bishop Holland N. McTyeire, he had been a bondsman for the release of Mr. Jefferson Davis, the President of the Confederacy, who was imprisoned at the close of the conflict. If Mr. Vanderbilt could have lived for a few years longer, he might have made a larger and a more lasting contribution to the peace of the sections and to the progress of Southern education. But, as it was, he opened the way for the manifestation of a friendly interest toward the South and the Southern Methodist Church,

BIBLE STUDY SUPERINTENDENTS TAKE NOTICE

Since we do not have our new Devotional Bible Study to begin the new year, I am advising that Missionary Societies take a Stewardship Study or any other course in Group One during January or February, and then begin the Home Mission Study. Probably, after that, the new book will be ready.

MRS. W. F. MAHAFFEY,
Conference Superintendent.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

By Mrs. Ernest Moore, Malvina, Miss.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Church held their literary and social meeting for November, Monday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Joe Brewer with a large crowd in attendance. Mesdames John Boswell, Joe Brewer and Mims Boswell were hostesses for the afternoon.

The living room was made more attractive by the predominance of fall flowers and autumn leaves effectively arranged in vases and flower baskets. Mrs. John Boswell presided over the meeting, reading the Call to Praise and leading in prayer. Mrs. C. A. Pender held life discussion part of the program based on "The Korean Church at Work." She was assisted by Mesdames Mamie Mitchel, Claude Triplett, Lavenia Gilliland Snowden, and Harry Guess. Mrs. T. J. Austin conducted the devotional as outlined in the World Outlook.

At the conclusion of the program the ladies were ushered into the dining room which was lovely with the fall decorations. After the dainty refreshments were served and the guests were seated in the reception room little Ellies Boswell brought in the lavish display of gifts by which the ladies wished to express to Mrs. Gregory their appreciation of her work with them the past year. Mrs. Gregory responded by thanking the society for the shower and for the part they, as a group, meant in both her life and Mr. Gregory's.

The society adjourned to meet Monday afternoon at the church to go to Sallis for a zone meeting.

A later report of this zone meeting showed an interesting way of electing officers. For instance, Mrs. A. L. Davenport of Williamsville was elected president; Mrs. McElroy of Ethel, vice-chairman; and Miss Effie Hughes of Kocusk, secretary and treasurer.

Kosciusko will be the next meeting place.

Columbus District is proud of this new auxiliary at Ethel. Fourteen members to start with is a fine group. They started right by having a Spiritual Life Committee.

On Tuesday, December 3, the last zone meeting of the year was held in the Winona Methodist Church. A devotional on Stewardship opened the meeting.

Introduction of the World Outlook was made by presenting a play, "First Aid," showing the ladies the meaning of World Outlook when in need of program material. Mrs. Gillespie of Duck Hill played a piano solo at this time.

The business of reading reports, getting attendance, and electing officers resulted in a record of good work done, forty present, Mrs. H. Flowers elected as chairman, and Mrs. Haman, secretary.

By special request Mrs. Munro of Winona gave a lovely solo.

Mrs. Mounger of Winona conducted the Spiritual Life Retreat, using Mat. 2:1-12. After interesting comments on the Christmas story she told the group the history of the Christmas song, "There's a Song in the Air." This was sung by Mrs. Mounger.

The next meeting will be held at Duck Hill.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE

By Mrs. John B. Pollard,
1574 Jefferson Ave., New Orleans.

The Rayville Missionary Society always does things in attractive manner. Their Week of Prayer planned by Mrs. C. M. Purvis, superintendent of Spiritual Life, was carried out in every detail as arranged by Council.

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. W. D. Cotton presented the playlet "When the Walls Fell." The costuming of the players made this most effective. Little Cora Frances Harris and Martha Julia Haley dressed as Chinese girls and sang sweetly.

Friday was a day of retreat. Mrs. J. T. Harris was leader for the morning session and used as her subject "Be Still and Know that I am God," and also Halman Hunt's picture "The Light of the World." Mrs. O. H. Bynum conducted the afternoon session on "The Contagion of Service."

At the executive meeting held in Crowley recently all were delighted to learn from Mrs. R. S. Crichlow, Conference superintendent of Rural work that 400,000 Southern Methodist children were being reached through the new co-operative plan with the Church School whereas in previous years, through Boys and Girls World Clubs, only a few thousand had been reached. This is indeed a step forward in our work and we find ourselves almost feeling sorry for those auxiliaries who have not elected a secretary of children's work.

At a recent meeting of the Rayne Memorial Society, Mrs. Walter K. Grant, the most capable secretary of children's work, had on display the handiwork of the children which they had done when their last missionary unit on World Peace had been taught. It was indeed an eye opener to the ladies of the society to see the magnificent piece of work being done for the missionary education of the children.

The themes for our program work for the year are as follows: Home—Serving Human Need Through Community Center and Foreign—Meeting Human Needs Co-operatively. The year 1936 commemorates fifty years of home missions. Throughout the year we shall enjoy programs bearing on the work of the home field. At the Council and Conference meetings all deaconesses and home missionaries will be honored. Let us use these year books and monthly program materials in a way that will do credit to those who have so carefully prepared them.

The Advocate acknowledges with appreciation the invitation of Rev. and Mrs. E. H. Cunningham to be present at the marriage of their daughter, Myrtle Juniata, to Mr. Thomas Edward Cooper, at 4 o'clock, Wednesday, December 25, at Corinth, Miss. We join their many friends in wishing that their lives may ever reflect the happiness of the season at which they were united. They will make their home in Corinth.

Dr. Dumas Malone is the son of the Rev. J. W. Malone, who was a Georgian, was for sixteen years a member of the North Mississippi Conference and president of Methodist colleges for 29 years, has been appointed director of the Harvard University Press, by vote of the Harvard Corporation. Dr. Malone, a graduate of Emory University in 1910, has had quite extensive literary and scholastic experience. At present, he is engaged in Washington as editor-in-chief of the "Dictionary of American Biography," which he expects to complete by July when he will assume his new duties. Mrs. Malone, the mother of Dr. Malone, is a member of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans.

STEWARDS INSTITUTE, MERIDIAN DISTRICT

The first Stewards Institute for the Meridian District was held at Central Methodist Church on the evenings of December 2, 3, and 4, from 7 to 9 o'clock, with Dr. G. L. Morelock, Secretary of the General Board of Lay Activities, as director, and it was one of the most interesting and profitable meetings ever held in the district, which was shown by the increasing crowd and interest at each meeting; there were 18 charges represented on the opening night, with an attendance of 106 officials on the evening of the 3rd; there were 18 charges with an attendance of 161 and on the closing evening there were 20 charges represented and the attendance was 188, or a total attendance of 455 for the three services.

The interest increased in the same proportion as the attendance, and the results will be far reaching, especially if it is followed up as it has been planned to do.

Dr. Morelock was at his best, and the work that he did was really worth while, and he will be gladly welcomed to the district again for another institute. We most heartily recommend him to every district in the Conference and hope that he can be secured for a similar institute.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted at the conclusion of the last session of the institute:

Whereas, we have heard with great pleasure and profit the addresses of Dr. G. L. Morelock during this institute, for which we desire to thank him; therefore be it Resolved, that we express to Dr. Morelock our very grateful appreciation for the information and inspiration that has come to us from the addresses delivered during the three evenings of the institute, and we feel that we will be better officials in the church as a result of having heard him.

Be it further resolved, that we hereby pledge anew our allegiance to God and the Church, with an earnest effort to more faithfully do the work assigned us in the church, especially if we are stewards.

Resolved further, that we will study the entire program of the church and strive to be "workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth;" that we also endeavor to be personal evangelists in bringing the lost to Jesus Christ and His Church.

Be it further resolved, that we request the presiding elder and district lay leader to arrange for a number of group meetings throughout the district, as early as convenient, so that the information and inspiration gotten at this institute may be carried to each group, with the purpose of reaching all the officials of the various charges in the district, and to this end we pledge our most loyal co-operation.

THE RESERVE CHURCH CLEARS ITS OBLIGATIONS IN FULL

The pastor's heart was gladdened today, to receive a copy of a letter sent by Mr. J. P. Greven, capable chairman of the board of stewards of the Reserve Methodist Church, to the Board of Church Extension at Louisville. This letter included the final check of $102.00 on the last payment on the indebtedness on the Reserve Church.

This loyal little group of Protestants in Reserve has done a remarkable thing in building an attractive stucco chapel, and in clearing the debts thereon. The pastor, of last year, Rev. A. W. Townsend, and the presiding elder, Dr. W. L. Duren, as well as the members of this church and congregation, are to be congratulated on this achievement. The building cost over $5,000 and there are only 23 members on roll. Presumably, it will be dedicated soon.

The Reserve church is served by the McDonoghville pastor, at an early morning appointment on the first, third, and fifth Sundays. It has a church school which meets every Sunday morning after the church service. It is the only Protestant Church in either Reserve or Garyville.

CHURCH SCHOOL LESSON, DECEMBER 29.

By Dr. J. R. Countiss

SIGNIFICANCE OF THE EXILE AND RESTORATION

The ancient Hebrews ignored intermediate agencies and attributed all to the great First Cause. Their bread, water and light came from God; ours from the mill, the hydrant and the dynamo, though all mankind cannot make a germ of wheat, secure water from a dry hole, or create a ray of light. They viewed adversity and national calamity as penalties for sin. We lay sin to Adam and plead guilty to nothing more serious than mistakes and indiscretions. Who is nearer the truth? A shirking laborer may receive full pay for shoddy work, but in the long run his wage is cut and his job is lost. The same law rules with groups and nations. "One cannot beat doing right." Natural phenomena and national disaster should at least make us pause to listen to the "still voice" within. As a rule, nature is kind, revealing the glory of God and showing his handiwork. National greed, hatred, war bring inevitable penalties in burdensome taxes, economic losses, and distressing depressions. When gaunt hunger stalks the fields of American plenty, it is time to audit our moral account. We may find our exclusive and gorgeous garments of righteousness badly moth-eaten; may discover a deficit where we thought we had a surplus.

Exile taught Israel much as to the worth and worthiness of other peoples. Even in Babylon there were kind and generous neighbors. Possibly Jehovah might love and save others besides the children of Abraham. With the temple destroyed, Jerusalem laid waste and the people exiled, the local and material seemed less important. God could be throned in the heart and worshiped everywhere. Their prophets, preachers of righteousness, kept spiritual ideals aflame, set the golden age for the future, and taught obedience to God as the way of life. Few of them companied with kings and courts. They lived with the common people and sensed the currents of racial feeling and aspiration. Their deep insight came to be regarded as foresight. Indeed, much of it was. Free from political, ecclesiastical and economic prejudice, they saw clearly and spoke sincerely.

Israel was not chosen for favor but for service. It was too slight a thing that the great God should concern himself solely with exalting the tribes of Jacob or preserving the few people of Israel. They were set for a light to the Gentiles, of bringing salvation to the ends of the earth. Nothing less was worthy of Jehovah and his chosen agents. What comment can add to the sublime beauty and clarity of the vision of that radiant, joyous, victorious Kingdom whose heralds were messengers of peace not war, of harmony and unity not strife and division, of salvation not destruction? Only let the lesson be read as a poem, not as a blue-print. Could America, the Church, and especially the ministry catch the spirit of that radiant vision, the world would come rejoicing over the achievement of a destiny worthy alike of creature and Creator. Not a dim and distant millennium, but "today is the day of salvation!" O Church of God, arise and shine!

TROUT AND GOODPINE

Dear Dr. Duren: We are again well on our way to another happy year in Trout and Goodpine. Just a few lines about the manner of reception that awaited our return. On Wednesday evening, December 5, about one hundred friends met for the mid-week service and very much to the surprise of the preacher; after service, they led us into the Sunday school annex and presented us with the finest pounding I have seen in many days. Not content with the pounding they gave a very inspiring program.

Every one was given an opportunity to speak their conviction. The entire group was anxious to express their determination for greater service in the year before us. The fellowship was of the highest type and I have never seen people happier and rejoicing in the Lord more; even the little children were anxious to speak.

After the program all were very graciously served with a delicious luncheon by the Missionary Societies of Trout and Goodpine. The companionship of this hour has done much to bring our people to a united spirit and the outlook for this year is fine.

Sincerely yours for success in your work, I am

THE VOICE OF A SUPER- ANNUATE

By Rev. John W. Ramsey

The forthcoming journal of the Mississippi Conference which met at Laurel, November 15, will show that I was superannuated at my own request. However, I wish it to be known by the brethren of the Conference and the public in general that, with the exception of an attack of hay fever and asthma during September and part of October my mental and physical capacities remain unabated. With the exception named, I can do just as much work and preach just as well or better than I did twenty-five years ago. My wife says that I did better preaching during the past year than she had ever heard me do—and she ought to know.

I am beginning to realize already that the saddest feature of the life of a superannuate is the loneliness of it—the feeling of being out of it all; no church, no pulpit to occupy on Sunday, no people to serve, no opportunity to preach the gospel of his Lord. Yet there is some compensation in the relief from the mental and spiritual strain imposed by the strenuous duties of the pastorate under the complex organization of the modern church. If the brethren who remain in the active work of the pastorate could realize the loneliness of the superannuate's life and how easy it would be to relieve or to ameliorate some of that loneliness by employing him in their revival meetings, and calling upon him to fill their pulpits occasionally, I am sure the pastors would do that very thing.

Having held many successful revivals in many of my own churches and in several of the best towns in the state, I think no one would take it as a mark of egotism if I were to say that the Lord has blessed my work in that respect in a remarkable way. If I may be permitted to give a few instances, I would name such towns as Waynesboro, Morton, Leakesville, Pelahatchie, and the city of Meridian. The meeting at Morton resulted in twenty additions to the church, the one at Pelahatchie in fifty-four, the one at Poplar Springs church, Meridian, in twenty-five, and the one at Hawkins Memorial, Meridian, in sixty additions. I have not the space at my command to mention the many country churches at which I have held revivals during these forty-five years in the ministry.

In closing, please allow me to say that I am glad to state that several of my friends among the preachers have already expressed their intention to engage me for meetings, and if there are others I shall be glad to accept their invitations. The numerical or financial strength of the church, whether in town or country, will not be considered, and any pastor who can use me should not hesitate over the matter of remuneration for services rendered. All that will be asked or expected will be a free will offering at the close of the meeting.

My address for the present is Porterville, Miss., and after May 1, my address will be 533 54th Ave., Meridian, Miss., but any letter addressed to me at Porterville at any time during the year will be forwarded to my Meridian address.

AN UNUSUAL EXPERIENCE

I have had an unusual experience. This is my third pastorate at Jonesboro, fourteen years having elapsed between the last two. During these pastorates I have officiated at the marriage of several couples. This is the unusual experience: On the last Sunday before Christmas, just as I arose to announce the opening hymn at the morning service the organist began playing a wedding march. Naturally I expected a couple to enter to its strains and come to the altar to be married. Instead, a number of couples at whose marriage I officiated in years gone by, some of them now living in other places, entered the church and marched to the first pews. Judge E. L. Walker, of Ruston, acted as spokesman and in well chosen words presented to me an envelope containing duplicate wedding fees.

If couples at whose marriage I officiated can love me after all these years of married life their love must be genuine. Another thing; Of all the couples at whose marriage I officiated while pastor at Jonesboro, not one has been divorced or separated.

G. A. MORGAN.

SEASHORE DISTRICT STEWARDS MEETING

The Seashore District Stewards meeting was held at Gulfport, December 10, 1935, L. J. Power, presiding elder. The meeting was well attended, twenty-three ministers and thirty-one laymen attending. After the roll call Brother L. J. Power, presiding elder of the district, directed the District Stewards to meet him in a separate room and while there the apportionments for the various charges were made. Under the direction of Brother Power, Brother E. S. Lewis led the ministers and remaining laymen in the discussion of several matters of importance. The matter of the Christmas offering for the superannuate preachers was brought up and Brother Schultz gave a splendid appeal in behalf of the superannuate preachers. The matter of the support of Brother W. M. Williams, serving the State Sanitarium for T. B. patients, was brought up and Brother J. T. Leggett, who, with Brother Schultz was visiting the Conference, made a statement in behalf of our work at the Sanitarium, stating that we were raising money not for Brother Williams but for the work of the Christian ministry in serving the patients of that institution. Brother P. M. Carraway urged the ministers to make a creditable offering on the second Sunday in February for the support of our work at the Memorial Mercy Home in New Orleans. Several other ministers made mention of the splendid work being done there. Brother W. H. Saunders made an appeal to the pastors and laymen to support the New Orleans Christian Advocate by getting a large number of subscriptions this year. Brother H. A. Wood, recently appointed Conference evangelist, spoke in interest of evangelism in our Conference urging the people to consider him a "pastor evangelist." Mrs. L. J. Power, in a statement to the pastors, urged greater co-operation and sympathy between the preachers and their Missionary Societies. She asked the pastors to look to the matter of the societies paying in full their pledges. Several spoke of the memorial monument to be placed at the grave of Brother Louis Fayard. Brother W. J. Ferguson mentioned the fact that the Mississippi Annual Conference has already contributed vountarily something for this purpose. A love offering was taken for Mrs. Louis Fayard, the widow of "Uncle Loui."

The ladies of the First Church served those present with a delicious lunch at noon. Under the direction of Brother Power the preachers and laymen met in "groups" for organization and plans for meetings.

MEDITATION

Is. 26:3—Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose heart is stayed in Thee."

G. Matheson in "Messages of Hope" comments on this passage from Isaiah:

"It is not said, 'Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed.' There is nothing in mere movelessness which is suggestive of peace. A mind may be motionless by reason of its unrest. What, for example, is the numbness of despair, but just a mind which has been deprived of movement by its own unrest? Grief by its excess has stopped the pulses of feeling; fear has paralyzed energy; inward struggle has ended in inward exhaustion.

"In the peace of a human soul everything depends on the thing which fastens it. There are various kinds of fastenings by which a spirit may be bound. It may be bound by sleep; it may be bound by apathy; it may be bound by old age. The peace of which Isaiah speaks is that of a soul bound by God; its perfection lies in the fact that it is stayed on something which is itself constantly moving.

"What would be the difference between a soul bound to a rock and a soul bound to a star? The soul fastened to a rock would be stationary; the soul fastened to the star would be ever on the wing. That is the difference between the peace of God and the world's peace. The world's peace is a standing still; God's is a moving on. The world's peace is silence; God's is a living voice. The world's peace is languor after toil; God's is inspiration of strength to begin toil. To be stayed by God is to be stayed not by death but by life, not exhaustion, but energy, not by folding the hands but by spreading the sails to reach a wider sphere. The peace of God descends on every man as it descended on Jesus in the midst of the waters."

It is significant that these words do not identify the experience of peace with the absence of loss and sorrow, but rather with the presence of God. It is not that we are to be withdrawn from the reach of the influence of these things, but that we are to be drawn into close union with Himself.

PRAYER

Our Father, we know that perfect peace can come from Thee alone.

Reconciled to God through Christ, may we attain to perfect harmony with the Divine will. We would constantly live in abiding fellowship with Thee. Keep our hearts stayed on Thee. We ask in Jesus' name.

"JESUS' USE OF SCRIPTURE"

How would Jesus make use of the sacred scripture of his day? What can we learn today from him in our use of the Bible which is so dear to our hearts? What can be done to make the Bible most helpful to the modern Christian? These are questions which are discussed along with other important matters in the Adult Student during the months of January, February, and March, 1936. The course bears the title, "Jesus' Use of Scripture." Many requests have been made of the General Board of Christian Education for an elective course on the Bible. These studies have been prepared as the answer to the calls for such material. If any pastors or teachers of adults would like to get advanced copies of the January Adult Student, they can be obtained by writing to the Editorial Department, General Board of Christian Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

T. SLEDGE FORD

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has taken into His home, our beloved brother, T. Sledge Ford; and

Whereas, his passing has caused a deep sorrow in the community and has left a vacant place in the church that can never be filled; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the Board of Stewards of the First Methodist Church, realizing that we have lost one of our leaders, a Christian gentleman and friend, will strive to emulate his example, and carry on the work he loved and did so well; be it further

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family, and a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes, and sent to the family, and to the local paper.

In Memoriam

MRS. CECELIA ROSALEE STEWART

Mrs. Cecelia Rosalee Stewart, daughter of James and Cecelia Parker, was born August 28, 1858, at Oak Lawn, in the Woolmarket community, near Biloxi, and departed this life on June 21, 1935. Her entire life was spent in this community. On April 19, 1877, she united in marriage with William C. Stewart. This happy union lasted for nearly fifty-eight years, and ten children—four sons and six daughters—were born to bless their home.

Her home life was that of devotion and love. In the rearing of her children she taught noble ideals and virtue, living by precept and example. Her life was an open book and those who read from it caught new inspiration and learned of a better life beyond. She was candid in her convictions, steadfast in her beliefs and firm in her dealings, but loving kindness dominated her life. She was, indeed, a pioneer Christian leader whose opinions were respected, and her noble life was held in high regard by all who knew her.

Early in life she was christened a Catholic, but later, in her young womanhood, she united with the Methodist Church and spent many years in its service. Not only was she devoted to its principles and doctrines but she supported its ordinances and institutions. When her children were too young to walk a long distance to Sunday school, she organized and conducted one for a number of years at Oak Head, a small school house near her home. During camp meeting days she was a familiar figure at Palmer Creek, Perry and New Prospect camp meetings. Only once in over fifty years did she fail to attend Palmer Creek camp meeting. At the last meeting she attended she criticized the preacher, one of her former Sunday school pupils, for not conducting more altar services. Her life was one of devotion and prayer. Her home was a refuge for the minister and she was a friend of the church.

Her body was laid to rest in the Coalville cemetery. As the casket was being lowered and the choir was singing "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," the sun burst forth from behind stormy clouds that had cast a gloom all day, and the silver linings made the evening skies beautiful with their splendor. The "stormy days" for "Aunt Cecile" are over, but the radiant splendor from her life shines on and has placed many silver linings in the lives of those who came under the influence of her godly life.

She is survived by her husband, William C. Stewart, nine children, twenty-two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren and a great host of admiring friends who mourn her going, but who are steadfast in their belief that they "shall see her again."

A friend of the family,

W. A. WELCH.

IN SWEET MEMORY OF OUR DARLING BABY, LUKE STEWART

The gates of Heaven opened, the angels sang, and our sad loss was Heaven's gain.

Darling, it seems so long since he left us

We've been so sad, so lonesome and blue. Things have never seemed the same without you.

You were so precious and sweet to us. Oh! how lonely we are since you left us,

How we miss your little footsteps that so sweetly and tenderly followed us And your sweet smiling face we cannot see.

We cannot hear the sound of your sweet tender voice so sweetly calling for things

That your little heart desired.

We did all we could to keep you with us, Darling,

But you were too precious to stay.

God wanted you to go with Him to make Heaven sweeter.

We know that you will suffer no pain over there,

Neither trials and trouble will you have to bear.

Oh! how our hearts are broken because you have gone and left us,

But we know when the pearly gates swing open for us to come in

You will be there to meet and greet us, As you did when you were with us.

I ask not that the bitterness of this cup may pass from me,

But grant me, Lord, through pain a perfect prayer.

Keep there a touch in my soul somewhere

This cup can give me blessings from its flow.

The gift to feel for others in their woe. A clearer vision of soul and heart

To see God's love and power in nature's art,

And too, that of it all we are a part.

Sweet Darling, your place in our hearts and homes is vacant

That never will be filled.

Written by his aunt,

MRS. JESSIE FULTON.

PIERRE HENRY LAVIGNE

Pierre Henry Lavigne was born in Wesley community of Tangipahoa Parish, La., January 5, 1852, died April 24, 1935, in his eighty-fourth year.

He spent his life in this community, with the exception of a period from 1884 to 1908 spent near James Chapel in Livingston Parish. Married Jennie M. Ball 1886, who died April 20, 1921.

Survived by brothers: George, Jule, Robert; sisters: Mrs. Henry Howes, Mrs. Steve Parken; sons: Harvey, Robert; daughters: Mrs. Esther Heitman, Mrs. Martin Penn, Mrs. Desra Gates, Mrs. John Schulz, Miss Maggie, Miss Sophie. A large number of grandchildren. He united with the Methodist Church in youth, was a devout member, punctual in attendance, loyal and faithful on official boards, ever the preacher's friend, as a citizen was interested in civic affairs, a kind husband and father. We miss him here, but hope his will be an unbroken family above.

His pastor,

R. T. PICKETT.

MRS. IDA MAE NELSON

Mrs. Ida Mae Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Porter, was born at Rocky Springs, Claiborne Co., Miss., May 2, 1879, and passed to her eternal reward from her home in Vicksburg, September 16, 1935. On January 16, 1907, she was married to Mr. Joseph Vernon Nelson, of Rocky Springs. In 1913 the family moved to Vicksburg, and on February 5, 1927, Sister Nelson was called to mourn the death of her beloved husband. One son, Mr. Charles Nelson, was born of this union, and resides in Vicksburg. Besides this only son she is survived by her mother, Mrs. T. A. Porter, and by two sisters, Mrs. Eddie Porter, of Vicksburg and Mrs. F. F. Powell, of Rocky Springs.

Sister Nelson was converted and united with the Methodist Church at Rocky Springs at the age of twelve, and developed into a woman of high ideals, deep consecration, and great usefulness. On moving to Vicksburg she became a member of the Gibson Memorial Church, and until confined to her room by affliction she was one of its most active and capable members, serving from time to time as a teacher in the Sunday school, as the efficient treasurer of the board of stewards, and as president of the Woman's Missionary Society.

She will be sorely missed. During the last two years of her life she was confined to her home by severe bodily affliction, but through it all she manifested marvelous patience and cheerfulness, and unflagging interest in the work of the Church. Her life was radiant with goodness and faith and hope, and many hearts are sad because of the passing of this noble woman. We shall meet her again in the heavenly home which God is preparing for those who love and serve Him.

M. M. BLACK, Pastor.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. NELLIE HARPER JONES, RAYVILLE, LOUISIANA

On the afternoon of November 2, 1935, at 5:30 o'clock, the spirit of our loving friend and co-worker, "Nell Jones," took its flight into "The Land of the Blessed." It was not meant that this dear friend and sweet loving mother, who loved all things beautiful, should perish with the flowers and falling leaves; she lives again. Her's was a beautiful life; it was an inspiration to all with whom she came in contact. It can always be said of her, "She did what-so-ever her hand found to do with all her might and Christian fortitude."

We, the members of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, have lost one of our most generous and faithful members, one who never found the task too hard, one who never lost faith. Hence it is not only befitting but it becomes the sad privilege of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society as a whole to give expression of its deep appreciation of the life of this noble woman and mother. Therefore be it

Resolved, That in her death we have sustained a great loss. Truly we can say, "She has done what she could and left no unfinished task."

That we extend to her sorrowing son and family our heartfelt sympathy in this sad hour.

And that on the pages of our minutes be spread these resolutions, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, to the Richland Beacon News, and to her family.

MRS. E. E. STODGHILL,
Mrs. J. C. CALHOUN,
Mrs. C. A. BLATCHFORD,
Committee.

MRS. LOUISE BYERLEY GOODMAN

On September 28, 1935, in Cary, Miss., God called to Heaven the valiant spirit of the loved wife and mother, Mrs. Louise Byerley Goodman.

Mrs. Goodman was a born leader. Her keen judgment, artistic ability and personal charm won for her the co-operation and interest of all people in any undertaking whether it was social, industrial or religious.

Her life was an inspiration to all who knew her because her character was that of a sincere Christian. A living example of "loving thy neighbor as thyself."

The Methodist Church has lost its most faithful member and its most efficient organist. She worked for her church with an untiring energy and a zeal that aroused enthusiasm in others.

The clubs and other organizations of the town feel keenly the great loss of this wonderful friend whose diligent efforts, unflinching courage, and ready smile, made the world a better and happier place to live.

It is the sad duty and privilege of these organizations to express deep appreciation for the life and work of this noble woman. Therefore be it

Resolved, That in her death the combined clubs of the town have sustained a great loss. Even though she is gone her spirit and influence abide with us; be it further

Resolved, That these clubs extend to the bereaved husband, daughters and son our deepest sympathy and love in this sad hour. May God's love be their solace; and be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions will be written in our minutes in memory of our precious friend and co-worker; that a copy be sent to her sorrowing family and also the Christian Advocate.

Betty Flanagan Montgomery,
Etoile Smith Stafford,
Fannie Ostroffsky Kestenbaum.

DAVID ALEXANDER POLLOCK

The death angel visited Bernice November 17, at 5:25 a. m., and called away one of the most useful and most highly esteemed citizens. The passing of David Alexander Pollock came as a shock that saddened the hearts of all.

Mr. Pollock (Uncle Dave to those that knew and love him best), had reached the ripe old age of 76. His many years were spent in the service of the church and his community. He dedicated his life to God at a very early age, and spent many years in the service of the Master. Mr. Pollock served fifty-six years as a steward in the Methodist Church (having been elected steward-emeritus a few years before his death. As his pastor I found him sympathetic and co-operative.

Those who knew him will surely testify, "A prince has fallen in the service of the Master."

ALBERT A. COLLINS, Pastor.
Bernice, La.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. V. E. ELLIS

The Lord called Mrs. V. E. Ellis, our precious mother, home. She leaves nine children and one brother, Dr. C. W. Hodge, Quanah, Texas; her sons, Prof. J. C. Ellis, supt. of Jefferson Parish, La.; Dr. G. H. Ellis, Ollton, Okla.; C. F. Ellis, Monroe, La.; Joe Ellis, Monroe, La. Her daughters, Mrs. C. O. Thompson, Monroe, La.; Mrs. R. B. Auld, Downsville, La.; Mrs. C. B. Bryan, Calhoun, La.; Mrs. J. I. Harris, Tulsa, Okla.; Mrs. Lena Bacon, Achille Okla. She was the wife of J. E. Ellis, a daughter of Rev. C. W. Hodge, who belonged to the Louisiana Conference. Our mother gave her heart and life to God. When quite young she joined the Methodist church and was a faithful member until death. She loved her church, also her church paper. To know her was to love her. She was 90 years and seven months of age. She suffered so much the last few days on earth. She would so often say, "How sweet it would be to go to sleep and awaken in heaven." A number of times she would go to sleep singing, "Dear Lord, Remember Me." A few days before she left us she said, "I will soon be home with my four baby boys who are waiting for me on the other shore. I want my grown children to meet us over there." Dear mother, a place is vacant in our home that never can be filled. I know you will be waiting for us on the other shore.

Written by her daughter,
MRS. C. B. BRYAN,
Calhoun, La.

Once in a lifetime most of us are called upon to part with our most priceless possession—a jewel without compare—our best friend, our mother. And to be thus bereft, the world seems gloomy indeed.

And whereas, the passing of Mrs. J. W. McDonald, on October 21, 1935, has left a void in the heart of those who knew her best, and whereas she had won the affection and esteem of the community as a whole, and had endeared herself by her unflinching sympathy and gentle disposition to all who came within the realm of her influence, and

Whereas, the missionary society of the Methodist Church realizes that she was deeply consecrated to the Master's cause and faithful to every trust, we would, in appreciation, pen a fitting tribute to her memory, but as words are inadequate, we

Resolve, that we greatly regret the absence of her presence and wish to convey to her husband and to her son and daughter our very sincere sympathy. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the missionary society and that a copy be sent to the family, one to the Morehouse Enterprise, and one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

MRS. LOLA BUFORD,
Mrs. I. G. FRANKLIN,
Mrs. J. D. McBRIDE,
Committee.

DR. B. F. JONES

Dr. B. F. Jones, an honored superannuate, whose name had for many years headed our Conference roll call, passed to his eternal reward on December 13, at about 3 o'clock. He was at both services last Sunday, led the closing prayer and dismissed the congregation at the service Sunday night. After the Sunday morning service he walked across the Whitworth College campus with Mrs. Neill and talked to her about how grateful he was for such good health. Late Monday afternoon he complained of a slight pain in his side. During the night he developed pneumonia. The next day his heart gave way and gradually he grew weaker until the end. Everything that skilled physicians and competent nurses could do was done. He was conscious up to the very last minute, and the expression on his face never changed when the breath left him. His going was sweet and beautiful. We had looked forward to such happy association with him during our pastorate here. But his influence will never die. His body was brought to the church and the services were conducted by Dr. C. W. Orsler and his pastor. His good wife and all the children were with him when the end came, also his two sisters, Miss Anna and Mrs. Edwards, of Lorman, Miss. No doubt Mrs. Jones will select some one to write a more extended sketch of his useful life at a later date. Just thought you would appreciate these words right now.
